Big effects will not get you anywhere in particular. Big stories will be your passport wherever you wish to go.

Auction Sales.

A writer who should know better, takes us to task because we said we were ashamed that a reader of Technique of the Photoplay (note, we do not say a student) should want to sell a script by auction, sending the same script to a number of concerns and asking bids. He points out that players move from one company to another in response to offers of increased salary and thinks that the author is entitled to get all he can for a script.

That is precisely why we urge authors to play the game right and get properly established as real writers. If an author gets fifteen dollars for a story he does not have to offer any more stories at fifteen dollars. That bid is not enough. He tries a presumably more liberal company. But he cannot send out twenty copies of a script to twenty companies and add that the one making the best offer in two weeks gets the script. He can, of course, but no company will deal with such a Cheap John.

Personally, we do not care a whoop in the inferno how a man tries to sell his stuff. He can pack his suit-case and drum trade in person for all we care, but when we are asked for it we give the best advice we know, and it is advice that is based on nearly a quarter of a century of playing the game. If you want to ask questions and do not like your answers please do not try to argue with us. Accept or reject the advice as you elect, but please do not ask us to read five hundred words of drivel just because you don't like the advice. This goes double, while the thermometer is above seventy degrees in the shade.

Your Best.

Every now and then the Editor of this magazine gets out a single paragraph that alone is worth a year's subscription. In a recent issue a writer tells of her experiences as a contributor to the Youth's Companion under its creator, Daniel S. Ford. Like all others, he preaches the gospel of work, revision and study as the means to success. Nothing could be better than the advice he gives in one letter, and it is just as true today as when it was written, and it will be as true a hundred years from now. He says:

"In justice to yourself, and, as a matter of ultimate pecuniary profit, you ought never to allow a story to leave your hands, that after very careful revision, does not seem to you 'better than ordinary.' That course pays in the long run. Trowbridge does not send out a story unless his judgment commends it—and he throws away stories after they are written—even though he knows his reputation would sell them at good prices—because his judgment tells him they are not equal to his reputation. That rule makes his contributions command high prices. You have talent, I am inclined to think, genius. You can, if you choose, command your place and price—only to secure them requires drudgery, time, care, thought, a high ideal, and an exacting literary conscience."

Taking a Vacation.

One author tells us that when he gets tired of doing dramas he takes a vacation by writing a couple of comedies and then goes back to drama with a mind fresh and refreshed. Personally we find that breaking away from comedy to do a drama puts us on the hooks for a couple of days both before and after. The last drama we wrote cost us $105 and we got $50 for it. Here are two modes of work. Find out which way suits you best and stick to that way.

Synopsis Again.

We are afraid that another man has gone onto the switch that leads to the down grade. He writes that he got tired of doing one script lately when he had so many ideas and so he tried writing synopses. One of these went to a company that at once sent back word they would like to see the full script. Now he has been sending to this company for some time and always the stuff came back. He seems to feel that it was through sending the synopsis alone that he gained their interest.

In a sense perhaps it was, but he'll probably find that when he sends the full script it is not likely that the story will go any more than the other stories went. In the former cases, where full scripts were sent, they came back because the development work was poor. Some of the other synopses might have sounded well, though the full script was weak and useless. This synopsis alone sounds well. The full script will not. And so long as he writes only the synopses he will not learn anything about writing full scripts. He'll get queries on the scripts from the synopsis only, but h will not be able to write a good full script of action until his study work brings him to that point where he knows how to do good work, and so he'll be subject to alternate elevations and depressions that will be worse than the constant rejections that eventually will lead somewhere. Meantime the Mutual Film Corporation is interested in synopses only. He might try them until he gets to know better.

Cramps.

Sometimes the helping hand gets cramped. If you have been so fortunate as to find someone who has helped you, don't abuse that kindness. Don't ask all sorts of foolish questions, and demand innumerable criticisms. Try to be as little of a nuisance as possible.

What Is a ———?

Fill in the blank to suit yourself. This afternoon a writer told us he had sold a script to a certain company though it was not a ——— by any means, and we asked him what it was, and pointed out that perhaps he did not know all their style. Most companies do have a general trend toward certain styles of pictures, but do not get the idea firmly rooted that they can make only that style. They might appreciate the story you would like to send them as much as you would appreciate the check they would send you. Don't send an involved character study to a company that seems to prefer lurid melodrama, but at the same time, do not hold back the good drama just because it is too quiet. All companies like to vary their product within certain limits.

Learning.

Find out how much it will cost you in time and money to become a physician, a lawyer, an architect or any other sort of professional man. Find out how much income these professional men average the first two or three years. Then stop kicking because you cannot write photoplays that sell right off the reel.

If You're Good.

Not long ago we ventured the opinion that if you could write good scripts the editors would find you out. Then some self-cocking correspondent did all but call us a liar, arguing to the contrary. We started to put a sheet of paper into the machine on which to indite a lengthy rep'y and in walked John William Kellette. Under his arm he carried three synopses for industrials, explaining that a company had sent for him, and he showed a letter from another company asking him to come and see them about comedies. And he has an editorial job beside, but an easy one that permits him to take on outside work. And last fall "Kell" was just completing his post-graduate course. We think that's a better argument than a page of type. If you can deliver the goods you'll be asked to, but if you merely know you're all right, that's a different matter.

Ones.

If you could only sit in close and hear the low but fervent prayers for really good one-reel dramas you'd drop those padded, piffling two reelers and try and put three reels of punch into one of story. The Edison company frankly advertises for strong ones, because they never did lose their heads over the two-reel idea, but some of the other companies would be begging hard for ones right now were it not that they still have to run off a surplus of twos. There's the idea. Get busy.

Proportions.

It is to be presumed that you know that if you put a pint of pebbles in a pint measure that you still have room between the pebbles in which to pour several ounces of water. If you have large pebbles you can put in more water, because the larger the pebbles the larger the spaces between them. Consider your comedy as a pint measure with plot pebbles and action water. You have been told that the more action you have the better the story. You cannot have both plot and action. Pick out the big plots with plenty of spaces between and you have lots of room for the action. If you have no pebbles you have all water, if you have all action you have no plot. The idea is to have plot, but to pick such plots as give you plenty of room for the action that makes the plot acceptable. If you can thoroughly assimilate this idea you are closer to comedy writing than you have ever been before.

On.

Since he wrote this letter, Arthur Reall has seen a great light, but perhaps others are more genuinely puzzled by the sample scripts they see that start a scene something like this:

14—Sitting room—John on &c.

Mr. Real says Webster says: "'On. (prep.) upon.' Was yours a prep.? It also means near. The adverb means 'onward—forward.' But what I thought it meant lingua filma was as on, the interjection, meaning 'Jim go on' an instruction from the director. It seems I was off on on."

Mr. Reall's jokes are almost as bad as Bill Wright's, and he recently invited us to visit his cottage and have some cottage cheese. But in lingua filma—and we don't see after that what Mr. Reall needs a dictionary for, "on" means on. In full it means "on the stage." Even fuller it means "at the opening of the scene John is on the stage." "On" used directly opening the action means that character is on the stage as the action starts. On used in the middle of the action means that the character enters. It is merely one of the tricks to condense scripts. We hope that Mr. Reall is not on. If he is not "on" from this lucid description he is "off" without getting off, but we think he is getting on.

Signs.

If a script comes back it may not be a sign that it is bad, but it certainly is not a sign that it is good. Look it over again.

Inquiries

NOTE.—Technical questions will be replied to by mail where a stamped and self addressed envelope accompanies the inquiry. A list of addresses of motion picture companies will be sent those supplying a return envelope. Requests for lists should be addressed to the Moving Picture World and not to this department.

C. G. F.—There is not as yet an Inquest Circle in your town.

L. B. P.—It is very unlikely that a company would give you a position on the strength of the two scripts you sold them. Build up on the start and then ask. At the same time no great harm would be done in writing in now.

E. H.—We do not think the company the same. You might write them. "Not suited to our wants," is a stock phrase. It means nothing whatever.

E. C. S.—Write the company again. Register the letter. If they do not reply write them again stating that you have withdrawn the script. Then copy the carbon. If you have no carbon interest the Post Office Inspectors.

A. B. M.—The matter is very simple. The other story is an English special which did not have to be passed on by the National Board. After this do not give too much heed to comments written on rejection slips. We've sold more than one story that had been turned down by another company because it would not pass, but did.

B. C. B.—We will need a better identification of the character than you give.

C. M.—Both companies are in the market, but Lubin is not buying largely from the outside. The numbering of scenes in multiples depends on the studio. Number them any way you like. If the story is good it will not matter. A vision in a scene is not a separate scene. A scene used as a vision is a numbered scene. If John sees the murder in a corner of the picture it is a part of that scene. If the scene fades and the vision of the murder is faded in by itself, it is another scene and coming back to the scene John is in is a third.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

It is an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be indorsed or recommended editorially until such articles have been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two or three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending 4 cents in stamps (less than actual cost) will receive carbon copy of the department reply by mail without delay.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy. You may be surprised at the number of questions you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 46.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Permission to use the contributor's name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used. Theater managers looking for high-class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

What is a circular mill? How many c.m. diameter is a wire one-fourth of an inch in diameter? What is its area, and not only tell us how you obtain the answer, but give the rule for obtaining the c.m. area of any circle or wire? What standard is used for measuring square or rectangular conductors?

Roll of Honor.

The Roll of Honor on Question No. 40 consists of Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas; Harry T. Dobson, Toronto, Canada; Frank Willard, Jr., Marshallstown, Iowa; W. A. Burton, Trail, B. C., and A. C. Stewart, Waitsburg, Washington, but there is a string tied to this, as follows: Burton figured the cost of the private plant current correctly by the year, but he fell all over himself when it came to the city plant, because he did not stop to consider the fact that the city current was at 110 volts, and there is a vast difference between 40 amperes at 110 volts, and 40 amperes at 70 volts. Dobson figured things out all right, but he said "2.8 at 3 cents would be 8.4, or approximately 9 cents." That "approximately" threw him off nearly $10 in the result for a year. I have placed these brothers on the Roll of Honor, notwithstanding these inexcusable errors, because, with this exception, they sent in very good answers, and evidently had taken considerable pains and trouble to study the matter out.

Reply to Question No. 40.

By Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas.

The Question:

Suppose your manager said to you: "I am thinking of getting a gas, gasoline, or kerosene engine to supply light for the theater. What do you think about it?" Let us see with what degree of intelligence you could point out the advisability or inadvisability of installing such a plant, and what its advantages and disadvantages would be. Suppose 110-volt d.c. from city lines costs 8 cents per k.w., and you can install an engine and dynamo for $500, which will produce current at 3 cents per k.w., including fuel, labor and ordinary repairs. Now, if capital is worth 6 per cent., depreciation amounts to 10 per cent. annually, and you use an average 40 amperes (70-volt generator) six hours a day, six days a week, how would the account stand at the end of one year?

The Answer:

I would advise the installation of a d.c. generator driven by gasoline, or kerosene where city current cost in excess of 5 cents per k.w. Figuring current at 8 cents, the engine and dynamo will pay for itself in eighteen months, and you will, in many cases, get better service, though, of course, a great deal of the performance of a private plant, as to efficiency and general results, will depend upon the ability and intelligence of the man in charge. For one thing you would not have to live in continual fear of the city plant "going dead," or a transformer fuse blowing out at 8 o'clock at night. The plant, if properly taken care of, will always be "on the job," and if it be properly located and placed on the right kind of foundation, with the right kind of a muffler for the exhaust, there will be no perceptible noise or vibration.

If you were using 40 amperes at 110 volts the wattage consumption would be 40×110=4,400, or 4.4 k.w., which at 8 cents per k.w. would be (8×4.4) = 35.2 cents per hour,) and at six hours per day this would be (6×35.2) $2.112 per day. Now our private plant generator would be a 70-volt machine and 70 volts ×40 amperes = 2,800 watts, or a difference in favor of the private plant of 1.6 k.w. Now 2.8 k.w. at 3 cents = 8.4 cents per hour, or 50.4 per six hours as against $2.112, difference in favor of the private plant being $1.61 (disregarding the fraction) per day. City current at $2.112 per day would be $12.67 per week, or ($12.67×52) $658.84 per year, whereas the private plant would be only (50.4×6) $3.02½ per week, which multiplied by 52 gives $157.05 per year, a net saving of $501.79 by the installation of the private plant; but we must subtract from this the interest on the investment at 6 per cent., or $30, which would leave $471.79. Then, too, there is a depreciation of 10 per cent., or $50, which also must be subtracted, which leaves a total saving of $421.79 in favor of the isolated plant. We thus see that the plant has actually paid for itself with the exception of $78.91 in one year of operation, including interest and depreciation—a corking good investment.

I have also concluded to print the reply of Brother Dobson, because it brings out one or two very important points with relation to the character of the plant which Brother Smith did not touch upon, even though the brother did make the error which I mentioned in the Roll of Honor. His reply is as follows:

The question would necessitate considerable study on the party of the operator asked to advise for or against a gas engine and dynamo. He would have to know whether the manager proposed installing a good, large dynamo, that is, one with sufficient capacity to meet all requirements and still not be overloaded. The engine should be of ample horsepower, and the whole machine made by a thoroughly reliable manufacturer who would be willing to guarantee the same to meet the requirements of the service. When using city current the only chance of a tie-up of the show would be the power going off, while with an engine and dynamo there is always the chance of something breaking down and stopping the show temporarily. Of course, there should be a city line arranged as per Fig. 3, Page 102, of the Handbook. Next comes current cost, and the following table will show the difference in the city current and that from the engine and dynamo. If I were working under the conditions named in the question I would recommend the installation of an engine and dynamo. Also, there would be considerable work around a gas engine keeping it adjusted and clean and in good working order, and this labor would be absolutely necessary to get good results from it.

COMPARISON TABLE.

Direct Current 110-volt City Current:	Direct Current 70-volt Engine and Dynamo:
40 amperes, at 110 volts=4,400 watts, or 4.4 k.w.	40 amperes, at 70 volts = 2,800 watts, or 2.8 k.w.
Current cost 8 cents per k.w.	Current at 3 cents per k.w.
4.4 k.w. at 8 cents = 35.2, approx. 36 cents	2.8 k.w. at 3 cents = 8.4, approx. 9 cents
For 6 hours 6×36=$2.16	For 6 hours 6×9=54
For 6 days 6×2.16=$12.96	For 6 days 6×54=$3.24
For 52 weeks 52×$12.96=$673.92	For 52 weeks 52×$3.24=$168.48
Cost for 1 year, $673.92	Cost for 1 year, $168.48

Saving =$673.92—$168.48=$505.44

Initial cost of engine and dynamo.....		$500.00
Capital at 6 per cent.=$30.00+$500.00.....		530.00
Depreciation at 10 per cent.=$50.00+$530.00...		580.00
Expenses for one year and cost of set.....	$580.00
Saving for one year on engine and dynamo...	505.44
Total outlay at end of year.....	$74.56

BOSTON LOCAL 182 HAS A BLOWOUT.

And It Is Some Blowout, Too.

A couple of weeks ago the writer received a very neatly engraved invitation to attend the annual picnic to be given by Local 182, of Boston, Mass., the same being accompanied by an assurance from the business agent of that distinguished organization that unless he then and there appeared on the date named, prepared to join in the festivities, Local Union 182 would send a committee to New York with instructions to shoot him on sight.

Combining the cordial invitation with the gory threat, and looking the matter up one side and down the other, we decided that nothing short of being in jail would keep us away from Beantown on Sunday, July 26th; therefore, Friday noon, July 24th, we pointed the nose of our gasoline steed northward, and in due time drew up in front of the office of Local 182 at 113½ Eliot Street in the town which the bean made famous.

At the office we were welcomed by Business Agent Billy Franke (the "e" is silent, as in fish) and something like a dozen members of the union, and the welcome was a most cordial one; and right here let me add that the cordiality extended all the way down the line, which is saying considerable, since we had the pleasure of meeting practically the full membership of the large and powerful organization. From the office we repaired to the office of the R. D. Marson Moving Picture Company, 597 Washington Street, and clasped the hand of that hustling, ever-smiling gentleman, R. D. Marson, his able assistant, Frank McKay, Joe Mack, our old friend Harry Danto, all of 182, and Burt Bohannan of the Nicholas Power Company, who was there, of course, to knock the Powers machines—I don't think.

Boston has one of the most beautiful park systems in the United States, called the Fenway. I am able to say this because brother Marson owns a great, big, roomy gasoline cart, which he placed at the disposal of brother Franke (e is silent, as in fish), and we just piled in and saw the town. Returning to Marson's, L. W. Atwater, of the Nicholas Power Company, was "discovered," one leg comfortably crossed over the other, a cigar angling upward from the northwest corner of his mouth, busily engaged in telling friend Marson what a really scrumptious piece of machinery the Powers Six A is, and carefully pointing out to him, Marson, the fact that the more Powers Six A machines he sold the more money he would make, and that in the process there was no danger of incurring the enmity of the aforesaid Nicholas Power Company.

Incidentally, and while I think of it, let me say that:

Two motion picture mechanisms have been abstracted, purloined, stolen, or swiped from the office of Local Union 182, as follows: Powers Six head, Patent License No. 3781, serial number 1126, Massachusetts tag number 1253; Edison Model B, Patent License No. 6187, serial number 2990, Massachusetts tag number 1567. Any one having or securing information concerning these heads will kindly communicate with the Boston Local at once.

When the shades of night drew on the writer got brother Franke (e silent, as in fish), on the tandem seat of the go-devil and scared seven kinds of tar out of him in making the trip out to his, the aforesaid Franke's, residence, where we were entertained ("we" meaning self and wife), during our stay in Boston. Of course, just as we expected, they had beans for supper, and let me close this part of the trip right now by saying that Mr. and Mrs. William Franke (e silent as in fish) are a couple of mighty good scouts, any way you take them.

The morning of Sunday, 26th, was bright and beautiful as could be wished for, and the street in front of union headquarters was a wilderness of operators and their invited guests. Glen Echo Park, where the outing was held, was, judging by the time it required to get there, on the eastern edge of Ohio, or extreme western Pennsylvania. However, there was a flock of special trolley cars, and that mob certainly did have a howling good time on the way out. This, to a considerable extent, was due to the activities of Nat Max, a member of 182, who kept the crowd in one continual uproar, impersonating our friend the Hebrew, singing what he termed "ulcerated" songs, and performing other and highly entertaining stunts. For instance, with handkerchief over face he held the mob up at the point of a cast iron pistol in a most approved style, causing a delay of something like fifteen minutes while the motormen were recovering from convulsions of laughter.

The picnic, viewed simply as a picnic, was one great, big success. There was a banquet at two o'clock, boating in both rowboats and power launches free to all operators and guests, greased pig catching, sack races, baseball and many other forms of amusement, including one of the finest balloon ascensions and parachute jumps it was ever the fortune of the writer to witness. The balloon went up as straight as a plumb-bob string, and the aeronaut struck the ground less than a hundred yards from where he left it. The aeronaut was an ex-moving picture operator.

At the banquet the principal address was made by the writer, followed by that well known and exceedingly popular gentleman Ed. Farrell, of the General Film Company, and the equally popular R. D. Marson, of the R. D. Marson Moving Picture Company. Next came Bernard Corbett of the Corbett Theatre Equipment Company, which has just opened for business in Boston. Mr. Corbett was followed by Benifield of the Pathe Company, Joe Mack, Levine of the Box Office Attractions Company, A. C. Langlois and J. C. McDonald of the Boston Central Labor Union, Mr. Stein of the Allen Features, and James F. Burke, ex-president of Local 182. The speakers were all well received and evidently quite popular with the membership of the local. At seven o'clock a Dutch lunch was pulled off, at which there was some speaking, some story telling and a general good time. There was more than plenty to eat and plenty to drink as well.

I have purposely neglected to mention one distinguished visitor, who arrived too late for the banquet, but who spoke briefly, in response to the insistent demand of the men, at the Dutch lunch. I refer to State Senator Edward C. R. Bagley, who, as chairman of the Committee on Mercantile Affairs, aided very greatly in securing the passage of a new law which will go into effect on the sixth day of August. This committee, largely due to the efforts of the Senator, reported the bill favorably. Also, it may be added, that Senator Bagley strongly opposed the vetoing of a similar bill by the Governor in 1913. The bill in question provides that before a person can apply for license as a moving picture operator he must first serve three months as an assistant, if I remember rightly, under a licensed operator. He may then pass an examination for a second class license, which empowers him to operate the projectors in that particular operating room with the particular operator under whom he is serving, but only when the regular operator is present in the operating room. At the end of three months he may apply for a first class license, which makes him a full-fledged operator.

In effect this law provides for a six months apprenticeship, and a way which, in the judgment of the writer is the very best possible form, although he is of the opinion that where it reads "three months" it ought to read six months, making a total of a year. However, this law, as it is, is in advance of anything he knows of, and will no doubt pave the way for the enactment of similar laws in other states and cities. The assistant during the first three months is merely allowed to rewind the films, run the slides and keep the operating room in order. He must then, I presume, pass an examination before receiving second class license, and whether this will be granted or not will depend upon how much studying he has done, and what progress he has made in acquiring the knowledge necessary to operate moving picture projectors. The bill was signed on the 6th of July by Governor David I. Walsh.

Local 182 has the distinction of having had a number of their members selected by machine manufacturers to take positions as salesmen, demonstrators, etc. Also several of their men have been made managers of theaters. Just lately a 182 man, Shoemaker by name, was appointed manager of the Unique theater on Washington street, while Tim Fuller of 182 has been made manager of Keith's theater in Orange, N. J., and C. C. Hutchins, president of Local 182, is to be manager of a $100,000 house in Charlestown, Mass. And, by the way, let me say that brother Hutchins, a gentleman perhaps forty-five years of age, whom I had the pleasure of meeting, impresses one as a man of ability and parts. We will gamble that he is a good, careful, painstaking man who will deliver the results either as operator or manager. Success to you, Brother Hutchins.

As to business agent, William Franke, why Billy's middle name is hustle, or if it is not it ought to be, because he certainly is some hustler. He is running for the Massachusetts legislature, and there is little doubt but that he will be elected. Franke's heart and soul is in his work. He is capable and conscientious, and, moreover, is one of those men with whom one can reason. If you show him he is in error he will admit it, but first you have got to show him, and that is the kind of man the editor admires.

I did not have the time or opportunity to visit the Boston theaters. I think, however, there is any doubt but that, as is claimed, the work in Boston is good. The membership of 182 impresses one, as a whole, very favorably indeed. They had the appearance of wide-awake, up-and-coming men, the great majority of whom would not be satisfied with mediocre results. Also, beyond any question of a doubt, the effect of the Massachusetts examination has been highly salutary. It has stimulated Massachusetts operators to study. Every one has been more or less scared, because the report has gone out that the examination is something pretty fierce. In consequence the great majority of the men have studied pretty hard before attempting to pass and those who did pass succeeded because they possessed real knowledge of their business. All of which is good.

And now in closing let me say I had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Harry Atkinson, and Mr. Everett E. Ryan who has actual charge of the examination of operators, both these gentlemen being members of the district police. Mr. Atkinson, who passes upon all matters pertaining to operating room construction, and the editor talked for perhaps two hours the conversation hinging upon various matters pertaining to projection. Mr. Atkinson took us to the operating room of the Lyric theater, which he considers as being very nearly a model operating room, and it was, too, with the single exception that the ceiling is not as high as we would like it. In the room, just beside the door as you enter, let into the wall so that its front was flush with the wall, with a gravity closing sliding metal door, was the film cabinet. This arrangement of course placed it to all intents and purposes entirely outside of the operating room. This method is the idea of Mr. Atkinson. The cabinet was perhaps two and one-half feet high by eighteen feet square, with metal shelves one above the other to hold the reels, which lie flat. The metal slide was hung by a counterweight and slides up and down in grooves, but the weight was light enough so that the door closed of its own weight. The vent flue was of ample size and contained a powerful fan. And right here Mr. Atkinson showed that he kept pretty well posted on the work of the department (the office has a Handbook on file), by making several comments, one of which was that I was wrong in advising against the use of fans in vent flues. Mr. Atkinson is one of the men who has charge of the ventilation of public buildings in Massachusetts, and has, of necessity, made an extended study of such matters. As is well known I have not favored the use of fans in vent flues because of the fact that there was always a very good chance that they would not be running when a fire occurred, and then they would simply serve to clog the flue. Admitting this objection Mr. Atkinson still maintained that I was in the wrong, his argument being as follows: In many instances with the wind in certain directions the draught will be downward through the vent flues, instead of up, in spite of everything you can do, and in some locations the draught would practically always be downward. Moreover if the air out of doors be cooler than the air in the theater the draught would be down, and that would be a very bad condition.

Of course, there was no disputing this proposition, and at the time I told friend Atkinson that, granting the advisability of vent flue fans in cities where there was competent inspection and operators competent to take proper care of the fans, I still maintained open vent flues were best; notwithstanding the objection offered, were better in the smaller towns. Since that time I have thought this matter over pretty deeply and continuously, because it is one of very great importance. I have tried to weigh the objections against and in favor of both systems, and on the whole I have decided that, while still maintaining that there is much to be said in favor of the open vent, Atkinson is right, or at least he is nearer right than the writer has been. Therefore, being convinced of that fact, it is, of course, right and proper for this department to shift its position, and in future advocate the installation of vent flue fans.

I am partly influenced in making this change of front by the undoubted fact that operators are now in a far better position to take proper care of a fan motor of this type than they were a year or two ago.

Mr. Atkinson agreed with the writer that, while the asbestos operating room was the best and most practical type of room in most of the existing theaters where the room was put in after the building was erected, still, in new buildings, where the proper foundation can be had, reinforced concrete or hollow tile is preferable, and this type of room is entirely acceptable to the Massachusetts authorities, when properly designed and built. Mr. Atkinson and the writer discussed many other matters, and the editor found him not only an exceedingly well informed gentleman, but a reasonable man with whom one could argue.

To get back to the Lyric operating room. Its interior is painted a very dark green. The rewinding bench is immediately behind the projectors and under it are cupboards for tools, etc., built of asbestos board and fitted with neatly made doors. The rheostats were all placed outside the room. Just outside the operating room was a roomy closet, in which I saw bundles of carbons, lenses, and supplies of various kinds. The operating room was fitted with a telephone. The observation holes were, at a guess, six inches wide by ten or perhaps twelve inches high, and both they and the lens ports were covered with plate glass, a thing which Mr. Atkinson strongly recommends, both by reason of the fact that it confines the noise to the operating room and shuts off the draught, which sometimes comes through the unprotected observation port pretty strong. I agree with this proposition thoroughly, but I am of the opinion that a shadow box is highly desirable where the observation ports are covered with glass. Both Mr. Atkinson and the operators at the Lyric claimed that, while the glare from the surface of the glass bothered the operator for the first few days, when he became accustomed to it, it ceased to trouble. With all due respect to Mr. Atkinson and the Lyric operators, I do not quite believe this is entirely true, because I think the glare, while the operator might not notice it, will operate at least to some extent to prevent the detection of faint shadows on the screen. If I am wrong, and I may be, all right; but that would have to be pretty thoroughly proven before I would believe it.

I have devoted a lot of space to the Boston outing and the various things which came up in conjunction therewith, but I believe it will be interesting reading just the same, and I feel the various matters touched upon are of sufficent importance to justify the space consumed.

In closing I want to thank Local 182 and its officers for their very cordial reception and the howling good time they gave the editor. It was a very genuine pleasure to me to meet the men of 182, and it was also a genuine pleasure to meet officials of the District Police who have charge of examinations. I enjoyed my visit immensely.

A Challenge.

Kenneth W. Kister, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, writes as follows:

> Local No. 171 is doing fine, and prospects are bright. The local challenges any or all locals within reasonable distance to two games of baseball any Sunday. We have some team.

Whoops, my dear! I imagine you may possibly hear from Baltimore. Would like to see the game but I would not dare root for either team, and if I kept my mouth shut at a ball game I would simply explode.

An Up and Down Jump.

Harry H. Hiatt, Prairie City, Oregon, writes:

> Judging by your writings you are a friend to the operator, therefore I take the liberty of addressing you. My Moving Picture World has not been coming regularly. Will you please look it up and see what is the matter? I am running my own show here in a very small town. I have not yet mastered all the problems of the business. (Neither have I.—Ed.) For instance: I have an up and down jump in my picture, and it worries me. At first I shifted the intermittent and cam shafts to take up slack in the shutter gears, whereupon trouble began. I calipered the shafts and lined them up as per Handbook instructions, and the picture, after several trials, settled down to a small up and down jump, not noticeable except in light pictures. I then took an old intermittent gear, and reversed the sprocket on the shaft. The first reel showed a six or eight inch jump, two or three times to each crank revolution. Later it became steadier, until now the jump is very irregular, although I think the film is responsible for some of it. The machine is an Edison Model B, about a year old. There is no end play to the intermittent, and very little circumferential play. The mechanism runs very light when the film is not in, but the tension springs are much tighter than they should be if everything were normal.

It is pretty hard to diagnose a trouble of this kind without seeing the machine. You see you have done some monkey doodle business there, and it is hard to say just what condition you have brought about. You say you shifted the cam and intermittent to take up slack in the shutter gears. By this you of course mean that you shifted the shafts endwise, which ought to have no bad effect, except to throw your film out of center in the aperture, but that would not matter if you also shifted the top gate idlers correspondingly, unless you shifted it enough to make the film show the sprocket holes on one side. In fact this should not have any effect at all in the movement of the film. You say you "took an old intermittent gear and reversed the sprocket on the shaft." Now just exactly what you mean by an old "intermittent gear" is too many for me. In the language of Shakespeare, there ain't no such thing as an "intermittent gear."

I think, on the whole, brother Hiatt, you had better send to the Edison Company and get a new cam shaft, cam and fly wheel, assembled; a new intermittent shaft, star and sprocket; a new set of bushings, and a new shutter shaft gear. This will cost you several dollars, it is true, but, on the whole, I believe it is the best thing you can do under the conditions, unless you prefer to send your whole mechanism to the repair shop. Are you sure the intermittent sprocket is tight on its shaft?

For the Manager.

I have in a great many instances had occasion to note the treatment of operators by managers, and while my remarks do not apply, let it be agreed, to a very great many, still a quite large percentage of motion picture theatre managers can with profit to some extent at least read the following quotation:

"IF YOU TREAT A MAN LIKE A DOG
HE IS LIKELY TO ACT LIKE ONE."

> The man who is a man will always respond to good treatment, and the man who is not a man is a mighty good proposition to get rid of—quick. There are very few men possessed of sufficient initiative and creative skill to be successful moving picture operators whose general efficiency can be raised, or in any way improved, by treating them as though they were made of inferior clay. The work of the low grade, uneducated pick and shovel men can usually be improved by the employment of slave driving tactics, but the man who is fitted to be in the operating room of a motion picture theatre is far removed from the pick and shovel. If he is not, then he is not fit to be in an operating room.
>
> It is an undoubted fact, however, that, regardless of the status of a man, if you treat him like a dog he is likely to act like one, and this is the lesson that many managers should take to heart. By this I do not mean they literally treat their operators literally like dogs, but there are all too many motion picture theater managers who seem to have an ingrowing idea that the operator should be "kept in his place" and their idea of "keeping him in his place" is to adopt an air of superiority and endeavor to impress upon the operator the idea that he, the manager, is made of a different sort of mud; and the amusing part of the whole matter is that I have seen this little by-play acted out in cases where the individual operator was in every respect the superior of the individual manager who was patronizing him and trying to "keep him in his place."
>
> I think at this stage of the game there can be little inclination to dispute the fact that the success of a moving picture theater depends very largely upon two men, viz.: the manager and the operator, and I think, too, that their importance in the general scheme of affairs is just about equal, so that there is no reason why one should patronize the other. True, the manager employs the operator, but, rightly viewed, that fact has nothing whatever to do with the matter. The fact that a man happens to be the employer does not surround his cranium with any halo, nor does it set him up on a pedestal of superiority.
>
> "There's many a girl in an automobile who's there because she is rich.
> There's many a man in an automobile who ought to be digging a ditch."
>
> All too often by natural talent, breeding and education the employe is far superior to the employer. Just try laying that patronizing air of yours aside, Mr. Manager, and treating your operator as an equal. If he does not respond satisfactorily, you can make up your mind that he is not the right kind of a man to employ; but I think in most cases he will respond, and that you will find the change to be one for the better.

Making Limes.

R. G. Kittel, Weaubleau, Missouri, writes.

> I noticed a recommendation of the Guil pastil in the department some time ago. I ordered from the Enterprise Optical Company, Chicago, but they did not know where to get them; neither did anyone else in that city seem to be posted. I am using limes of my own make. I go to the lime kiln, just after new lime is taken out, and make enough at one time to last a couple of years. I use an old saw and saw out the limes in squares, and then thin them off with a pocket knife when I have plenty of time. In this way I get the best there is to be had, as I pick my lime, and pick the kind that will shave off to a nice smooth surface. It will shine as if polished after being shaved off with a pocket knife. This gives me a lime which is not too hard, neither is it too soft. However, I want to try the Guil pastil you are recommending, as I desire the best there is to be had. Limes made as I have directed must be packed air tight with lime dust composed of the trimmings of the limes. I use syrup buckets to pack them in.

The importer of Guil pastil is C. E. Lindall, Bar Harbor, Maine. If you will look back over the classified advertisements for the past year I think you will find his ad, though I believe the same appeared quite some time ago.

Address Wanted.

West Newton, Massachusetts, writes:

> Can you give me the address of a moving picture operator's school situated in Boston?

Yes, West Newton, I can give you the address all right, but I won't. I would suggest that instead of paying a fee for a course, the result of which would, to say the least, be very doubtful, you use the money to pay part of your expenses while you serve a six months' apprenticeship in an operating room. Let me warn you, however, that the woods is full of operators right now, or rather would-be operators—would-be if they only knew how. There is always a demand for high-class men, who can and will deliver the goods. We have not only a surplus, but a surfeit of the mediocre.

From Professor Wall.

Professor E. J. Wall, Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York, sends in the following:

> With reference to Mr. James' remarks on page 253, I have come to the conclusion that he does not wish to learn, but would rather believe in his own work, however faulty it may be, than accept the rules of optics that have been known for nearly a century. It is perfectly immaterial whether one talks of projection, photographic, telescopic or microscopic lenses, the fundamental rules of geometrical optics apply. I will not answer in detail all the points raised by him, as it would mean writing a special treatise on optics.
>
> He states that all I have done is to point out his and other people's mistakes. I thought that in every case I had stated wherein the error lay; furthermore that I might be useful, but obviously from his remarks, and the Editor's comments, I cannot. I apologize and I will not again take up the valuable space of the M. P. W.

For the benefit of others I append the geometrical treatment, or the laws of projection, which I sent to Mr. James months ago privately. I ignore entirely all questions of spherical and chromatic aberrations, and the shape of the lenses, which would only cloud the issue and represent the lenses by their nodal planes.

In conclusion let me commend the following works to any earnest student; they should be read in the order given: "Practical Exercises in Light," by R. Clay (Macmillan); "Light for Students," by Edser (Macmillan); "Light," by Preston (Macmillan).

Let S = the source of light.
Let AB, A′ B′ = the condensers.
Let CD = the picture.
Let EF, E′ F′ = the objective.
Let II = the image and let

u = the distance of CD from EF
v = " " " II " EF
U = " " " S " L
V = " " " X " L
2 l = the length of the projection objective barrel.
r = the distance between L and M
2 x = the diameter of AB.
2 z = the diameter of EF.
F = the equivalent focus of the condenser.
f = the equivalent focus of the objective.
n = the magnification.

then

$$\frac{1}{V} - \frac{1}{U} = \frac{1}{F} \quad \text{hence} \quad \frac{1}{V} = \frac{1}{U} + \frac{1}{F} \quad \text{and} \quad \frac{1}{U} = \frac{1}{V} - \frac{1}{F}.$$

This gives one all the necessary data for dealing with the condenser and objective.

Again: $\frac{1}{u} - \frac{1}{u} = \frac{1}{f}$ and $\frac{v}{u} = -n$ therefore $u = -(1 + n)\, f \div n$ and $v = (1 + n)\, f$.

This gives all the data for picture, objective and image. If the picture is now placed so as to be just illuminated by the cone of light, as in the diagram, the triangles ALX and CMX are similar, therefore, AL/CM = LX/MX or $x/y = V/(V - r)$.

Again, if the cone of light is just to fit the objective mount GH, the triangles ALX, GOX are similar, hence AL/GO = LX/OX or $x/z = V/V - v - r$ l.

These formulas are so simple that anyone can work them out by putting the measurements of his machine instead of the lettering. Naturally the results will not be accurate, unless the measurements are taken from the nodal planes, but they will be near enough to be practical, and they certainly give the relative positions of light, condenser, picture, lens and screen.

I regard brother Wall as an authority in matters optical. He could not possibly occupy the position he does unless he was very thoroughly posted in both light and lens action. However, while I may be in error, I do believe this: that there is a very large and exceedingly important difference as between the action of the photographic lens and the lens system of a projection machine, in that whereas the photographic lens receives light rays at what we might term the front end, and delivers it to the plate at the rear, a motion picture objective receives converging rays from a primary set of lenses.

Now this may not require any different application of the laws of optics as applied to ordinary photographic lenses, or lenses used for other purposes. I would not presume to say that it does, but nevertheless to a certain extent I believe it does, though quite possibly not theoretically. Still, I think it does in practice, and that is where I think possibly Professor Wall errs—in not giving this end of the matter sufficient consideration. If I am wrong it is not going to hurt my feelings at all to be corrected. All we seek in these matters is the truth, and a method whereby the ordinary operator, who is not an optician, nor even very well posted in light action, can figure out his lens system and decide what the focal length of his condensing system ought to be in order to match his objective. I see that Professor Wall says, "It is perfectly immaterial whether one talks of projection, photographic, telescopic, or microscopic lenses, the fundamental rules of geometrical optics apply." Now, while I would not for one moment presume to dispute this proposition, still I must claim the liberty of doubting it, and I do this with all due respect to the Professor, and for the reason above stated, to which I might add the further reason that in a projection condensing system we have very heavy spherical aberration to contend with. I assure Professor Wall he by no means owes any apology, and we should exceedingly regret to lose his contributions. The Professor ought to take into consideration the fact that we do not pretend to be expert in the matter of lens action, and if we are to understand his arguments it will be necessary that he start us off with a very kindergarten explanation of this entire matter, but particularly the effect of the converging heavily spherical aberrated rays of the condenser. We do know this: we have applied the ordinary rules of geometrical optics to projection systems and apparently they do not work out in practice.

Cheap Parts.

John Windham, New York City, sends in a card sent out by one Lewis Hetz on Twenty-third street, New York City. The aforesaid card bears a list of prices for repair parts for certain projection machines. He asks what I think about it, and whether I would advise the purchase of these parts.

Brother Windham, it does not reflect highly upon you that you ask such a question. The commonest kind of common sense ought to tell you when a man proposes to sell an intermittent sprocket, a thing which must be made of the very finest grade of steel, and machined down to correctness as fine as one-ten thousandth of an inch, for 38 cents, the proposition is utterly absurd and ridiculous. It cannot be done. Mr. Hetz also proposes to supply star, intermittent sprocket and shaft combination at $1.59. It certainly must be some star, sprocket and shaft, but the reprehensible part of this is that the machines will be blamed for the faults of these cheap parts. The manager who has not any more sense than to buy a 38-cent intermittent sprocket, or a 43-cent star wheel, or a 48-cent geneva wheel has not brains enough to understand that the machine is not to blame for the performance of these imperfect parts, and in my judgment these parts are not only imperfect but exceedingly imperfect. In my opinion they cannot be otherwise. Neither the material nor the workmanship can possibly be up to standard, unless Mr. Hetz is a philanthropist who is supplying parts at a loss to himself, simply for the fun of supplying them.

If Mr. Hetz can show and prove to me that his parts are mechanically well made and perfect, as parts of this kind must be in order to deliver perfect results on the screen, I shall be glad not only to apologize, but print an apology in the department, and to recommend his parts very highly. I do not think, however, there is any danger of this being done, because, as I said before, the thing is impossible.

Main Strength and Awkwardness.

Nebraska orders a copy of the Handbook, and says:

> I find the longer I operate the less I think I know about it, therefore have decided to quit groping in the dark, secure a Handbook, and get busy. All knowledge I have obtained so far has been acquired by main strength and awkwardness, except for the many useful pointers I have obtained through the Projection Department of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

There are many thousands of operators in the country who could read Nebraska's letter with profit. They are groping in the dark. They do not realize the possibilities of the profession they have adopted. They are able to get a passably fair picture on the screen somehow, though they have little or no understanding of the "whys and wherefores." They do not realize that, with proper knowledge, they could not only put on a better picture, but could do it with less effort and do it cheaper, too. They have every need to study, but they are slow in waking up and in coming to an understanding of that simple fact.

The Right Idea.

Harry T. Dobson, Toronto Canada, sends in answers to Questions 41 and 42 with the following comments:

> The questions concerning gas engines are beyond me, since I have had no experience with that particular animal. Still, I won't get anywhere without trying, hence I at least send an attempt, which you will possibly find to be pretty crude.

Now there is the right spirit. Dobson is an enterprising man, who, although he realizes he is not posted on the subject, gets busy and makes a stab at it, anyhow. That may seem foolish to some, but really it is anything else than foolish, because Dobson thus fixes the question raised firmly in his mind and when the right answer comes he is going to see where he made his mistakes, and the right thing will naturally remain in memory by reason of the errors he may have committed.

A Second Examination.

Rochester, New York, held a second examination of moving picture operators in the Municipal Building on Tuesday, July 7. Candidates who failed in the first examination were given another opportunity; new applicants were also examined. The examination was by written and practical tests. We are not as yet informed as to the outcome, nor are we posted as to the capability of the examining commission.

Instruction Sheet.

H. Albert, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, one of the department correspondents, has a very neatly printed sheet of general instructions for those in charge of electric plants, which he will mail to any one remitting seven cents in stamps.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

THE LIVING DEAD (Edison), August 4.—Ninth of "The Man Who Disappeared" series. There are many exciting scenes in this offering, consisting of hairbreadth escapes. Most of the scenes take place on the deck of a Hudson river boat and some pleasing views of the river are shown. Marc MacDermott makes a sensational dive from the deck of the vessel. Miriam Nesbitt, Barry O'Moore and Harry Mason are in the cast. A well-done feature in every respect.

HER TRIP TO NEW YORK (Essanay), August 4.—This pictureplay portrays a story of a man's thoughtlessness. Ruth marries Harry, who promises to take her to New York for their wedding trip, but fails to fulfill. Each year he has some excuse. After many years she breaks down from hard work. Harry, who has been told of his wife's longing, promises to do better in the future and take her to New York. A picture that is full of heart interest and a lesson well taught.

THE FAMILY OUTING (Melies), August 4.—This is a very funny comedy picture and gains great laughter. The natural part of it is its merit. A family start out to have a picnic. They hire a cab and meet up with all kinds of trouble. This can be recommended as a good one.

EASY COME, EASY GO (Melies), August 4.—On the same reel with "The Family Outing." This is a photoplay comedy concerning moving furniture from one room to another. The complications embraced in this half reel are wonderful. It gains continued laughter.

THE CHIEF OF POLICE (Kalem), August 4.—The chief in this photoplay discovers a man burglarizing his safe and captures him. The story is rather conventional, as many have been written along this theme. There is something about this photoplay that, while it is interesting, lacks conviction. It is well photographed and acted.

THE ORDEAL (Selig), August 4.—A pictureplay where not only good acting, photography and scenic effects are in evidence, but also impossibilities. A hospital surgeon must certainly have some nerve to be enabled to continue a serious operation with a fire raging around him, such as the picture portrays. It has a fairly good ending.

HE WOKE UP IN TIME (Lubin), August 4.—Although the theme of this picture is not new, it gains lots of laughs. Hans, a hobo, goes to sleep on a park bench and has a wonderful dream, but is awakened by two policemen. Written by E. W. Sargent. On the same reel with "A Fatal Card."

A FATAL CARD (Lubin), August 4.—On the same reel with "He Woke Up in Time," and written by E. W. Sargent. Judge Holder, who has been satisfying too freely his occasional thirst gets into a row. His friend Smith protects him and the judge gives him a card, the ace of diamonds, which, when shown, will secure favors. Next day a score of prisoners show an ace of diamonds. This comedy gets hearty laughter.

PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 48, August 5.—A timely number, showing intimate portraits of Francis Joseph, King Peter and Prince Alexandria of Servia, the Czar, President Poincare, King George and the Kaiser. There is a good picture of a diver in a 480-pound suit making a descent for a record dive of 212 feet. The best of all, however, are the views of the Parisian celebration of the fall of the Bastille. The smart evolutions of the French infantry, cavalry and artillery prove that no one European nation has a monopoly of military precision. These pictures were all too short.

SECOND SIGHT (Vitagraph), August 5.—An awkward maid breaks Mr. Ponsonby's glasses. He loses his temper and she makes a get-away to the tall timbers with Ponsonby close behind. Being without his glasses, he runs into everything and everybody. Returning to the house he overturns a stove and burns the bungalow. Louis Baudet, Dan Crimmins and Rosa Gore are in the cast. It is a very laughable offering.

THE REPORTER ON THE CASE (Selig), August 5.—This is a story concerning a newspaper reporter who had failed for a week in getting his star story. Carrying a grouch he called on his friend, Detective Barnes. Fortune favored him and he fell unto a story that is full of punches. The scenes are very interesting, also very melodramatic. The best of all, the reporter made a grand scoop. The acting is of a superior nature. The direction and photography are up to the standard. This picture can be recommended to exhibitors.

THE FABLE OF THE BUSY BUSINESS BOY AND THE DROPPERS-IN (Essanay), August 5.—This is another of George Ade's humerous comedies of the tired business man, his funny visitors and too many cocktails. He enters his office in the morning with the intention of doing a week's work during the day, but he is bothered with callers, such as the fruit vendor, the man with the funny puzzle, the insurance agent and last, but not least, the rube. The moral is "Work Is a Snap, but Intermissions Play Hob With the Nervous System."

A CHANGE OF BUSINESS (Edison), August 5.—There is not much in this reel life that is wonderful in interest or really funny. A saloon-keeper determines to win a widow, who objects to his business. He changes it and the widow succumbs. This is on the same reel with "Faint Heart Ne'er Won Fair Lady."

FAINT HEART NE'ER WON FAIR LADY (Edison), August 5.—On the same reel with "A Change of Business." This is quite an interesting little comedy and illustrates the hardships that lovers will undergo to meet. Their persistent efforts finally win over the "old man." It gains many laughs.

THE MAN AND THE MASTER (Biograph), August 6.—This pictureplay gives a good illustration of the strife existing between capital and labor. The acting is admirable and the photography is up to the usual Biograph standard.

SLIPPERY SLIM'S DILEMMA (Essanay), August 6.—Slim is some singer and guitar player. One night he stops beneath the fair Sophie's window and serenades. Pete, his rival, and room-mate, awakens first and paints Slim's face, then spreads abroad the news that Slim has small-pox. After a few comical situations he escapes from quarantine. Pete confesses and Sophie returns to her first love. This offering, while not so full of fun as some of the Slim series, is very humorous.

A MATRIMONIAL ADVERTISEMENT (Melies), August 6.—This is an original plot and has much in it that is amusing. The characters are a young lady, her brother and the brother's friend. A case of love at first sight is brought on by a humorous misunderstanding. This is a good comedy.

THE SKULL AND THE CROWN (Selig), August 7.—A psychological comedy. The idea of this photoplay is not entirely new but, nevertheless, is very funny. The head of an insane asylum plays a joke on a niece and a gentleman friend by telling the niece that the friend is insane and imagines himself to be Hamlet, and telling the gentleman that his niece imagines herself to be Queen of Navarre. They meet on the street, have each other arrested and taken in a padded wagon to the office of Betty's uncle, where everything is explained.

A SIREN OF THE DESERT (Lubin), August 7.—A typical western story, depicting life in a mining camp and dance hall. A young miner engaged to be married becomes infatuated with Desert Siren. A gold strike in another region reaches the town and a rush ensues for the new diggings. The Siren gets lost on the desert and is found by the miner's sweetheart. The finale is a very good one, for the Siren reunites the lovers. The photography and scenic effects are meritorious.

DON'T MONKEY WITH THE BUZZ SAW (Kalem), August 7.—Another of Marshal Neilan's farces, featuring Ruth Roland. Henpeck has an awful time with his wife and mother-in-law, so he goes and drowns his trouble in drink. What happens to him causes roars of merriment from the audience.

THE LOCKED HOUSE (Vitagraph), August 7.—This is truly a Vitagraph comedy with John Bunny and Flora Finch in the leading roles. Mr. Bunny, Mayor of Smithtown, gets a shock on reading of the attempted assassination of the Mayor of New York. To escape the supposed assassin he gets himself into the dumb-waiter, where many laughable complications eventuate.

GREY EAGLE'S REVENGE (Kalem), August 8.—This photoplay has a distorted sort of a plot with many unpleasant scenes. The photography is very clear and the direction and acting are well done. There is too much brutality, and the ending, where a kindly minister is shot, might have been cut out to advantage and improved the picture.

BRONCHO BILLY'S FATAL JOKE (Essanay), August 8.—A western drama of mining life, featuring G. M. Anderson. Through a practical joke Broncho Billy believes himself responsible for old man Rundle's death. To ease his conscious he trades his valuable ranch to Rundle's daughter in exchange for her father's worthless one. During the trade they fall in love and the two ranches become one. It seems to please the audience.

LOVE AND FLAMES (Lubin), August 8.—This comedy has no plot, but is made up of a series of incidents to which there seems to be no head or tail. There is a fire scene caused by Percy, who throws a cigarette in a pile of rubbish in the vicinity of his sweetheart's house. The closing scene is the real comedy one. It was received with considerable laughter.

THEY WOULD BANDITS BE (Biograph), August 8.—Everybody seems to love Broncho Nell, including three cowboys and a bold, bad man, who forces Nell to feed and kiss him. The three cowboys gather up courage enough to interfere and protect Nell. Their finish is a surprise. On the same reel with "The Deadly Cheroot."

THE DEADLY CHEROOT (Biograph), August 8.—On the same reel with "They Would Bandits Be." The plot of this little comedy hangs upon the old idea of the loaded cigar, but this happens to be a cheroot. The results are quite amusing. It is received with laughter.

CARMELITA'S REVENGE (Selig), August 8.—A lost love romance, the theme of which is very conventional. A story of hatred and jealousy which has been used many times, although there is considerable originality pertaining. The scenes are laid in Mexico and New York City. The culprit is a man who deceives a Mexican girl whose determination on revenge terminates in an original manner. In the finale all ends happily. The audience received it with favor.

ONE TOUCH OF NATURE (Edison), August 8.—A comedy drama, directed by Ashley Miller. The cast includes John Sturgeon, Elizabeth Miller, T. Tamamato, Edna Hammel and Andy Clark. A tired man has a bad case of nerves, and when his automobile breaks down he decides to walk. He meets a little boy going fishing, and enters into all the boy's plans, finally going to sleep on the ground. After sleeping for some time he wakes to find that "the touch of nature" has driven business troubles from his mind. This is a well-directed and acted photoplay; some of the scenes are remarkably pretty.

TOPSY-TURVY (Essanay), August 10.—Auntie visits her nephew, a poet, bringing along with her, her cook "Sweedie," and then things begin to happen. Eventually the distracted writer of verse is forced to abide outside, leaving Sweedie in full possession. This is quite a good comedy.

THROUGH LIFE'S WINDOW (Vitagraph), August 10.—This is a sort of an "Enoch Arden" plot, featuring Maurice Costello. To make his wife happy he goes to war and is reported killed. It is the old story of the mother persuading the wife to marry "the rich fellow," which she does. Later, Costello turns up, having been only wounded; then there is a reversal of things, and it is all done over again. Years of anguish obtain, and after it is over you wonder what it is all about.

THE CONDEMNING HAND (Biograph), August 10.—There is considerable heart interest in the plot of this pictureplay. A crook shoulders the blame for a crime of which his mother is accused. In the working of it out there are many interesting scenes and in the finale both are proved innocent. A very good offering.

ALL FOR A TOOTH (Edison), August 10.—This is an original sort of a comedy, wherein a husband, in a dream, mixes up his wife's lost tooth with an exploring expedition through the catacombs, where he gets bitten by a skeleton. He has many other wild and wonderful experiences, but "he didn't find the tooth." Good comedy, this.

THE ART OF THE FURRIER (Pathe), August 11.—An educational picture showing the making of a moleskin coat, from the capture of the tiny animal.

IRON AND STEEL INDUSTRY (Pathe), August 11.—On the same reel is this interesting educational-industrial, descriptive of a great mill in faraway Bombay. A good reel.

FROM GRENOBLE TO AUX LES BAINS (Pathe), August 10.—A very fine scenic.

A ROUSING RECEPTION (Pathe), August 10.—On the same reel is this story of the amazing difficulties encountered by a burglar. Much ingenuity and patience are displayed in the conception and working out of the action, which is of the trick variety.

TYPICAL RUSSIAN DANCERS (Pathe), August 10.—On the same reel as the foregoing two subjects is this short bit showing the work of thirty-inch high dancers, male and female. It will interest.

Licensed Specials

WHEN WAR THREATENS (Cines), August 4.—This is a very pretentious two-part photoplay with a plot that is full of intrigue. There is much intensity distributed through the scenes, which are laid principally in the navy department. It is the conventional story of a spy endeavoring to obtain papers of certain interest regarding new battleship plans. There is a love theme running through the whole, which has a sad ending.

WARFARE IN THE SKIES (Vitagraph), August 4.—This two-part pictureplay, with Edith Story and Earle Williams playing the leads, is full of thrills and holds the attention of the audience from the beginning. Two men, both aviators, but belonging to different armies, are in love with the same girl. They meet in the air and, after a fierce battle, one is killed and the other injured. The girl goes in disguise to nurse him but is captured. She is rescued by her lover and taken to her father. All in the cast do good work. This is a good release.

THE OPERATOR AT BLACK ROCK (Kalem), August 5.—This is a two-reel railroad drama. E. W. Matlack is the author and J. P. McGowan directed it. This is one of the finest produced on the screen of this nature. It is a story of the iron rails and contains many beautiful scenes that are well photographed. Helen Holmes plays the leading part and is ably supported by G. A. Pulliam, Bert C. Hadley and Hart Hoxie. It holds the interest of the audience with its intensity, though it is very melodramatic. It is original in its punches. It is well worth viewing.

A MAN WITH A FUTURE (Lubin), August 5.—This is a two-reel dramatic picture story with the plot laid among the criminal classes, and contains the usual elements embraced in such stories, the life of a woman, who has been raised among crime, but who finally revolts and is reformed. It contains some interesting characters which are well played. The direction and photography are of a fine quality. A very good offering.

A DAUGHTER OF EVE (Lubin), August 6.—A two-part offering with some beautiful country scenes portrayed. A young lawyer falls in love with a farmer's daughter. He saves the father from being buncoed by the son of a neighbor, thus winning the old man's consent to the marriage of his daughter. There is quite some comedy in this pictureplay, especially where the farmer and neighbor's son have a watery fight in the horse trough. The photography is clear and all in the cast do efficient work.

THE MEMORIES IN MEN'S SOULS (Vitagraph), August 6.—This two-part drama contains many thrilling situations full of heart interest. Van Dyke Brooke, Norma Talmadge and Antonio Moreno have the leading parts. A little child, who is very clever, saves his father from dishonor. He remains loyal to his child and wife. There is a sad ending to this finely-produced offering. It holds the strictest attention.

THE SHIELD OF INNOCENCE (Melies), August 6.—A two-reel photoplay, the character of which is illogical. While it is a well-made picture photographically and splendidly acted, the plot carries with it a theme that is very unpleasant. It is a story of twin brothers, one of whom commits suicide because he has been betrayed by a woman. The other brother revenges him in a peculiar way, and the woman goes out into the world and repents.

THE PRESIDENT'S SPECIAL (Edison), August 7.—This two-part pictureplay has been reviewed at length by Louis Reeves Harrison, and can be found on page 411, issue of July 18.

THE MOTOR BUCCANEERS (Essanay), August 7.—This two-part photoplay is written by Edward Franklin and contains quite a few thrills regarding motor chases and fights. A young lawyer breaks up a daring conspiracy to steal a railroad and thereby wins himself a wife. A famous crook poses as a millionaire, knocks down an old lawyer and leaves him senseless. The young man is accused of murder, but proves himself innocent and all ends happily. This is a favorable offering.

GRATITUDE (Melies), August 8.—This special two-part pictureplay's plot concerns the intelligence of a much-abused dog. The dog was quite attached to the little daughter of his abuser and rescues her from being kidnapped by a gypsy and returns her to her parents. The father then treats the animal kindly ever after. There is much heart interest in this offering.

THE HOUSE ON THE HILL (Vitagraph), August 8.—A two-part pictureplay, the plot of which is not altogether new. The theme is the fulfillment of a wife's ambition. She is imbued with social aspirations to the neglect of her husband, but the life soon wanes and she does not find the happiness she hoped for, and she confesses it to her husband. She is welcomed and finds the happiness she has yearned for with him, back in the "house on the hill." This is a well-made and acted picture with an all-star Vitagraph cast. The audience seemed to enjoy it.

THE RAJAH'S VOW (Kalem), August 10.—This is a two-reel story with the plot laid in the Orient. It is acted by an all-star Kalem cast and is a pretentious photoplay. The costuming has been well attended to and the photography and scenes are beautiful. The story is one of absorbing interest. The director and camera man are to be complimented. The picture is well worth the viewing and gained applause from the audience.

WILLIE (Selig), August 10.—This two-part pictureplay is of the conventional order and developed from a plot that has been used many times. The story could have been told in half the film. A Willie boy is sent west to be manufactured into a man. He meets up with the usual rough experiences. He returns east and makes good.

Independent

UNIVERSAL IKE IN THE DANGERS OF A GREAT CITY (Universal Ike), August 1.—Ike elopes again in this number and the plot is the usual pursuit by the old folks. The chase presents a number of amusing features and the rough-house work in the jail will bring some laughs. This company, however, is going over the same ground quite often.

ETHEL'S TEACHER (Komic), August 9.—One of Edward Dillon's farces that is sure to make laughter. We think the fun in it will make the audience, unless it be a most particular one, readily forgive it its vulgarity. It has a female impersonation at the beach and the funny situation rises from the fact that some bath houses are kept exclusively for men and some for women.

A STRONG AFFAIR (Sterling), August 10.—A low comedy number which will not suit particular audiences. Limburger cheese placed in the groom's shoes by his rival breaks up the wedding. Cheese is thrown freely by the guests at the wedding. This sort of humor has its admirers, but it is very offensive to some. The construction and photography are good.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL, Series No. 30 (Reliance), August 10.—Margaret celebrates her birthday in this number, first by calling upon Daniel Frohman, the noted play producer, and then by receiving a necklace of antique cameos. A thief, with an educated police dog, steals the box containing the necklace. The canine's work was interesting and the next number will picture Margaret's efforts to get back her present. Some of the photography was dim in this.

THE BUTTERFLY (American), August 12.—A fairly pretty picture with no deep dramatic quality, but with some lovely scenes. There's a touch of "Frou-Frou" in the story, but we cannot say that it has been made truly convincing. The "butterfly" sister gets the man the soberer-minded sister also loves. She understands her sister and watches over the family, at one time keeping the Butterfly from making a false step with another man.

SO SHINES A GOOD DEED (Reliance), August 12.—It is just a sketch; but it is very interesting. The idea, too—the escaped convict, who gives himself up in order to get his capture money for a needy family—has been used before, but the surrounding circumstances and the peculiar twist of the story are quite fresh and new, and it is made by good staging and natural acting a picture that leaves a deep impression. Count it a good offering.

MATTY, THE UNIVERSAL BOY, Series No. 3 (Imp), August 13.—In this number Matty develops a sudden interest in war. He becomes a Boy Scout and later goes to Washington, where he meets Secretary of War Garrison. This feature is particularly interesting and the sham battle between Boy Scouts at the close will certainly prove entertaining.

HE NEVER SAID A WORD (Nestor), October 16.—A very original situation is shown in this excellent little comedy number. Eddie visits his doctor chum at the Deaf and Dumb Institute. Here he meets Victoria and each thinks the other is a "dummy." The resulting fun is all that could be asked. Original, well-photographed and altogether pleasing.

MEMORIES OF YEARS AGO (Frontier), August 16.—This shows us a middle-aged man returning to his western town. The names carved on a tree bring up old memories of his unfortunate love affair. The story of the girl's bad choice and her final appearance as a woman of the barroom is quite pathetic. It makes an offering of about the average merit.

THE MIRACLE (Eclair), August 16.—This subject, in which the leads are played by Fred Truesdell and Julia Stewart, will interest more especially those religiously inclined, and surely all women, who undoubtedly will classify it as a pretty picture.

THE HEDGE BETWEEN (Rex), August 16.—An acceptable offering, not very substantial but pretty. The plot in which the widow, who has a son, and the widower, who has a daughter, live in adjoining grounds yet dislike each other, has been used often. The acting is lively, if not especially convincing, and the picture will please, but not awaken enthusiasm.

VIVIAN'S FIRST FELLER (Crystal), August 18.—The country girl quarrels with her rube lover and marries a city chap. The plot of this wanders from one thing to another, without sufficient motive behind it to make the action entertaining. It lacks any definite reason and therefore does not hold the interest.

UNIVERSAL IKE'S HONEYMOON (Universal Ike), August 19.—Ike and Louise are again seen as newly weds in this number. None of the scenes get up much humor and many of them, particularly where the girl smears her face with candy, are entirely lacking in it. This is not a very desirable film.

A BOWL OF ROSES (Rex), August 20.—A picture that will appeal to the ultrapoetic, but will hardly interest those who are looking for substantial entertainment. It is finely photographed and well put on.

THE SLAVEY'S ROMANCE (Victor), August 21.—A story with a plot somewhat similar to the play "Merely Mary Ann." The hired girl puts up her savings to aid the young inventor in patenting his invention. She afterwards becomes a beauty and he gains wealth. The theme is a good one and the characters appealing, but the production does not develop much feeling.

THE DIAMOND NIPPERS (Joker), August 22.—Max Asher and company appear in this low comedy number, which is a very good one of its type. The fun comprises a chase after a diamond thief, who dives into the water from a roof top. The water stunts are funny and this is a pleasing offering of the slapstick kind.

GET OUT AND GET UNDER (Eclectic).—This one-reel farce-comedy contains action aplenty, some of it around and about and under automobiles. The story turns on the anxiety of a wife to get away and of her husband to get her away to the country and on the many events that happen when the wife misses the train. The picture does just what it tries to do—it makes fun.

Independent Specials

THE BANK BURGLAR'S FATE (Reliance), August 8.—This two-part offering was written by C. D. Browne, of the Minnesota Bankers' Protective Association, and shows what a bank burglar can reasonably expect as a result of his crime. It seems about as entertaining as any picture could well be; is one of the best offerings within a month. Full of snap, go and dramatic suspense, it holds the spectator to the very end; there is not a bit of padding nor a spot in it that is not absorbingly interesting. It shows how the yeggs plan and carry out their scheme to rob the bank's safe and get away with the coin. Then it switches to the detectives' side of the matter and shows how their co-ordinated information about the under-world and its doings makes it an easy thing to gather in the criminals. Its author had a dandy story to tell and its producer had the skill to make that story tell powerfully on the screen. Acting, staging, photography, everything about the picture is of the best. It is an offering to make business for the exhibitor.

THE TAVERN OF TRAGEDY (Majestic), August 9.—A strong two-reel offering. In it Dorothy Gish will win the hearty applause of the audience; there's no doubt about it. The story's idea has been used once or twice in pictures before, but is not trite at all and has been freshly developed. It deals with civil war times, but is good enough in itself not to need battle pictures and does without them wholly. The players—there are but three of them—are perfect. F. A. Turner plays a villainous inn keeper, informer for both sides and murderer. Dorothy Gish plays his step-daughter and Donald Crisp plays a Union officer, whom the man intends to kill during the night, but whom she helps to escape. The staging and all that counts in a picture will excite admiration. A fine offering.

THE PERILS OF PAULINE (Eclectic), August 10.—The eleventh episode of this serial contains a thrilling automobile smash following a chase. It is a bump over a ledge and a roll down. There is suspense during the ride of Pauline in the machine driven by a crazy man, a former speed king. The picture is finely staged, both as to interiors and backgrounds; the photography is unusually good.

STRONGER THAN DEATH (Thanhouser), August 11.—This two-reel story—decidedly weak and inartistic—fails to get the spectator's close attention, because its characters do not convince. This reviewer wonders how he would look on this picture—so hopeless from an instructed mind's viewpoint—if he were a plowboy in a lonely country town. Perhaps he would swallow it all and count it a good offering. We don't believe city patrons will admire it. The photography and camera work generally are good.

HONOR OF THE HUMBLE (Victor), August 14.—A two-reel number, the cast including Florence Lawrence, Matt Moore and Wm. J. O'Neill. The scenes are at a hunting lodge belonging to the count, with whom the lodgekeeper's daughter falls in love. The girl would have gained more interest if she had not thrown herself at the count quite so violently. The big feature of this number, and it is a good one, is the struggle between the lodgekeeper and the count on the cliffs. The close is abrupt and a little out of keeping with the general tone of the story; it also leaves considerable to be explained. Faulty in construction, but will hold the interest.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES (Victor), August 17.—A political story, with Warren Kerrigan as the district attorney against whom the mayor is plotting. Vera Sisson plays the part of a girl with a past, employed to trap him. She falls in love with him and they go through some troubled scenes before finding happiness. The story is not entirely convincing, but the cast is pleasing and the incidents are well pictured. It is an offering that will be followed with interest by the average observer.

THE SEA VENTURE (Gold Seal, Story No. 3), August 18.—On the way to Portland Law is handed another trey of hearts. Judith substitutes herself for Rose in this number and goes aboard the Sea Venture. She here discloses her identity, after Law had made love to her, believing she was Rose. The yacht is fired and much excitement follows. The story continues well in holding the interest.

THE ROBBERY AT PINE RIVER (Broncho), August 19.—Circumstantial evidence picture in two reels. It has action and has been produced in a snappy and gingery way that compensates in part for the fact that the story is not, as a whole, dramatic in the sense that all of its parts help to build up the climax. The backgrounds are in a lumbering camp of the Northwest and the snowy pine-covered hills of the beyond. A snatch of a love story is thrown in and the robbery is committed by a rough character of the village. The lover is accused and cleared easily, then the mounted policeman tracks the real culprit. There are some fine views of snowy wilds and the log village is interesting. It is a fair feature offering.

BRANSFORD IN ARCADIA (Eclair), August 19.—A four-reel number based on a well-known story by Eugene Manlove Rhoades, called "The Little Eohippus." This has an Arizona setting, with J. W. Johnston and Pearl Cooke in the cast. This has that genuine western atmosphere so hard to achieve, either in fiction or on the screen; the characters seem real and the plot develops in an entertaining manner. There is a little jerkiness in some of the scenes, but on the whole the production is a strong, compelling one. This is one of the best western releases we have seen. It dispenses with the more exciting situations in the first reels and winds up on the comedy note.

A MEXICAN SPY IN AMERICA (Bison 101), August 20.—A two-part melodrama written and staged by Henry McRae, and plentifully supplied with action which is about as convincing or unconvincing as that in other offerings of this kind. Such pictures strive to give feeling by their speedy motion that gives no time to think rather than by a skillful arrangement of true, emotion-giving facts. It was taken in Honolulu and has many scenes in an actual army post with plenty of soldiers, which fact helps it not a little. The spy is a friend of the colonel's son and is trying to use the colonel's daughter to further his scheme of stealing the code book. The girl's fiance is, of course, custodian of the book. It is acceptably acted and the photography is beautiful.

ON THE HIGH SEAS (Imp), August 20.—This two-reel number presents the interesting situation of a shipowner's son on board his father's vessel. He is put to work by the captain and quarrels with the latter and the rascally mate. Mutiny breaks out and the captain is shot. The crime was committed by the mate, who afterward completely ends his superior officer's life by stabbing him. Through the efforts of the girl the shipowner's son is cleared and the mate apprehended. This is realistically worked out, though some of the scenes lacked the dramatic effect they might have had. The story is rather brutal in several places, but serves to hold the attention throughout.

A ROMANCE OF HAWAII (Bison), August 22.—A two-reel number contrived particularly to exhibit the cane fields and other industries of the Hawaiian islands. Wm. Clifford, Marie Walcamp and Sherman Bainbridge carry the plot when it finally develops, but the story interest is very slight and the observer must content himself with some fairly interesting scenic effects through most of the offering. The photography is fair.

MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY NO. 9 (Thanhouser).—This installment of two reels takes up the tale where the last let it drop and carries it on through one of the most interesting episodes it has yet pictured. It begins to have the quality that will strongly invite the spectator to keep his eye open to assure seeing the next installment. Most of the action is laid in mid ocean, where Florence, whom the gang has captured as an insane person and taken on board of the "George Washington," jumps overboard and swims to the New Foundland fishing fleet—beautiful scenes of the fishing smacks out in the ocean are given. The photography is of the quality that helps much.

ALL LOVE EXCELLING (Eclectic).—This three-reel drama is finely and expensively staged and well photographed. For those who dearly love a lord the picture may have attraction in its story, for there is a lord and also a duke. The period ranges from 1840 to the time of the Crimean war. The backgrounds, with the exception of the end of the action, are American. The illusion is not heightened by a tendency on the part of the players to act. Miss Woodruff, as Beth, does good work. Care has been taken in the selection of costumes and in the avoidance of anachronisms.

BATTLE FOR LIFE (Warner's Features).—A three-reel offering made in England and providing a melodrama of the times (1803) when Nelson fought the French in the sea battle of Trafalgar. There's a fine picture of his death on board the ship "Victory," which he commanded and was probably taken on the very ship which is kept, a show place, in England. The picture is filled with delightful glimpses of old-time England—hedges, cottages and the like—that convince us absolutely of the time intended. The hero of the story, just married to "Black-Eyed" Susan, is delivered over to the press gang by a rascally villain who loves her. There is exciting action—not quite as convincing as the best up-to-date pictures, but acceptably setting forth good situations—that holds the attention and makes it a very fair offering. The photography is good.

THE BRAND OF BARS (Warner's Features).—A three-reel western offering of the old style melodramatic type, but filled with exciting action. It was made by the Albuquerque Company and has the good acting and pleasing characters usually found in pictures of their make, but the photography—of this print at least—is badly dust specked and thick in many of its scenes. It is a very good offering for summertime and especially for out-doors service, for patrons are not feeling intellectual these days and in days of war excitement, rough, stirring pictures are wanted. Those who have been in prison are of the "brand of bars," and the story shows how one of them heroically rehabilitated himself and won the rancher's daughter. There are Indians aplenty in it and a rescue of the girl from their village.

WITH SERB AND AUSTRIAN (Austro-Serb Film Co.).—A four-part picture around the opening of the war between Servia and Austria and telling the love story of an Austrian prince who goes to Servia as a spy and falls so deeply in love with a princess of that country that he proves untrue to his mission. There are some fine battle scenes—they show Italian and Austrian troops in conflict and are not germane to the story. Any spectator will recognize the Italian military hats. The story would have been good in an offering of two reels, as it is we count it fair. There is some excellent photography in the offering—not all of it is clear. It is a rather awkward picture and plainly put together in a hurry. It is a posed picture with no reality. A poor offering for a dignified picture house.

THE LAST BATTLE (Warner's Features).—A Milano three-reel production giving a story of political life in Italy and showing the difficulties of a "liberal" newspaperman. His particular friend in college is the son of a banker; but they could never agree on politics and in after life become bitter enemies. The banker's son is in politics and, elected to parliament, becomes a minister. He has systematically opposed the journalist, who has seen that he was using his position to further his own purposes. But the newspaperman, who has had a hard time keeping a place on account of the influence used against him, at length finds proof that the other man has been a briber and shows him up. The minister, confronted by the evidence, commits suicide in the parliamentary chamber. It is clear, interesting and well photographed. An acceptable offering.

Louis B. Jennings

LOUIS B. JENNINGS was born in New York City about forty years ago and started his career in his twenties in the real estate business. About ten years ago he invested considerable money in Canada and the possibilities of Canada's future was so strong, to his mind, that he located in the North Country and soon became interested in many of Canada's natural resources. He had his office in Montreal and was widely and favorably known throughout the Dominion.

Louis B. Jennings.

A little over two years ago Canada's financial condition became very greatly strained and Mr. Jennings, on a visit to New York, and after conferring with friends of his who had gone into the moving picture industry, decided that that was the proper field to give his time and energy to, and as a consequence he moved his headquarters to New York and immediately began a thorough study of the industry, and in conjunction with Mr. Bangs, decided that there was a great opening in the actual developing of the pictures, resulting in the formation of the Bangs Laboratories, Inc.

Since then, Mr. Jennings has become more deeply interested in the industry and is now president of the Standard Film Corporation recently organized and which has secured the exclusive moving picture concessions for the Panama-Pacific Exposition. He still owns considerable property and interests in Canada, but has so arranged these varied affairs that he can give practically all his time to what he considers the greatest industry of the world.

WITH SERB AND AUSTRIAN.

The Austro-Serb Film Company offers a four-part picture of strategy and romance in which is told the love story of Prince Rudolf of Hapsburg and Princess Vera of the Karageorgevich family. She is the daughter of King Peter of Servia. It makes no difference whether this story is founded on fact or not, it is built up around the stirring historic events that led to the greatest war that the world has ever known. It is a posed picture; but it takes account of the preparations for the struggle between Austria and Servia and weaves the love story into the texture of state craft and, latterly, of battle. Count Berchtold, the Austrian premier, is one of the participants and King Franz Josef of Austria also appears. Some of its scenes are in the Kaiserhof, in Vienna, and some are set in Belgrade, while the battle scenes are in the foothills of Servia.

The story opens on the birthday of Prince Rudolf. He is congratulated by his brother officers of the Austrian army and repairs to the Kaiserhof, where the Emperor gives him a double kiss of felicitation. A few hours later he and Berchtold have a conference with Rudolf and he is given a commission to get from the war office of the Servians the plans showing where the dynamite mines are hidden so that the Austrian army can attack that country. He succeeds in getting the plans; but has fallen so deeply in love with the Princess that, in the end, he considers love stronger than patriotism and burns his copy.

FAMOUS PLAYERS POSTPONE "SILVER KING."

Guy Standing, by Sailing to Join English Army, Suspends Picture in Which He Has Lead.

While speculation is rife as to the probable effect on the motion picture industry of the gigantic war now raging through all of Europe, the Famous Players Film Company has already experienced one unusual result of the tremendous conflict, which has compelled this concern to postpone its production of "The Silver King," preparations for which have for some time been under way.

Guy Standing, whose selection for the leading role of the world-famed drama was recently announced, is a captain in a noted English regiment, and when the announcement that England had joined the wholesale war was officially confirmed Standing's military zeal immediately destroyed the poise that is necessary for so arduous a role as that of the Silver King.

Obsessed with the desire to return to his regiment and join the colors, Standing called upon Adolph Zukor, President of the Famous Players, and for the first time in his life really pleaded for the postponement of an engagement. Mr. Zukor, impressed by the patriotic loyalty of the star, consented, and Standing happily began preparations for a hasty departure. He sailed last week on the Lusitania, to take his place in a more vital drama and enact a more heroic role even than that of "The Silver King."

PERFECT ELECTRO AIR STERILIZER.

To purify and deodorize the air in theaters, offices and other rooms where large numbers of people are constantly assembled has presented a difficult problem for a long time and one that has been difficult of satisfactory solution. The perfect Electro Air Purifier is a simple device advertised in another part of this magazine which the manufacturer claims will do this work quickly and thoroughly with the utmost satisfaction. A perforated metal container with a small tank inside holding the fluid which is absorbed by a special fibre packing and is so constructed that it may be attached instantly to an electric fan, constitutes the main features of this device for which patent has been applied. One quarter of an ounce of the perfumed, disinfecting fluid furnished with the apparatus will deodorize, purify and perfume the air in a large theater or office for an entire day. There is a large field and a long felt need for something of this kind for the sick room, workshop, as well as office or theater. Various odors can be furnished according to the provision of the purchaser and the apparatus can be used for scenting a room with a delicate perfume, even where there is ample ventilation and there is no necessity to deodorize or purify the air of the room. It is protected against contagion and disease and the source of comfort and pleasure. The apparatus sells for $1 and the combination perfume, deodorizer and disinfectant for $1 a pound with discount on liberal quantities of one gallon or more.

"ANIMATED SEND CAMERA CORPS TO EUROPEAN WARS."

The cablegram just received from the Universal London offices by Jack Cohn, manager of the Animated Weekly, states that eight cameramen have just been dispatched into European war zones armed with passports, letters of introduction and what not. These men will take special scenes to be incorporated into the Universal Weekly.

Many of the men who are engaged in this work are veterans, having served time with the camera in the Balkan war.

The Universal has opened the purse-strings wide, determined to get the best and most up-to-the-minute filming of the great struggle, which has already smothered Europe.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

Moving Pictures in Vocational Selection.

UNDER the date of August 6, Harry E. Downer, Head Resident of the Friendly House, Davenport, Ia., wrote to me as follows: "Your interesting department in the Moving Picture World became positively luminous in the issue of August 8. That series of paragraphs dealing with the value of motion pictures in vocational selections held more encouragement and aroused more enthusiasm than anything that ever came in the Friendly House mail. I wish you would take the trouble to put me in communication with the Bureau of Commercial Economics mentioned by you. Please let me have the address of the organization. I want to hook up with them and do it now.

"We have in Friendly House, which, by the way, is a social settlement, a theater wholly equipped for motion pictures. We have been giving, each Saturday of the settlement year, entertainments for children since January 1, 1913. We have been hoping to use the theater for just such purposes as the Bureau of Commercial Economics plans. We made a beginning and held two vocational evenings; but the difficulty of securing films of the required sort, sufficient to make an evening's entertainment, stopped us. I am arranging for a series of evenings when those in attendance shall consider the advantages and disadvantages of each calling, the discussion to be led by working men and employers. I have already collected local data on Davenport industries, so far as I have had time. It is a great field for usefulness of films, etc."

For the benefit of others like Mr. Downer, whom I have already answered by personal letter, I will state that the address of the Bureau of Commercial Economics is: The Hearst Building, Room 309, West Madison street, Chicago.

Mr. Downer in his letter also draws attention to the fact that the campaign of enlightenment and helpfulness announced by the Bureau of Commercial Economics in the industrial field is to be "maintained through endowment funds and annuities," and he was kind enough to enclose a printed copy of an able paper read by him before the Contemporary Club, of Davenport, on April 10, 1913. The title of the paper is "The Wholesome Mission of Motion Pictures," and the following extracts, viewed in the light of the mission of the Bureau of Commercial Economics, show that Mr. Downer had the right vision, if not the gift of prophecy, concerning the future of educational films.

There are many enthusiasts who believe strongly in the future of the educational motion picture, even to universal use and benefit. There is already a sprinkling of instances where beginnings have been made. But the observer who ballasts his zeal with a modicum of judgment will be constrained to fear that the day of the general use of instructive pictures is far in the future. This is the case if the present condition of commercialism is not interrupted by philanthropy. The character of the present output of motion pictures will not improve speedily unless a decided effort is made from outside the interests concerned to bring this about. Every means of education has been brought to usefulness by philanthropy. No college ever grows too old or strong to be considered out of the shower of benefaction. Harvard and Yale are still receiving bequests and donations. The usefulness of the secondary school was demonstrated by the privately maintained acadamy before the American high school was possible. The kindergarten was nurtured by beneficence until its value in the course of study was recognized and it was incorporated in the public school system. In many places teachers of drawing and physical culture in the public schools were supported by subscription until the branches they taught were considered proper to be sustained by the public money. Public playgrounds were maintained by beneficence in a number of cities until they made good, and were taken over by the taxpayers. On both the educational and recreation sides a parallel can be found warranting the endowment of worthy motion pictures.

Education has always been the handmaid of philanthropy. It is a service wherein there is no obligation. The educational motion picture is as truly a worthy object of endowment as a school or a public library, and for the same reasons. The need of private beneficence in this new field is akin to the need which prompted the establishing of the Russell Sage Foundation, the Peabody Education fund, the Carnegie Institute at Washington, and the General Education board. It would be most appropriate if some of the great fortunes which have been made in motion pictures could be drawn upon for this magnificent work of universal education. Perhaps no one has a right to make that suggestion. But when one stops to think that multitudes of the patrons of picture theatres, who never step within a school or church or library, could be reached, influenced, enlightened, helped to humanity and contentment by the proper application of this new social force, it seems as if the way must open for its speedy forwarding by philanthropy. It is generally considered admirable that Mr. Carnegie has made it possible for any man to find in a public library the book he needs. Would it not be also admirable for some other thoughtful man of wealth to send a message of enlightenment and good cheer to the 300 other men for whom the library does not exist? The ratio of motion picture theatre patrons to public library patrons is 300 to one, is it not? Or is it higher still?

How could an endowment be made operative? A question not to be answered offhand and in any event by motion picture men probably by men who have studied the subject from all sides. Perhaps the means might take the shape of a series of distributing stations stocked by great collections of admirable films, the rental to be made lower than that of other films, that exhibitors might have the constant temptation to use as many of the wholesome pictures as their patronage would stand. The charge to all benevolent institutions to be nominal. It is a dream, surely, but sometimes dreams come true.

Western and Northern Michigan to Be Boosted by Pictures.

Secretary John L. Gibson, of the Western Michigan Development bureau, is directing the taking of an extensive series of moving pictures to advertise western and northern Michigan. The first of the series was taken recently in Grand Rapids by James S. Falkinburg, of Chicago.

Views of Grand Rapids and vicinity showing the river front and its industrial buildings, the main streets, hotels, public buildings, the important commercial and social centers, public parks and recreation resorts will be included in the films. There will be also views showing western and northern Michigan and its marvelous development. The fine roads of this section of the state; the rich agricultural territory, which is producing wealth and offering abundant opportunities for investment and permanent homes for the home seeker; the great fruit orchards and the thousand industries of thriving cities will be seen in the films. Cadillac, Traverse City, Muskegon, Petoskey, Charlevoix, Manistee, Frankfort and other important towns in western and northern Michigan, with special attention to the shipping industry, both by lake and rail, will be carefully covered.

Three thousand feet of film will be included in the plan of advertisement which Secretary Gibson will energetically carry out during the coming year.

Conditions in the South and Northwest.

Douglas H. Bergh, special traveling representative of George Kleine, has just returned from a six weeks' trip over territory including such important centers as Minneapolis, St. Paul, Dallas, New Orleans and Atlanta.

Mr. Bergh states that none of the large houses, and very few of the small, have closed down during the summer in any of the cities visited. He reports fair business everywhere, with glowing expectations of a splendid fall and winter business. Exhibitors in the cities visited are all busy in making bookings for the fall.

The northwest and western states promise unusually good times for exhibitors, owing to the splendid crops. In the south the European war has played havoc with the prices of cotton, Mr. Bergh states. Previous to the opening of the war, everyone in the south looked forward to a rejuvenation of business in all lines. Now the prices of cotton have fallen from $10.00 to $14.00 per bale, making a difference to the south of from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000.

In this connection it would be well for southern people to remember the sensible advice recently given by the Department of Agriculture to American farmers and bankers who are in close touch with farm credits. That advice is something like this: Use the nation's credit and stanchness to the fullest extent. Withhold cotton from the market for the time being. Bankers should assist both owners and tenant farmers to hold cotton until the situation clears.

Dallas and Atlanta are both very prosperous just now, and picture theaters are doing very well there. In Atlanta there are 22 exchanges, which furnish films to a large territory. Every exchange manager in Atlanta is a member of the Motion Picture Trades Club, of Atlanta, and meetings are held by the members weekly. This club serves to promote harmony among exchange men and the results are felt by their customers. The general welfare of the business is the chief aim of this club. Atlanta furnishes films to exhibitors in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and East Tennessee.

The Dallas exchanges also cover a wide territory, embracing Texas, Oklahoma, southern Kansas, Arkansas and part of Louisiana. Mr. Bergh emphasizes that Dallas and Atlanta are the two best distributing points in the entire south. New Orleans and Memphis also do considerable business in the territory controlled chiefly by the cities just mentioned.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Mfg. Co., is at present in Switzerland with his wife and two sons, Hobart and Winston. It is expected that Mr. Hutchinson and his family, on their way home, will come out through Italy and will probably sail from Genoa. Mr. Hutchinson is not at all uneasy about his return trip. The party is expected to leave Europe for the United States in a few weeks.

* * *

Robert R. Levy, who was the last president of the Chicago branch of the International Motion Picture Association, has received the endorsement of the republican county organization for clerk of the Criminal Court of Cook County. This is an important position, carrying a salary of $10,000 per year and the appointment of about 100 men. It is hoped that Mr. Levy will make a successful run in the coming election, as his success will be of considerable benefit to Chicago exhibitors. The primaries will be held on Sept. 9, and every Chicago exhibitor should make it a point to give all publicity possible to the candidacy of Mr. Levy.

* * *

Simeon B. Greiver has disposed of his interest in the National Film Service, Inc., and is again in charge of the booking department of the General Feature Film Co., at 5 So. Wabash Ave., this city.

* * *

George N. Gollos, president of the G. & G. Feature Film Co., of this city, left for New York, Saturday, Aug. 8, where he will buy and contract for state right features for his territory. He will be gone about two weeks.

* * *

David J. Chatkin, formerly connected with the Anti-Trust Film Co., before its purchase by the Universal, was appointed manager of the Chicago office of Warners Features, recently.

* * *

The Chicago office of the Syndicate Film Corporation has moved from 166 W. Washington street, to more spacious quarters in Suite 411 Mallers Building, 5 S. Wabash avenue. This office controls the booking of "The Million Dollar Mystery" in some of the western states. A. W. Frillman, assistant manager, states that the feature has played to good summer business. The Continental Feature Film Corporation, with J. W. Brickhouse, manager, shares part of the new offices.

* * *

W. Rayner, of the Rayner Feature Film Co., with offices in the Arcade Building, Dayton, O., was in the city last week. Mr. Rayner reported fair business for the summer season. This company handles all makes of machines, screens and accessories.

* * *

L. B. Hancock, owner of the Lyric Theater, Knoxville, Ill., paid the Chicago office a visit last week. Mr. Hancock reported fine business at the Lyric, which has a seating capacity of 250. General Film service is used and the admission is five and 10 cents for four reels. Mr. Hancock renewed his subscription for the World.

* * *

George Kleine's "Antony and Cleopatra" has succeeded "The Christian" at the Wilson Avenue Theater. This is the first time that this fine photodrama has been seen outside the loop.

* * *

The first annual "safety first campaign," under the auspices of the South Park commissioners, was held Aug 5 and Aug. 7 in Palmer Park, this city. Band concerts and moving picture exhibitions of "safety first" methods, used in various cities of the world, formed the program. Large crowds of working men and their families from the industrial plants in the southern end of Chicago and suburbs attended. Superintendents and engineers of factories and mills, and men with full knowledge of safety methods, gave interesting addresses and explained the pictures.

* * *

"Traffic in Souls," the Universal Film Company's "White Slave" photoplay, which was rejected some time ago by the Chicago censor board, is now being shown at the Princess Theater for an indefinite run. The permit for the picture was issued by Major Funkhouser under the new ordinance which gives city officials the right to permit the exhibition of certain films for adults only.

* * *

The management of the Illinois Theater announces that up to date 59,624 people have paid to see 'Cabiria." Over 70 of this number have seen the film five times, and eleven have seen it seven times, it is said. It is the intention to keep the big spectacle at the Illinois Theater until after Labor Day, when it will be shown in another loop theater, indefinitely.

* * *

The Chicago Tribune furnished about 130 of the more important moving picture theaters in the city with war news every evening last week. About 30 of the moving picture theaters in the loop were furnished special slides bearing Tribune bulletins. These slides, typed as swiftly as the news reached Chicago, were distributed by Tribune automobiles, and shown to the audiences a few minutes after they came from the typewriters. For the outlying theaters the Tribune adopted the plan of notifying the managers by phone, of the latest news.

The Gold Theater, a beautiful new house devoted exclusively to moving pictures, located at 3411 W. 12th street, this city, was opened on Saturday, Aug. 8. The opening attraction was Vitagraph's big production, "A Million Bid." This theater, which cost $100,000, is claimed to be the most modern picture playhouse in the city. The architectural design is chaste, and the most up-to-date safeguards against fire and the very latest system of ventilation have been installed. Special attention has been bestowed on the safety of patrons. Numerous exits on the sides do away with crowding, and the front of the theater will be used only as an entrance. This plan will prevent crowding or jamming in case of panic.

* * *

Wm. J. Sweeney, a member of the national executive committee of the M. P. E. L. of America, was seen Saturday, August 8, and informed me that the Chicago branch of the I. M. P. A., at a meeting held July 31, had indorsed the action of the mediation committee of the Association, at the late Dayton convention. The manner of procedure to bring about consolidation with the League will be discussed at a later meeting. Mr. Sweeney stated that he had received a letter from George M. Luttrell, president of the Illinois state branch, regarding arrangements for a meeting, or convention, in the near future, when the warm weather subsides.

* * *

I have just received by mail, from E. H. Montagu, Selig's European representative in London, an invitation to attend the initial presentation of "The Spoilers" at the New Alhambra, London, on Thursday, July 30th. The big feature is being presented by Jury's Imperial Pictures, Ltd., who are the owners of the exclusive rights for the United Kingdom. Thanks Monty. Sorry I can't drop in.

MAINE THEATER MANAGERS MEET.

A meeting of theater managers of Maine was held on Auguse 4 at Mitchell's Inn, Cape Elizabeth, Portland, Me. Present were D. D. Leader, Portland; J. W. Greeley, Portland; Moxley Blumenberg, Portland; E. A. Crawford, Brunswick; Wilbur Shea, Eastport; Thomas H. Cuddy, Augusta; W. E. Reeves, Portland; J. A. Emery, Bar Harbor; A. P. Lewistown; Neil Kelliher, Waterville; Frank Hoy, Lewistown; F. E. Mortimer, Freeport; Norman Merrill, Yarmouth; Fred Mason, Livermore Falls; J. M. Goodwin, Hallowell; H. A. Hall, Kennebunkport; Harold Ashworth, Kennebunk; Trisaline Goodwin, Vinalhaven; Charles Rush, Millinocket; C. H. Seymour, Houlton; J. J. Pray, Waterville; E. L. Crawford, Bath; A. J. Pine, Rumford; F. L. Jenne, Lisbon Falls; E. Norman Fowler, Dover; Frank D. Robinson, Waterville; Charles Hablow, Calais; Arthur Allen, Bangor; Fred M. Eugley, Rockland.

The new organization adopted the title The Maine State Theater Managers Protective Association and is intended to include all managers, regardless of the policy of the house, and the object is mutual protection and improvement of the business. These officers were elected:

President, D. D. Leader; treasurer, J. W. Greeley; secretary, Moxley Blumenberg; directors, E. A. Crawford, Wilbur Shea, Thomas H. Cuddy, W. E. Reeves, J. A. Emery and A. P. Bibber.

Mr. Bibber was also elected publicity agent.

It was decided to allow all persons interested in the theatrical business such as booking agents, film exchange men, supply men and others to become honorary members. In accordance with this resolution the following were elected to membership: Fred Marto, Boston Booking Office; Samuel H. Haase, General Film; George Appleby, Mutual Film; Charles Stern, Universal Film; William H. Ankeltelle, Warner's Features; Peter Harris, George Kleine Film; Joseph Donnelly, Electric Film; A. J. Rifkin, Eastern Features; Samuel Merchant, Box Office Attractions.

BEATING A SUNDAY LAW.

All sorts of interesting angles are developing in connection with the Sunday closing proposition in the southwest. Beck Brothers, owners of Riverside Park at Hutchison, Kan., got the local courts all tangled up in the question of what constitutes a theater. The Becks had been forbidden to give Sunday picture shows at Riverside Park, which is in the city. They stationed projecting apparatus and a screen in the Arkansas River, which is outside the city limits and gave a performance of "Traffic in Souls" on Sunday night; the crowd saw it from the park. The city attorney contends the theater includes the crowd and all. The others are tracing the Greek theater from the time when the term referred to the hillside on which the audience sat and watched the performance in the valley. It is probable that the case will get to the higher courts for decision.

Moving Picture Educator

Conducted by the REV. W. H. JACKSON

LATEST EDUCATIONALS.

AMONG the latest educationals issued by Pathe are several superior North African pictures which are a combination of scenic, historical and industrial. "The City of Dakar" is unusually picturesque and interesting, and is a splendid type of Oriental life of the upper middle class inhabitants, if such a description may be applied to distinguish these people from the less prosperous people which make the majority of the inhabitants of these regions. Situated upon the beautiful Bernard Bay, it appears a watering place of importance, its promenade, shaded by an avenue of palms, is evidently a "Fifth Avenue" of the east.

Cairo.—This world-wide known city, is presented in carefully studied detail, as the capital of Egypt it is always of importance, and a knowledge of its important places is valuable to everyone. A panoramic view of the city is astonishingly large, its flat roofs giving it the appearance of a great white sheet stretching towards the ocean. Its citadel of 1116 A. D. is a substantial building, as are also its several gates and arch-houses which are notable in architectural beauty and massive construction. The Tombs of the Kalifs form one of the attractions of tourists, these pictures will, therefore, add to the value of kinematographic time-saving travel; Arab cafes and native manners and customs, with the intermingling Europeans, gives also a view of its cosmopolitan character; the picture must, with the others, be added to those of interest to schools.

Military Trained Dogs in Belgium.

This picture is doubly appropriate at this time, its appearance will therefore command increased attention. The dogs seemingly as large as the well-known Great Dane are well cared for. To be groomed like horses is a daily habit they evidently enjoy and appreciate, while their appearance gives evidence of the good results of such careful treatment. With remarkable promptitude they obey and enter into the drill for the daring duties required of them in warfare. For drawing the smaller grade of guns they are of singular usefulness, being able to climb narrow winding paths where no other strong animal could possibly find a footing, in like manner in descending steep ravines they are particularly clever. When in action they lie down totally undisturbed by the noise or concussion of the guns. One of the most important features of their ability is displayed in their going, unaccompanied by soldiers, to different points of vantage at the simple call of the soldier who needs them, thus causing the moving of the guns from place to place in an almost unnoticeable manner. Being a new order of picture, together with the fact that it is a portrayal of trained animals whose training is of such importance, will secure for this picture more than ordinary attention.

Uriage and Vicinity.

This picture from East France introduces a place and country little if not entirely unknown to the majority of people who will see it; to see it, however, in film is a great treat, it is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful of its kind. As a holiday resort the place is certainly ideal, naturally most picturesque, with a seemingly suitable climate, and the resort of people of an artistic nature, it shows itself as possessed of a reputation second only to many and more familiarly known European resorts. As a scenic, perhaps no more beautiful one has ever been released, especially as much of the film is delightfully colored in nature enhancing tints. Magnificent waterfalls at Brenda, the entrancing vistas of Branne Farine, in which tourists are seen enjoying the delights of the places, and the unique methods of travel, will almost prove an attractive advertisement for the place, as no one can see these beautiful surroundings without at least a simple desire to visit them in reality. The film also contains views of Aix le Bains and the snow capped Alps, together with the beautiful Sierroz Falls, the whole making one of the most comprehensive and educational scenic films yet seen. Today Pathe's Weekly is more interesting than ever, always good, it is now of added interest because of scenes which are uppermost in people's minds everywhere. The air navies of France and Germany will attract everyone. Poor, indeed, will be the school that does not take advantage of opportunities never offered to any previous generation. These pictures of European war preparations are an education in themselves, and it is here we see and appreciate the value of the moving-picture as never before. The monster dirigibles of Germany are seen in all their majestic power, while a fleet of 500 aeroplanes on the French fields is a most wonderful sight, giving some evidence of the great and secret advance which has been made in the use of flying machines ready for the present crisis.

Views of English troops being reviewed by King George, and of French troops reviewed by President Poincaire, together with other incidents and personages of active importance, go to make up the most timely and instructive films. There are also pictures of the American interest in these times; the cruiser Tennessee on its important missions to Europe is shown, also the Florida on guard duty in the New York bay. Every week this series will develop new importance, which, while proving a drawing power to every exhibitor, ought justly so to be, for those with the slightest desire for knowledge and information ought certainly to keep pace with the weekly topical films.

Eclair Productions.

The Eclair company has added to its list of educational films, we notice at this time, one from Ceylon on the tea industry, which is of unique interest.

The culture of tea in all its branches is carefully depicted, the growth of the plants, the gathering of the three-year-old leaves, the methods of working by the natives, the drying of the leaves to obtain the black or the green tea products; selecting, drying, winnowing, brewing and tasting are all in turn shown with the final packing and transportation to the foreign users. They have also scenes from North Africa and the most important being the town of Biskra with its instructive local settings together with the surrounding views and attractions.

To those who look to the educational column for advice upon the best pictures to be used in all select entertainments we do not hesitate to advise adding the "Call of the North." This film is fully reviewed in the Moving Picture World so that comment here is not necessary further than to say that the film is one of unusual merit, rich in scenic beauty and other features apart from the interest found in the thrilling story.

Municipal Exhibitions.

From St. Louis, Mo., comes unusual accounts of the success of free municipal exhibitions of moving pictures. The enormous number of forty-five thousand people is given as the first week's total observers, as many as ten thousand being in attendance on one evening. It is interesting to note that the leading film shown and demanded is the topical or "news-film;" this is as it should be, and is an evidence both of appreciation and desire on the part of the public at large. The children liked animal pictures, and the adults approved the travel series; of course, the good drama and the comics were indispensable; thus the programme was such as to please the critic, and satisfy the fastidious. Next week such pictures as the House-Fly will be shown for their hygenic teachings, it is also announced that pictures will not be shown on Sundays in such a way as to interfere with the church services. "Safety First" films are coming to the front, as much for their picture interest as for their information and advice, with life saving results; it is certainly crowning the educative power of the picture to make it a life-saver as well as an educator. In children's games they serve the double purpose of teaching games while depicting the dangers of incorrectly or wildly played ones.

It is reported that the Government may permit a set of films showing the incidents at Vera Cruz and the manoeuvres of the American fleet in Mexican waters. If this is done it will be necessarily along purely educational lines, as of course no films can be produced which could in any way give cause for any unfriendly feeling on the part of our Mexican neighbors.

"The Forbidden Trail"

A Two-Part Tragedy by Kleine-Celio with Marked Suspense and Beautifully Made in Every Way.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE is art in this picture, not only in the way it was written, but in the direction, the acting and the photography. It is one of those offerings that eminently satisfy our human feeling of pleasure in success. And perhaps this feeling is the keynote in all our delight in the products of art. Perfect art is wholly social. The ideal of any player in portraying a character is to lose himself wholly in the character. This disarms envy; because it is so impersonal. So our pleasure in real art is untinctured by lower feelings. But the sword cuts with both edges and that is why our displeasure in poor attempts at art is so painful—we feel that the artist, obtruding his own awkward hands in the midst of our pleasure, is presumptious and a nuisance.

Humanity is normally charitable with human weakness. Absolute perfection is impossible for more than short passages and only the keenest minds are sensible of anything but glaring differences from perfection. Also when the mind is wrapped in some "pipe dream" story we are the more hypnotized to see nothing but the acceptable fates unfolded. Yet in a tragedy such as "The Forbidden Trail"—it is a very poor name for this picture—art is necessary. In it the pleasure that art gives more than counterbalances our sympathetic discomfort in the story of its unpleasant fates. There are many happy moments in it, sincerely acted and wholly convincing; there is that about it that makes us think we are looking at real life in Italy; and there are beautifully photographed glimpses of some lovely parts of Italy in it that are as though we were there to see them ourselves.

Scene from "The Forbidden Trial" (Kleine).

The story opens with a picture of an Italian school for girls conducted by Sisters of St. Francis. There is both humor and humanity in this and it is fine. The heroine, a pretty, young girl, is called away by her father and enters social life. An artic explorer is attracted by her and she, too, falls in love with and marries him. We heartily commend the sets that serve for these scenes. The rooms of the heroine's home are at once rich and dignified. There is wisdom in the director's use of pictures and tapistry all through the picture—this is something that too many directors pay little attention to. The heroine and her husband are happy for awhile; but she is a flirt and he grows jealous. Yet the script is so written that one can not take complete partisanship—this partisanship or lack of it is one of the chief distinctions between a "pipe dream" and a work of art—the spectator in this picture blames neither man nor wife; but is kept deeply interested to see how the situation is going to turn out. In time, the husband's jealousy irritates the young wife and makes her reckless. Soon her flirtations become something not so innocently colored as they had been; she goes entirely beyond the permissible. The husband sets a trap and learns of a meeting arranged to be in a cabin. He waits there. The lover comes and he confronts him; hands him a revolver and they go outside. When the woman arrives, he is back in the cabin alone to meet her. He upbraids her and forces her to leave by a side door where she finds the body of her lover lying on the grass.

Submarine Pictures on Exhibition

Unusual Subjects Photographed by Williamson Brothers Being Shown at Museum of Natural History.

THE submarine pictures taken by the Williamson brothers in the waters adjacent to the Bahama Islands, descriptions of which frequently have been printed in the Moving Picture World, were put on exhibition Tuesday, August 12, at the Museum of Natural History in New York. J. W. Kellette directed the exhibition, which was the second public showing of these unusual subjects, the first having been before the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. The pictures were taken last May by the Williamson submarine expedition, consisting of Captain Charles Williamson, the inventor of the apparatus; his sons, G. M. and J. E. Williamson, and Dr. Glover, who at the initial showing at the Museum delivered a descriptive lecture.

The display began with many scenes of Bahama life and landscapes on New Providence and Watling's Islands. Then followed scenes from the bottom of the ocean, with the coral formations and plant life found there, and a number of varieties of fish, which, it was said, had never been photographed before. The film showed the entire processes of the sponge fishery, which is one of the leading industries of the Bahamas. More interesting than this, however, was an excellent display of the diving skill of the negro boys, who surround liners in their skiffs and dive for pennies thrown from the decks.

Another feature was an illustration of the methods used in catching sharks. The submarine cinematograph caught the sharks fighting each other for food, the letting down of the bait, the struggle on the hook, and finally the killing of the man-eater as they were brought to the surface. At the climax of the show was shown a film of J. E. Williamson diving with a knife in his teeth, fighting and killing a shark under water in front of the camera, and returning safely to the outer air, the doer of this deed being present in the audience to receive congratulations at the close of the show.

The Submarine Film Corporation has been formed to put these pictures on the market. The company is organized under the laws of Virginia and has a capitalization of $100,000. Among the incorporators are T. S. Southgate, Nathaniel Beaman, A. F. Cathey, C. R. Capps, G. M. Wilkinson, who will be secretary-treasurer, and J. E. Williamson, who will be general manager. C. J. Hite, president of the Thanhouser Film Corporation, is one of the stockholders and will have charge of the distribution of all the company's subjects. Frank C. Payne, a well-known theatrical man, will have charge of booking and publicity.

"THE VIRGINIAN" (Lasky).

The first release of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company through the newly formed Paramount Pictures Corporation will be Owen Wister and Kirk La Shelle's thrilling western tale "The Virginian," with Dustin Farnum in the title role.

"The Virginian" in five parts and four hundred scenes, is looked upon by the Lasky people as their best production, to date. Certainly from the magnificent opportunities afforded by the book, a most interesting visualization is possible.

Scene from "The Virginian" (Lasky).

Many of the scenes in "The Virginian" were laid in the Calistoga, Cal., country. A cast of three hundred players, including James Neil, Winifred Kingston, J. W. Johnston and Cecilia De Mille, daughter of Cecil B. De Mille, Lasky's director general.

"The Next in Command"

Interesting Story of Soudan in the New Pasquali Four-Part Offering—Has Strong Situations.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

THERE have been few pictures dealing with the Soudan although that land is at present the one spot in the world where romance still lives as of old. The present offering, "The Next in Command," a four-part picture by Pasquali, gets added value as much from the freshness, as from the romance-tincture in its backgrounds. It tells a good yarn, too, which begins with a love affair between a young lieutenant and Zuleika, only daughter of the headman of the Arabs who have been beaten but not pacified and are holding the neighboring country around a camp of soldiers.

Taking this love story for its opening, the picture develops into a drama with some of the finest possible situations. The lieutenant's love affair might have prospered well enough had it not been for a captain, his superior officer, who catches a glimpse of Zuleika and takes an irresistible fancy to her. To get her into his power the captain begins to play the villain in the most approved way. He sends one of the lieutenant's gloves to the Arab princess with an urgent request to "follow the bearer," who conducts her to the captain's tent. The lieutenant, who happens to be passing, hears the struggle and sees through the thin canvas of the tent the shadow of the girl fighting to be free from the hateful arms of the villain. With his knife he cuts a long slit down the side of the tent and jumping through confronts the captain. There is a struggle which ends with the captain's being shot by the revolver of the hero. He and the girl escape together to the city of the Arabs where, for the girl's sake, the chief receives him with a kiss of welcome.

Now, as the statement of the picture already has made clear to us, the father of the lieutenant is a major and when the captain is found dead by the guard after hearing the shot, it is he who comes to investigate. Picking up a bit of wood he realizes that it is his son who has committed the crime, for so he thinks it is. He doesn't want to accuse his son; but there is his duty to the flag and he is true to it. The colonel orders the lieutenant-colonel of the force to take out a company and bring in the escaped lover, dead or alive. It is then reported to him that that officer lies sick and cannot comply. The colonel orders, "Take it to the next in command," not realizing that he is sending out the boy's own father. The father goes as in duty bound.

The Arabs seeing the force coming out against them decide to attack and the little band is soon surrounded and in great danger of being annihilated. This makes the youth, who is with the Arabs, hesitate. He sends the girl back to the camp with the news that the force is being massacred and himself dashes through the investing Arabs back to the flag. The youth and his father, being the sole survivors, hold the ground till help comes and then the major arrests the son. The colonel hears the story and is perplexed till a note is brought out to him from the camp stating that the wound of the captain is superficial so he shakes hands with the lad and they bring back the girl with them, suggesting a happy ending to the love story.

It is a smoothly and clearly told story for the many. With no pretense to art, the tale never fails to interest and, while it is just one of those productions that attracts the captious critic as sugar does the fly, it is also the kind of picture that is sure to go very well with the average patron who comes to be amused and to kill time and not to be instructed or edified. The backgrounds—they seem to have been taken in Africa—are perfect and full of the right romantic suggestion. The acting is satisfactory and the photography is good.

SIGNING UP WITH ALL-STAR.

Owing to the fact that the All-Star Feature Corporation has just completed its first year of producing and that the existing contracts for the majority of territories of the United States and the World begin with the fiscal year, commencing September first, there has been considerable activity at the All-Star general offices during the past ten days.

While it has not definitely been given out at the offices, whom are to be the distributors of All-Star pictures for the coming year, it is generally presumed that the list will remain pretty much the same as it has in times gone by. Already more than 70 per cent. of last year's agencies have signified their desire to negotiate with the All-Star Company for another twelve months' period, and it is expected that with the next issue there will be anounced the entire list of distributors to handle the All-Star products.

MORE LASKY STARS.

Three new stars in the Lasky fold are announced this week in Charles Richman, Theodore Roberts and Charles Cherry, all of whom bear excellent reputations as dramatic artists of ability.

Theodore Roberts, without doubt one of the foremost character actors of the day and star of "The Barrier," "The Confession," and other successes, will appear for the Lasky people in the picturization of George Barr McCutcheon's book, "The Rose in the Ring" which, as a motion picture will be known as "The Ring-Master."

Mr. Richman's latest appearance was as star of Jack Lait's success "Help Wanted," which ran for six months at Chas. Richman. Theo. Roberts. Chas. Cherry.

Maxine Elliott's Theater and in which Mr. Richman was called upon to portray an extremely difficult role. Mr. Richman will appear in "The Man from Home" for the Lasky concern. "The Man from Home" with William Hodge in the leading role played at the Astor Theater for two years and is one of the most attractive of American plays.

Charles Cherry, star of a dozen Broadway successes, but most recently seen in Charles Frohman's "Seven Sisters" and the Shubert's "Girls," will be seen in a picture to be released by Lasky in December.

This trio of stars added to the long list already under engagement with the Lasky Feature Play Company, gives that firm sufficient stars to carry them over a period of two years with the necessity of repetition of stars a scant possibility.

SAWYER, INC., TO HANDLE LIBERTY FILMS.

Continuing its policy of handling only the best products in the film business, Sawyer, Inc., has this week made arrangements to handle the output of the Liberty Motion Picture Co. of Philadelphia. This company is a new one in the field and is backed by wealthy Philadelphia business men. The company has established a magnificent studio and laboratory in Germantown, a complete description of which was published in these columns a few weeks ago.

This move is an important one for Sawyer, Inc., as the Liberty Company plan to release one four-reeler every month, and one and two reel comedies at short intervals. The first four reel production will be ready to exhibit in the Sawyer Pompeiian Projecting room Aug. 29. It is a subject dealing with the Canadian Northwest and is replete with dramatic situations.

WAR WON'T AFFECT BERLIN ANILINE WORKS.

George Barrows, sales manager of the Berlin Aniline Works, wants it known, that on account of the enormous stock on hand of Metol photo developing chemicals and printing colors, his company, in spite of the European war now in progress, will be able to take care of all of its contracts, also any new business that presents itself, at the regular prices.

RAMO IN NEW STUDIO.

This week will find the Ramo Company in its new studios at Flushing, L. I. Mr. George Gebhart is director, and John Arnold is camera expert. In all future features new faces will be used and only the highest class professionals will be used in the casts.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"HIS BROTHER'S BLOOD" (Lubin).

William H. Lippert has in this, written a very strange story and evolved a strong and interesting picture, which will appeal to the students of anatomy. A Dr. Kenneth and his brother Gerald are both in love with an attractive young lady, she favors the younger brother Gerald, an artist, who gets into a quarrel with a companion, who accidentally kills himself. Gerald fearing that he will be accused of murder flees and later is supposed to have been killed in a fire. Years pass and the fugitive has landed in San Francisco. There he reads that his sweetheart is about to marry his brother. He returns a derelict, and witnessing a love scene collapses. At the hospital the doctor tests the blood of a supposedly tramp patient, and discovers that it resembles his own and by this recognizes his brother. He surrenders the sweetheart to the one she really loves and is rewarded by the fact that he has made a wonderful scientific discovery. The photoplay is cleverly staged by Lloyd B. Carleton, who has assigned the leading roles to Ormi Hawley and Edward J. Peil. The cast also includes a number of the Lubin famous players.

Scene from "His Brother's Blood" (Lubin)

WAR TOPICS IN PATHE'S WEEKLY NO 49.

The issue of Pathe's Weekly of August 8, and numbered 49, contains timely pictures bearing on the European war. There are views of German dirigibles. Then there is shown a large fleet of the 550 aeroplanes on which the French army depends so strongly. They are pictured in flight as well as grouped on the ground. We see the French liner "Lorraine" sailing with reservists, with unbounded enthusiasm afloat and ashore. There is a bit with Prime Minister Asquith of England, prominent. The United States ship "Tennessee" sails with $7,000,000 for stalled Americans. We see in Epinal, France, one of the centers of mobilization. French engineers rapidly build a bridge of pontoons. Albert I of Belgium, famous in a week, as the leader of a humble nation, who has upset the two-score-year-long plans of the greatest military power in the world, is shown. There is a sketch of French troops leaving Paris. Another picture, short but surely impressive, is of Mrs. Wilson, the late First Lady of the Land. She is shown in health.

"CABIRIA" GOES TO THE GLOBE.

"Cabiria" will move to the Globe Theatre on Monday, August 17th, to continue for a further period its remarkable engagement. The previous plans at the Knickerbocker made its remaining beyond August 16th impossible, and realizing the great vogue and success of this attraction, C. B. Dillingham placed his theatre at the disposal of this picture to continue its long run and to remain in New York when the regular season is inaugurated.

SAWYER, INC., TO MARKET "DOC."

Sawyer Inc. put over another scoop this week when they secured the exclusive marketing rights for the world for the first Eleanor Gates motion picture. The picture is in four reels and is a picturization of the story of "Doc" which was featured in the Saturday Evening Post. It is considered one of Miss Gates' best works, vieing with her successful "Poor Little Rich Girl" in popularity. Miss Gates' stories are well known in dramatic circles. In addition to her "Poor Little Rich Girl" she has also written the "Biography of a Prairie Girl," "Cupid the Cow Punch," and others which are well known as "best sellers." She has also written a number of one act plays which have been produced successfully. In the picturization of "Doc" she has incorporated the most dramatic incidents of the story. The picture was produced at Mount Kisco, New York, and the rugged quarry scenes and forest backgrounds give some wonderfully life-like effects. The story of "Doc" deals with the experiences of a young M. D. whose struggles for existence are very dramatic and interesting. One of the spectacular scenes of the picture is that in which a serious accident in a granite quarry is shown.

Scene from "Doc."

The picture is technically excellent. The photography is particularly fine. A very superior cast of principals has been used, and the picture will take its place as one of the film classics of the season. The subject will be released August 24th, and will be distributed through the Sawyer booking zones.

DAVID HORSLEY SIGNS FAMOUS CLOWNS.

Contemplating a series of one reel comedies, David Horsley, of the Centaur Company, has engaged the services of several clowns of international reputation. They are Harry La Pearl, leading circus clown in the United States; Tommy Mullins, one of the best known pantomimists; Spook Hanson, who enjoys an international reputation as a silent comedian; Jimmie Hyland, famous mule rider, and George Zammett, rizley acrobat. This company of celebrities will be under the direction of Tommie Mullens.

GOLDIN MAKING FEATURE.

Mr. Sidney Goldin, who has been at the head of The Goldin Feature Film Co., has severed all connection with that firm. In the future he can be found in his new offices, No. 12 Broadway Theater Bldg., New York, where he is preparing a feature production, "The Robbers," on which he started actual producing August 9.

"A LUCKY DECEPTION" (Nestor).

They looked upon the wine when it was red and into the lady's eyes when they sparkled, and when they regained consciousness Bob and Lee, his chum, found themselves in a vile dungeon cell playing tag with cock-roaches. That is how all the trouble started in this delicious, romping, hilarious two-reel comedy by the Universal-Nestor Company. Written and produced by Al. E. Christie and featuring the inimitable trio, Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons and Victoria Forde, it is the biggest bunch of fun that has come over the way in a long time.

To comment with justice upon the merits of this comedy is a thing almost impossible; it's just plain, good rich comedy, depending on clever situations and cleverer acting. You have to see it to rightly appreciate it.

Scene from "A Lucky Deception" (Nestor).

In due time, following the incarceration, a fuzzy-faced professor from the college invaded the jail and after arranging for the liberation of the two miscreants, informed them that each had been expelled from the school. When Bob reached home the news of his disgrace had preceded him.

Said his father: "You are forcing me to a course which I abhor, but you must accept my proposition or fare for yourself. If you will marry and settle down to a quiet life within a month I will give you $5,000. If not, out you go."

Such a tame end to a rollicking college career did not impress Bob. Howbeit, Bob carried the news to Lee.

"I will marry you," said Lee. "I made a hit as a woman impersonator in our college plays and now is my opportunity to vindicate myself as an actor."

Bob introduced Lee as his prospective wife. The rest of the comedy does with the adventures—love and otherwise—of the two boys. The release date is August 21.

COMMERCIAL FILMERS AND COMMERCIAL MOTION PICTURES.

W. F. Porter, of the Commercial Filmers, a non-incorporated association which manufactures, advertises and distributes commercial motion pictures, writes to the Chicago office that the contract for the exclusive rights to take motion pictures of the greatest Style Show in the world, has been closed by the members. This Style Show will be given Aug. 18th in Medinah Temple, Chicago, by the Chicago Garments Manufacturers' Association.

Medinah Temple has one of the largest auditoriums in the city, and will seat 4,500 people comfortably. The stage on which the big show will be exhibited is 70x70 feet. About 250 garments will be exhibited on the best living models obtainable, and a scenario will be woven around the display that will highly enhance the interest. Mr. Porter states that this spectacular feature will excel anything that has hitherto been attempted in this line.

A competent stage director has been secured for the occasion, and motion pictures of the big style show will be taken and distributed throughout the United States and Canada by the Commercial Filmers. The office of the Commercial Filmers is located at 1101 W. Randolph Street, Chicago.

Mr. Porter states that the big demand for seats already made will more than tax the capacity of Medinah Temple.

THE ELEVENTH PAULINE EPISODE (Eclectic).

In the eleventh episode of "The Perils of Pauline," Director Gasnier has provided a thrilling automobile pursuit and smash-up. Pauline, determined to attend a wedding, refuses to be balked when Harry, in order to save her from a threatened catastrophe which Owen has planned at the festivities, and has sent away the large automobile, takes the small machine. For a chauffeur she uses a recently employed gardener, none too sound of mind, but in whom she recognizes a racing driver recently escaped from a hospital following a severe accident. She is not mistaken in the identity, but when the driver feels the wheel in his hand and the wind in his face, the old mania for speed returns. Then follows a reckless run, terminating in a dash over an embankment. Harry, pursuing, is unable to catch up with the fast-traveling machine. All he can do is to pick up the two injured persons and send them to the hospital. The picture is finely photographed.

Scene from Eleventh Episode of "Perils of Pauline."

"THE TERROR OF THE AIR" (Hepworth).

A thrilling two-part drama, brilliantly pictured and enacted by an exceptionally capable cast is the "The Terror of the Air." The story deals with a young engineer who invents a marvelous device by which he is able to explode underground mines from an aeroplane, and as a result of which, he is known as "The Terror of the Air." A foreign spy and the boy's own mother are defeated in their attempt to gain the secret of the invention.

Scene from "The Terror of the Air" (Hepworth).

A realistic explosion and several mid-air scenes are used with admirable effect. The cast includes Henry Vibart, Tom Powers, Harry Royston, Stewart Rome and Violet Hopson—a scintillant galaxy of the Hepworth Manufacturing Co.'s stock company. This feature will be released August 29th.

"MONEY" (Keanograph).

To get at the truth and stay there in his advertisements is the salient idea of James Keane, President and General Manager of the United Keanograph Film Co., of Fairfax, Cal., in the exploitation of his product.

In the double page advertisement in the last issue of the Moving Picture World, it was noticed that each of the six scenes were half tone cuts made from the film itself and not from drawings or still pictures. Attesting to the truth of this were the marks of the sprocket holes and the push-pins which held the pieces of film to the board when the photographic enlargement was taken.

Scene from "Money" (Keanograph).

Photographs taken from film are usually dim and faint but the results from these pieces of the positive of "Money" the six reel premiere production of the Keanograph Co., came out clear and sharp, certifying significantly to the quality of the photography.

The richness of the settings at the Million Dollar Dinner, as shown by the cut, indicate to what great financial expenditures the company has gone in making it. The photograph of "The Girl in the Oyster" evinces a novel idea of sensational power.

KLEINE'S "VENDETTA" THROUGH GENERAL FILM

It has been definitely decided that the beautiful five reel Kleine subject, "Vendetta," will be released through the General Film Company, Special Feature Department. Advance reports claim that "Vendetta" is headed for a tremendous success in America. Aside from Marie Corelli's sensational story, the settings are the most beautiful that could be found in Southern Italy, the photography superfine, and the acting sensational in the extreme.

Scene from "The Vendetta" (Kleine).

Since "Quo Vadis" great things have been expected of the Kleine feature service. In its way this production holds up the reputation of the name.

"THE WAR EXTRA" (Blache).

Actual scenes of the bloody battle of Monclova, combined with a strong story of love and adventure, staged in the very atmosphere of war which it demanded, places the four part drama, "The War Extra," produced by Blache Features, in a class by itself.

In order to stage this remarkable drama in the most effective manner it was necessary to send a company of Blache players to Eagle Pass, Texas, and thence across the border into the middle of the Mexican war zone. During their stay in Monclova the great battle which left that city a mass of smouldering ruins took place around them and was made a part of the photodrama.

Scene from "The War Extra" (Blache).

The leading character of the story is a war correspondent sent by "The Herald" to get "war news," and to get it at any cost. The battle of Monclova gives him his great opportunity, and in spite of the fact that he is attacked by Mexican outlaws as a spy and finally driven to the United States border, where he is rescued in the nick of time by a large band of cowboys and the U. S. Border Patrol, he succeeds in wiring his great news to the paper and scoring a "scoop" which gives him both fame and fortune.

Intimate and interesting scenes connected with the publishing of a war extra by a great American newspaper, follow the arrival of the war correspondent's account of the great battle in New York. Every department of the paper is immediately set in motion and the excitement is intense from the time the first news of the battle reaches the editorial rooms until the "extras" are sent broadcast throughout the country.

SEVEN SEALED ORDERS (Essanay).

Richard C. Travers comes forth as a mystery and a solver of mystery in the new two-act drama, "Seven Sealed Orders," to be released by the Essanay Company Friday, August 28. The story is by Edgar Franklin, and is an adaptation from the Munsey Magazines. Filled throughout with Oriental mysticism and intricate plots and counter-plots, this photoplay is one of the best produced this season. Travers, as Joseph Keene, accepts a commission of twenty thousand dollars, in consideration of which he is to follow seven sealed orders. The story is woven around a huge diamond and a Hindoo. Keene follows the orders, the big diamond is recovered and all ends happily. Thomas Commerford, Rapley Holmes and M. C. Von Betz, have excellent parts in the play.

RENFAX INCREASES CAPITALIZATION.

The Renfax Company announces an increase of capitalization from $90,000 to $425,000. The directors and members of the executive board are John H. Flager, until recently president of the Riker-Hegeman chain of drug stores, and Eugene Meyer, Jr., of the banking firm of Eugene Meyer, Jr., & Co., of Wall street, New York. The officers of the Renfax Company are Arthur M. Hess, president; DeWitt Fox, vice-president and Harold Lewis, secretary. Renfax has made eighty subjects and is adding to its list at the rate of four each week.

Eugene H. Roth

HAVE you been to San Francisco? Well, you'll probably go there during the exposition, and when you do, don't fail to visit Eugene H. Roth, the gentleman whose picture is shown on this page. Take a good look at him and you won't be surprised to know that he is a top notcher, and that he is responsible for the popularity of the most popular moving picture theater in San Francisco, The Portola Theater, the "house of features."

Eugene H. Roth.

Take a tip, there isn't any bet overlooked by Mr. Roth in making the patrons of his theater comfortable, nor is he less successful in securing the films that fetch the fans.

The 1,200 comfortable chairs in this theater are in such demand that you had better secure your seats in advance. The visitor tried to get a seat several times during the run of the "Spoilers" and was courteously informed that the management regretted that the theater wasn't large enough to meet the demand for seats. I understand the same was handed out during the run of the "Christian."

Mr. Roth says that he has no fear of the future for moving pictures as long as the standard of the "Spoilers" and the "Christian" can be kept up, and he believes that still finer things are doing and will be done.

"THE MIRACLE" (Eclair).

A one-reel rural drama which will be released by the Eclair Film Company, Inc., on Sunday, August 23d. This picture brings forward two well-known artists in the persons of Julia Stuart and Fred Truesdell. The story is away from the original hackneyed lines and points out the power of innocent love over sin and greed. Clean and wholesome, with the photography perfect, this Eclair production should prove a drawing card on any program.

Scene from "The Miracle" (Eclair).

WARNER'S TO INVADE CUBA.

Cuba is to be given an opportunity to enjoy the kind of feature films that have already scored hits throughout the United States, Canada and Europe. George Davis, a member of the sales staff of Warner's Features, Inc., leaves for the Island on August 15, to open an exchange in Havana to handle Cuba, Porto Rico and the Caribbean Islands. Mr. Davis speaks a number of languages and is well equipped for his new field. He will operate under the direction of Jacques Spiegel, the well-known manager of Warner's New York Exchange.

At the present time this territory is being supplied with cast-off Spanish, French and Italian subjects. It is expected that the novelty of American actors, the wide range of subjects, and the excellent quality of releases will quickly cause Warner's Features to supplant the foreign films.

Picture Theaters Projected.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Kusel & Harris, 30 North La Salle street, are having plans prepared for a two story theater and store building, 100 by 150 feet, to cost $75,000. There will be six stores on the ground floor.

DANVILLE, ILL.—M. Gwinnup, Decatur, Ill., will erect a one-story moving picture theater, 28 by 70 feet, with seating capacity for 300 persons.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The awarding to J. Henry Miller, Inc., of the general contract for the erection of the proposed theater at the southeast corner of Park avenue and Clay street means that another new playhouse for this city will soon be a reality. There are at present building the Hippodrome on a portion of the old Eutaw House lot and the Club theater at the northeast corner of Light and German streets, on a part of the old Carrollton Hotel site. Work on this latter theater, however, has been interrupted for some time and there have been rumors that the original plans for the completion of the building will not be carried out. Such reports have been characterized as groundless by those interested in the enterprise, who say that there is no question about the resumption of the work and the completion of the theater along the original lines.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The Daly Amusement Company has completed the deal for the purchase of the site for the proposed theater for negroes, which will be located on Pennsylvania avenue, near Greenwillow street. The company has purchased from William H. Daly the property at 1008 Pennsylvania avenue, lot 30 by 100 feet, and the property at 608 to 622 Greenwillow street from W. H. Gruber. The total purchase involves about $70,000.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Palace theater, 410-416 Hennepin avenue, is to be equipped with automatic sprinklers. The building is new and the equipment will not be operative until about October 1.

HIGHTSTOWN, N. J.—V. P. Chamberlein is having plans prepared for a modern moving picture theater which he intends to erect here in the near future.

NEWARK, N. J.—William Pearson, of Montclair, is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 42 by 120, to cost $15,000.

PATERSON, N. J.—Frank Bell, Citizens Trust Company, is planning alterations and rebuilding to his three-story theater building at 284 Main street.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Mary A. Ryan, 146 Monroe street, is planning to expend $8,000 for alterations to her moving picture theater on Fulton street.

ESOPUS, N. Y.—Esopus Lodge Redmen, care Vincent Travis, West Park, N. Y., are having plans and specifications prepared for a two-story hall and lodge building, 30 by 60 feet, to cost $6,000.

KINGSTON, N. Y.—Lewis Fischer, 618 Broadway, has just purchased site upon which he proposes to erect a theater and store building to cost $60,000. Work on the new structure will not start until fall, but in the meantime the building now occupying part of the site will be converted into a moving picture theater and roller skating rink.

MECHANICSVILLE, N. Y.—John C. Simpson, 31 Clinton street, Newark, N. J., is preparing plans for a two-story village hall to cost $20,000 for the borough authorities.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Charles L. Robinson, Putnam building, contemplates building a theater, 125 by 225 feet, to cost $75,000.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Frankford & Kirschner, 830 Westchester avenue, are preparing plans for alterations to a moving picture theater and roof garden on Westchester avenue, to cost $7,500.

NORTH TROY, N. Y.—Joseph Soperstein, 166 First street, will erect a one-story moving picture theater, 50 by 75 feet.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Madsen & Wistoft have obtained the contract for converting business buildings into three-story moving picture theater, 40 by 102 feet, to cost $60,000, for Platt & Platt. Lessee, John H. Rye Cab and Transfer Co.

RIDGEWOOD, L. I., N. Y.—Harry Buckman, Foxall street, is planning to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 100 by 97 feet, to cost $12,000.

BELLEFONTAINE, O.—Augustus Sun is having plans prepared for a modern moving picture theater which he contemplates erecting late in the fall.

BELLAIRE, O.—Charles P. Keyser, 4125 Harrison street, has been awarded the contract for remodeling the theater and Commercial Club building of Watson, Kaepner & Dubois, to cost $15,000.

BELLAIRE, O.—James Turnbull, 20th and Belmont streets, will erect a two-story moving picture theater and store building, 50 by 100 feet, to cost $25,000.

CLEVELAND, O.—Charles Erill, 2144 Murray Hill road, will expend about $3,000 for interior remodeling of his moving picture theater. The work will consist of changing partitions and general repairs.

CLEVELAND, O.—William Brown, New Castle, Pa., contemplates erecting a fourteen-story theater and office building, 132 by 289 feet, to cost $1,000,000.

FRANKLIN, O.—E. J. Haberer, Elite Hotel, is planning to erect a two-story theater and hotel building, 75 by 125 feet, to cost $25,000.

IRONTON, O.—A. J. Wellman is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, 28 by 52 feet, to cost $4,000.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Barrist & Co. have sold for Peter C. Fritz and Amandus Riedel the one-story motion picture theater, 415-417 Moore street, to George S. Atkinson for a consideration not disclosed, subject to a mortgage of $16,000. The property is assessed at $16,000.

Notes From the Trade

THE Liberty Motion Picture Company, which is situated at Germantown, Philadelphia, has in its stock company a number of well known professionals. Some of these are Frances Cummings, Edward B. LaRenz, Charles T. Danforth, E. B. Tilton, Katherine Bjorling, Robert Ingraham, Elizabeth Bjorling, Frank McEllen, Joseph J. Kelly, Irene Kingsland and Jack Schultz. N. E. Milligan, producer for the Liberty Company, is at present engaged in a number of Western and Canadian multiple-reel photoplays.

* * *

W. B. Lanicoa, of Sherman, Tex., has just purchased a style "G" Wurlitzer for his new theater (The Bell), which is being erected and which will be a thoroughly modern and up-to-date moving picture theater.

* * *

Victor Potel, the famous "Slippery Slim" of the Essanay Western comedies, has been nick-named "Six O'Clock" by his friends. He is straight up and down, they say.

* * *

The Sterling Camera and Film Co., producers of the splendid feature, "The Land of the Lost," have now in preparation another, but of an entirely different character, yet possessing all the excellent qualities the Sterling Camera and Film Co. is noted for.

* * *

Earl Fox has left the Reliance Company at Los Angeles and has returned to New York City.

* * *

Clever Kathlyn Williams has completed the third of her series of novelettes, which she is writing as a result of her experiences in Selig feature productions. Her first novelette, "In Tune With the Wild," is based upon the picture-play of the same name. The second novelette of the series will be "Chip, of the Flying 'U'," a serial story first published in the Popular Magazine. The third of the series will be "The Fifth Man," the scenario for which was written by James Oliver Curwood.

* * *

The World Film Corporation announces the release of the Shubert feature, "The Lure," in five acts, on August 24, and following the Wm. A. Brady features, "The Dollar Mark," "Mother," "The Man of the Hour" and "The Gentleman From Mississippi."

* * *

Frank Dayton, one of the oldest members of the Essanay Stock Company, is not only a clever actor but is also a poet of great ability. Of late Mr. Dayton has written several poems which have received great praise from the critics.

* * *

The Colonial Amusement Company of Dallas, Tex., are installing a style "R" in their new Colonial theater, Dallas, which will be one of the largest and best equipped residential theaters in the state, having a seating capacity of 650 people.

* * *

W. F. Barrett, former manager of the Feature Film Department of the General Film Company in Canada, has been put in charge of the Toronto office of the World Film Corporation.

* * *

Mr. E. H. Fabian just purchased and installed in the Lyric theater of Ennis, Tex., a Wurlitzer instrument, style "B." Mr. Fabian is remodeling and refurnishing his theater throughout.

* * *

Robert Edeson, in honor of Jesse L. Lasky and Mrs. Samuel Goldfish, who are now at the Lasky studios, Hollywood, Cal., gave a dinner on July 29, at which were present: H. B. Warner, Rita Stanwood, Theodore Roberts, Edward Abeles, Cecil B. De Mille, Mrs. H. C. De Mille, Mr. and Mrs. Max Figman, Mr. and Mrs. James Neil, Charles Richman, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Apfel, Winifred Kingston and Bessie Barsicale.

* * *

The moving picture outfit shipped to Teguciagalpa, Honduras, over a year ago, but never put in operation, has been purchased by Chas. E. Short, of Portland, Ore. Mr. Short will go south and open up as soon as he can purchase a satisfactory collection of films.

* * *

Ned Finley, the Vitagraph director, who disappeared from Hendersonville, N. C., about three weeks ago, has returned to New York City. He was found suffering from aphasia, with no remembrance of what had occurred and entirely unable to recollect anything that had transpired during his absence. He left the players whom he had taken to Hendersonville, awaiting his return and unable to go on with their work, Finley having taken the scenarios with him or having lost them. It is said by some that during his stay at Hendersonville, in one of his tours in the mountains, he fell into a ravine and injured his head, which may account for his aberration. It is hoped that he will soon recover.

* * *

In our issue dated Aug. 15, on page 912, we stated that the celebrated Players Film Co. controls the rights for Wisconsin for "Neptune's Daughter." It has been called to our attention that this is incorrect; they do not own or control the rights for Wisconsin for this picture.

* * *

The novelty film, "Jess of the Mountain Country," shortly to be released by the World Film Corporation, is probably one of the most remarkable films ever thrown on a screen. The actors, "men-babies," not only play the part of grown-ups, but accomplish some wonderful deeds which would be a credit to any film star.

The Board of Directors of Precision Machine Company has appointed Mr. Joseph E. Graef acting general manager in charge of all departments.

* * *

The first showing of "What's His Name," another Jesse L. Lasky production with Max Figman and Lolita Robertson in the leading roles, was given on the lawn of the Lasky studios, Hollywood, August 1, at which four hundred persons were present. The Lasky Company and the Bosworth Company are affiliated with the recently formed Paramount Pictures Corporation.

* * *

The "Thanhouser Eight," the only expert rowing crew in the moving picture industry, competed successfully in the big amateur rowing regatta, August 8, in Philadelphia. Every large athletic association in the United States and Canada participated in the regatta. The "Thanhouser crew" was taken to Philadelphia by Carroll Fleming, former producing director at the New York Hippodrome, now director at the New Rochelle studio. Those comprising the crew are: Irving Cummings, William Noel, Tootes Brady, William Carroll, Clayton Cole, Frank Murphy, Charles Howe, Robert Marchange, John Scott, coxwain, George Sullivan, substitute. Tootes Brady is the holder of several national records.

* * *

The Allen Feature Film Corp. of Providence, R. I., have purchased the rights of "The Toll of Mammon" from the Excelsior Feature Film Company for the New England States.

* * *

George Terwilliger, Lubin director, has taken a choice selected company to Newport, R. I., where he will open a studio for the fall season, the pictures to be made being all features and masterpieces. The personnel of the company includes Ormi Hawley, Edgar Jones, Louise Huff, Earl Metcalfe, Kempton Greene, Herbert Fortier, Arthur Matthews, Eleanor Barry and a dozen others.

* * *

Charles Cherry, prominent dramatic star, has been engaged by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, for appearance in a Lasky production.

* * *

Nicholas Dunaew, one of the Vitagraph players, recently arrived from Russia, has received permission from Madame Tolstoy to picturize Tolstoy's dramatic works for the screen. He has selected the intense story, "The Power of Darkness," as the first of the dramas to be visualized, because of its remarkably vivid description of peasant life in Russia.

* * *

"Love and Surgery," is the title of the first H. Pathe Lehrman comedy being made for release under the new Universal brand, the "L. K. O." It is a characteristic "Lehrman" product and in it two notable actors of the vaudeville world, Billie Ritchie and Gertrude Selby, will be seen for the first time in pictures.

* * *

George E. Cordell, proprietor and manager of the Empress theater, Greenville, Tex., is installing a 29 "C" mandolin-piano orchestra in his theater, which has just been remodeled and refurnished throughout.

* * *

A dinner of sumptuous proportions was tendered to Octavia Handworth recently by the management of the Stevens House, Lake Placid's largest hotel. Some five hundred guests sat down to the tables, among whom were many prominent New York society people.

* * *

Film rights to the popular "Terrance O'Rourke" stories, by Louis Joseph Vance, the distinguished writer and author of the "Trey O' Hearts" series, have been acquired by the Universal Company and production will begin immediately, with J. Warren Kerrigan in the title role.

* * *

Harry Pollard in his production of "The Silence of John Gordon" presents a comedy-drama that will appeal to all classes of movie patrons. Miss Margarita Fischer and Harry Pollard will be seen to advantage while Fred Gamble and Joe Harris have splendid parts.

* * *

On a recent visit to Los Angeles a group of "Flying A" stars, including Louise Lester, Jack Richardson and others, dropped into Brink's cafe for dinner. They had just been seated when a little boy, accompanied by four grown-up people, took a table close by. The child with curiosity looked about. His gaze rested upon Louise Lester. With an excited cry the little fellow jumped down from his chair and ran to his mother. Pointing in the direction of the players, the child called out at the top of his voice: "Oh, mother, there is Calamity Anne."

* * *

The Dramascope Company's production of the $5,000,000 plot in which Wm. J. Burns, the detective, appears in the greater portion of the six reels, proved to be an innovation in detective moving pictures. The picture was produced on Monday at the New York theater for a special engagement of two weeks. Detective Burns prefaced the showing of the picture with a few most interesting remarks.

* * *

R. L. White, special representative of the World Film Corporation, was referred to in our issue of August 8, page 814, as being the special representative of the Mutual Film Corporation. He has never been connected with the latter company.

* * *

Colonel Jasper E. Brady of the Vitagraph has completed the scenarios of "The Island of Regeneration" and "Britton of the Seventh," both from novels written by his brother, the Rev. Cyrus T. Brady, L.L.D. "Britton of the Seventh" is a gripping story of the famous seventh cavalry, dealing with the events leading up to and including the Big Horn campaign, in which Custer and three hundred and twenty-three officers and men perished. The play will be mounted in Montana and Dakota and the real Sioux Indians and United States troops will be used.

Exhibitors News

Interesting Information Concerning Moving Picture Men Gathered By Moving Picture World Correspondents Everywhere.

INDIANA.

COOLER weather has helped business among Indianapolis exhibitors and all over the state.

The Sunday closing scare thrown into exhibitors by the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce and the Church Federation still hangs fire. Mayor Bell, who was a keg by the Church Federation and the Chamber to relinquish control of the charity fund created by the donations of exhibitors keeping open "for charity," has not replied nor intimated that he will let go.

It is viewed as quite likely that nothing more will be done. Mayor Bell has not committed himself one way or another, but is too good a politician not to realize that the Sunday closing would not be popular with the masses. Further than that, the Mayor also is a good attorney, and probably realizes that it would be a tough matter to get a conviction against any exhibitor in event of a test of the law, as it has been pretty clearly established a number of times that the Sunday show with a portion of the receipts donated to charity is within the law.

The Alhambra theater has changed from a ten to a fifteen-cent house, to an all-feature service. The house is the best located of any of the Indianapolis picture houses, and the change in prices has had no effect upon cutting down attendance, as was predicted; in fact the management declares the all-feature service has increased the number of patrons. The Great Northern Film Company feature "Atlantis" is one of the features upon which the house got a first release, and the management expects to keep the service up to the same high standard. No other Indianapolis house is charging as much, but Manager Metz does not feel that he is doing anything revolutionary, as houses in other cities are charging even more.

Farmers and farmers wives, and farmer boys and sweethearts, lined the public square at Dillsboro, Ind, with buggies and autos, on the occasion of Manager Talley's opening of his airdome. He gave two shows and packed them in both times. The merchants kept open and say the opening of the picture house has been a livener.

William Stamp, Tell City, Ind., has thoroughly renovated the old Royal theater building and opened it as a picture house Aug. 1. He calls it the Pastime theater.

B. L. Dolan, manager of the Princess, Tipton, Ind., opened his house Aug. 1. Mr. Dolan has remodeled the building near the traction station into a very comfortable theater.

The new Crystal theater, Boswell, Ind., opened to a good attendance. John Smith, owner of the new house, is a blacksmith. Boswell has never had a picture house and is taking very kindly to Smith's innovation.

Lloyd & Hahn have bought the Colonial theater, Warsaw, Ind., of Charles Butler. The new owners are experienced showmen, and announce that they expect to make the Colonial program very attractive. Some changes will be made in the house.

The Star theater, Winslow, Ind., has changed from a five to a ten-cent house, and is now running three reels a night and two features each week.

The Venus theater, Gary, Ind., after being closed for two months for repairs, has reopened. Manager A. J. Obreshik claims now that his house is one of the most attractive in the state. The front is highly attractive and the interior has many comforts and every device for the safety of the public. The ventilation is excellent, the air being changed completely every three minutes by electric fans. An $1,800 Wurlitzer orchestra has been installed.

The Portland Cement Company, Chicago, is taking motion pictures of the cement road near Bloomfield, Ind., and the traffic upon it.

The Orpheum theater, Michigan City, Ind., opened Aug. 2. About $500 was spent on redecorating the interior, and the hanging of green tapestries.

Perry Thurston opened his new house in Versailles Aug. 1. It is the only picture house in town and a lively interest has been taken by the citizens in the surrounding territory.

Odon, Ind., merchants are well pleased with the drawing power of the free movie shows they have been giving on the public square each Wednesday night.

The Princess, the Moon and the Lyric at Vincennes, Ind., are all resorting to country stores, grab bags and premiums to draw crowds. The Moon is giving away ten bantam chickens each week.

The Crescent theater, Washington, Ind., opened July 27 under a new management, running three films for five cents.

Manager Roy Johnson of the Lyric, Lafayette, announces that he will run four feature films at every performance and give a change of bill daily.

Leopold Dryfus, Lafayette, Ind., will build a flat upon the site of the Dryfus theater, which was burned out some months ago. He said that he might join with a company in reconstructing a theater on the site, but if no one was interested he would utilize the property for a flat.

A. D. Goosey has sold his picture house at Newberry, Ind., to Newberry men. Mr. Goosey has added a new machine at his Odon house.

I. D. Howard, manager of the Isis, Winamac, Ind., has placed S. L. Swihart in charge of his theater, and will start out next week with a vaudeville company as manager. Mr. Howard and R. L. Drumm, of Peru, Ind., are associated in the enterprise. They will exhibit in a 60 x 90 tent, and expect to open in Peru.

Asahel Kelley has bought the interest of Charles Daugherty in the Cozy theater, Union City, Ind., and is now sole owner.

Wilbur Lyons and Frank Nuckols have bought the Badder's picture show at Eaton, Ind.

To help the students of the Normal Institute, Marion, Ind., raise funds for the publication of their annual, Manager Metcalf turned over the house to them for a day on fifty-fifty arrangement.

Kentland turned out enmasse and rose at him. This unodubtedly is the correct way to speak of the reception given George Ade's first photoplay release, "The Fable of the Brash Drummer and the Nectarine," when it appeared before Ade's fellow townsmen July 25.

Business is picking up in Indianapolis and all over the state according to the report of exchanges. Many houses closed for July have opened again to good crowds, that apparently looked on with a freshened interest judging from the enthusiasm with which films have been received.

The Garrick theater, Thirtieth and Illinois streets, Indianapolis, has closed, and the fixtures and equipment sold at auction. The theater was run under the management of the Hyde Park Amusement Company. The house was recognized as one of the finest in the city. Various reasons have been given for the failure of the house to draw, the principal one of which is believed to be the fact that Illinois street is a dividing line between two social classes, the city's very rich, and the middle class. The rich did not rise to the bait, and so half the territory was unproductive.

The International Bible Students film "Creation" being shown free at the Orpheum, Hammond, Ind., has stirred the town into a religious revival, according to the reports of churchmen in Hammond. The film is being highly praised.

The Lyric Theater, Greensburg, is being remodeled, three large windows being added on the west side of the building.

Aunt Jane Cowan and others who had a part in posing for the moving pictures "On the Banks of the Wabash," the state song of Indiana, were guests of the Princess theater, Terre Haute, on the occasion of the first showing of the film.

Goldthwait Park, Marion, Ind., is using free moving pictures as an added attraction.

About 400 friends, a friend for every pound were at the Anderson, Ind., station to see Mike Heffernan, the obese comedian, leave for Chicago to join the forces of the Selig company. Heffernan has been making good on the stage for ten years and expects to register rather large in the movies.

The Grand, Decatur, Ind., is giving away fifty votes on the most popoular boy at every performance. It makes good publicity as well as attendance.

Manager Kahler is redecorating the entrance to the Royal Theater, Newcastle, Ind.

The experiment of using motion pictures in the Whitewater, Ind., schools, was a decided success. The pupils were so enthusiastic over the exhibition that they all pledged themselves to raise ten cents a piece toward purchasing a machine.

Daniel M. Nye, of Laporte, Ind., has bought the Etropal theater of J. C. Held and Alfred Norris. The deed of the theater [illegible] wards gives its location.

The Aubery theater, Hammond, Ind., after being closed nearly three months, has reopened. Morris Greenwald [illegible] made it.

W. A. Fries has bought the National Theater, Brookville, Ind., and announces that he will install a complete change of pictures, music and management.

Asahel Kelly bought the Cozy [illegible] W. Chester, Ind., of Charles Daugherty.

The United Moving Picture Company of Chicago is investigating conditions in Logansport, Ind., to determine whether or not it is advisable to build a house there.

The Indiana Union, the men's organization at Indiana University, will conduct a moving picture show on the campus hereafter. It will The University is claiming the honor of being the first University to encourage the use of the machines. All athletic events of other universities will be shown and films will be taken of the Indiana events.

Roy and Melvin Swain, manager of the Lyric, Elwood, Ind., were each fined $12 for "working on Sunday." County Prosecutor Shuman has declared there will be no Sunday opening while he is prosecutor, but the picture men are disposed to believe they can beat the case. No appeal was taken in the cases of the Swain Brothers, as their action was independent of other exhibitors.

John Larimore has sold the Alhambra, Knightstown, Ind., to O. Wolfard.

The Lyric, Batesville, Ind., had to turn them away two nights that the film of the Knights of St. John drill at the last biennial convention was shown. The drill team of the Batesville commandery was in action as a prize winner. All the members of the team were present both nights.

The Family Theater, Indiana Harbor, Ind., has installed a new pipe organ orchestra.

Pathe men took pictures of the fire ruins at Jasonville, Ind., which was practically wiped out by the big blaze that ate out the heart of the business section.

The Virginia Trust Company gave the Bijou Realty Company, a deed to the Wells Bijou theater, Evansville, Ind., releasing a mortgage of $125,000. Theater property in Nashville and Chattanooga was also included in the transaction.

Mrs. John Malloy has sold the Colonial Theater, Gas City, Ind., to B. F. Leonard of Marion, Ind.

The Liberty Theater Company, East Chicago, Ind., has been incorporated with $5,000 capital stock to operate theaters. Directors, Morris Brenman, East Chicago; A. Blumenthal and P. Blonstein.

W. C. Milliron is remodeling the Rex Theater, Rensselaer, Ind., and will open August 15.

John S. Flannigan will sell out his grocery and run a picture show in the same room, the order for remodeling having been given.

Mayor Bell has delegated the picture show charity fund to William T. Eisenlohr's management. Eisenlohr has opened an office for The Joe Bell Picture Show Charity Fund at 31 East Georgia street. Eisenlohr is working diligently on a card index system to avoid duplications of charity work as far as is possible.

PHILADELPHIA.

ELABORATE plans are now being arranged by the committee in charge of the Reel Fellow's Club for an excursion to Atlantic City, N. J., on Sunday, August 16th. It is the intention to charter a special train to take down the members and their friends. Up to the present time Mr. Libros of the Reception Committee, assisted by J. Solomon, Jay Emmanuel, F. V. Armato, S. Talbert and Mr. Michaels, have already arranged to entertain the participants at the Alamac Pier, formerly Youngs' Million Dollar Pier, with a dinner and dancing in the evening. The pier is to be at the disposal of visiting Reel Fellows from noon till midnight. Jay Emmanuel of the Ideal Theater, Nineteenth and Columbia avenue, this city, will take care of all inquiries regarding this excursion.

The Leader Theater, 41st and Lancaster avenue, this city, is now running a program that comprises the best productions of the leading European and American Manufacturers.

The Box Office Attractions Company, of New York, announces the opening of its Philadelphia branch, with temporary offices at 1326 Vine street, under the management of the well-known film man J. Levy, of the Greater New York Film Company. S. Dembrow, special representative of the firm is now on his way to open more branches throughout the country.

C. L. Bradfield of the Family Theater, this city, is spending his vacation at his summer cottage in Atlantic City, N. J.

George Beihoff, the special representative of the World Film Corporation, who is now managing the Philadelphia branch, has won many friends by his straightforward business methods and his progressive ideas.

J. Fitzpatrick, local agent for the Kimball Organ Company, of New York, announces that another Kimball Organ will be installed in the new theater which is being constructed by Alexander Boyd, at Sixteenth and Chestnut streets. The new theater will be open for business on or about November 1st.

The Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., successor to the National Feature Film Company, 1126 Vine street, Philadelphia, is doing a large business with the recent releases. The producing company is at present in Panama, where a picture called the "Desperado of Panama" is being made. The officials of the canal are giving the company every opportunity to make use of the natural advantages of the Zone, and the military forces are helping in the picture.

A verdict for $20,424, awarded last March against the Vitagraph Company, of America, in favor of Louis M. Swaab, an independent exchange owner, for the unlawful seizure of films on July 24th was sustained by the Common Pleas Court, No. 2 in refusing a new trial asked by the company. The case will now go to the Supreme Court. The jury which tried the case not only denied the replevin suit of the company for the films, but gave Swaab a certificate for damages for $2,000 for films appropriated, $8.424 for the retention of films by the company, and he was also allowed $10,000 exemplary damages.

PENNSYLVANIA.

HUNDREDS of children gathered in the playgrounds of the Shelby Steel Tub Company in Ellwood City and went through their games and amusements while the moving picture man photographed them. Baskets and other articles were made by the children for the pictures. Pictures were taken of the mills in operation and will be shown at the Panama exposition next year. The moving picture operator assisted by T. V. Barnes, proprietor of the Majestic theater, took a number of photographs of the town, including the hospital and the city building, a number of residences and residence streets, together with Lawrence avenue and the fire department building and its equipment, including the motor truck. The film will be shown at the Majestic.

The Columbia Playhouse in New Castle, Pa., will be converted into the finest nickelodeon in the city. The theater is being completely overhauled and redecorated. A smoking room will be added in the basement and the ladies' parlor will be altered and fitted up with new hangings and furniture. The manager, Mr. Genkinger, intends to open the theater September the first with high class feature pictures. He intends to run nothing but big feature films. The small shows will be held at the Park theater.

E. T. Beadle, of Canonsburg, Pa., has equipped his playhouse with two Powers' 6-A motor-driven machines.

The Home theater, South Wheeling, is closed for repairs. The house will reopen Aug. 17.

Two huge railroad locomotives to crash into each other at a speed of 40 miles an hour will be a feature of the Labor day celebration now being planned by the Philipsburg business men. The scene of the collision will be staged on the Pittsburg & Susquehanna railroad at a point between Moshannon and Sterling, while the moving picture man will grind out a film of the wreck. The Lubin company, in order to get a realistic moving picture of a railway crash, are said to have entered into a contract with the railway people to pay $20,000 to have the wreck. A general celebration and a program is being made up to be featured by the movie wreck, by the business men in and about Philipsburg.

Roger Neal, son of Henry Neal, died recently at the residence of his father, 528 Nelson street, Bluefield, W. Va. Mr. Neal was one of the purchasers of the Amuzu theater, on Princeton avenue, some months ago, but his health failing, he disposed of his interest to his partner and returned to Roanoke.

The Garden theater, a new $35,000 moving picture house, is being built in Johnstown, Pa. It is being built by the Garden Amusement Company, which now conducts the Lyric and the Motion Picutre theater, two of Johnstown's movies. The Garden will be housed in a fine corner building, built of rough velvet brick laid in English bond with raked joints, have a seating capacity of about 850 and will be completed about October 1. The company is officered as follows: Maurice Stayer, M. D., president; George Wild, vice-president; Harry G. Gardner, treasurer; George C. Knox, secretary. The latter named was formerly manager of the Grand theater in Johnstown.

V. L. Marks has purchased the Bijou theater, 7707 Frankstown avenue, Pittsburgh, from J. A. Watt. This house has a capacity of 250 and is a popular house in the Brushton district. Marks reports business fair.

Robert Ellic has opened a picture house in the building formerly conducted by William Thomas, in Fulton, W. Va.

Thomas A. Thompson, manager of the Columbia theater, a big "Nickel Shooter" on Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, is spending a two weeks' vacation at Cambridge Springs. He will also visit Erie, Cleveland and Conneaut Lake before his return. Columbia is the only theater on Fifth avenue that has an orchestra and that a new $800 piano has also been recently installed.

G. W. Lewis, president of the Western Film Company, has withdrawn from that firm, as his duties as manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company employed all of his time and therefore could not participate in the film business.

Mr. Miller, manager of the Olympic theater of Weirton, W. Va., closed his house four days to re-arrange his seating plan. Sixty more seats were installed as a result of the work.

The New Orpheum theater of Chambersburg, Pa., has been sold to Charles W. Boyer, of Hagerstown, for $22,500, of which $2 500 was paid in cash and the balance, $20,000, settled by a first mortgage on an article of agreement executed for the association by G. W. Britsch, Jr., vice-president. Seventy-one of the eighty-one shareholders were represented at a meeting of the Franklin Guards, these terms were agreed upon and the officers of the association authorized to carry them out. All creditors have been, or will be satisfied. Mr. Boyer takes possession at once and expects to be there personally during Old Home Week.

Albert A. Weiland, head of the Weiland Film Company, on August 12 married Miss Aurelia Margaret Reckinger, a charming young lady of Braddock, Pa., the ceremony being performed in St. Joseph's Cathedral church, Braddock. Immediately after the wedding festivities the benedicts left on a wedding tour, which will probably include a visit to the Bermuda Islands.

Francis A. Mackert, formerly owner of the Knickerbocker, in Braddock, reopened the Pitt theater in Indiana, Pa. The Pitt has been remodeled lately and now has a seating capacity of 600. The Feature Film and Calcium Light Company supplied the equipment and the Ludwig Hommel Company supplied the lighting. The "Million Dollar Mystery," which is advertised strongly in that town, was the first feature to be shown at the Pitt.

G. D. Demas, brother of P. J. Demas, of the Minerva, opened a new moving picture house at Wylie and Sixth avenues, Pittsburgh, without a name and offered $10 for an appropriate one. It is understood five persons suggested the name selected and that most of the suggestions came from out-of-town exhibitors. It is a handsome house, of 300 capacity, and has a pool room in the basement. The name selected was the New Court theater.

The employes of the Independent Film Exchange of Pittsburgh held a picnic last Sunday at Bradford's woods. This was the first picnic of the kind held this summer and it turned out to be a success. Thirty-five people gathered at the outing and enjoyed themselves the whole day. Races were held in which everyone took a part for honors, and the athletes of the crowd went through some acrobatic stunts on bars, etc. A baseball game was played between the Independent Film Exchange team and the Millvale Business Mens' team who happened to be holding a picnic also close by. The Independent Film Exchange lost to the score of 8 to 6. Fred Lacey, Lee Hunt, William Leebarton and Ray Miller were on the picnic committee.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors of Pittsburgh held a meeting at the Olympic theater recently for the purpose of discussing the matter of opening the moving picture houses of Pittsburgh and surrounding towns on Sunday and showing pictures to the public for the usual admission. Fred J. Herrington, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, presided at the meeting and argued that the exhibitors of Pittsburgh had as much right to open their theaters and run shows on Sunday as the parks have to keep open and run their different amusements to entertain the people who visit them. Mr. Herrington stated that owing to the big expense that the city puts them under by charging them an enormous license, they should not be prohibited to run Sunday shows. The committee finally came to a conclusion and stated that the matter would be pushed to the finish and they would open the movies on Sundays or the parks of Pittsburgh would have to be closed.

Fred J. Herrington, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Pittsburgh, was in New York last week and attended a meeting that was held by the New York exhibitors at the Marlborough hotel. Mr. Herrington said that he had a very interesting talk with Mr. Bush of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

The Alvin theater of Pittsburgh is running the Rainey motion pictures, which are much talked about among the theatergoers. The house is full every performance.

Dreamland theater, Natrona's popular moving picture house, goes out of the hands of Schweitzer and Hofner, the former owners, and becomes the property of John Jarzenski. Mr. Jarzenski was formerly with the Natrona Music and Supply Company in the capacity of salesman.

The West Virginia Commission of the Panama-Pacific international exposition, has let a contract for the making of twenty thousand feet of moving picture film of the state's industries, manufacturing plants, points of scenic interest, agricultural and horticultural development, farms, orchards, etc. Ten thousand feet of this film will depict the state's industries. The contract went to the Ray Film Company of New York City. The commission has ordered a change made in the state's building on the exhibition grounds, of which one entire end of the building will be made into a theater. This room will be splendidly equipped with all necessary facilities for projection. The films will be projected at least three times a week throughout the entire forty weeks of the international exposition opening at San Francisco, Cal., February 20, 1915. A large portion of the films will be paid for by the commission, depicting the state's institutions, buildings, etc., and the state's natural scenery, but the manufacturing industries will be asked to pay a nominal sum per foot for the films picturing such industries, to help pay for the making and projecting of the pictures.

Henry B. Hoffman, owner and manager of a moving picture house in Lima, Ohio, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the local United States court. He lists liabilities of $15,237.15 and assets of $775, claiming exemption on $275 worth of furniture. Fifteen film companies are included in the list of creditors.

An application for a Pennsylvania charter of incorporation for the Lion Film Manufacturing Company, Pittsburgh, will be made by Mark Chisholm, H. R. Morrow and A. E. Irons. The new concern will manufacture and sell either at wholesale or retail, moving picture machines, films and slides, and all accessories necessary and pertaining to the moving picture business.

An application for a Pennsylvania charter of incorporation for the Casper, Todd and Shafer Booking Exchange, Inc., will be made by Jerome Casper, J. W. Todd and George Shafer. The new concern will conduct a general booking business in Pittsburgh for all kinds of theatrical attractions and moving picture features.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the Interstate Theater company, of Canton, Ohio, with a capital of $25,000. Robert Hall, Raymond Haggard and A. Geltz were the incorporators.

Ground has been broken for the erection of a two-story brick building, covering 40x110 feet, which will be the home of the first moving picture house in Farrel, Pa. It will cost $12,000, will be erected on Broadway, the main street of the town. The new theater is the investment of F. Burke.

The Greenland theater of Butler, Pa., has closed down for repairs and will open in about a month under a new management. Mr. Sweitzer will open the theater under the name of the "Grand." It will have a seating capacity of 400 and will be one of the finest in the city. Music will be furnished by a Seeburg piano.

Adolph Klein, manager of the Keno Film Company, is spending a few weeks in New York and is expected to return with a number of good feature films. He will also close some other business deals while away.

W. T. Kinson, manager of the General Film Company, is spending his vacation in Cleveland, Ohio.

H. J. Smith, manager of the machine department of the Feature Film and Calcium Light Company, Pittsburgh, wife and family, are spending a two weeks' vacation at Atlantic City. The Feature Film and Calcium Light Company supplied Beadle and Sons, of Canonsburg, Pa., with two motor-driven Powers' 6-A machines, complete; L. J. Drohen, of Dunkirk, N. Y., with two motor-driven Powers' 6-A machines complete and D. W. Burton, of Monessan, Pa., with two motor-drive, Powers' 6-A machines, complete. Business in general is exceptionally good.

NORTHWESTERN NEW YORK.

THE New Regent moving picture theater, Syracuse, opens August 31st. This house is owned by the University Theater Co. Harold Edel, manager of the Strand theater, Buffalo, is president. Harry L. Vibbard, professor of music of the Syracuse University, will preside at the organ. The new Regent theater, Main and Utica streets, Buffalo, will open the first week in September. Henry Marcus, a well-known musician, will direct the orchestra. He has managed the New Lyric and Academy theaters, Buffalo, and for several years was leader of the orchestra of Shea's theater of that city.

Walter H. Foster has become manager of Haven's opera house, Olean, N. Y. This is a Mark-Brock theater.

Grimbsy Beach, located on the Canadian shore of Lake Ontario, recently had a $60,000 fire. This resort has moving pictures among its attractions.

Manager Cornell opens the Star theater, Buffalo, for the season August 24th, with Klaw & Erlanger attractions. This house occasionally shows moving pictures on Sunday. The Star has been improved at considerable expense.

The Majestic theater, Buffalo, managed by John Laughlin, opens its regular season August 21, with Stair & Havlin attractions. Preceding the opening Mr. Laughlin booked the moving picture production; Annette Kellerman in "Neptune's Daughter."

"BILLY BISON."

IN THE MIDDLE WEST.

MOVING PICTURE men of the Middle West have been learning how to properly pack films for shipment in compliance with the regulations of the United States Bureau of Explosives. H. F. Estes, an inspector of the department has been visiting cities from which the shipping is heavy and holding schools of instruction.

Lloyd Gardner will have charge of the operating at the new Mazda theater which has been opened at Aurora, Neb.

Moving pictures were used for entertainment purposes at the annual outing of the Commercial Club of Omaha, Neb., at the Carter Lake Club, near Omaha.

Attractive light bowls of an original design were manufactured by a local pottery in Zanesville, Ohio, for use in the new Imperial moving picture theater on Main street between Fifth and Sixth streets in that city.

R. H. Conant has commenced the operation of a moving picture theater in Benedict, Neb.

W. H. Coleman, owner of the film, "Beasts of the Jungle," and Bert M. Graham, manager and booking agent, who are touring the Middle West with their musical automobile, expect to reach the Pacific coast in time for the Panama exposition in 1915. They have been showing the picture in Michigan houses.

W. E. Carns, formerly manager of the Orpheum theater on La Grange street has opened the New Lagrange theater on Lagrange street in Toledo, Ohio. It is running vaudeville and licensed pictures.

F. H. Mickelson, proprietor of the Mickelson theater at Grand Island, Neb., has leased a building in St. Paul, Neb., for the operation of another moving picture show.

The Majestic theater at South Bend, Ind., has opened its season with three acts of vaudeville and three reels of moving pictures.

Roy Booth has removed his moving picture show from Ainsworth, Neb., to the Knights of Pythias Hall at Springview, Neb., where he has opened a theater.

A cordial reception for "The Reward of Thrift," the two-reel picture of the Savings Bank section of the American Bankers' Association, is promised by the exhibitors of the Middle West. The picture already has been well advertised and a favorable impression made.

Monday seemed to be a bad day for the "Our Mutual Girl" at the Princess theater in Springfield, Ohio, and the regular showing of the serial was changed to Tuesday.

A. M. Davies and A. K. Roth, operating under the firm name of Davies & Roth, have purchased the Crystal theater at Silver Creek, Neb., from Elza Bivens.

H. W. Riddle, Sr., of Ravenna, Ohio, is said to have revived the project to build a new theater on his lot at East Main and North Prospect streets in that city. If erected, the house will seat about 1,000 and will be devoted to moving pictures and theatrical attractions. The management is said to have been offered to Art Lee.

Manager Guernsey of the Star theater at Harvard, Neb., has opened an airdome at that place.

The Badders' picture show at Eaton, Ind., has been sold to Wilbur Lyons and Frank Nuckolls.

T. J. Hanly has retired from the board of directors of the Sixth Street Theater Company at Coshocton, Ohio, and is succeeded by Dr. L. C. McCurdy. Other directors elected are John Williams, N. C. Bush, Joseph P. Callahan, J. C. Adams, and Mrs. William Rodgers.

The Electric theater at Plymouth, Neb., has succumbed to the hot weather and until the breezes chase the patrons back, it will remain closed.

The city council of Fairbury, Neb., decided to call a special election to be held August 25 to vote upon the question of whether the moving picture shows in Fairbury should be allowed to operate upon Sundays. Petitions asking that a referendum be held had been circulated by the citizens.

The new Hippodrome theater, which is to be erected at Gay and High streets in Columbus, Ohio, by John W. Swain, president of the Pastime Amusement Company, will be ready for occupation as a feature film house about the last of October.

George Brott of Tecumseh, Neb., has purchased moving picture equipment and will go on a tour of the smaller towns of that state, giving shows.

The Du-Bly theater has been opened at Sugarcreek, Ohio. It will give moving picture shows every Wednesday and Saturday evening at five and ten cents.

The Gem theater on South Calhoun street in Fort Wayne, Ind., has been reopened with Max A. Elliott as manager. Elliott formerly was connected with the Jefferson theater. The house has been redecorated.

It costs but two and a half cents to see a picture show in Defiance, Ohio. Anybody who buys a ticket to the Elite or Lion theaters for five cents is given a coupon admitting them to the other house free.

The Lyric theater at Beatrice, Neb., has been reopened.

George Ziegenelder, who recently sold his interest in the Bijou theater at Piqua, Ohio, has accepted a position as manager of the Princess theater in that city.

A new moving picture show has been opened at Ceresco, Neb.

Emmet Notestine, owner of the moving picture theater in the Phoenix block at Degraff, Ohio, suffered loss of $500 when the theater was destroyed by fire. The moving picture machine was saved.

The Starland theater—"the center of moving picture refinement"—at Michigan City, Ind., has inaugurated a series of penny matinees on Saturdays when children will be admitted for one cent.

The Auditorium at Newark, Ohio, has a new picture policy which includes a Universal program.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

CINCINNATI.

THE war has hit the motion picture business in Cincinnati, incidentally, of course, with that of the rest of the country, and the several local film exchanges are consequently worrying just a little about what they will do several months hence if the war keeps up and the supply of foreign films, especially big features, is cut off completely. Of course, there is plenty of stuff already in this country to keep things going for some time, but the film men are looking ahead with some anxiety just now. The general sentiment, however, is to the effect that the domestic producing companies will be right on the job to meet the gap caused by any falling off in the importation of foreign goods, the high degree of success with which the several comparatively new concerns specializing on features have met being pointed to as ample evidence of the ability of home talent, so to speak, to take care of the situation.

With the supply of new matter from Europe cut off by the war, the Pathe organization has been compelled to discontinue the "Daily News" in Cincinnati, much to the regret of the several exhibitors who have been using the service with marked success, and a semi-weekly news service has been substituted, making a total of 2,000 feet a week released. Manager Hetteberg, Cincinnati manager of the Eclectic Film Company, which is releasing the Pathe news films, received this news in a letter a few days ago, and promptly notified the exhibitors using the daily accordingly.

Robert Laws, for some time assistant manager of the Cincinnati brand of the General Film Company, has received a well-deserved "boost" into the shoes left vacant by the removal of Manager Frank Smith to the Cleveland office. Mr. Laws has had a large experience in the film business for one of his years, and is, moreover, exceedingly popular with the exhibitors doing business with the office, so that his promotion is highly satisfactory and appropriate all around. Paul Barrington, who was formerly connected with the Chicago offices of the Mutual Film Company, has become assistant manager of the local General offices.

George F. Fish, former general manager of the Empress theater, in Cincinnati, passed through a few days ago en route to Los Angeles, Cal., where he is to manage the Empress theater. He is succeeded at the Cincinnati house by George A. Boyer, who formerly managed the Empress theater at Denver, Colo. Mr. Fish entertained his former employes and associates at the Empress with a farewell banquet while in the city.

Cincinnati business men are highly well pleased with the first three reels of motion pictures which have been prepared showing numerous and varied phases of Cincinnati's civic, industrial, educational and other activities. These were taken under the direction of the Chamber of Commerce, and were shown at the zoo last week, in order to enable Cincinnatians to see what has been done along this line, and what people all over the country will have an opportunity to see of Cincinnati. Two more reels of similar pictures are in course of preparation, and will be used in connection with the city's organized campaign for more and better business. A set will probably be sent to South America, where Cincinnati proposes to take advantage of the fact that European imports have been shut off by seeing what she can do to supply the gap.

The first appearance in Cincinnati of the Jesse L. Lasky production of "The Man on the Box," at the Lubin, took place the first half of last week, drawing exceedingly well. The fact that the leading roles were taken by Max Figman and Lolita Robertson, who had star parts in the big New York success, "Fine Feathers," undoubtedly had much to do with the attractiveness of the film drama in Cincinnati, as the play referred to was one of the hits of last season at the Grand.

The Gold Seal Universal series, "The Trey o' Hearts," has started off in Cincinnati very favorably, the second episode being shown at the Colonial, on West Fifth street, last week, and apparently bringing back to the theater many of those who saw the first part shown the week before. It bids fair to take a front place among the several serials being run.

The Gem, one of the Walnut-Hills houses on McMillan street, which has been closed during the greater part of the summer, reopened last week with an excellent business, and with every indication that it will be able to keep going during the remainder of the summer. The little house is a popular one during the winter season, and its former regular patrons were glad to see its doors open again.

Exhibitors in Covington, Ky., just across the river, are preparing to meet what promises to be an unusually rigid inspection by the city fire officials, who have suddenly made up their minds that a number of buildings in the Kentucky city are not what they should be from a fire prevention standpoint. Several places—not theaters, by the way—have already been closed, and it is announced by the city authorities that a general inspection of the motion picture houses and other places of amusement is next in order. Few exhibitors have anything to fear, however, they declare, as most of the houses comply with all municipal regulations in the matter of exits, aisles and the like.

The promoters of the proposed new Hippodrome theater, in Akron, O., including Gus Sun, of Springfield, O., Jules Hurtig, of New York, and W. C. Norris, of Akron, met in that city last week with P. T. Kearns, head of the State building department, in an effort to make some adjustment of the differences between the building department and the owners of the property. J. P. Callahan, deputy State building inspector, refused to approve of the plans for the theater because he stated that the exits were not properly placed, although it is stated that the plans had previously been approved by the city building inspector. It is probable that all difficulties in this connection will readily be adjusted, however, and that the construction of the building, which it is said will be one of the handsomest and most substantial of its sort in the State, will proceed at once.

Exhibitors who are clamoring for war pictures will have an opportunity shortly to get some matter which ought to be extremely interesting, in the shape of motion pictures of the United States army maneuvers at Camp Perry, O., which will be taken under the auspices of the War Department for use all over the country for educational purposes. Captain C. F. Rogers, of the Fifth Ohio regiment, will be the photographer, being equipped for work in this respect with a complete outfit.

The Marion theater, at Marion, O., now has one of the handsomest electric signs in Central Ohio, which was recently installed in front of the building. The sign is sixteen feet in width and twenty feet high, using over 600 lights in various colors. The sign is a "live" one, being in the shape of a huge flower pot, from which six electric rays ascend, one at a time, each bursting into a letter and the whole spelling out the name of the theater, "Marion." The sign was erected in connection with the construction of a new marquise for the front, which is of copper and glass, and is unusually handsome.

The Marion (O.) Family theater was reopened recently, after being closed for several weeks for extensive improvements. Owner C. E. Merkel now blieves he has one of the handsomest theaters in his part of Ohio. Among the changes made were the construction of a pressed brick front for the building, matching the front of Mr. Merkel's business building just to the east, while the floor was lowered, a new one of concrete being put in. The seating capacity was largely increased, and a new fireproof operating room installed.

The Exhibit theater, at Portsmouth, O., had scheduled for last week a Warner feature which was about as apt as could be asked, this being "The Air Torpedo," which, as its name indicates, deals with the possibilities of war in the air. Newspaper readers have been reading war dispatches telling of the feats of aviators in France and Belgium in aeroplanes and dirigibles and this picture, showing air vessels in actual operation, dropping bombs on hostile troops, had all the effect of stern reality.

A number of motion picture exhibitors in West Virginia have been worrying as to whether it is legal for them to keep their houses open on Sunday under the statutes of that State, as the question had been raised in some towns, and accordingly they presented the matter to the attorney-general recently. That official, with Solomon-like perspicacity, referred the question to the several local prosecuting attorneys to handle, realizing that while a strict and rigid construction of the law might require the closing of the houses, it is better to leave it to local sentiment in each case. It follows, therefore, that under this wise policy exhibitors in towns where the sentiment of the people is against Sunday shows will close, whereas those in towns where the people like to attend motion picture shows on that day will remain open.

CASEY.

SAN FRANCISCO.

THE Princess Theater, Ellis street, near Fillmore, one of the foremost moving picture houses in the Fillmore street district, has been sold to S. Morton Cohn, of Portland, Ore., one of the largest stockholders in the Rees circuit of theaters.

Plans are ready for figures for a class A theater, alterations and additions to the present structure at Mason and Eddy streets, to cost $100,000, for the Mason Improvement Company. The architects are Woollett & Woollett, 269 California street.

"The Christian," the elaborate Liebler-Vitagraph production, has met with such a flattering reception at the Portola Theater that it has been booked for a second week. The doors of the theater are opened at 9:30 o'clock in the morning during this engagement, and all seats in the afternoon and evening are 20 cents.

A number of 5-cent houses on Market street, in the business district, are making the experiment of putting on a double bill on Sundays, and raising the admission price to 10 cents. The plan has been a success, so far.

The Godfrey-Stow Co., which recently secured the concession for making moving pictures on the grounds of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, has disposed of this right to the Standard Film Company of New York. A complete plant for the making of moving pictures is to be built on the Zone, the amusement district of the Exposition, work to be under way by the first of September. The moving pictures that are being taken at present of ceremonies on the grounds are being made by Miles Bros. The Godfrey-Stow Co., in which George A. Collins is interested, is planning other activities in the local field.

The Panama Theater on the Mission Road, near Onondaga avenue, has been sold by Robt. McNeill to H. Warnock.

The annual Movies Ball, given by the moving picture operators of the city, will be held at the Auditorium on Fillmore street, on the evening of August 29.

The California Motion Picture Corporation has completed "Salome Jane" and is now working on "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Blanche Chapman, who created the original role of Mrs. Wiggs, has been brought to San Francisco to take this part. This concern recently sent Cameraman Butler to Visalia, Cal., with a party of six to complete a chapter in an interesting industrial story being made for the California Fruit Canners' Association.

The Panama-Aero Film Company has disposed of the California rights to its Panama Canal picture at a high figure, and General Manager M. B. Dudley will leave shortly for New York and London to consummate other large transactions.

With the idea of promoting better retail sales methods in local stores an enterprising morning paper secured the Savoy Theater for the evening of July 21 and good and bad salesmanship was featured in moving pictures to a large audience of merchants and clerks. A lecture on the subject was given by Ned Mitchell, sales manager of the Owl Drug Company.

Turner & Dahnken have affected a re-organization of the managers of their various theaters, and the resident managers of the houses outside of San Francisco are George Thornton, Oakland; W. F. Hannell, San Jose; E. V. Clover, Berkeley; W. M. Timmins, Alameda; George Langley, Richmond and E. W. Kruckeberg, Sacramento.

Within the course of the next year Turner & Dahnken will open a magnificent new moving picture theater at Oakland, Cal., which is to be the largest outside of New York. The new house will be at Fourteenth and Franklin streets and will be on the style of the Tivoli of San Francisco. It will have one balcony and will seat 3,000 persons. Work on the building will be commenced within thirty days, and it is anticipated that it will require about nine months' time to complete the structure. When the new theater is ready for occupancy the present house on Broadway will be given up.

The Majestic Theater at Chico, Cal., is closed and will be remodeled and enlarged before it is opened again.

Sidney Bramley has disposed of his interests in the Pastime Theater on Haight street to his former partner, H. A. Jorgensen.

J. E. Ericson of the Heidelberg Theater of Emeryville, Cal., a suburb of San Francisco, on the Oakland side of the Bay, has gone to Panama on a business trip and, during his absence, the house is under the management of "Doc" J. H. Hart. Mr. Ericson plans to take some moving pictures while away.

E. P. La Cell has purchased the interests of A. B. Staton in the moving picture business conducted at Santa Rosa, Cal., by McDaniels & Staton.

H. Howcroft has purchased the Castle Theater, conducted at Newcastle, Cal., By W. Goronson.

The Elite Theater, North Berkeley, Cal., recently reopened by B. F. Hall, has been sold to H. P. Matthews.

The National Film Producing Company, one of the latest concerns to enter the San Francisco moving picture field, has moved from its temporary quarters at 111 Turk street, to 220 Post street, where the entire fourth floor of a large building is occupied. General Manager E. N. Dusenberry, and a corps of artists, are burning midnight oil turning out commercial and political work. Plans are now being drawn for a large studio and the Sierra Film Producing Company is to be incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000, among those interested being Harold H. Maundrell, of the District Attorney's office; Joe Hickey, of the Union Lithograph Co.; Wallie Hershey, of the Curtis Biplane interests and Mr. Quinn, with John A. Roebling Sons Co. Al. Aldrich has been appointed director-in-chief.

Building permits have been taken out at Fresno, Cal., for the rehabilitation of the Theatre Fresno, the work to cost approximately $20,000. A new entrance will be installed, a marquise erected in front, the boxes on the lower floor removed, a heating, cooling and ventilating system put in and the house furnished with new opera chairs throughout.

Van Buren & Shields of Los Banos, Cal., have purchased the Star Theater in Oakdale from Ted Shearer and are making arrangements to take over a house at Sonora and a circuit of mountain amusement places.

A contract has been let at over $80,000 for the erection of the new White Theater at Fresno, Cal., being constructed for T. C. White. This does not include the opera chairs or moving picture equipment.

Eckles Bros. are conducting an airdome at Porterville, Cal., this summer. They recently took over the Wigwam airdome, formerly owned by A. R. Moore, but have closed this.

Rico Restano has disposed of his moving picture theater at Sonora, Cal., to June Knowles. and B. R. Shaw, superintendent of the Yosemite Power Company at Groveland.

Howard Davis is having plans prepared for the erection of a reinforced concrete moving picture theater on Railroad street, Auburn, Cal.

The Pasadena Theater Company is preparing to build a one-story theater at Pasadena, Cal., at an estimated cost of $80,000.

The Meadow Amusement Company has been incorporated at Los Angeles, Cal., with a capital of $5,000, by Cecil H. Upper, B. L. Sweazea, Frank Lowrey and George Olson.

Newsboys of the Eagle were entertained at a show by Manager L. M. Miller, of the Princess Theater at Wichita, Kan.

I. W. Saunders, manager of the Ideal moving picture theater at Davis, Okla., has opened an airdome at that place.

Major Thomas J. Dickson, chaplain of the Sixth Field Artillery, U.S.A., is back at Fort Riley, Kan., where he is exhibiting some of the films made on the border near Texas City, in connection with his plan to make a moving picture record of different phases of regular army life. The pictures will be sent to the war department.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

DETROIT.

"NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER," the seven-reel production of the Universal Company, started its tenth week at the Detroit Opera House on July 27. It is still attracting good crowds twice daily at 25 and 50-cent prices. It is very likely that this picture will continue until the opening of the regular season in the latter part of August. There was some talk of "Cabiria" playing this theater, but apparently negotiations have fallen through for the present.

Big headliner attractions are to be booked for a lecture course to be arranged by the Detroit Board of Commerce, if plans work out satisfactorily, for next fall and winter. Among them will be DeKolb Brothers' remarkable motion pictures taken in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River.

The Gladwin Park Theater, situated at Water Works Park, will present a beautiful child's automobile to the boy or girl under ten years of age who returns to the office the largest number of coupons on the first of September. During the month of August coupons are being given in connection with every five-cent ticket sold at the matinees, which are daily. Sunday is not included in the contest. The automobile is equipped with electric horn, electric lights, one extra wheel and windshield.

The new Empire on Woodward avenue is distributing among its patrons yellow cards, with the following notice, which is self-explanatory: "Always catering to the wishes of our patrons, we kindly ask that you mark the class of photoplays you prefer. Do you prefer a mixed program consisting of a two-part feature and two single reels, one of them a comedy? Yes or no. Do you prefer one complete play in four or five parts? Yes or no. Do you approve of singing? Yes or no." The management will be probably guided considerably in the future by the suggestions made by its patrons.

A. J. Gillingham, manager of the General Film Company in Detroit, returned August 3 from a two weeks' trip in the East. He combined business with pleasure, visiting New York, Atlantic City and Boston.

The World Film Corporation, located in the Equity Building, will move August 15 to the fourth floor of the building at 97 Woodward avenue, where it will occupy the entire floor. At present it is occupying part of the basement at that address in addition to its offices in the Equity Building. Douglas Dickerson, manager of the Detroit office, says his new quarters will be much larger and more suitable to the needs of the business.

The Wolverine Feature Film Company has moved from the Equity Building to 17 Campau Building, which is directly across the street. Wesley B. Schram, one of the partners in the Wolverine, has resigned as manager and will take full charge of the Monroe Theater in which he is a half owner. C. M. Davis will be in complete control of the executive activities of the Wolverine company.

Jesse J. Goldburg, secretary of the Life-Photo Film Corporation, was in Detroit July 29 in connection with the "Greyhound." Several local film exchanges have been negotiating for this feature.

Miss Dorothy Schoenherr, daughter of M. W. Schoenherr, formerly manager of the Casino Feature Film Company, was married July 23 to a very prominent Detroit violinist.

From a real estate man it has been learned that negotiations are pending for the leasing of the building at 225 Woodward avenue, in which is located the Garland Theater, to a large mercantile company, and that in all probability the deal will be consummated to take effect immediately. In such event it would give Woodward avenue but two motion picture theaters between the Campus and Grand Circus Park, namely: the new Empire and the Woodward. The Garland belongs to the chain of houses controlled by the Casino Amusement Company. The building was leased several years ago by John H. Kunsky and his associates, and for a time played museum attractions on the second floor, animals on the third floor and a picture theater on the ground floor. This did not turn out as successful as was anticipated, so the upper floors were discontinued and the ground floor remodelled exclusively for pictures. While the theater itself is doing a splendid business, it is too expensive a proposition to operate at the annual rental which is approximately $40,000. The location is one of the very best in the city for retail purposes, and should the contemplated deal be effected, it is very likely that Mr Kunsky will be able to realize a very nice profit in turning the lease.

Property with frontage of 87 feet at 3067-3073 East Grand boulevard, having depth of 173.5 feet to the alley in the rear and situated about 275 feet from Woodward avenue, has been leased by Dr. Alois Thurner for 20 years to a syndicate which plans to use the land as a site for a large photoplay house to be known as the Grand Boulevard Theater. The ground floor will seat 1,200 persons. Another condition of the lease is that the lessees may purchase at any time within the life term of it. Application has already been made to the secretary of state for incorporation of the Grand Boulevard Theater, which will own and operate the house. The contract for erection of a theater and office building on the property has been awarded to the Fuller Claflin Company, Detroit. Building operations will be started at once and rushed to completion in an effort to have it ready for occupancy in December of this year. The enterprise, it is said, will represent an investment of about $150,000.

A. J. Smith Construction Company has taken out the permit for constructing the new Rosedale Theater for William Klatt, on Woodward avenue, between Rosedale and Englewood avenues. It will be one story high, of reinforced concrete, 24 by 110 by 35 feet. The permit calls for a building to cost $24,000, which is exclusive of furnishings, decorations and equipment.

Royal A. Baker, former censor of motion picture theaters, is now covering the Woodward avenue "beat" for the local police department. To the Detroit correspondent of the Moving Picture World, Mr. Baker said he was devoting considerable of his spare time to writing scenarios, and that he was working out a number of new and original ideas.

Manager Hagedorn of the National says he is well satisfied with his business since changing the house from vaudeville to pictures, and believes the policy of pictures will continue permanently.

The Medbury Theater on Hasting street, near Medbury avenue, is practically completed and will be ready to open not later than the middle of this month.

On July 28 there was a private exhibition of the Board of Commerce motion pictures at the Liberty Theater. They show the various places of interest in Detroit. At the private exhibition there was present a special committee of the Board of Commerce, besides some of the officers and directors. The pictures will shortly be shown in this city, first at the Board of Commerce auditorium and then at the various motion picture houses.

The walls of the theater at Woodward and Kenilworth avenues are up and it is expected to have the roof on the structure by the middle of August. Contractors are pushing this theater as fast as their men can work. From present indications the theater will be ready to open about the middle of September. It will be one of the quickest-constructed theaters in the Middle West.

Contracts for the construction of the Strand Theater have been let and work will start some time this month. It will be on the plan of the Garden Theater.

"The Man On the Box" the latest Jesse Lasky release, was shown at the Liberty the week of July 20 and did a capacity business. The Liberty is now paying a monthly dividend of two per cent.; the capitalization is $75,000. By fall it is anticipated that the theater will pay around three per cent. monthly. It is one of the best theater investments in the city.

T. D. Moule, manager of the Columbia Theater, left July 29 on a two weeks' vacation.

SMITH.

MICHIGAN.

THE Grand Theater at Calumet gets fifteen and ten cents for its eight-reel program.

The publicity committee of the Grand Rapids' Association of Commerce will use moving pictures for advertising purposes.

A moving picture show has been opened in the theater at Lake Michigan at Muskegon. Later vaudeville will be added.

Manager W. E. Lawrence, of the Idea Theater at 222 Monroe street, Grand Rapids, is installing a new front in his house.

Harry R. Hiller and Benjamin Jorgensen, of Grand Haven, are the cameramen out with the West Michigan Pike Tourists taking pictures of the towns visited.

The Royal Theater on West Leonard street in Grand Rapids has added an orchestra for Wednesday and Saturday nights.

Manager W. A. Ruscoe, of the Jeffers Theater in Saginaw, was host to the Daily News boys at an appropriate picture show.

B. E. Newman and Leslie Dietz filmed Ishpeming. The pictures were booked for the Ishpeming Theater, Aug. 4, 5, 6 and 10.

The Orpheum and Garden Theaters in Lansing are conducting a popularity voting contest with an automobile as capital prize.

"People are crazy about moving pictures and the tango. Many are in a perfect 'debauchery' of amusement. Instead of forming clubs for boys take a club to the parents." This is a newspaper quotation from an address made by Shaller Matthews, dean of the University of Chicago, to Michigan preachers attending the summer school at Kalamazoo.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

ILLINOIS.

THE management of the Chautauqua assembly at Piasa Bluffs on the Mississippi River, near Alton, recently had a novelty in the form of a "movie day." The admission was reduced to ten cents. In addition to the regular program films were made of the crowds and all the atractions to be shown later at the Chautauqua and at the moving picture houses in Alton.

Leslie Sollis assumed the management of the Gem Theater and the Airdome at Clinton when his father, John Sollis, who had been conducting them, went to Decatur to engage in other business.

Nearly every picture shown at Burr Swan's Knights of Pythias Opera House at Pittsfield seems to have some local significance. When Mary Pickford was booked in "Caprice" Swan recalled the time the local amateur actors pirated the play and put it on. The result was, of course, more business.

Coupons admitted ladies and children free to the matinees of the Alaska-Siberian moving pictures when they were shown at the New Lyric Theater in Danville.

The Orpheum Theater at McLean has been sold by D. B. Ellis to Loren Bennett, of Atlanta, Ill.

Horton & Mayne have commenced the construction of an airdome on the south side of the public square at Albion. Moving pictures will be shown there in fair weather, in rainy seasons at the Majestic Theater.

Four weeks were allotted by the management of Dreamland Theater at Galena for completely changing the interior of the house. Just as soon as the run of "Kathlyn" was finished July 18 the place was closed for the improvements which had been under consideration.

Manager Jules Rubens of the Fox Theater at Aurora will admit free on Monday afternoons, between 2 and 5 o'clock, all grade school children. An Aurora paper, telling of this plan, says: "Mr. Rubens entered the editorial offices this afternoon and suggested this plan, and after it was unanimously indorsed, ordered the announcement made. Mr. Rubens cried when he was telling of the number of children in the city who cannot go to the nickel shows because of not having the money."

The Elite moving picture theater on the east side of the square at Petersburg has closed until the middle of September. Manager and Mrs. Newland have returned to their home at Galesburg until that time.

Manager Miller, of the Kozy Theater at Metropolis, is practically rebuilding his house. Two rooms will be thrown together, doubling the seating capacity, and a stage will be added for vaudeville.

The Adfilm Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000, to manufacture and deal in motion pictures, motion picture machines, etc. The incorporators are John A. Kerhoeven, M. L. Minnock and William Feather.

A new opera house will be erected on West Main street at Havana by Dr. L. G. Pullen, a dentist of that city. It will seat about 1,000 persons. It is likely that, inasmuch as Havana is a city of only 3,500, some pictures will be used as attractions.

The moving picture theater at Mackinaw has been reopened and shows are being given each Wednesday and Saturday night.

The Electrophone Talking moving pictures were featured for several days by the Capitol Theater on East Washington street in Springfield. For a recent advertising stunt the Capitol admitted two children for one buffalo nickel.

When "The Christian" was shown at the Orpheum in Aurora, the first four reels were shown two days and the last four two days. One ticket covering both shows was sold for ten cents.

Ed Conley, of Seaton, is now associated with his brother, C. A. Conley, in the moving picture business at La Salle.

Chris Jackson, owner of the Scenic Theater at Bloomington, has let the contract for improvements and extensions which will increase the seating capacity of his house from 440 to 850.

A juvenile automobile will be given to some boy or girl in Champaign or Urbana in order to advertise the Varsity Theater of Champaign.

The board of directors of the Litchfield-Hillsboro Chautauqua has awarded a contract for furnishing a moving picture program each weekday night during the assembly to Ed Fellis, the Hillsboro exhibitor.

Eleven business houses of Sullivan have leased the Gem Theater for every Saturday afternoon and each customer is given a ticket with each one-dollar purchase.

The Bijou Theater at Carrollton has been opened. The house enjoyed capacity business the opening night.

The contract for making moving pictures of Rockford, to be shown at the Palm Theater and then to be used by the Rockford Chamber of Commerce, was awarded to the Zenith Motion Picture Company, of Chicago.

Distributors of a soft drink "sampled" the crowd at the Airdome in Galesburg in the rest between reels one night. Manager Schroeder, who is some press agent, got a local business man to stand for an interview on the little surprises like this that have been sprung at the Airdome.

Braidwood, Ill., as it looked on July 3 and 4, was shown in films to the patrons of the Empire Theater at Morris. Braidwood and Morris are neighbors and celebrated together, so it practically was a local picture.

The Kenilworth Club, which has a lease on a portion of Kenilworth Beach on the north shore of Lake Michigan, has installed wiring and has been giving free moving picture shows for the visitors to the beach.

Joseph M. Lyon, who has been manager of the Vaudette Theater in Evanston, owned by Bodkin & Keane, has been placed in charge of the firm's new Star Theater at 68 West Madison street in Chicago.

Delbridge & Barber have opened a moving picture show at Malta.

"The matinees are as good as the evening performances," is the different way in which the Evanston Theater at Evanston conveys the idea.

A benefit for the Royal Neighbors of America was given at the appropriately-named Royal Theater in Litchfield.

Testimonials from well-known people in Galesburg are being used as readers in the newspapers by the Airdome at that place.

The Industrial Moving Picture Company, of Chicago, took some pictures of the Festal Day parade at Zion City. These films will be used by Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva of the noted community in connection with a tour of the Northwest, which he will make this fall.

C. L. Eastburn has sold the Star Theater at Watseka to Merle Eastburn.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

THE moving picture show on Lamar avenue, in Paris, Texas, is being remodeled. A balcony will add to the seating capacity.

More electric fans than in any other building in McAlester, Okla., is the distinction enjoyed by the Liberty Theater at that place.

Moving pictures of Texas highways along the Meridian road will be taken during an automobile tour from the Gulf of Mexico to Winnipeg, by representatives of the National Highways' Association.

Manager Howard Cobb has been taking the new Grace Theater at McPherson, Kan., pictorated.

A novelty in rural picture shows is [illegible] by James Hanna, of the Hanna Grain Company of Gas City, Kan. He purchased a [illegible] that city and will have it removed to his farm near La Harpe, Kan., where it will be equipped for giving moving picture shows to the farm boys and girls of the neighborhood.

The Royal Theater at St. Joseph, Mo., has reduced its admission price to five cents.

Miss Anna Clements, who recently purchased the Garden Theater at Cleburne, Texas, is giving five reels of pictures in connection with a vaudeville bill. Pictures will change nightly; vaudeville twice a week.

The story of how a railroad company, through the moving pictures, found a missing freight car is a variation of the tale of finding lost relatives. The general car accountant of the Santa Fe could not locate at any place in the United States car No. 110,098. He was watching a current events film of a flood scene in a Southwestern theater when he saw the significant number on the end of a car sticking out of the water. He got in touch with the film-maker and made a proper accounting for his rolling stock.

Manager J. F. Green, of the Yale and Majestic moving picture theaters at Cleburne, Texas, is branching out, having purchased a half interest in the Orpheum Theater at Dallas, Texas. He will be general manager for the Dallas houses which will be devoted to vaudeville. M. Little, of Cleburne, will be assistant manager. The change probably will result in the introduction of some vaudeville into one of the Cleburne houses in connection with the photoplays.

W. H. Daley, proprietor of a moving picture show in Pittsburg, Kan., the first of fifty men tried for violating the laws by operating his show on Sunday, was acquitted by a jury. A former jury disagreed.

Moving pictures of work done by the Missouri State Poultry Board will be shown at a state poultry field meet to be held at Lake Side Park, Webb City, some time in August or September.

E. H. Hill, Arkansas City, Kan., exhibitor, who attracted attention by his plan of admitting children free for bringing in flies they had killed, put on another stunt. Three hundred boys, under twelve years of age, who had cleaned up their backyards, got to see "Uncle Tom's Cabin" without paying. The youngsters were lined up in front of the theater and filmed for one of the weeklies.

Thomas B. Moore, of the Hotex Film Company, of Houston, Texas, has been negotiating with the Young Men's Committee of the Commercial Club at Orange, Texas, for taking some pictures in that city.

What is said to be a campaign for operating shows on Sunday in Wichita, Kan., lacks backing. The city council has been presented with petitions asking that it pass an ordinance permitting Sabbath shows, and, in the event that the council does not pass such a measure, that the question be submitted to a vote of the people. Although the petitions bore 3,600 signatures, officials at the city hall are quoted as saying that they were brought in by a young girl and that knowledge of who submitted them is not available.

Holton, Kan., was filmed by O. W. Holt, of the Holt Feature Film Company, of Manhattan, Kan.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

LYNCHBURG, VA.

THE summer policy of showing feature motion pictures will be abandoned by the Trenton theater on August 24, after which time Manager Corbin Shield will resume vaudeville and offer four acts daily in connection with two reels of pictures to the patrons of this house. One of the first steps taken by Mr. Shield after assuming the management of the Trenton theater was to secure Jesse L. Lasky's features, and that his selection proved to be what the public desired has been indicated by the big crowds that have visited the theater every night.

Owing to the demand made upon the management to keep the feature over for three days more, "Neptune's Daughter," the big Universal seven-reeler, for which Jake Wells has secured the rights in Virginia, was shown at the Academy of Music six days instead of three, and the picture sustained its reputation as a drawing card during the time it was shown in Lynchburg, the increase in price of admission not standing in the way of those who witnessed the production.

The New theater, which is now in the course of construction on Main street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, already bears the appearance of being the prettiest house in Lynchburg. The theater will hardly be completed before October 1, although the contractors are rushing the work every day. The New will cater to women and children and will show only pictures in which the sensational is eliminated. A splendid pipe organ costing $3,000 is to be installed.

BABER.

(Continued on page 1120)

WAR

RAMO FI

Presents the first authentic F war in the his

"THE WAR

O

"THE FRANCO-GERM

400 STUPEND

TAKEN AT GR

THE ACTUAL BATT

DRAMATIZED FOR THE SCR

Now ready to book large theatres on a percent wide-awake

WAR

Beautiful Heralds—Type and Pictorial Lithographs—1-3-6-8-9-12-24 and magnificent 12-page booklets, showing 50 scenes of actual

RAMO FILMS, Inc.,

C. LANG COBB, Jr., Manager Sales and Publicity

LMS, Inc.

WAR

RAULO TRADE MARK

ILMS depicting the greatest tory of the world---

OF WARS"

R

AN INVASION OF 1914"

OUS SCENES

EAT RISK ON

LEFIELDS OF EUROPE

EEN BY PAUL M. POTTER

age basis or will SELL TERRITORY outright to buyers

Sheets—Action Photos in sets of 30; sizes 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28—Slides fighting. Wire—don't wait to write—for territory or bookings

Columbia Theatre Bldg.

NEW YORK, N. Y.

WAR

RAULO TRADE MARK

ST. LOUIS.

IN the St. Louis Globe Democrat of July 29, Mayor Kiel is reported as saying: "I consider the establishment of a censorship over public entertainments, particularly moving picture shows, which cater largely to boys and girls, imperative. I am strongly opposed to the exhibition of films depicting crime. Many of such films portray criminals as heroes, and the impression on youthful minds is bad." The Mayor proposes to bring up a bill at the regular session of the Municipal Assembly in September, directing the Division of Parks and Recreation to censor all moving picture films and other theatrical entertainments before their production be permitted in St. Louis.

Moving pictures have been enlisted to help the Equal Suffrage League of St. Louis. Mrs. Alice Curtice Moyer, a local suffrage leader, has written a four-reel photoplay with equal suffrage as the theme, and the St. Louis Motion Picture Company have made arrangements to produce the feature in the near future. The story is said to contain much heart interest, as well as lively action, and it will be staged by a director from the east.

W. J. Flynn, general manager of the Associated theaters, invited a delegation of nuns who are attending a course of lectures for teachers at the Christian Brothers College, St. Louis, to a private exhibition of the St. Louis Pageant and Masque pictures at the Juniata theater, Juniata street and Grand avenue, on July 23. The performance began at 1.30 in the afternoon and lasted until 5. Many of the nuns had never been in a position to witness an exhibition of moving pictures before, and Mr. Flynn's invitations were accepted by all who could possibly attend.

During the first week of the free municipal moving pictures in the public parks and playgrounds of St. Louis, more than 45,000 people saw the exhibitions. Larger crowds are expected as the season advances, and results are being watched with interest by socilogists and heads of city recreation bureaus throughout the country. The films are carefully selected, and those of an educational value are given preference. One reel has remained on the program for two weeks, and will be shown until all the patrons of the free pictures have seen it. It is a Safety First reel, and shows the dangers of children playing on the streets. Acting Health Commissioner Jordan has arranged with Park Commissioner Davis to exhibit a reel showing the dangers of the fly, to aid in the campaign for the extermination of the pest.

Delegates to the convention of Optometrists, which was held in St. Louis this week, were entertained with moving pictures while taking a river trip on the steamer Belle of the Bends Thursday night. A lecture on the "Evolution of the Spectacle," by Dr. L. E. Bull, of California, was illustrated with moving pictures, rare old plates and photographs of old-style spectacles.

Moving pictures were exhibited at a political meeting held at the Marguerite Clark theater, 4031 Olive street, on July 23. The pictures were run between the political addresses, and the admission was free.

The Roseland Skydome, at Old Manchester road and Roseland terrace, has just been opened for business. Chas. Crawford is manager, and General service is used.

GIEBLER.

MISSOURI.

THE Majestic airdome has opened for business at Rockville, Mo. J. W. Melton is the owner of the moving picture establishment.

William Meyn, proprietor of the Phototorium in Kansas City, Kan., has put himself on a diet which provides for little or no food during hot weather. Mr. Meyn has been in bad health recently, and decided that a few weeks without anything to eat was about what he needed. He also has cancelled all engagements with the Goddess Nicotine and expects to be in his former good health when cool weather arrives.

E. P. Churchill, a former exhibitor of Kansas City, has entered the industry on a more extensive scale in Milwaukee, according to information received by Kansas City friends. Mr. Churchill, who formerly managed the Gladstone theater, is now supervising a half dozen motion picture houses in the Beer City.

The Empress theater, a vaudeville and moving picture house of Kansas City, passed out of the hands of Sullivan & Considine, and into those of Marcus Loew on August 1. The policy of the new owner, as far as motion pictures are concerned, will be the same, it is believed.

The White Way theater, the newest in Kansas, opened at Concordia recently, under the management of Robert McGaugh and F. F. Davis. The theater is 100 feet deep and 46 wide, boasting a seating capacity of 500. Even more seats could have been installed, had it not been the owners' idea to sacrifice capacity to the comfort of patrons to some extent. Particular attention was given to the safety idea in the construction of the new house, which is of concrete, brick and steel. Edison projecting equipment is used.

The Bell theater, of Independence, Kan., participated recently in a misspelled word contest handled by one of the daily papers of that city. A page of advertisements was run, a number of words being misspelled. The reader compiling a list of these words was given a cash prize. The plan caused patrons of the paper to read the advertisements with unusual care, and good results were secured.

Sunday openings in Topeka, Kan., are doubtful. One or two of the exhibitors are said to have decided to make an effort to give performances on the Sabbath. Others believe that such a move would prove unpopular and will hold aloof for the present, at least.

Three convictions of moving picture men were secured in the municipal court at Pittsburg, Kan., recently. W. H. Daly, E. E. Frazier and Charles Smither were the exhibitors found guilty of violating a local ordinance. All will appeal to the district court and be given jury trials, in which the municipality has been unable to make any progress. The three exhibitors will continue their Sunday performances pending a settlement of the appeals.

O. W. Holt, a feature film man of Manhattan, Kan., ran into a bit of luck at Holton, Kan., recently, while snapping scenes of interest. A railroad wreck took place near Holton, the cameraman securing some unusual views.

The Kansas City branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, which recently went under the management of Marty Williams, will shortly take new quarters in the Ozark building, at Tenth and Main streets, after three years in the Empress theater building at Twelfth and McGee. The third floor of the Ozark building is now being fitted up elaborately for the entrance of the exchange, which will occupy its new home some time in August. New fixtures are to be installed throughout. The Ozark building already is the home of the Eclectic branch ,under the management of C. S. Edwards. The Universal exchange is the only one now left in the Empress theater.

J. E. Dodson, former manager of the Kansas City branch of the World Film Corporation, has re-entered the service of that company and will work on the road, with headquarters in Kansas City. R. L. White will retain the management of the branch. Mr. Dodson is intimate with conditions in the Southwest and is well fitted for his new role.

Eight thousand Eagles invaded Kansas City with kindly intentions early in August for their National convention. Most of the local exhibitors anticipated their coming by decorating their houses appropriately. The Eagles reciprocated by turning out in numbers for the offerings at the various houses and business boomed during their occupancy of the city.

Joseph Stiebel, manager of the Apollo theater on Troost avenue, also operates an airdome on that thoroughfare. Contrary to general methods, however, the airdome is an addition rather than a replacement, as the regular house is continued through the summer. Both are being filled at present, and Mr. Stiebel is one exhibitor to whom the good old summer time presents little to be feared.

MURRAY.

IOWA.

THE Garrick Theater at Burlington has been sold to Wiley N. McConnell, of Quincy, Ill., and Jack Hoeffler, of Terre Haute, Ind. It will be devoted to vaudeville, using some pictures.

H. W. Johnson has opened a moving picture show at Akron.

Boston & Neibert, who have purchased the A-Muse-U Theater on Sycamore street in Muscatine, will continue to operate that house with a moving picture policy, as well as making the Princess Theater the home of photoplays. Monday night will be feature night at the Princess and Wednesday night at the A-Muse-U will be given over to the specials.

Eastern parties are said to be interested in a plan to erect a new moving picture house on Commercial street in Waterloo.

The building occupied by the Palace Theater at Burlington has been sold and the proprietors are said to be contemplating the erection of a handsome moving picture house at some other location. Several sites are under consideration.

T. A. Black, a member of the "Greater Iowa" committee appointed by Governor Clark to arrange for the state exhibit at the fair, has announced that motion pictures taken in various parts of Iowa will be shown during the entire year at the exposition.

The Princess Theater, now under construction, at Sioux City, is expected to be open about September 15.

State and national censorship of moving pictures will be advocated by the Iowa Public Welfare League along with a number of other reform laws to be sought from the Iowa legislature. The league takes this stand, it is explained, because it has just learned that there is a movement upon the part of moving picture men to block all plans for censorship. H. L. Houghton, of the Associated Charities of Sioux City, which is the mouthpiece of the Welfare League, says that, generally speaking, the shows in Sioux City are good.

Summer prices of five cents are now in vogue at the Best Theater in Clinton.

The Palace Theater entertained the members of the Fifty-third Regimental Band of Cedar Rapids at one of its feature picture programs. The band rendered a short program of popular classics early in the evening.

Dell Hoes has sold the Lyric Theater on Keeler street in Boone, which he managed a short time, to W. R. Summerhayes, of Wilton Junction. The new proprietor has been in the show and picture business nineteen years. A new $5,000 photoplayer will be installed. B. G. Buffington, of Wilton Junction, will be house manager. Hoes has repurchased the American Theater at Carthage, Ill., which he sold sometime ago.

Harry Fairale, of Davenport, has purchased a camera and will film persons, scenes and events in that section of the state.

Herman Hulsebeck will move his picture show into the Stangl Hall at Dedham.

B. O. Gates has opened the Pastime, a moving picture theater seating 200, in the Gates Block at Independence.

Manager Brinton is expending about $1,000 in renovating the Graham Theater at Washington.

A new moving picture theater will be opened in the Johnson Building at Cherokee.

The Majestic Theater at Missouri Valley was sold under the supervision of the Federal Court to L. Brown. It has been operated by Myron Moore.

I. T. Russell has purchased the Majestic Theater at Bloomfield from C. C. Cackler.

The Auditorium, a moving picture show, has been opened at Lewis.

Short features and comedies, designed to attract the patronage of people who have not time to sit through long subjects, will be given especial attention by F. W. Cope and C. W. Page, who have leased the Black Cat Theater in Des Moines. A five-cent admission will be secured. Page is connected with the Page Amusement Company of Des Moines.

The Dodge Amusement Company, of Keokuk, has taken over the management of the Grand Opera House at Fort Madison. It is probable that this company will pursue the same policy announced for its new acquisition in Galesburg, alternating theatrical, vaudeville and feature moving picture attractions.

The Princess Theater at Mason City is conducting a juvenile amateur contest with a $25 gold prize. Several weeks are required to determine the winner.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

WISCONSIN.

DISAGREEMENTS over the question of who controlled the lease of the Rex moving picture theater in Oshkosh were settled, and Ray Cummings withdrew the injunction suit filed to restrain the People's Amusement Company and Andrew Haben from proceeding with remodeling the theater.

F. J. McWilliams, manager of the Casino Theater in La Crosse, has had plans drawn for a new moving picture house to be erected in the south part of the city at Jackson street and West avenue. It will seat 450 and will have a modern heating and ventilating system.

Managers of moving picture houses in Superior are co-operating with the city officials in enforcing the curfew law. Boys and girls under 16 years of age are not admitted to the theaters after 9 p.m., unless accompanied by their parents

The Lyric Theater at Columbus has been reopened under new management, giving pictures and some vaudeville.

The Liberty Theater at Twenty-seventh and Vliet streets in Milwaukee will make an addition to it costing $25,000.

The Wisconsin Panama Commission probably will use moving pictures at the San Francisco fair.

When the Empire Theater at Butternut reopens this fall, after thorough remodeling, it will have a seating capacity of 300. All new chairs have been installed.

More power for the board of censors of moving pictures in Milwaukee is advocated by Judge Neele B. Neelen, who was appointed to that body several months ago. However, he suggests this only as a means of protecting the body in case of lawsuits. As a general thing, the class of pictures now shown in Milwaukee are good and a benefit to education, he says. Only one obnoxious film is recalled and, when informed of the opinion of the censors, the exhibitor immediately stopped its exhibition.

J. F. Heffernan, head of the company controlling the Grace Theater, Twenty-eighth and National avenues in Milwaukee, loaned the house to Rev. S. P. Todd, who is conducting one of the church federation summer Bible schools. One hundred and fifty children bearing banners marched through the streets to the theater where they saw films on the care of teeth and on the medical inspection of schools.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

(Continued on page 1126)

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM Co INC

NEW YORK. 110 W. 40th ST.

PHILADELPHIA. MONTREAL. NEW YORK

BIG WAR DRAMA

THE NEXT IN COMMAND

IN FOUR PARTS

FULL OF ACTION, BATTLES WITH POWERFUL DRAMATIC FEELING THROUGHOUT. A PLAY OF UNUSUAL INTEREST IN THESE TIMES.

To Be Released August 19, 1914

Lobby Display, Beautifully Colored Sepia Photographs. 1, 3 and 6 Sheet Posters. The Usual Beautiful Heralds

WESTERN AND SOUTHERN STATES FOR SALE

ALSO SOME TERRITORY ON

OATH OF A VIKING
3 PARTS

MEXICAN MINE FRAUD
5 PARTS

LUPIN
3 PARTS

SILENT BELL
3 PARTS

THE CHIMNEY SWEEPS
5 PARTS

BOOKING OFFICES
110 W. 40th St., New York
1126 Vine St., Philadelphia
204 St. Catherine St., West, Montreal, Can.

COMING SOON. THE FILM DETECTIVE—IN FOUR PARTS

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Current Releases

MONDAY, AUGUST 17, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Tim, the Terror (Comedy)
—The Game of Freeze-Out (Comedy)
EDISON—The Adventure of the Pickpocket (Eighth of the "Octavius" Amateur Detective Series) (Comedy)
ESSANAY—Sweedie and the Double Exposure (Comedy)
KALEM—The Old Army Coat (Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—Dakar, the Principal Port of Senegal, French West Africa (Travel)
—Military Trained Dogs, Belgium (Military)
SELIG—The Speck on the Wall (Special—Two parts—Drama)
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 49 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Private Dennis Hogan (Military Drama)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1914.

CINES—When the Beacon Failed (Special—Two parts—Drama)
EDISON—By the Aid of a Film (Tenth of "The Man Who Disappeared" Series) (Drama)
ESSANAY—The Black Signal (Drama)
KALEM—The Storm at Sea (Drama)
LUBIN—Back to the Farm (Comedy)
MELIES—A Slight Mistake (Comedy)
PATHE—Cairo, the Capital of Egypt (Travel)
—Uriage, and Vicinity (Scenic)
SELIG—If at First You Don't Succeed (Comedy-Drama)
VITAGRAPH—An Innocent Delilah (Special—Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1914.

EDISON—The Old Fire Horse (Comedy)
ESSANAY—The Fable of "The Two Mandolin Players and the Willing Performer" (Western Comedy)
KALEM—The Bond Eternal (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—The Dreamer (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—The False Rubies (Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly, No. 50, 1914 (News)
SELIG—When a Woman's 40 (Special—Two parts—Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Taken by Storm (Comedy-Drama)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 20, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Smuggler's Wife (Drama)
ESSANAY—Slippery Slim and the Claim Agent (Comedy)
LUBIN—His Brother's Blood (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—A Surprising Encounter (Comedy)
—A Mason's New Assistant (Comedy)
—The Bull Trainer's Revenge (Special—Two parts—Drama)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 50 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The Woes of a Waitress (Drama)

FRIDAY, AUGUST 21, 1914.

EDISON—The Gilded Kidd (Special—Two parts—Comedy)
ESSANAY—The Masked Wrestler (Special—Two parts—Drama)
KALEM—Sherlock Bonehead (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Love of Oro San (Drama)
SELIG—The Reveler (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Honeymooners (Comedy)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 22, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Gypsy Talisman (Drama)
EDISON—In Lieu of Damages (Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Wild Ride (Drama)
KALEM—Kidnapped by Indians (Drama)
LUBIN—Sometimes It Works (Comedy)
—Making Auntie Welcome (Comedy)
MELIES—The Telltale Photograph (Special—Two parts—Drama)
SELIG—What Became of Jane? (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Lily of the Valley (Special—Two parts—Drama)

Advance Releases

MONDAY, AUGUST 24, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Man from the Past (Drama)
EDISON—Nearly a Widow (Comedy)
ESSANAY—Sweedie Springs a Surprise (Comedy)
KALEM—The Primitive Instinct (Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News, No. 53, 1914 (News)
—Edible Fishes of the English Channel (Ocean)
—Picturesque Normandy, France (Travel)
SELIG—The White Mouse (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 51 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Ward's Claim (Western-Drama)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1914.

EDISON—The Mystery of the Octagonal Room (Tenth of "The Chronicles of Cleek" Series (Drama)
ESSANAY—Two Men Who Waited (Drama)
KALEM—The Counterfeiter's Plot (Drama)
LUBIN—The Widow and the Twins (Comedy)
—The Lucky Rube (Comedy)
MELIES—Circumstantial Evidence (Comedy)
PATHE—Rapids and Falls at Trondjen (Travel)
—Picturesque France, Lower Brittany (Travel)
—From Havre to Buc by Hydro-Aeroplane (Color-Travel)
SELIG—The Sealed Oasis (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Rainy the Lion Killer (Special—Two parts—Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1914.

EDISON—The South African Mines (Industrial)
—Buster and His Goat (Comedy)
ESSANAY—Fable of "the Difference Between Learning and Learning How" (Comedy)
KALEM—The Cave of Death (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—The Attorney's Decision (Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 54, 1914 (News)
SELIG—The Decision of Jim O'Farrel (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Josie's Declaration of Independence (Com.)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Terrible Lesson (Drama)
ESSANAY—Slippery Slim and the Fortune Teller (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Aggressor (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—The Elopement of Eliza (Comedy)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 51 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The Mysterious Lodger (Drama)

FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1914.

EDISON—The Birth of the Star Spangled Banner (Special—Two parts—Historical Drama)
ESSANAY—Seven Sealed Orders (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
KALEM—When Men Wear Skirts (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Better Man (Drama)
SELIG—A Low Financier (Comedy)
—Breaking Into Jail (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—Such a Hunter (Comedy)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 29, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Spending It Quick (Comedy)
—Baseball, a Grand Old Game (Comedy)
CINES—To Forgive, Divine (Special—Two parts—Drama)
EDISON—Treasure Trove (Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Indian Romance (Western-Drama)
KALEM—The Car of Death (Drama)
LUBIN—The Kids' Nap (Comedy)
MELIES—The Man Who Smiled (Special—Two parts—Comedy)
SELIG—The Harbor of Love (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Josie's Coney Island Nightmare (Special—Two parts—Comedy)

SEND FOR SAMPLE ORDER of announcement slides beautifully colored and properly illustrated. Any of the following at 25c. each; send stamps or money order with all orders: "Intermission." "Next Time You Come Bring Your Whole Family." "We Select the Best Photoplays Obtainable for Our Program." "All Children Occupying Seats Must Have Tickets." "Special Western Feature." "A Slight Interruption." "Next Picture in a Moment." "A Special Program Tomorrow. Don't Miss It." "Welcome."

AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO., First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Calendar of Quality Releases

A PROGRAM OF QUALITY

For Your

PROGRAM HEADLINERS

BIOGRAPH -- KLAW & ERLANGER

Three Reel Productions

For Each Tuesday

THE TWO REEL BIOGRAPH

For Each

Monday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday

A ONE REEL BIOGRAPH

BIOGRAPH QUALITY

Calendar of Independent Releases

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1914.

KOMIC—Bill Saves the Day (No. 4 of the "Bill" Series—Comedy)
MAJESTIC—Her Mother's Necklace (Two parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—Her Big Brother (Drama)

MONDAY, AUGUST 17, 1914.

AMERICAN—False Gods (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—That Minstrel Man (Comedy)
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 31 (News)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Silence of John Gordon (Drama)
MAJESTIC—The Inner Conscience (Drama)
THANHOUSER—McCarn Plays Fate (Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1914.

AMERICAN—Their Worldly Goods (Drama)
BRONCHO—The Robbery at Pine River (Two parts—Drama)
RELIANCE—Izzy Gets the Wrong Bottle (Comedy)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 20, 1914.

DOMINO—The Defaulter (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—Those Country Kids (Comedy)
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 86 (News)

FRIDAY, AUGUST 21, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Winning of Denise (Two parts—Drama)
MAJESTIC—A Lesson in Mechanics (Drama)
PRINCESS—The Belle of the School (Comedy-Drama)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 22, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Not yet announced)
RELIANCE—For the Last Edition (Two parts—Drama)
ROYAL—His Long Lost Friend (Comedy)

SUNDAY, AUGUST 23, 1914.

KOMIC—A Physical Culture Romance (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Second Mrs. Roebuck (Two parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—A Dog's Good Deed (Drama)

MONDAY, AUGUST 24, 1914.

AMERICAN—This Is th' Life (Two parts—Comedy)
KEYSTONE—(Title not yet announced)
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 32 (News)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1914.

BEAUTY—Susie's New Shoes (Comedy-Drama)
GAUMONT—(Title not yet announced)
MAJESTIC—Granny (Drama)
THANHOUSER—Conscience (Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1914.

AMERICAN—Lodging for the Night (Drama)
BRONCHO—The Sheriff's Sister (Two parts—Drama)
RELIANCE—The Stolen Ore (Drama)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1914.

DOMINO—The Village 'Neath the Sea (Two parts—Drama)
GAUMONT—(Title not yet announced)
KEYSTONE—(Title not yet announced)
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 87 (News)

FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Song of the Sea Shell (Drama)
KAY-BEE—The Old Love's Best (Two parts—Drama)
PRINCESS—The Keeper of the Light (Drama)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 29, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title not yet announced)
RELIANCE—Through the Dark (Two parts—Drama)
ROYAL—A Run for His Money (Comedy)

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 16, 1914.

ECLAIR—A Pearl of Great Price (Society-Drama)
FRONTIER—Memories of Years Ago (Drama)
REX—The Hedge Between (Drama)

MONDAY, AUGUST 17, 1914.

IMP—Love's Refrain (Drama)
STERLING—His Wife's Flirtation (Comedy)
—Close to Nature (Educational)
VICTOR—Weights and Measures (Two parts—Political-Drama)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1914.

CRYSTAL—Vivian's Best Fellow (Comedy)
GOLD SEAL—The Trey o' Hearts, Series No. 3 (The Sea Venture) (Two parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike, Jr., on His Honeymoon (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1914.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 128 (News)
ECLAIR—Bransford in Arcadia (Three parts—Western-Drama)
JOKER—Pass Key, No. 2 (Comedy)
NESTOR—The Creeping Flame (Western-Drama)
—Strange Friends (Educational)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 20, 1914.

IMP—On the High Seas (Two parts—Drama)
REX—A Bowl of Roses (Drama)
STERLING—Lost in the Studio (Juvenile-Comedy)

FRIDAY, AUGUST 21, 1914.

NESTOR—A Lucky Deception (Two parts—Comedy)
POWERS—The Divorcee (Drama)
VICTOR—The Slavey's Romance (Drama)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 22, 1914.

"101" BISON—The Lure of the Geisha (Two parts—Drama)
JOKER—The Diamond Nippers (Comedy)

SUNDAY, AUGUST 23, 1914.

ECLAIR—The Miracle (Drama)
FRONTIER—The Strange Signal (Drama)
REX—The Hole in the Garden Wall (Drama)

MONDAY, AUGUST 24, 1914.

IMP—Jim Webb, Senator (Three parts—Drama)
STERLING—A Rural Affair (Juvenile—Comedy)
VICTOR—There Is a Destiny (Drama)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1914.

CRYSTAL—Barreled (Comedy)
—Bashful Ben (Comedy)
GOLD SEAL—The Trey o' Hearts, Series No. 4 (Dead Reckoning) (Two parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike at the Dance of Little L. O. (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1914.

ANIMATED WEEKLY—Number 129 (News)
ECLAIR—The Character Woman (Two parts—Drama)
JOKER—The Little Automogobile (Comedy)
NESTOR—A Miner's Romance (Western—Drama)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1914.

IMP—Universal Boy in the Chinese Mystery (Juvenile—Drama)
REX—For the Secret Service (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—Snookee's Disguise (Comedy)

FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1914.

NESTOR—For Love or Money (Comedy)
POWERS—This Is the Life (Comedy)
VICTOR—Counterfeiters (Two parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 29, 1914.

"101" BISON—Law of the Lumberjack (Two parts—Drama)
JOKER—Well! Well! (Comedy)

There's a Simplex Reason

WHY.—We want the exhibitor and operator to get full value for their money and purchase their Simplex projector at regular prices, less the usual five per cent. discount for cash.

WHY.—The Simplex projectors are fireproof, silent in operation, simple to thread and operate, and project rock-steady and flickerless pictures at a low cost of upkeep.

WHY.—The largest theatres in the world and 90% of the photoplay manufacturers everywhere who want the last word in projecting machines use the Simplex.

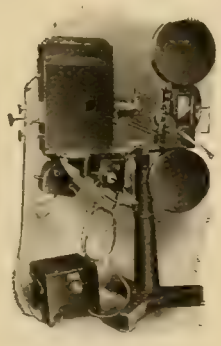
WHY.—You should have in your possession a copy of our new catalogue "A," whether you contemplate the purchase of a machine, or now own one.

BECAUSE. We want our dealers to be honest and reliable and to carry machines and accessories in stock, and give purchasers prompt and courteous service.

BECAUSE. The materials and workmanship are of the highest grade. The design is built on sound mechanical principles and the parts carefully fitted; the gears are spiral cut and ground in; and, lastly, the intermittent movement is unexcelled.

BECAUSE. The patrons who pay high prices of admission demand perfect projection, with no delays or breakdowns. Photoplay manufacturers must know that their films are steady before shipping.

BECAUSE. It is the most complete machine catalogue ever published and explains in detail the making and operation of the peerless Simplex, and conveys to the reader an idea of the vast amount of high grade machinery which we have.



A card or letter brings you this new Catalogue "A"

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St. New York

MONTREAL.

THE Paul J. Rainey African Hunt films opened in Montreal at the Princess theater on July 27, and were shown for two weeks. Three performances were given daily, and Mr. Wonn, of New York, gave explanatory lectures.

The Alexander Theater, St. Denis Boulevard, will be closed during the early part of August, pending extensive alterations. Mr. Eddy, the manager, intends to increase the seating capacity of this North End house.

Mary Pickford in "The Eagle's Mate," was the feature for three days at the Strand theater, beginning July 27. Miss Pickford has a large following in Montreal, and programmes including "Little Mary" are always sure of attracting large crowds.

Mr. McBrien, manager of the Midway, recently offered his patrons the five-part Lasky feature, "The Only Son." Mr. McBrien is doing good business, considering that the hot weather is forcing Montrealers to seek the open-air amusement parks.

The family theater is doing good business. The recent chilly spell of weather packed the house to the doors. Mr. West, the manager, is partial to serials. "The Million Dollar Mystery" and the "The Trey o' Hearts" are booked at this house. The last installment of "Lucille Love" was shown last week.

The Montreal Amusement Company is being formed for the erection of a high-class vaudeville and moving picture theater in St. Catherine street west. The shares are being offered at the present writing—fifty thousand shares of the value of ten dollars each. Of these, thirty thousand are in common stock, while the remaining twenty thousand are seven per cent. cumulative stock. The prospectus which has just been issued, estimates a net profit each year of over $88,000. This is on the basis of a daily income of a $1,060, which the promoters believe to be a conservative estimate.

The company has a thirty-year lease on the site, which is the property of the Stephen estate. The plans call for a theater seating 2,500. In addition to the income derived from the theater itself, there will be an income from the adjoining block of stores and from four other stores, which will stand two on either side of the new structure, while above there will be over forty offices for renting at the figures which prevail on St. Catherine street. The corner of St. Catherine and Peel streets has been rented for a number of years at six dollars a square foot. The site of the new theater, which is about five hundred feet west of this corner, has been leased for the next five years for only two dollars a square foot.

The management intends to put on three performances a day. The scale of prices will be from ten cents to twenty-five cents, and the aim of the management will be to provide performances of a very high grade while keeping the price of admission at a minimum. Each performance will consist of four vaudeville acts and from two to four reels of photoplays. The location of the new house on St. Catherine street, between Drummond and Mountain streets, will place it within easy reach of the business centre, the residential district at the west of the city, and Westmount, while it will be quite accessible to Point St. Charles, St. Cunegonde and St. Henry.

The enterprise is in the hands of Maurice Wolff, who is already well known in the amusement world, having been the former promoter and proprietor of Wolff's Park, Detroit, now known as Riverview Park, and recognized as one of the amusement successes of the Michigan metropolis. With Mr. Wolff will be associated representative citizens of Montreal and men experienced in the management of amusement enterprises.

GALLAGHER.

BRIDGEPORT.

TWENTY motion picture theaters in Bridgeport have raised their admission price to 10 cents since the organization of the Bridgeport Motion Picture Theater Managers' Association was formed. With two exceptions all the big theaters now charge 10 cents. Peter Dawe, who owns the Palace and the Bijou theaters, has made the admission price for matinees and nights 10 cents on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays. On these days his program comprises first run feature films with a five run program. On other days the price is 5 cents.

Another meeting of the Managers association has been called for August 4 at the Imperial theatre in Stratford avenue, when a plan will be discussed to bring about the organization of managers in New Haven, Hartford, Waterbury, Meriden, Norwich, New London, Norwalk and Stamford. The purpose is to secure representation in the lobby at Hartford during the next session of the General Assembly to procure some changes in the laws regarding the admission of minors to picture shows and to watch for and try to prevent legislation considered harmful and hampering to the business.

Although motion picture shows are permitted on Sundays in Waterbury and New Britain, Bridgeport managers have agreed that they will not attempt to secure legislation to allow them to show on Sunday in the Park City. An attempt will be made to discountenance newspaper stories concerning the business which are considered untrue and harmful. An effort will also be made to make a general admission price of 10 cents all over the state.

The prevalence of cold and rainy weather has compelled the temporary closing for a few days of the Star Garden in State street, and the After Hour theater in Broad street, two aerodromes.

Caroline Leighton is having plans made for a theatre at East Main and Jane streets. It will be of white brick and terra cotta with a gallery and a seating capacity of 1,150. It will cost $12,500 and promises to be the finest motion picture theater in the city.

The Star theater in Hartford has been acquired by the Atlas Theaters Company of New York City and it is closed for repairs. The theater was finished this spring. It will be reopened about August 1 and will be renamed The Atlas.

BOOTH.

LOUISVILLE.

BUSINESS continues good with the Louisville exhibitors for the season and few complaints are now being heard. During the latter part of June and the early part of July the weather was almost unbearable, but this condition has changed for the better. Very little comedy is being shown at any of the houses at this time. There are two reasons for the lack of comedy pictures, one of which is that good comedy is very scarce, and the other is that the public prefers poor features to poor comedy.

The Central Feature Film Company has completed its moving and is now installed in the Walker building at Fifth and Market streets.

The Novelty Film Company is getting things in shape to handle some good commercial service in Louisville and out through the state. A quantity of good material formerly used has been secured. This lot of reels is five or six years old, and have been forgotten in this district. The reels are all of the single reel type, and are just the thing for fourth or fifth reel subjects. The commercial service will not be started for some time yet, as the reels are to be gone over thoroughly and inspcted before being sent out.

The decorating at the Majestic theater is about completed and the theater will probably be completed this week. While the scaffolding was up it was impossible to seat the crowds, and the business suffered to some extent.

The Star theater, at Fourth and Jefferson streets, has reduced its admission to five cents as trade is being found rather light on the block.

Business at the Novelty theater has picked up a good deal during the past ten days, and the prospect is for a very good fall patronage.

The work on the new Fourth Avenue Amusement Company's building is coming along rapidly and the roof will be laid within the next two weeks. Tearing out the old building was a larger job than anticipated, and the work has been a little slow in its early stages.

R. S. Shrader, former manager of the Louisville branch of the Central Film Service Company, was in Louisville during the past week, calling on the exhibitors in the interests of the World's Film Corporation, of Indianapolis.

J. J. Hebbert, manager of the local office of the Warner Feature Film Company, leaves this week for a trip down through the Western part of the state. S. B. Kramer, from the Indianapolis office, has returned after a week's visit to the city.

D. Levenson, manager of the Novelty Theater Company, has returned from a two weeks' vacation trip spent at Elkmont, Tenn. He said that he recommends Elkmont to any one who is looking for a real rest. The air is pure and the scenery is wild and rugged.

The Star Amusement Company recently sent out some very attractive formal invitations to attend the shows given at the new theater. Two tickets accompanied each of the invitations, which were gotten up in a very attractive manner, and brought out the strong points in the theater, such as perfect ventilation, polite attendants and a Hungarian orchestra.

The S. & P. Film Supply Company filed articles of incorporation recently in which the capital stock of the concern was listed at $1,500, divided into 100 shares of $15 each. The incorporators are C. A. Pressy, F. M. Sheldon and R. H. Lucas.

Amended articles of incorporation have been filed by the Broadway Theater Company. The capital stock is given as $70,000, divided into 7,000 shares of $10 each. The incorporators are Louis F. Steurle, D. H. Long, E. W. Klapheke and Joseph L. Steurle. Additional capital was needed for building and operating the new theater which is being erected at Shelby and Broadway.

A contract has been let for building a new $20,000 moving picture theater at Frankfort and Pope streets. The incorporators are G. S. Walfiort, J. T. Botts and F. D. Stoll. The stockholders include a number of business men of Clifton and Crescent Hill. The new theater will have a seating capacity of 1,500 and is to be in operation within ninety days.

The Kerrigan theater, of New Albany, Ind., is running a number of pictures manufactured by the M. & C. Film Company, of Straws Mill, Ind., and Louisville, Ky. On Monday, Aug. 3, three subjects were shown, which included "Breaking Into Jail," a comedy; "Moonshine Molly," a drama; and "The Interrupted Wedding," a feature. The picture took nicely and the house was packed, as the pictures were made only a few miles from the theater.

The Mary Anderson theater, which for a number of years was known as the Keith theater, has reopened after being closed for several months for repairs and redecorations. Feature photoplays are to be shown and the start was made with the Vitagraph feature, "Shadows of the Past," which enjoyed a good run in New York. Several Keystone comedies will be shown in addition to the feature, which will be run for six days.

The Louisville News, a weekly newspaper, owned and published by negroes, is very bitter against the Mary Anderson theater, which allows negroes in the gallery only. To reach the gallery it is necessary to go to the alley entrance, and the colored brethren are much put out because they are not allowed to go through the main lobby with the white folks. The News strongly indorsed the National theater last season because it was not necessary to go into the alley to reach the roost, and the News is starting another campaign this season for the National, which is now under the same management as the Mary Anderson. It appears that the ill feeling is not against the management, but against "those alley stairs." It is pointed out that the Anderson was the first theater in Louisville to establish an alley entrance and "Negroes in the gallery only" and in a recent article the News said: "No self-respecting, race-loving colored man or woman will patronize the Mary Anderson."

The new opera house at Barlow, Ky., has been completed and was opened the first of this week. The management has made arrangements to show some excellent programs.

Eradley Brothers, who for some time have been building a new picture house at Warsaw, Ky., report that the work is nearly finished and the house will be ready to open shortly.

The White Theater Company, of Scottsville, Ky., recently installed a new $800 electric piano in its house. A number of electric fans have been installed and the house is being kept at a comfortable temperature. Children under ten years of age are admitted for five cents.

Work on a new theater for Dan Norton, of Ashland, Ky., will start immediately. The brick has arrived and a crew of bricklayers will hurry up the work. The new theater will be on Winchester avenue.

R. S. Bingham, of Pineville, Ky., has opened a new motion picture house in the Taylor & Lewis block on Pine street. Two exhibitions will be run daily, the first from 2 o'clock until 4 o'clock and the second show from 7 o'clock until 10.

The old Assembly Church building, in Harrisburg, Ky., has been leased for a term of years by the Colonial Amusement Company, of Harrisburg, and the fine old building will be fitted up with a gallery and converted into a picture house. J. Pie Williams is manager of the new concern, which was formed by a combination of the Melba Company, William Fisher and Curry Marksbury. It certainly is going some when motion pictures become so popular that churches are converted into motion picture houses, although there have been numerous cases where school buildings were so converted.

Arthur Mitchell, the popular manager of the Dixie theater, of Russellville, Ky., is striving hard to give his patrons the best to be had in the moving picture line. He recently ran the "Adventures of Kathleen" in his new house. This house has been fitted up with electrical fans and made commodious in every way. The last installment was a seven-piece orchestra which furnishes music on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. The orchestra has become very popular and the house has been packed on the musical nights. It is more than probable that its use will be continued.

Bound Volume No. 20

APRIL TO JUNE, 1914

Now ready for delivery. Price $1.50

Expressage or postage extra

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
17 Madison Avenue, New York City

LICENSED FILM STORIES

BIOGRAPH.

THE CONDEMNING HAND (August 10).—The criminal who, under promise of immunity, refuses to betray his accomplices may inspire in us something akin to respect, but there is no doubt of our unbounded admiration when he takes the blame of the crime for which his mother is accused and of which both are innocent.

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S BURGLAR (August 15).—To yield to impulse is essentially human and when the district attorney's wife found herself in a heart-stilling situation the noble sacrifice of one seemingly base saved her for the time, but then, a circumstance over which neither had control righted matters and all were the better for the experience.

THE SMUGGLER'S WIFE (August 20).—The impending fall of the husband drives the wife to desperation and she resorts to measures which he construes as treachery born of vengeance, but in time he comes to learn that she was actuated by motives of deepest loyalty.

THE GIPSY TALISMAN (August 22).—To retaliate upon those who wrong us does not always satisfy though, 'tis said, "vengeance is sweet." But what must be the emotion of one who fancies that he has crushed his victim only to find that after all he has been thwarted.

EDISON.

NEARLY A WIDOW (August 24).—When Mrs. Briggs ordered a very beautiful gown for herself, she did so in the firm belief that her husband would pay for it promptly, and without demur. However, Mr. Briggs was in a rather unpleasant mood, as a result of which he positively refused to pay a cent for the gown.

Mrs. Briggs flatly told her husband that she would go home to her mother if he didn't pay for it. Mr. Briggs, unwilling to back down from his position, told her to go ahead. So Mrs. Briggs went. At least, she went as far as the station. When she got there, she changed her mind, decided that her husband was a poor, abused angel, and started home again.

Meanwhile, Mr. Briggs had come to the conclusion that he was a brute, and that there was no reason why his poor little wife shouldn't have the gown if she wanted it. So he rushed to the station to head her off. He got there just in time to see his wife's train pulling out. So he sadly retraced his steps.

Mrs. Briggs was already home. When she heard him coming, she hid herself. Mr. Briggs discovered her suit case, and realized she had returned. At once,an idea suggested itself to him. He wrote a note to the affect that his wife's extravagance had driven him to the awful deed he was contemplating, and shut himself up in his room with a revolver. Shortly afterward, he fired off the revolver.

Mrs. Briggs' pushed in vain at the locked door. Finally it occurred to her to look over the transom. When, instead of a ghastly corpse, she saw her husband sitting up and laughing.

A little while later, Mr. Briggs, considering that he had taught his erring wife enough of a lesson, came out. His wife was not there, but there was a note on the hall table which read.

"Dear Hubby: I have gone to buy that dress to wear at your funeral."

THE MYSTERY OF THE OCTAGONAL ROOM (Tenth Installment of the Chronicles of Cleek—August 25).—Cleek and Narkom were spending a pleasant vacation on a houseboat in the Thames, when they were called to solve a curious case in the home of Squire Shadbolt. Dollops, Cleek's assistant, ashore one day to buy supplies for the houseboat, heard that Mrs. Shadbolt had mysteriously disappeared. He at once told Cleek, and Cleek and Narkom set out for the Shadbolt home to investigate.

When they arrived there, Cleek discovered the body of Maurice Ward, a solicitor, and personal friend of Mrs. Shadbolt, behind one of the panels in the Octagonal Room in the Shadbolt Mansion. It was hard to tell how Shadbolt had met his death, but Cleek discovered some infinitesimal pricks in the skin of one of his hands. When, shortly afterward, he discovered Mrs. Shadbolt insensible beneath a bank of flowers in the chapel he was able to solve the mystery.

Sartoli, the Shadbolts' Japanese butler, was the agent of a band of criminals engaged in stealing valuable articles from the homes of wealthy people, and substituting imitations in their place. Mrs. Shadbolt discovered his scheme, and called in Maurice Ward. The butler murdered Ward by means of a bunch of roses with poisoned thorns, and attempted to remove Mrs. Shadbolt by poisoning the bill of her pet parrot. Luckily, Mrs. Shadbolt recovered, and by means of her evidence, Cleek was able to lay his hands on the whole gang.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN MINES (August 26).—Johannesburg, the metropolis of South Africa, a progressive city of about the same size as Denver, is the center of the gold mining industry. In its vicinity are the celebrated Rand mines which annually produce more gold than any other group of mines in the world.

Views are shown of the more important mines in this group—The Joch, the Robinson Deep, and the Meyer and Charlton. In the latter mine, the gold-bearing rock is mined at a depth of 3,000 feet, brought to the surface and crushed by rotating tubes, or in the Stamp Mill. The crushed ore is dumped into the cyanide tanks. The cyanide solution dissolves the gold from the rock, and the gold is recovered from the cyanide solution by a simple reduction with heat.

The principal diamond mines are situated near Kimberley and Pretoria. Of all of them, the Kimberley mine is the most famous. The diamonds are found in a sort of volcanic mud, known as "Blue Earth." This is removed from the mine, and dumped on fields known as "The Floors" which are surrounded by an intricate system of barbed wire fences. The "Blue Earth" is allowed to weather here for a year. After it has been thoroughly broken up by the action of the elements, it is removed to the washing plant, where its soluble portions are removed by water. The remaining insoluble "diamond mud" is sent to the pulsator, an interesting series of revolving greased tables. These greased tables catch the diamonds, while all other matter is removed by gentle streams of water.

After a number of interesting views of life in the miners' compound, a portion of a day's output of diamonds, valued at $55,000, is shown.

BUSTER AND HIS GOAT (August 26).—One of Mrs. Brown's neighbors brought her little son over to call one day, and Mrs. Brown sent the child out to play with Buster. Buster immediately conceived the idea of letting the child ride his goat.

As an impressive feature of the occasion, Buster purchased false beards with which he disguised the features of his playmates. The goat was brought on, and the child safely mounted on its back. Tige did not care very much about the goat. In fact, he cared less than nothing for it. As a result, there was a good deal of unpleasantness, before the party was finally straightened out.

When Buster and his companions entered Mrs. Brown's parlor with the goat, complications immediately ensued. The goat, catching sight of Buster's beard for the first time, was properly startled. On the impulse of the moment, he butted Buster out of the window.

An indistinguishable mixture of children, goat and dog, resulted when Tige took a hand in the affair, which speedily grew to the proportions of a small riot, when the situation was solved by shutting the goat out of the yard.

THE BIRTH OF THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER (Special Two Parts—August 28).—It was just one hundred years ago that the national anthem of the United States came into existence. In this film we have attempted to present the dramatic events which led to its creation, in a realistic and accurate manner.

When the combined military and naval forces of the British were threatening Washington during the fall of 1814, President Madison, fearing for the safety of the Declaration of Independence, sent it, in the care of Captain Potter, his aide, to the commandant of Fort McHenry at Baltimore.

On his way to Baltimore, Potter stopped at the house of Dr. Beanes. While they were at dinner, a British reconnoitering party, consisting of General Ross and his aides, invested the house. Potter and Helen Beanes took refuge behind a secret panel in the dining room. From this position, Potter heard General Ross say that Baltimore would be attacked by land and sea within two days.

To save Dr. Beanes from torture when the Captain's hat was discovered, Potter jumped from his hiding place, and, after holding the British officers at the point of his pistol, escaped. Dr. Beanes was taken aboard the British cartel ship, while Potter delivered his mission and warning of the British attack to the commandant of Fort McHenry.

Helen Beanes appealed to President Madison to help her father, and the President sent one of his aides, and a certain Francis Scott Key to interview Admiral Cockburn. Admiral Cockburn agreed to release the doctor, but insisted that both Americans should remain aboard the cartel ship "Minden" until the forthcoming battle was over.

So Key was forced to watch the long bombardment of Fort McHenry through out the long night.

The rocket- red glare,
The bombs bursting in air
Gave proof through the night
That our flag was still there."

But towards morning, the fire of the fort slackened, and Key feared it had surrendered. His feelings, when the first rays of the sun fell on the fluttering flag are embodied in the great song he wrote for his country.

TREASURE TROVE (August 29).—When Bob and Frank went down to the beach to spend their summer vacation, and met Colonel Fairfield's two daughters, they both felt very sorry that they were not rich. For the Colonel, although in all respects a very fine man, had too much regard for his daughter's future welfare to allow him even to countenance the idea of giving either of them to a man not properly able to support them.

Since the Colonel was a man who always believed in saying exactly what he thought, he made no bones about telling the young man exactly where they stood.

The next evening, as Bob and Frank were sitting by their camp fire, they saw a small sloop with an old man at the wheel, plunging heavily in the breakers, a few hundred yards from shore. They signalled to him to come in, but he refused with a shake of the head. The next morning, there was no sign of the sloop, but there was wreckage on the beach, and in it the boys found a paper written in Spanish.

They submitted this paper to a Cuban beach comber, named Mendez. He read a portion of it aloud, and then stopped, claiming that he could not understand it. Luckily, one of the Fairfield girls could read Spanish. They showed the paper to her, and to their astonishment discovered that it revealed the location of treasure buried some distance down the beach.

For the excitement of the thing, the young people went to the given location and started digging. After a time, they unearthed a chest. Just as they discovered that it was filled with gold pieces, Mendez and a couple of villainous compatriots appeared in a launch.

The Cuban and his companions were armed, and after a useless attempt at flight, there seemed nothing left to do but surrender the treasure.

But fortunately, just at this moment, Colonel Fairfield came on the scene in a powerful steam launch and Mendez fled. The Colonel was at first very angry, but the sight of the treasure caused him to modify his wrath, and somewhat change his attitude toward the young men.

ESSANAY.

SWEEDIE SPRINGS A SURPRISE (August 24th).—Sweedie, the cook at the Prim household, is a little too rough to suit Mr. Prim, who is about three feet shorter than herself. He decides to discharge her, but finds it rather difficult. After being handled like a rag doll, he goes to his friend for help and is overjoyed when told he might have their maid, as they are leaving for the country that evening. When Mr. Prim sees the maid, he is delighted. She is smaller than himself. After hiring a taxi and buying her flowers and candy, he takes her to his home where, to his dismay, Sweedie greets her with open arms, exclaiming "A bane sister." Sweedie has found her long lost sister and they walk out arm in arm, leaving Mrs. Prim to do the cooking.

TWO MEN WHO WAITED (August 25th).—Marian a country girl, has grown up with Jim from childhood and he loves her dearly. She has never seen the city and longs for a chance to view the "Great white way." One day she reads in the newspaper of an opportunity for a young girl to go on the stage, so decides to leave Jim and the country life and go to the city. In the city she meets a fine looking chap at the boking agency, who is extremely kind to her. One night he persuades her to accompany him to a cafe. Then comes the awakening. She breaks away, and leaving the city to go on with its merciless traffic in women's souls, she returns to Jim, who is awaiting her with open arms.

THE FABLE OF THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN LEARNING AND LEARNING HOW (August 26).—Brad and Ote, two brothers, get the knowledge bug and enter college. Ote studies his lessons and is given a medal. Brad gets the Can tied to him. After telling the president where to get off, Brad beats it without a Jitney in his Jeans. He soon lands a sucker and proves that there is "Somebody home," even if he can't get a diploma. At the the end of twenty years, Ote is made a college professor, at about 25 per. Brad is a millionaire. The college gets hard up and the President appeals to Brad for some coin. Brad comes across with $50,000, for which he is given four degrees. Ote was lucky to get one degree and become a "Professor." Moral: Anybody with sufficient coin can be a renowned leader of thought.

SLIPPERY SLIM AND THE FORTUNE TELLER (August 27).—Slim and Mustang are rivals for the hand of Sophie, and when Mustang persuades her to go for a buggy ride,

Slim is mad with jealousy. Slim goes to a fortune teller for advice and a happy thought strikes him as he is about to leave. He gets the fortune teller to induce Mustang to have his fortune told. Slim then hides under the table and tips her off as to what to tell his rival. She tells Mustang that Sophie has poisoned four men, and that he is to be the fifth victim. From that time on Mustang avoids Sophie as he would poison, and the way is made clear for Slippery Slim.

SEVEN SEALED ORDERS (Two Parts—August 28).—Joseph Keene, partner in the firm of Carson & Keene, accepts a mysterious commission of $20,000. With this commission he receives seven sealed orders which he has to follow. The first order is, "Go to the 12th St. Station"; the second, "Take train to Scarburg, Ill."; the third, "Rent room on south side, Central Hotel"; the fourth, "If unable to get this room, buy hotel"; the fifth, "If further money is received, buy adjoining property"; the sixth, "Put guard on room"; and the seventh is to put in bank unopened.

Keene attempts to follow all of these orders, but the seventh order is stolen from the bank. Regan, the former hotel owner, gets possession of this and decides that the old story of the hidden treasure under room No. 3 may be true after all, so buys the adjoining property and refuses to sell it to Keene. He and his pal, Moss, then dig a tunnel from his property under room No. 3 and are caught by Keene and the occupants of his hotel, just as they are entering the basement. Among the guests at the hotel is a Hindoo, whose presence is a mystery to all. He is one of Keene's aides and now steps forward and from a hole extracts a huge diamond. The gem had been stolen from him years before by Moss's brother. He died shortly after and carried the secret hiding place to the grave with him. It is now clear to Keene; he has been working under the orders of this Hindoo, who turns out to be a Rajah of India.

BRONCHO BILLY'S INDIAN ROMANCE (August 29).—Broncho Billy is jilted by the girl he loves and goes up into the mountains with his friend to prospect for gold. His friend is very ill and asks for her constantly. In the meantime, Broncho has saved an Indian maiden from being sold to a chief whom she dislikes. She is very grateful and later falls in love with her rescuer. One day, as she is about to give him a navajo blanket, his sweetheart appears, and the maiden realizes her love for Broncho is hopeless. She is about to stab herself when spied by the disliked chief, who prevents her from doing so. She then realizes that she must mate with her own race, and consents to follow as the chief leads her away.

KALEM.

THE COUNTERFEITER'S PLOT (August 25).—Bruno, leader of a band of counterfeiters, tires of the love lavished upon him by Rosario, a member of the gang. Believing he loves another, the woman becomes insanely jealous.

The counterfeiter meets Ivy, daughter of the village blacksmith. Jack, employed by Ivy's father, is deeply in love with the girl. The boy perceives that his sweetheart has been fascinated by Bruno. Later, he finds a note dropped by Ivy, in which Bruno requests her to meet him that evening.

Crouched in the underbrush that night, Jack sees his sweetheart in Bruno's arms. A rustle in the underbrush attracts Jack's attention, and he comes upon Rosario, who, filled with jealous rage, is watching Bruno.

A desire for revenge prompts the woman to inform Jack of the man's counterfeiting activities. The two plan to bring Bruno to justice. Early next morning, the United States marshal appears in the village in response to Jack's telegram. Several detectives come with him.

Bruno arrives at the spot where he is to meet Ivy, and is seized by the Government detectives. A member of the counterfeiting gang sees the arrest and hastens to warn the outlaws. When the officials arrive shortly afterwards, they find the counterfeiters prepared. A stirring fight ensues. The gang is finally captured when the detectives storm the building.

The scales fall from Ivy's eyes when Bruno's true character is revealed. Filled with joy because of her narrow escape, Ivy begs Jack for forgiveness.

THE CAVE OF DEATH (Two Parts—August 26).—Unca falls in love with Deering. Choco, a brave, is filled with rage upon learning the state of affairs. Later, Deering rescues Downing, Brown and Edna just as the three are about to perish of thirst. Unca becomes intensely jealous when she sees that Deering and Edna have fallen in love with each other.

Brown and Downing visit the Indian village and sell them whiskey; the traders defraud them in a trading transaction. Returning to camp, the unscrupulous men knock Deering unconscious and rob him. The two compel Edna to accompany them in their flight.

When the effect of the whiskey has worn off, the Indians realize they have been cheated. Descending upon Deering's camp, they make him a prisoner. Choco is left to guard him while the rest pursue Brown and Downing. In their effort to escape, the men abandon Edna. Their efforts to get away go for naught and they are captured and slain.

In his hatred, Choco attempts to burn out Deering's eyes. Unca discovers the man's peril and rescues him by stunning the red fiend. The girl conducts Deering to a cave in the hillside were she bids him hide. Choco recovers and tracking his foe to the cave crouches above the entrance, knife drawn, ready to slay the white man the moment he ventures forth.

Unca, perceiving Choco's plot, creeps to a spot above him and dazes him with a heavy stone. Deering rushes out in time to see the red fiend stab Unca. The prospector slays the man. Unca, concealing from Deering the knowledge that her wound is mortal, guides him to the spot where Edna has sought shelter. With a painful smile, Unca watches the lovers embrace. A gasp causes Deering and Edna to turn. Unca falls to the ground, dead.

WHEN MEN WEAR SKIRTS (August 28).—Freddie, a beautiful young manicurist, finds it hard to secure work. While in the park one afternoon, the poor man is insulted by Fannie, a bold, bad adventuress. Freddie is quite distressed until Billee, a barber, comes to his rescue.

Billee knocks the adventuress into the lake, after which she accompanies Freddie home. The man's heart flutters as he bashfully thanks his noble protectress.

The saucy manicurist employed in Billee's shop throws up his job. Freddie lands the position. Billie spends so much time admiring the beautiful man that she grows quite careless as to where she smears the lather, or how she shaves her victims.

Fannie discovers Freddie's whereabouts. Determined to make him hers, she hires a gang of gunwomen to kidnap the manicurist. It happens that Freddie is taken ill. His brother Percival, fair, fat and forty, takes his place. Unaware of the change, the kidnappers throw a bag over Percival's head and carry him to a minister's house, where Fannie awaits him.

Discovering the kidnappers' mistake, Billee hastens to Freddie's home and tells the object of her love of what has transpired. After ardent persuasion, the barber induces Freddie to accompany her to the ministress's home.

They arrive just as Fannie and Percival are made wife and man. At the sight of Freddie, Fannie starts back in amazement. Raising the bag from her husband's head, she takes one glance at Percival's awful face and collapses.

THE CAR OF DEATH (August 29).—Deeming Kate of too frivolous a disposition, the Hopeville School Committee, headed by Rev. Haskins, request the girl's resignation as teacher of the village school. Fond of her work and loving her little charges, Kate feels keenly the action of the narrow-minded members of the committee.

Kate plans to attend the outing of the Hopeville Sunday School. The attitude of the people in charge is so plainly hostile, that the girl decides to stay home. Filled with bitterness, Kate imparts her grievances to her sweetheart, Ira, who is employed as a lineman. While the two are conversing, Adams, the station agent informs Ira that a break in the telegraph wires down the line demands immediate attention.

While Ira searches for the break, the picnic train carrying the children of the Sunday School leaves Hopeville. A dynamite car breaks loose from a freight train and runs wild. Ira sees the death car rushing to meet the picnic train. Cutting in on the line, he wires Adams to sidetrack the runaway.

Terrified, Adams endeavors to reach the switch in time. Old and stiff, the man realizes he cannot make the switch, which is some distance down the track. Calling Kate, he apprises her of the situation. With the speed of a deer, the girl runs down the track and pulls the switch lever, sending the runaway along a sidetrack just as the picnic train flashes by.

The dynamite car is derailed and a terrific explosion ensues. The picnic train comes to a halt and the members of the school committee rush to learn the cause of the explosion. Adams tells them of Kate's bravery.

Filled with gratitude the men beg Kate to return to her old position. The girl is about to accept when Ira arrives and interposes an objection. According to the lineman, Kate is about to assume more important duties—she is to become his wife.

LUBIN.

THE WIDOW AND THE TWINS (August 25).—Dick and Bob Kirby are twins. Dick, who lives in the east, is a reckless spendthrift and owes everybody. Bob, a mine owner of steady habits, resides in the west. Dick is engaged to Diana Jordon, a wealthy widow, but hears that her property will all revert to other heirs if she remarries. They quarrel. The widow declares the engagement off and demands the return of her letters. Dick endeavors to obtain the letters from his desk but is prevented by a swarm of creditors, who take possession on "dull nights" has been declared! As captains of the Film Industry (in our territory) and advocates of "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men," we call your attention to the fact that is approaching—Fall days are coming around and you should get your open dates filled with the following

WAR

HARVEST TIME

MONEY GETTERS

VICTORY
5 Parts

SEALED ORDERS
7 Parts

BATTLE OF WATERLOO
5 Parts

NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER
8 Parts

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS
5 Parts

BANKER'S DAUGHTER
5 Parts

THREE MUSKETEERS
6 Parts

LOVE EVERLASTING
6 Parts

CELEBRATED PLAYERS NIGHTS are in vogue!

Celebrated Players Film Company
Leaders in Filmdom's Progress
64 W. Randolph St.
CHICAGO

of the place. Dick, becoming desperate, draws on his brother for ten thousand dollars and sails for South America. Bob comes east to straighten his brother's affairs and meets the widow. She mistakes him for Dick, so do an army of bill collectors. They give him a lively chase, until he is able to establish his identity. The widow becomes interested and finally transfers her affection to Bob and turns Dick's photo to the wall.

THE LUCKY RUBE (August 25).—Si Smith and his wife are peacefully pursuing their agricultural occupation when a crook who is stopping at the village hotel, passes in a touring car and marks them for victims. He leaves his car and pretends to hunt something in the road. The farmer's curiosity is aroused and he and his wife both assist in the search for a valuable diamond ring the crook tells them that he has lost. Failing to find it, the crook leaves his name and address and an offer of two hundred and fifty dollars reward if the ring is returned. The rubes dig up the roadbed before they abandon the search and in the meantime the crook returns to the hotel, disguises himself as a tramp, returns to the truck patch and finds the ring, taking care that the farmer sees him pick it up. The farmer offers him fifty dollars for the ring, which the tramp accepts. The rube hustles into the village to dispose of the ring and is stunned when the jeweler tells him it is glass. To avoid telling his wife he has been buncoed the farmer draws some money from the bank. When he shows it to his wife she proposes taking a long deferred trip to the city. The farmer reluctantly agrees to this, and after looking about the town they sit in a public park to enjoy the doughnuts and ginger bread they brought from the farm. While thus engaged, the crook who swindled them passes. The rubes make a dash for him and hold him until an officer arrives. On arriving at the police station they are informed they have made an important capture and are given the reward of five hundred dollars offered for Jolly Jim, the confidence man.

THE ATTORNEY'S DECISION (August 26).—Alice West gives up her sweetheart, John Travers, a promising young lawyer, to marry Norris Dacre, a broker, who holds her father's fortune and reputation in the hollow of his hand. John leaves town brokenhearted on the day of Alice's wedding. Five years later John is elected District Attorney. He meets Alice at a ball and learns that she is an unhappy and neglected wife. The Governor of the State inaugurates an investigation against the crooked brokers of the city in which John lives. Alice's husband is one of the first on the list. John receives valuable evidence from one of Dacre's dupes which he intends to use in the trial. At this time Dacre is interested in Mimi, a little cabaret dancer, who is paying a great deal of attention to him, thus angering her jealous lover, who plays a violin in the same cafe. Dacre and his friends, worried over the coming exposure, offer John a bribe, which is refused. Dacre, remembering his wife's former association with John, tells her he is innocent and hints that everything will be all right if they can get the District Attorney on their side. After great deliberation she consents to speak to John. He refuses to listen to her at first, but when he realizes that it will be for her happiness he softens, and agrees to be as lenient as possible. That night she discovers her husband's crookedness. Then she knows she has turned John aside from what was plainly his duty. She denounces Dacre, goes to John's apartment and tells him to prosecute her husband to the full extent of the law. Dacre follows, and learning that the incriminating evidence is to be used against him, threatens to drag both Alice and John through the disgrace of a divorce. To save Alice, John wishes to destroy the papers, but she will not let him do this. John tells Dacre he will give him his decision in the morning. Dacre goes directly to Mimi in the cafe. Her lover has discovered that she intends to go to Europe with Dacre. In fury at the idea of having the girl taken from him, the violinist shoots and kills the other man. John destroys the evidence against Dacre at dawn, and in the morning he reads of the tragedy in the cafe. Free at last, Alice gives her heart and hand to John when he calls a little later.

THE AGGRESSOR (Two reels—August 27).—Jim Sloan, a brutal husband, hearing of gold found in the Northwest, draws his money out of the bank and bids his wife Hilda farewell, promising to send for her soon. In Calet, Jim visits the music hall and falls in love with Mazie, a dancer, who soon cleans him out of most of his money and transfers her favors to Carson King, a nephew of old Davie King. Jim and Carson meet and fight, and Jim falls, apparently dead. Old Davie appears upon the scene while Carson hurries to notify the mounted police; but Davie, fearing that his nephew's story will not be believed, removes the body and sends it down the river in a canoe. When Davie confesses his blunder, a search is made for the boat, which is found capsized. In the meantime an Indian finding a spark of life in the body removes Jim to his hut and finally restores him. Hilda not hearing from [illegible] tells her husband good and [illegible] Calet. There she visit[illegible] meets Mazie, who tells her of Jim's death. She also meets Carson, who [illegible] it his duty to protect her. The denizens of the hall torment Hilda with their attentions, and Carson, knocking one of them down, takes her away to his hut. Mazie then tells Hilda that Carson killed Jim. The good woman, [illegible] mother in old Davie's wife and Hilda and Carson fall in love and agree to marry. Jim is nursed back to life by the crippled Indian, who found him. Hilda's wedding day draws near and he resolves to go back to the camp. A stranger going through the woods is seized with a sudden illness and rendered unconscious, he is found by the Indian, who, thinking him dead, rifles his pockets, finds a bag of gold and buries it outside of his cabin. Jim finds it, and making his way back to Calet arrives on the night of Hilda's marriage to Carson. Mazie meets Jim, and being furious with jealousy tells [illegible] news, who determines to claim his wife [illegible] at the reservation a party of mounted police find the sick stranger, who tells of his lost gold, he describes the limping Indian, who, being found, offers to return the gold. Not being able to find it, Jim's absence makes the Indian suspect the truth, and the police dash off to Calet after Jim. Meanwhile Mazie has dragged Jim to the hut to interrupt the wedding. Hilda clings to Carson as the bully husband drags her away. Again these men face each other over a woman. The mounted police enter and Jim is under arrest. His rebellious behavior causes a policeman to draw his gun. Jim strikes it from the officer's hand, it explodes, and the bully falls dead. Carson feels the burden of Jim's death removed and is free to marry the unfortunate widow.

THE BETTER MAN (August 28).—John Lattimer and his brother, Walter, both woodsmen, love Alice Scott. John, the older brother, in a moment of weakness, steals money from a miser living in the vicinity, with which to buy Alice a present. He buys the gift she has longed for—a large Bible. Next day he is accused as the thief. John, overwhelmed with repentance, pleads with the miser to give him a chance. The miser very reluctantly takes from John a written promise by which he pledges to repay the money within a month. Upon his next visit to Alice, she reads passages from the Bible to him, and upon hearing the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal," the simple, plain-thinking woodsman is so impressed with his guilt that he confesses to Alice and tells her of his effort to square himself. Alice forgives him. As the days pass on, the affection borne Alice by the two brothers causes a coolness between them. On the day the note falls due, the miser determined that he shall not be argued out of his just dues, takes the sheriff with him to collect the money from John. John, returning from his day's labor, loses the wallet containing the money he had saved and borrowed to pay his debt. When confronted by the miser and the sheriff, he reaches for the wallet, to find it gone. The miser refuses to believe John's story, and orders the sheriff to arrest John. At this moment Alice enters, hysterical with news that her mother has dropped dead of heart failure. She sees John's predicament at a glance. John, realizing he is doomed to imprisonment, urges Walter to marry Alice. Walter, inwardly satisfied, agrees. But he proves a poor, neglectful husband, and spends most of his time indulging in drink. Finally he deserts her. The young wife, poverty-stricken and helpless, writes a note to John, and encloses a small file in the package. She surreptitiously drops the note and file through the window to John's cell. The next night news of John's escape from jail is flashed into the bar where Walter is drinking. The sheriff has offered a reward of $50 for the capture of the runaway. Walter, penniless and mad with the desire to drink, joins the man-hunt. Through the swamp the posse proceeds, Walter assisting in the hunting down of his own brother. The searching party breaks up into twos and threes. Walter, alone, finally comes upon the escaped prisoner, crawling feebly upon the ground, exhausted. The dense, silent swamp witnesses a desperate conflict of the brothers. The repeated cries of Walter have brought the sheriff and another searcher to their sides. John is captured. Into the hand of the young brother the sheriff counts off $50. John, boiling over at Walter's treatment of Alice, denounces him bitterly. He sees that Walter is now repentant and pleads with him to go back to Alice, using the reward money as a basis for a new start in life. Walter, ashamed and repentant, is only too willing to make amends. At daybreak he returns to Alice. John is led back to jail. A warm hand-shake tendered him by the sheriff conveys a great deal. He is the better man.

THE KIDS NAP (August 29).—Max Heimer repairs to his domicile for his noon-day allotment of victuals. While perusing the contents of "The Daily Con" he observes that kidnappers are operating in his vicinity. He and his good frau fear for the safety of their male offspring. Mike Spitz visits them, and while partaking of the meal, young Max is spanked for

War of the Powers

ACTUAL SCENES AND BATTLES
of the GIGANTIC WAR

now
RAGING IN EUROPE

BEST MONEY MAKER
at the
PRESENT TIME

Length about 1,700 ft.
Price, $160.00

Including Two Different Styles of Posters

READY FOR DELIVERY

WIRE NOW

International Film Traders
5 West 14th Street
NEW YORK

mischievous behavior and leaves the house to sob out his troubles beneath the front porch. Discovering his absence and not being able to locate him they conclude that the kidnappers have nabbed him. A small riot prevails. They call up the guardian of the city press to assist in the frantic search, and also obtain the services of Hookshop, the world's famous sleuth, whose sleuthing gets them naught. Heimer advertises five hundred dollars reward for his son's return. Various over-zealous citizens of Krunkville corral all available children, ranging from babies in arms to young mountain ranges in size. Young Max, after a siesta, appears on the scene. When they observe him all safe and sound, the tension slacks and they sink into peaceful oblivion, in a startling manner.

MELIES.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE (August 18).—A young girl, reading the stars, believes that they foretell the death of her father. The latter comes home drunk and falls asleep. The daughter, thinking he is dead, calls the undertaker. Everything is arranged, but during the ceremony the father awakes and the mourners flee. The daughter again consults her book on astronomy and finds that the reading meant a wedding instead of a death. Result—wedding bells.

CHILDREN OF FATALITY (August 19).—Harold and Elsie, orphans, are given to the care of their uncle, who in turn leaves them with his valet. The children run away and are adopted by a flower seller, whom they assist. The boy is knocked down by an automobile. The owner of the car becomes attached to the children and takes them home. There they learn that their new benefactor is their mother's brother.

A SURPRISING ENCOUNTER (August 20).—The owner of a farm discovers a board from his fence has been stolen. He buys a new one and, while returning home, has many experiences due to the length of the board. He bumps into three men, who cut the board in two, tying him to it, and throw him in the river. After going over a falls, he lands at the feet of those who cause him all the trouble.

A MASON'S NEW ASSISTANT (August 20).—Charley is not worth much, but gets a job in the masonry line. He is sent out on a call to repair a wall, but instead of doing this he breaks a water pipe. Unable to fix it he calls for help and after getting everybody soaking wet, he calls in a plumber, who turns a wheel within a few inches of the break and the water is turned off.

THE BULLTRAINER'S REVENGE (Two Parts—August 20).—Mrs. Atkinson, through the death of her husband, becomes the possessor of a large cattle ranch. The manager attempts to get possession of the property, but fails. In revenge he turns loose a vicious bull, which charges at Mrs. Atkinson. Thornton, the executor of the estate, saves her. The actions of the bull, however, cause the herd to stampede, and the manager, unable to get out of the way of their run, is trampled to death.

THE TELL-TALE PHOTOGRAPH (August 22).—An innocent man was accused of murder. Circumstantial evidence being against him, he was convicted and sentenced to be hanged. His innocence was established by an aviator, who had taken a photograph of the scene of the crime while in the air. After an exciting race against time he arrived at the prison just as the execution was about to take place, and by placing the photograph showing the real murderer, before the authorities he was enabled to secure the innocent man's release.

PATHE.

DAKAR—PRINCIPAL PORT OF FRENCH WEST AFRICA (August 17).—The harbor of Dakar is one of the busiest commercial centers on the Atlantic coast of Africa. The bay is a beautiful body of water, deep enough to accommodate all sorts of steam and sailing craft. The tourist always sees many interesting sights along the roads and at the station. Like a fortress, the Governor's palace looms high above the surrounding country. The Senegalese troops are unique, present a unique and pleasing appearance. Among them are to be found some of the best sharpshooters on the West African coast, not only of the ordinary small arms and rifle but of the latest designs of the rapid fire machine gun. Senegal is intensely tropical and many luxuriant palm trees along the National Boulevard go to make this a most beautiful thoroughfare. The market place of Dakar filled with its throngs of busy bargain hunters is one of the most interesting parts of the town.

CAIRO—THE CAPITAL OF EGYPT (August 18).—Cairo, the wonderful city of the ancient as well as the modern Egyptians. The panoramic view from the Citadel bridges the narrow congested streets and the quaint stone buildings as they stretch back as far as the eye can see like a great white sheet to the very shores of the river Nile. The tombs of the Khalifs, specimens of early architecture, attract the tourist. In ancient times when the city Cairo was walled for defense, ponderous iron gates closed out the stranger and warrior. In these days of peace the traveller still passes through these ponderous doors, not without, however, a feeling of awe and wonder. The great Citadel built in 1166 is used by the English for governmental purposes. In it are to be found the Viceroy's residence, the arsenal, the mint and the public offices. Mosques, Arab cafes, public parks and military barracks all reflect the peculiar life of the Egyptian, the Cairo Egyptian, the descendant of one of the oldest and powerful nations of the ancient world.

"NEWMAN"
Brass Frames and Rails

NOW IS THE TIME to fix up your lobby. Throw out those unsightly old wood frames and invest in neat, attractive BRASS FRAMES. You will be surprised how quickly your investment will return to you.

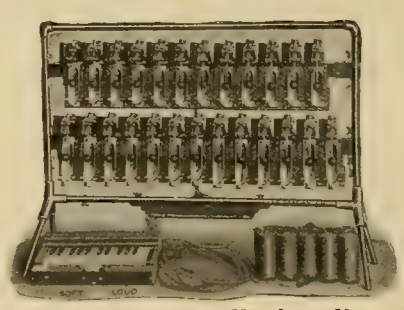
Be sure the name "NEWMAN" appears on all frames—the guarantee of satisfaction.

Write for new 1914 catalog.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
NEW YORK 101 Fourth Ave. CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.

Established 1882.

DEAGAN
UNAPHONE



Front view of Deagan Unaphone No. 2306
(Size 47x34x14 inches)

Nothing like it for the moving picture theatre. Greatest attraction you could get for your house. The Unaphone is an electrically operated Musical Novelty Instrument, played from piano keyboard. Moderate in cost and easy to install.

Write today for Catalogue "F."

J. C. DEAGAN
DEAGAN BUILDING
1776 Berteau Ave., CHICAGO, U.S.A.

SELIG.

IF AT FIRST YOU DON'T SUCCEED (August 18).—Jack and Mollie Dixon agree to disagree directly after their honeymoon. Jack has business cares that engage his attention, so that he forgets the gentle little caresses and the sweet sayings that go so much toward making married life what it should be. Mollie thinks she has a soprano voice, but she hasn't, so Jack becomes engrossed with the morning paper at breakfast time and in the evening when Jack wants to enjoy home comforts, Mollie insists on practicing vocal lessons.

They take it seriously and request a lawyer friend to draw up divorce papers. The lawyer announces, to their consternation, that their first marriage was illegal. The minister did not report the wedding. The only way out is to be remarried, so they can be properly divorced. They go through the ceremony again, but while signing the divorce papers, a few grains of rice recall the sweet sentiments of love. No more use for the lawyer.

WHEN A WOMAN'S 40 (Two Reels—August 19).—Lucile Danvers, at the age of forty, still reigns as queen of her social set. Wealthy, aristocratic, supremely confident of her powers to thrill and charm, the first scene shows her in the reception room of her magnificent home, surrounded by admiring friends. A young girl just entering upon her first social duties, magnetizes everybody present and Lucile notes that a number of her heretofore faithful admirers have left her side to enjoy the companionship of this young girl.

Lucile is determined to surmount the obstacles which age has thrown in her path. She gives a magnificent fete in which splendor and magnificence of royalty are mimicked by herself and friends in a grand costume ball. At the ball the young girl whose popularity has aroused the emotions of envy in Lucile's mind, repeats her heart conquests upon this occasion. The proud spirit of Lucile is almost crushed. In her luxurious chamber, she views in visionary scenes her past sucesses and conquests for a score of years. She again sees her manly lover in all his pride of youth and re-enacts in the vision her refusal of his suit; his departure for India on a tiger hunt, and her shock at the news of his death in the jungle. In her vision, she locks the iron gates of her beautiful rose garden when she sent her lover away. The gate has remained closed ever since.

SECOND REEL.

In a self-imposed widowhood, and mourning for her young lover who was reported killed by a tiger in India, Lucile Danvers, at the age of forty, appears among her friends with a new soul shining through her eyes. The generous wealth which fortune bestowed upon her is lavishly distributed in the homes of the needy poor. She founds a home for young girls and helps them to keep their feet in the straight and narrow path. Food and clothing are distributed by her in the wretched tenement districts where she appears as a ministering angel. The children of the slums are taken in her automobile to the green fields. The extensive grounds which distinguish her magnificent home become scenes of youthful rompings. Thus the woman of forty toils bravely through devious and strange paths until she reaches a new kind of happiness where no regrets remain save the shadows of tragedy which left her no wife, yet a widow in spirit.

Still beautiful and graceful, Lucile Danvers rejects the ravages which the years would mark as a toll upon her beauty while the light of a beautiful soul shines through her eyes. Day by day, her mind reverts to the handsome young boy of twenty years ago, who loved her and whom she loved, but who was sacrificed to her social ambitions. Too late she learned the truth, and each day was coming home to her more forcibly that her life would never be complete unless Fate should perform some miracle and return him to her side. In the gentle moonlight of a beautiful autumn evening, she strolls out into the gardens, her mind filled with thoughts of her lost love. The barred iron gates leading to the little rose garden attract her attention. Dry and shrivelled, the dead roses and leaves cling to the rusty bars. She had ordered old Henri, the family butler, who still hobbled about the house, to close and lock the gate forever. A spirit prompted that she should command the presence of the old butler with the almost forgotten rusty keys, to again throw open the gates. As in a trance, she re-entered the rose garden for the first time in a score of years.

Stephen Landers, dismissed two decades ago because of the ambitions of Lucile Danvers, has always loved her. Cruelly torn by a tiger, he did not die, but spent years abroad, slowly recovering. His return home occurred on the same night that Lucile again entered the rose garden gates. Old Henri thinks him a ghost, but is quickly reassured. The open gate and the pointing finger of the old family butler tell the story to the returned lover. And so love wins the race against time.

BREAKING INTO JAIL (August 18).—Jim aspires to be an author. The story of how he tried to break into jail to secure realism furnishes a funny comedy.

THE REVELER (August 21).—The happy family is grouped around the Flying "U" camp, discussing the departure of Weary after a bunch of stray horses. Everybody shouts farewell to him. Then Happy Jack goes to Dry Lake after the mail. His consternation is great when he sees a man, identically like Weary, flourishing a revolver and terrorizing Rusty Brown's place in Dry Lake. He don't know just what to think about it. It is evidently Weary, but Happy Jack cannot understand how he has accumulated such a "souse" in such a short time. The supposed Weary is absolutely unmanageable. Jack returns to camp to get the other boys to help him corrall Weary. They return to town. After much strategy they capture the supposed Weary, and violently take him home.

Weary is "not guilty." He proves an alibi by returning to camp, where the counterfeit Weary lies asleep under the mess wagon. Weary identifies him as "Irish," the reckless cousin who used to get him into trouble when a boy. "Irish" joins the camp because it would be a shame to "break the set."

WHAT BECAME OF JANE (August 22).—Jane Dawson sings in the village choir with Ben Murdock, her sweetheart. They are very happy until Jane begins to have ambitions for the stage. Ben begs her to stay at home, but she prevails upon her mother and simple old grandfather to let her have a chance to gain fame in the metropolis. It is the same old story when she gets to the city. Jane is pretty and attractive. A theatrical manager "sizes her up" wrong and gets her an engagement with a musical comedy troupe. Jane has no particular talent, but she is pretty and "gets by" through the pull of the manager.

At first she is shocked by the disclosures and scenes in the dressing rooms. But this gets to be commonplace. Then she gets into the habit of going to gay suppers and revels after the show. Jane does not succumb to temptation, but she has difficulty in keeping her feet on the ground. Ben comes in search of her. He finds her with gay companions. There is a scene, and true love wins against the tawdriness and glamour of stage life. They go home to get married.

THE WHITE MOUSE (Two Reels—August 24).—Billy Silver, a young trapper, lives with his wife and little baby up in the region of the snows. Billy is energetic and finds trapping profitable. One morning while he is out examining his traps, the cabin catches fire. In the distance he hears the cries of his wife for help, and hastening to the scene as rapidly as he can make his way on snowshoes over the heaped-up drifts, he arrives just in time to save the baby and a few necessities. Their little home is burned to the ground, leaving them wholly without shelter in the cold winter time. They have no materials with which to build another house. It is too cold to take any chance of exposing the wife and baby to the extreme cold, so Billy harnesses himself to the sledge upon which he loads his family, and in due time arrives without accident at the camp of a party of surveyors, fifty miles away.

Jean, the young wife, is a beauty. Billy seeks work of Lawler, the boss of the camp, but is turned down until Lawler accidentally catches a glimpse of pretty Jean. His brutal mind at once schemes out a plan, and he hires Billy to accompany a party of men about to leave for a lengthy trip. He makes the little family at home in a small cabin. Jean utilizes their pitiful few belongings to make it as homelike as possible, and they are happy with their little one for the few days intervening before the departure of Billy with the surveying party. After Billy has gone, Lawler visits the pretty young wife in her cabin. Receiving no encouragement to pursue his attentions, he goes away, but with his brutal mind still fixed upon his devilish scheme, he returns. It so happens that Billy, after going a few miles with the surveying crew, is sent back to the camp for a map, which has been left behind. His unexpected return saves pretty Jean from the consequences of Lawler's brutal passion. Billy dashes into the cabin upon hearing her cries for help and wrests Lawler from his victim. Billy does not desire to injure him, but his forbearance is a mistake. No sooner does Lawler find himself free, than he draws his revolver and tries to shoot Billy. There is a struggle for the possession of the weapon, and Lawler, in his attempt to kill Billy, pull the trigger when the revolver is pointed at his own heart, with fatal consequences to himself. Others in the camp have heard the shot and rush into the cabin. They find Billy standing with the smoking revolver in his hand. He and Jean explain, but the men who are creatures of Lawler, notify the Northwest Mounted Police representatives, and Billy is locked up on a charge of murder.

SECOND REEL.

Jean plans the escape of Billy from jail. The Northwest Mounted Policemen, who realize the true conditions because they are aware of the brutal character of Lawler, have an inkling of the plan of escape, but shut their eyes to it out of sympathy for Billy and his pretty wife, and believe that he is not guilty. The plan is successful, and Billy makes his headquarters in a deserted cabin several miles away from the camp, where he continues his work of trapping until the snows of winter shall go away, and he can leave the place to join his pretty wife among friends in another country.

Billy has as a pet and constant companion a tiny white mouse, which has an inordinate and mischievous appetite for the moosehide thongs that form the net work on Billy's snow shoes. The little fellow is constantly trying to eat the snow shoe strings, and Billy has considerable mending to do as a consequence.

The creatures of Lawler are angry at the escape of Bill, and they incite Sergeant Brokaw, known as the "human blood hound," to pick up Billy's trail and recapture him. The sergeant finds Billy in the lonely cabin, where his sole companion is the little white mouse. There is a surprise, and Billy finds himself a prisoner with hands and feet bound with moose hide thongs. The sergeant exults in his capture and returns to where he has left his dog team for the purpose of bringing the sledge up to the cabin door, where he can load Billy upon it and take him back to jail. Billy is disconsolate. He fears the result of his trial on the charge of murder in view of the biased and false testimony which he believes will be given by the former employes of Lawler. He is despondent, but cannot do a thing with his hands and feet bound. The little white mouse comes to his aid. The little creature scents the moose hide thongs which bind the wrists of his master, and finding itself unrebuked, begins to indulge its appetite with great gusto. Its needle-like teeth quickly separate the strands and Billy is free. He hears the shouting of the sergeant outside, urging his dog team through the drifts up to the cabin, and by the time he throws the door open to carry out his prisoner, Billy springs upon him and quickly disarms the policeman. A short, quick struggle settles the affair. The police sergeant is locked within the cabin as a prisoner, and Billy escapes through the snowdrifts.

Weeks of arduous adventure and hardship follow for Billy, but at last he makes his way to the distant locality, where pretty Jean and the baby are waiting for him. The little mouse also finds friends of its kind, and the last picture shows a happy family of mice in addition to Billy, Jean and the baby.

THE SEALED OASIS (August 25).—Tom is the capable and clever young assistant of Wm. Brock, a mining engineer, who has retired to a small place on the edge of the desert, where he is recovering from an affection of the lungs. The doctor has sent him to a hot, dry climate to save his life. His exceptionally attractive daughter, Lolita, attends him, and the cleverness with which she performs her housewifely duties wins the approval of Tom, culminating in their mutual love.

The two men decide to go on a prospecting tour. Tom and Lolita are engaged and the day for the wedding has been set. Tom agrees to return to his sweetheart in time, and she busies herself preparing for the approaching wedding. The prospecting venture is unsuccessful. A sandstorm separates Tom and his employer. Each staggers away before the blinding, blistering rain of hot sand. Brock finds his way back to the cabin, where water revives him, but Tom has wandered away off the trail and cannot be found until it is too late. He has paid the toll of the sands in death, and the old tragedy of the desert has been repeated. Lolita waits in vain.

A LOW FINANCIER (August 28).—He was a ragged tramp known as "Bugs." Opportunity came and he grasped it. Fifty dollars to serve as a subject for the dissection table was a lot of money, and Bugs needed the money. "Cash in advance" was Bug's motto. First he would spend the fifty, and then return for dissection. They tried to catch Bugs, but the truth is he fled with the fifty dollars. A fake bomb and a ferocious bulldog help Bugs to furnish the comedy.

THE DECISION OF JIM O'FARRELL (August 26).—Jim O'Farrell owned the best paying livery stable in town. He had always been a good husband, and had a sincere love for his wife, Anita, but the habits and late hours incident to driving traveling men on trips into

(Continued on page 1134.)

No. 8

Brass Frames and Railings

For material, workmanship and design we offer the best.

Get our catalogue and quotation before placing your order.

THE THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. COMPANY
1232 East 3d St., Cleveland, Ohio

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE MONEY FAST! BE YOUR OWN BOSS!
$30 TO $50 PER NIGHT CLEAR
No Experience Needed
We furnish you with machine, film, curtain and complete outfit ready to go to work with ON OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN.
Write Now for Our Large FREE Catalogue.
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE Co.
Dept. M. P., Ellsworth Bldg., Chicago

"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Co.
Berkeley, California.

We Buy and Sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
37 So. Wabash Avenue - Chicago, Ill.

Anything! Everything! in the moving picture line
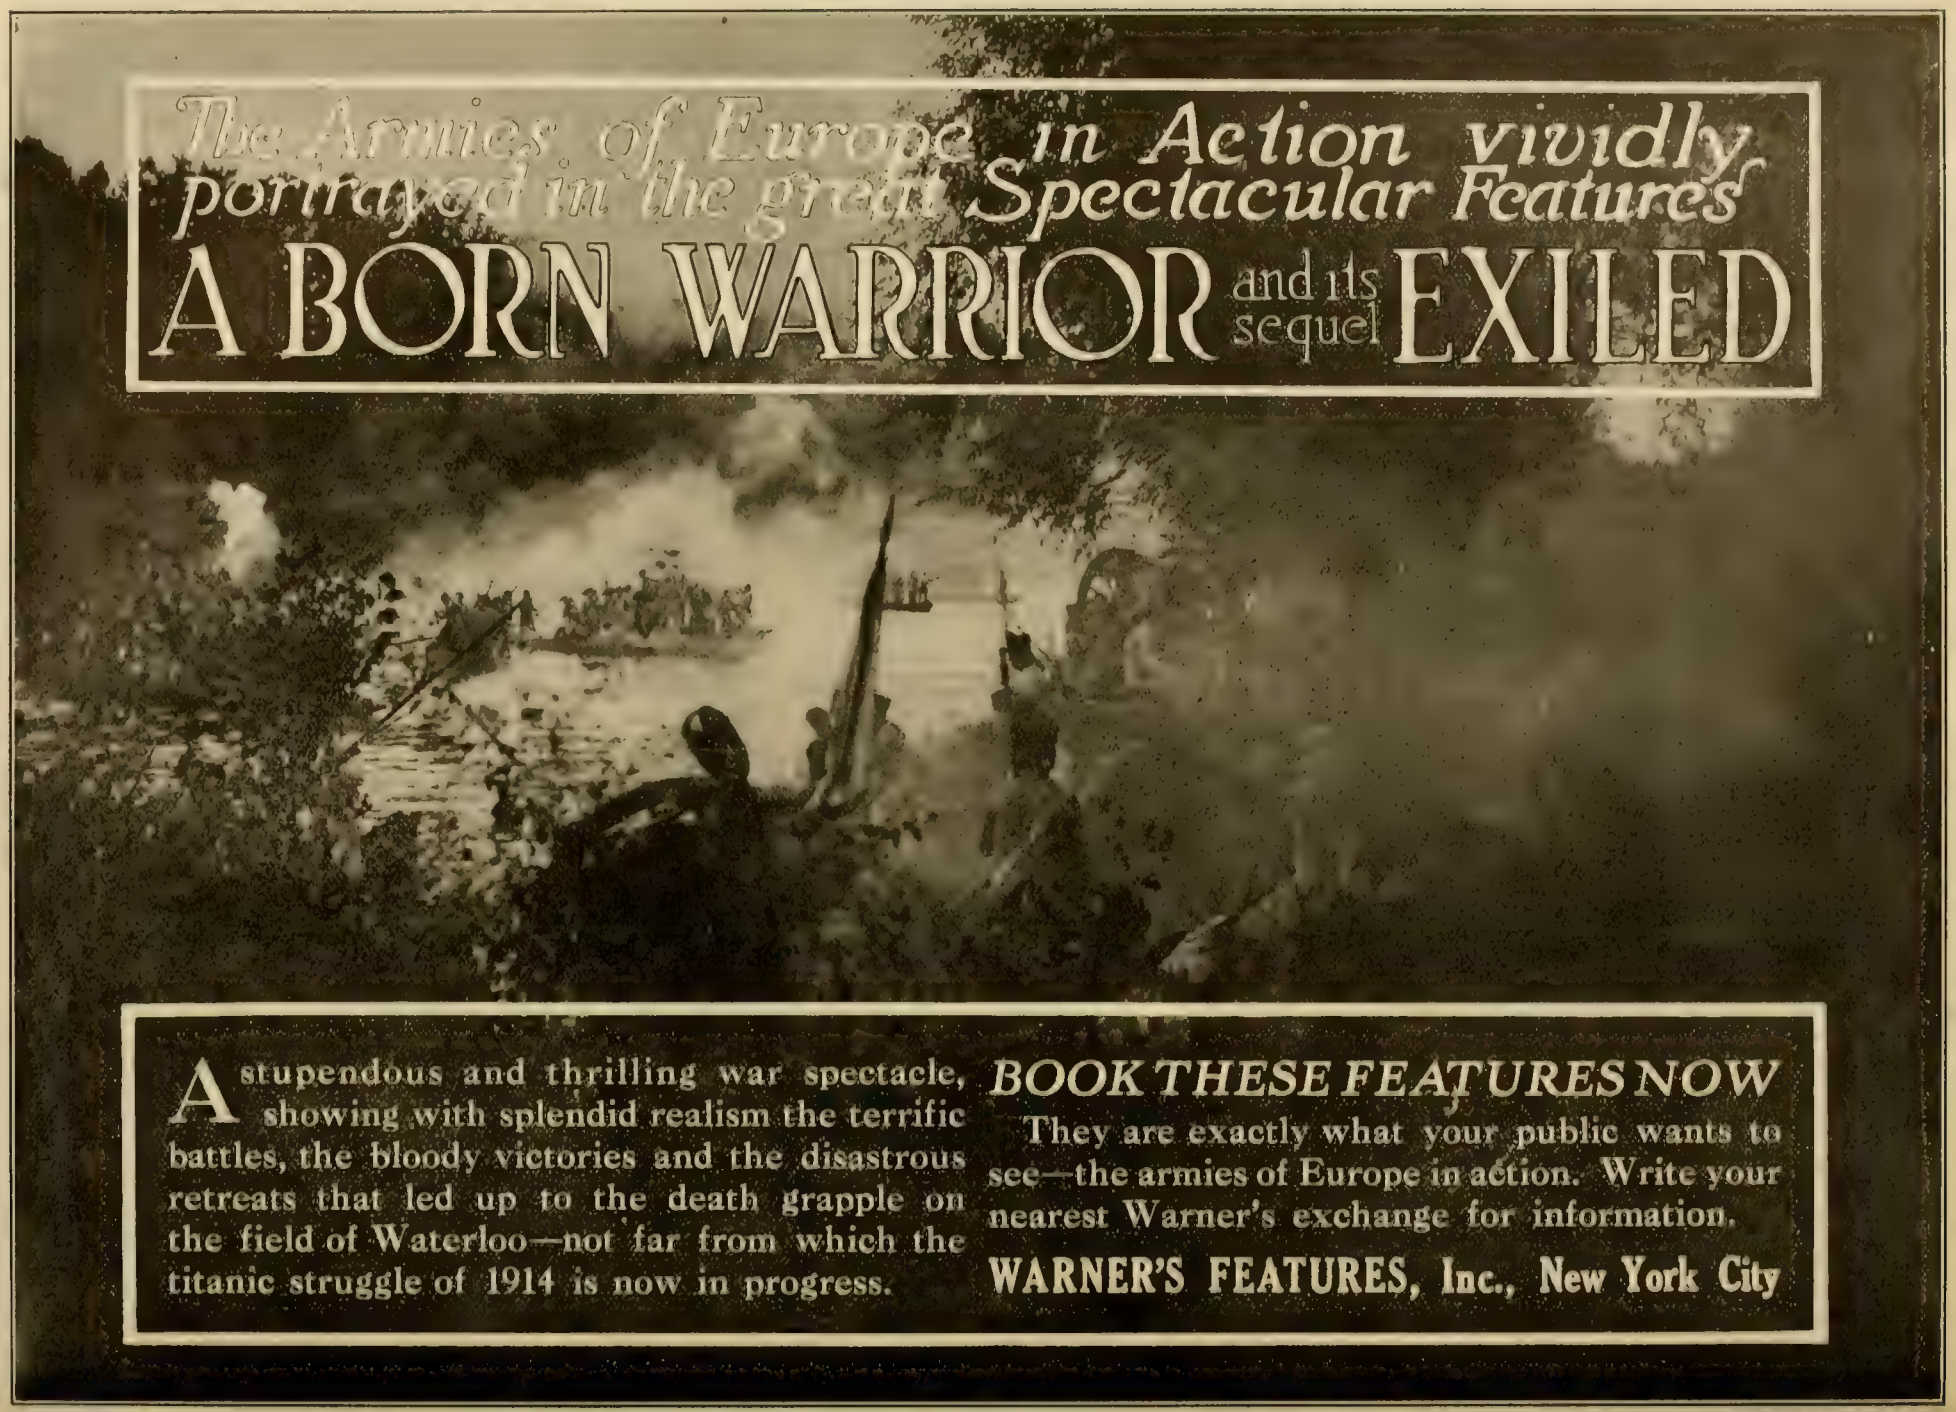
We sell 1-3 cheaper. A trial solicited.
Special for August:
Bottle "Magnetic" Oil Cement, 3 bottles Slidink, 50c. prepaid.
N. T. S. CO.
Dept. W. Box 305, Brookville, Ind.

BEST OF CAMERA MEN
Furnished for all Occasions
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.
4108-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SCENARIOS CRITICISED
By
MARY LOUISE FARLEY
Photoplaywright
607 West 136th Street, New York

ALUMINOTYPES SAVE YOU MONEY
MADE FROM COARSE SCREEN NEWSPAPER HALFTONES JUST THE SAME AS ELECTROTYPES.
THE STANDARD ENGRAVING CO. INC. PHOTO ENGRAVERS DESIGNERS ELECTROTYPERS
WM. HUFFMAN Pres.
143-145 WEST 40th STREET NEW YORK



The Armies of Europe in Action vividly portrayed in the great Spectacular Features
A BORN WARRIOR and its sequel EXILED
A stupendous and thrilling war spectacle, showing with splendid realism the terrific battles, the bloody victories and the disastrous retreats that led up to the death grapple on the field of Waterloo—not far from which the titanic struggle of 1914 is now in progress.
BOOK THESE FEATURES NOW
They are exactly what your public wants to see—the armies of Europe in action. Write your nearest Warner's exchange for information.
WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc., New York City

"There's A Reason"

In fact "there are many reasons" why YOU should control this feature in YOUR territory

THOMAS E. SHEA

—IN—

"THE MAN O' WARS MAN"

IN FIVE PARTS

SOME REASONS:

The "MAN O' WARS MAN" was Mr. Shea's first big success and has been played to several million people in the United States by him.

It is full of intrigue, love and thrills. It has been re-written by Mr. Shea around the present Mexican situation.

"The Man O' Wars Man" is filled with naval and land fighting, which is of great interest now, and a big line of pictorial printing make this Photoplay a great sensational feature.

See THOMAS E. SHEA as Captain Conway.

See DIXEY COMPTON as Isabelle Torres.

Close your territory NOW.

Released AUGUST 24th.

COMING "THE VILLAGE POSTMASTER" COMING

BROADWAY PICTURE PRODUCING CO.

Suite 235--236 1400 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY Phone: Greeley 6372

David Young, Jr., Pres. Thomas F. Bowers, Treas.

(Continued from page 1131)

the country had its effect. Mrs. Wilcox, an attractive widow, thought Jim an exceptionally handsome felow and did not discourage the casual attentions which he began to pay her.

In the meantime, Anita nursed her baby at home alone, and at times wondered where her big, strong husband was. It remained for Ellen Collins, the house-to-house distributor of milk and gossip, to put Anita wise to the conditions, which, according to neighborhood gossip, were growing worse all the time. Jim was becoming more and more ensnared of the guileful Mrs. Wilcox. Then it happened all of a sudden. Anita was sick and delirious. Faithful Ellen was nursing her. While Ellen left the room, Anita, in her delirium, sprang out of bed, threw one of Jim's coats over her shoulders, took a revolver from the bureau, and stormed the Wilcox cottage. One shot from the revolver missed Mrs. Wilcox, but it brought Jim home to his wife and baby.

CHIP OF THE FLYING "U" (Three Reels—August 29).—Claude Bennett, a handsome young fellow, occupies a desk in his father's bank, but does not earn his salt. He has an artistic temperament, and has done some clever sketching, but has never earned a dollar in his life. Idling one morning at his desk, he draws a ridiculous cartoon of his father, which comes to the attention of the bank president, who summarily tells Claude that the town is not big enough for him. After a moment's reflection, Claude replies with spirit that he will go West. Claude Bennett develops into "Chip," a lively young cowboy on the Flying "U" Ranch down in Texas.

Whitmore, the "Old Man" of the ranch, is a hard worker, and does not spare himself any more than he does the boys. Chip becomes an all-around man after a number of adventures in which the wildest bronchos test his staying powers as a rider, and one day the "Old Man" tells him to hook up the team and drive to the station. Chip is told to meet the "old man's" sister, who is a woman doctor. While putting on his other shirt to drive to town, Chip discusses the prospective arrival of the "old maid doctor," and they conjure up visions of an ancient she-dragon, with a face like a lemon. Chip awaits around in a dejected manner until the train pulls in. He is delighted to discover that the "old maid doctor" is a very pretty charming, young girl. Chip improves the time during the ride to the ranch to get well acquainted with the "little doctor," as he already begins to call her in his own mind, whereas she discovers in this tanned and sprightly young cowboy many of the elements which go to make up a hero, especially in the mind of a young girl. She demonstrates her skill with the rifle by shooting a coyote, this feat of arms putting Chip absolutely at her mercy. He succumbs entirely to her natural fascination.

Chip still does a little sketching now and then, some of which comes to the attention of the "little doctor," who encourages him to paint a really good picture. An accident occurs in which Chip is thrown from his horse and dragged at the end of a lasso over the plains at a gallop. His pet cayuse breaks a leg and Chip is about to end its misery with a bullet when the "little doctor" announces that she can set the leg with splints. She does so, and another arrow from Cupid's bow goes to the heart of Chip. Then Chip is laid up with a sprained ankle and the "little doctor" takes care of him. During his recovery he gets to work on the picture, which he paints with great natural skill, and the "Old Man's" silent partner, Dunk, who comes to the ranch on a visit, sees the painting and promises to take it to the city and show it to someone with a knowledge of art. The picture sells for a good fat check.

The "little doctor" captivates everybody. Even Patsy, the cook, with his dirty apron, succumbs to her charms, and when she makes a professional visit to the kitchen and orders him to "clean up," he obeys after much grumbling. The "Old Man" hears the rattling of tins and kettles in the kitchen and makes an investigation. Patsy has the floor covered with soap suds, and is scrubbing away with great spirit. The "Old Man" dashes into the kitchen and sprawls all over the floor, sliding on the soap suds. He has it in his heart to murder Patsy and starts after him, but Patsy slides through the door on another installment of soap suds, and the "Old Man" toboggans down the steps after him.

The "little doctor" is always up to something. She has all the cowboys her slaves, with Chip the worst of the lot. She gets a letter stating that Dr. Cecil Grantham, whose name Chip has heard her mention before and whom he looks upon as a formidable rival, is going to arrive on the next day's train, for a visit to the "little doctor." Chip feels very much disturbed in spirit. He imagines that Dr. Grantham is coming to claim his bride, and the "little doctor" mischievously leads him to think so. So Chip is chosen as the instrument to bring his rival to the ranch, being ordered to accompany the "little doctor" in the buckboard, and greet the expected visitor. They pull another one on Chip, for the formidable Dr. Cecil Grantham is a sweet and saucy Miss, a classmate of the "little doctor." Chip is so happy over the outcome that he visibly shows it and the girls have a great deal of fun at his expense, in consequence.

The "Old Man" becomes infatuated with the new arrival. Dunk, who has fallen in love with the "little doctor," finds himself outclassed by Chip, and that he hasn't a chance. He shows his jealousy, whereupon he is given to understand in unmistakable terms, that he is not in it. Dunk "beats" it for the railroad station. Then follow gay days at the ranch. Chip saves the "little doctor's" life when she is pursued by a locoed stallion, and there is no more coquetry on her part. The "Old Man" wins the "little doctor's" chum, and when the announcement is made and each loving couple confesses to the others, the "Old Man" sends Patsy for a bottle of wine, so that they an all drink to each other's health.

THE HARBOR OF LOVE (August 29).—Lola Grant, a beautiful young artist, paints the portrait of Governor Hart, a splendid and successful young politician. He falls in love with the fair artist, and she is flattered by his attentions. However, she loves Carl Danby, the governor's secretary, but she refuses to marry Carl, who resigns his position and goes to the seashore, where he meets a beautiful waif of the sea, Bess, the daughter of an old fisherman. Bess falls in love with him, and Carl begins to forget the fickle Lola.

Back in the city Lola is unhappy. She goes to the seashore to find a subject for her picture, and Bess poses for her. Carl comes upon them unexpectedly, and Lola realizes that he alone possesses her love. Lola confesses her mistake, but Carl reproaches her for his many weeks of suffering. He realizes that the heart of Bess has given him the imperious call of love. Lola returns to the city, where she accepts the offer of marriage from Governor Hart. Carl and Bess drift peacefully on into the harbor of love.

VITAGRAPH.

WARD'S CLAIM (August 24).—While working his claim one day, Old Ward, a prospector, strikes it rich, and just has sufficient time to tell the rest of the prospectors of his good luck when he is stricken with a fatal sickness. His young friend, John Hanson, watches Lopez, a Mexican, sneaking around Ward's claim, hastens to tell the old man, and finds him dying. Ward gives Hanson a sealed envelope and asks him to send it to the rightful heir to the claim. John sends the message on its way, and receives a reply, asking him to hold the claim until the heir arrives. The Mexican, meanwhile, tries to jump the claim, but John proves more than a match for him, and in the midst of the struggle, Shirley, a beautiful young girl, appears as the heir. John promptly falls in love with her and she with him. The Mexican tries to force his attentions upon her, but she snatches a revolver and drives him out of the place. That evening, with the aid of two bad Indians, he succeeds in abducting her, but is seen by a friendly Indian, who tells John. John and two other prospectors give chase. They catch up with the fugitives, the Indians are

BARR & BRUNSWIG That Classy Duo

Spotlight Singers of the Better Kind

Singing Popular, Semi-Classic and Yodle Songs.

Mr. Barr, recently with "Neil O'Brien's Minstrels." Mr. Brunswig, formerly with "The Heidelberg Quartette."

Open for engagements starting Sept. 1st.
139 W. 49th Street New York City

"Moving Picture Bryson"

Why Not Use SYSTEM in Your Business?

Hundreds of the best theatres in the country today are using THE THEATRE RECORD LEDGER SYSTEM and are getting results. Why not you? My proposition and promise to hustle right back your money if you don't find THE THEATRE RECORD LEDGER SYSTEM the greatest time saver besides absolutely accurate in every respect as to recording every possible receipt and disbursement—ought to be enough for your order. Don't you delay; start your fall business off right. Send me $2.50 (plus 20c. for postage) and get a Business System in your business. J. V. BRYSON, The THEATRE RECORD LEDGER, 252 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis.

Floral Decorations For Theatre, Stage and Parades

Best selections from the markets of Europe and America

Botanical Decorating Co.

504 So. 5th Ave. CHICAGO — Prices the lowest ever offered for reliable goods

ILLINOIS ONLY

"The Black Triangle"

5 Reels

Bookings from Sept. 1st

General Feature Film Co.

Mallers Bldg., Chicago

We want to buy for cash films of all makes that have had use of from one hundred days up. Send us your list.

Address Box 257, Charleston, Kanawha County, West Virginia.

J-M ASBESTOS BOOTHS AND CURTAINS

Made in styles to meet all requirements. They meet the approval of fire underwriters of every city. Write for Booklet. H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO., New York and Every Large City.

WE BUY, SELL and RENT

Moving Picture Machines, Films and Chairs

THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE

440 S. Dearborn Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Machines

All Makes, including Late Models

$45.00 and Up

Economizers, Rheostats, Lenses, etc., furnished at reasonable prices.

ESTREICH BROS.

692 Flushing Avenue Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Strelinger catalogue of

BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS

tells why direct current is very much better than alternating current for moving picture shows. Send for it.

THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.,
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

EXHIBITORS
THE COUNTRY OVER
Have Found It IMPOSSIBLE to keep house without
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Don't Attempt the Impossible
Send in Your Subscription

Character Motion Pictures

To the progressive exhibitor of motion pictures and the wide awake showman, there is offered in the ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION'S PRODUCTIONS, photo-plays of a distinctive character which mark an epoch in the art.

PICTURES

which build a confidence in their exhibitors and which discriminately select their own audiences, pelling undeniable success and ontinued patronage.

STARS

carefully selected from the speaking stage, with always that attention to ability and popularity, which means attraction to the mass of picture enthusiasts, the army of "ready to be convin-ed" theatre goers, and the curious.

PLAYS

the characters of which are known and approved of, by the most particular households, and which bear the stamp of seasons of theatrical endorsement and success.

PLUS A MERIT IN PRODUCTION WHICH THE PAST YEAR'S RELEASES HAVE PROVEN

HERE IS A SUGGESTION—A LIST OF CURRENT AND COMING OFFERINGS WHICH MEANS A SUCCESSION OF PICTURE ATTRACTIONS FOR YOUR THEATRE, AND NOT MERELY MISNAMED, PADDED, REGULAR PROGRAM "FEATURES"

Plays and Stars which have always stood by themselves and which still maintain that same prestige

Now——

LEW DOCKSTADER

In "Dan"—a five-act play by Hal Reid.

Later——

ETHEL BARRYMORE

In "The Nightingale"—a five-act play by Augustus Thomas

In Preparation——

SHORE ACRES

James A. Herne's immortal drama

WILLIAM FAVERSHAM

In the wondrous theatrical success, "The World"

THE FIGHTING CHANCE

Robert W. Chambers' master fiction

And Others

Write for Address of Nearest Distributor

ALL-STAR-FEATURE-CORPORATION

HARRY R. RAVER, PRESIDENT

EXECUTIVE OFFICES 220 W. 42nd ST., NEW YORK

AUGUSTUS THOMAS, DIRECTOR GENERAL OF PRODUCTIONS

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS IN PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

shot and the Mexican, holding the girl on his horse, determines, rather than be captured, to ride over a precipice a short distance beyond. John realizes the man's intentions, and by desperate riding, succeeds in snatching the girl from the Mexican's saddle, while Lopez goes headlong over the brink of the cliff. Riding home together, Shirley softly tells John she feels "Ward's claim needs a man to manage it," and buries her head confidingly on his arm.

RAINY, THE LION-KILLER (Special—Two Parts—August 25).—Jack Brown, hotel proprietor of Sachville, mentions his daughter, Lucille's future, to his old friend, Colonel Tubbs, who suggests a match between the girl and Peter Rainey, a wealthy nephew of his. Jack is delighted and arrangements are made for Peter's visit. When the young man arrives with his hunting togs, the townspeople mistake him for Paul Rainey, the big game hunter. Peter does not undeceive them and meets with a great reception at the hotel from all but Jack, who takes a dislike to him. Colonel Tubbs, being out of town, Peter's little deception is successful. The supposed "lion-hunter" proposes to Lucille and is accepted. Next day, during a big celebration in his honor, some bears, being used by a moving picture concern nearby, escape and create a panic among the villagers. The crowd yells for the hunter to save them. Peter is not over-anxious, but is forced to lead the "bear hunt." They meet with some lively adventures, at last being driven back into the village with a rush. Jack and Peter get into a ludicrous mix-up and Jack calls the latter a "Fine Lyin'-Killer!" Peter, however, regains his nerve, and wildly chases the bears through the village streets into the woods, for which he is loudly hailed as a "Preserver." Jack, now certain Peter is not Rainey, the hunter, is disgusted and about to "show him up" when Colonel Tubbs arrives. Then Peter in introduced to the Brown family and the mistake in identity explained. All are laughing heartily over the affair when Peter spies a crowd of natives preparing to congratulate their "hero" and taking Lucille's hand, bolts into the hotel to avoid any more of the "idol worshipping" business.

JOSIE'S DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE (August 26).—Josie gets a position as maid of all work in the Marshe family. She certainly does all the work, while the children and her overbearing mistress drive her to distraction. In the midst of her troubles she receives a letter from her sweetheart, Hank, who invites her to join him at a dinner given by the Nutwood Outing Club. She asks Mrs. Marshe for permission to go, but is refused, as the Marshe family intend going out themselves. Josie is very unhappy, but feels she must do as her mistress says.

On Independence Day, while returning from the store on an errand, she stops to listen to Hiram Hicks holding forth on the greatness of Washington and Lincoln. She does not understand much of what is said, but the words, "Declaration of Independence" set her to thinking, and she decides to have a declaration of independence all her own. She accordingly locks up the house and after leaving the following note for the Marshe family's perusal, goes to meet Hank: "I agree with George Washington that all men (also women) are free and equal, and I am going to the banquet in pursuit of my own happiness. I will get back when I am here. Josie." When the Marshes return they find her "declaration" and are furious. Josie, after whooping it up, is escorted home by Hank, and she finds a note reading, "You're free and equal to anything, we admit. You're free to look for another job. Signed, Marshe Family." Josie and Hank retaliate, thrusting the hose through the dining-room window and turning on the water, while Mrs. Marshe is proposing a toast. The result may be imagined. Josie and Hank walk off, laughing boisterously.

THE MYSTERIOUS LODGER (August 27).—Returning home from a matinee, Ralph Brent, a poor actor, finds his step-child dead. The child's mother returns intoxicated, having purchased drink instead of medicine for the child, with the money he had given her. He accuses her of causing the little one's death, and snatching the bottle of liquor from which she is about to drink, throws it away. Infuriated, she springs at her husband with a bread knife, stumbles and accidentally kills herself. Fearing that he will be suspected of murder, Brent hastily makes up in the disguise of an old man and leaves the house. He secures board and lodging with Mrs. Lane and Lucy, her daughter, who regard the "old man" as somewhat of a mystery. He reads in the newspaper that he is wanted by the authorities, and decides to continue in hiding for the present. One day Lucy discovers Brent's identity when his wig slips off. He admits he is the husband of the woman supposed to have been killed by him, and after telling his life story, she is convinced that it was an accident. Lucy has fallen in love with Brent and sympathetically offers to help him escape. She persuades her uncle to lend him the money to go to Canada, and sees him to the train. They tenderly clasp hands, and he suddenly stoops and kisses her as the train pulls out. One year later Lucy receives an affectionate letter from Brent, who is now a prosperous farmer, asking her to come to him on the next train. The note also asks her to bring her mother, and encloses a money order for $100.00.

SUCH A HUNTER (August 28).—While Percival talks grandly of his hunting, fishing and golfing achievements to Eva Spurling and little Cicero, his rival for her hand; they listen in open-mouthed wonder. Eva invites her two admirers to a picnic in the woods. Cicero carries all the burdens and does all the hard work, while Percival lolls about and enjoys himself. At lunch, Percival sits next to Eva and monopolizes the conversation, leaving his rival out in the cold. While Cicero and Eva are washing up the dishes, a little bear cub runs up behind Percival, who promptly breaks all speed records in reaching a tree on the edge of a lake. With the little bear close at his heels, he swarms up the tree and out onto a branch hanging over the water, into which he is precipitated with the branch. After struggling ashore he tells the others an appalling tale of an encounter with a four-footed monster, topping off with a recital of his daring adventures as a war correspondent. Just then a huge mother bear noses up behind them. Eva sees the old bruin first and, with a shriek, jumps to her feet. Percival looks inquiringly around, then does another cross-country run, compared to which his first effort was slow. Little Cicero, however, calmly takes the ribbon off Eva's candy box, and to her amazement, ties it gently around the bear's neck, and after feeding it a piece of candy, bids Mother Bear run along home. The beast trots off and Eva, exclaiming, "My Preserver!" throws her arms around Cicero's neck. When next they meet Percival, that young man receives the "cold shoulder" and Eva and Cicero turn their backs on him.

JOSIE'S CONEY ISLAND NIGHTMARE (Special—Two Parts—August 29).—Our old friend Josie becomes interested in a new book, "The Castaways," depicting the adventures of beautiful Ethlinda and her lover, cast ashore on a desert island. Hank invites her to Coney Island. On their way, Hank gets into a strenuous argument with the conductor, and the two are put off. They finally arrive at the huge amusement place, and there everything seems to remind Josie of her book. While dining in a restaurant, the colored waiter spills soup on them and another row follows. After a day's excitement spent in the Zulu village, and getting mixed up with some of the other amusements, Josie and Hank sit out on the rocks of the seashore to have their lunch, and they fall asleep. The combination of the day's experiences and too much cheese for lunch gives Josie a terrible nightmare, in which she sees Hank and herself cast on a desert island from a big yacht commanded by the villainous car conductor. They are captured by a band o ferocious man-eating savages and sentenced to death by the Cannibal King, who seems to be the colored waiter with whom Hank had th rumpus. After some terrifying adventures an hair-raising escapes, they manage to get the island in a small boat. Josie suddenl awakens, rouses Hank, and to their disma the pair find they are practically marooned, as the tide has risen while they were asleep an the rocks on which they are lying have been converted into islands. After an awful struggle, they get across to the mainland. Josie, in disgust, casts "The Castaways" into the water, and as the book sinks, tells Hank her adventures in Slumberland have cured her of a desire for "Thrillers."

THE WRONG FLAT (August 31).—Occupying adjoining suites on the same floor of the Maddox apartments, Hildo Brown and Henry Brown, strangers to each other, become acquainted and fall in love. In another part of the city, Hope Crewes and Charlie Hollis, sweethearts, have a quarrel and separate. Hope, who is a friend of Hilda's, writes she is coming on for a visit. The note also requests Hilda to leave her key with the janitor should she happen to go out. Charlie and Henry are also friends, and the former sends a similar letter to the latter. Hope arrives first and, Hilda having gone out, she is given the key to Henry's apartment through the blundering stupidity of the thick-headed janitor. Charlie arrives a little later and another mistake occurs when he is given the key to Hilda's apartment. Hope enters Henry's rooms and proceeds to make herself at home, while Charlie does likewise in Hilda's apartment. When Henry returns, he is puzzled and angry to hear some one in his bed room, and is cogitating what to do when Hilda, who has discovered Charlie in her room, locks him in and rushes to Henry for help. She is highly shocked at seeing some ladies' wearing apparel in Henry's room, and when he is unable to satisfactorily explain matters, a severe quarrel is the result. Simultaneously, Charlie and Hope get out on the fire scape and come face to face. After more apologies and frantic explanations of each other's presence, the ludicrous affair is straightened out when all four chance to meet in the hall. When it is made clear how the error occurred, all roar with laughter, Hope and Charlie make up, as do Henry and Hilda, and soon they are laughing about how they got into the "Wrong Flat."

Keeping the Crowd in Summer

The crowd in your theater was not as large last month as it was last March. It was probably due to the fact that your theater was too warm.

You heat your theater in winter. You should make it cool in summer.

Install

Westinghouse Electric Fans

and watch the crowds come back. Use Westinghouse fans for they give the most breeze with the least expense for current.

Send for Folder 4268, showing Styles

Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.

Dept. F. R.
East Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sales Offices in 45 American Cities

Musicians: Why Stick

in the ranks, when we can help make you a

Vaudeville Orchestra Leader at $25 to $75 or more a week? If you know

NOTHING ABOUT MUSIC

it wouldn't pay you to buy our course.

BUT YOU DON'T NEED to be a star to make it pay you big money.

Roy W. Teevin, a successful vaudeville leader, wrote this course, and gives personal attention to all inquiries.

Ask Us All About It.

Teevin's Correspondence School
Box 1, Orpheum Theatre
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

WANTED

Film Exchange Manager.

One With Experience and Who Has Been Succesful, to take charge of office in Middle West. References and Bond Required. Address

G. Y. Z., care Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

DIRECT FROM THE STRAND THEATRE
NEW YORK
THE SENSATIONAL
WAR DRAMA
GERMANIA
IN 5 ACTS
A POWERFUL STORY FILLED WITH STIRRING SCENES
EMPLOYING THOUSANDS OF MEN. DEPICTING THE WAR
OF 1814 BETWEEN THE GERMANS AND THE FRENCH
WRITE OR WIRE TO NEAREST BRANCH FOR TIME OR SEND DIRECT TO HOME OFFICE
WORLD FILM CORPORATION
130 W. 46TH ST., N.Y.C.

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 127 (August 12).—King George and Queen Mary on recent visit to Kaiser Wilhelm—Berlin, Germany. Zeppelin airship the most powerful war craft of the air. Kaiser Wilhelm reviews the First Berlin Brigade.

The British navy passes in review before His Majesty King George—Cowes, Isle of Wight, England. King George reviews regiments from various parts of the United Kingdom. Great Britain's King and Queen returning from the regimental review—London, England.

High officials of the army and navy leaving Elysee Palace after war conference with President Poincare and his cabinet. President Poincare witnesses departure of garrison to fight for the colors—Paris, France.

To avoid the depreciation of securities New York's Stock Exchange closes its doors for the first time since "Black Friday," 1873, when the Gould-Fiske co-operation sought to corner the gold market.

Large sums of Uncle Sam's golden eagles arrive in New York sub-treasury to insure banking stability in the metropolis.

Armored cruiser "Tennessee," with eight million dollars in gold, leaves New York for European ports to aid stranded Americans marooned by the war.

With both hands and feet manacled Commodore Elionsky swims through Hell Gate, roughest sheet of water along the United States coast.

Prominent men become clowns for amusement of thousands at annual Beach Day celebration—San Francisco, Cal.

Cartoons by the famous caricaturist, Hy. Mayer, of Puck.

101 BISON.

THE LAW OF THE LUMBERJACK (Two Parts—August 29).—Bill Jones, foreman of the Hume Lumber mill, deeply admires Mary Clark, sister of Marshall Clark, the head cutter of the Hume logging camp. Tom Jackson is the foreman of this camp and he also is an admirer of Mary.

As there is always a feeling of enmity existing between the lumber Jacks and the mill hands, Jackson and Jones are bitter enemies. This ill-feeling is increased by the desire of each to win Mary's affections.

Mary's brother, Marshall, dislikes Jackson and favors Jones. Jackson, aware of this feeling, takes advantage of his position to place him in the most dangerous position possible during the felling of the giant redwoods. The result is that Marshall is seriously injured. Jackson realizing he is directly responsible for the accident, has Marshall carried from the logging camp to the mill doctor accompanying him on the hazardous trip over the flume. This flume is for the purpose of carrying lumber some sixty-five miles through the mountains, travelling at the rate of a mile a minute. A ride over this flume would be attempted by no man other than one with nerves of steel.

Jones promptly recognizes his enemy's calibre and character through this trip upon which Jackson ventures over the flume. Upon learning, however, that Jackson is responsible for the injuries sustained by Clark, he accuses him of the deed. Jackson resents the accusation. The two giants engage in a terrific fist fight. Jackson is completely knocked out by Jones.

Mary, in the meantime, deeply concerned about the condition of her injured brother who was being attended by the mill doctor, has requested the services of a new arrival in camp, Dr. Wm. Clifford, a prominent young physician from the city. Clifford is attending her brother, when Mary is notified of a fight between Jackson and Jones in progress in the dance hall. Knowing the intense hatred of her two admirers for each other, she appeals to Clifford to accompany her to the dance hall and separate the combatants. Clifford consents; with the result that he is painfully thrashed by Jones.

Mary's sympathy for Clifford impels her to have him carried to her own home. Here she tenderly nurses him. This so angers Jones that he visits Mary's home with the intention of murdering Clifford. Mary intervenes successfully; her appeal is so strong that Jones is made to realize he has indeed a rival in Clifford. This situation is more forcefully brought home to him after Clifford's recovery. Clifford and Mary are discovered in a loving embrace. Jones' first impulse is to kill Clifford, but his great love for Mary deters him. He watches their actions, however, closely and learns that Clifford has arranged to return to the city, without any expressed intention of coming back to the girl with whose affections he has trifled.

Here the law of the Lumberjack is called into play. He himself, loves Mary with an honest, loyal heart. He compels Clifford to return to her, with the promise that he will marry her within the hour, or as soon as a minister can be brought. Clifford at first shows a spirit of reluctance, but realizing the wrong he has done this girl he consents.

CRYSTAL.

BASHFUL BEN (August 25.)—Geraldine has two beaus, Ben and George. Ben is bashful and George is bold. Ben calls on Geraldine. Too bashful to tell her of his love, he fortifies himself with "Dutch Courage". It proves of no avail and only makes Geraldine wonder at his funny actions, Ben learns the address of a Professor who teaches "Self Control." He takes a course and becomes bold. In order to make sure he has lost all sense of bashfulness, he experiments on different people. In the meantime, while Ben has been trying to master his bashfulness, George proposes to Geraldine and is accepted, so when Ben boldly calls he learns his efforts have been in vain. He is consoled by a lady in the Professor's house. He makes love to her, only to find that she is the professor's wife.

BARRELED.—Charlie is in love with Vivian. Pa does not favor his suit, so is compelled to call when Pa is out. Pa returns unexpectedly. Charlie tries to escape. Pa hears the noise, mistakes him for a burglar and shoots. Vivian thinks Charlie is shot, but he has made his escape by diving out the window. He lands in a barrel head first and in trying to extricate himself upsets the barrel. The barrel starts rolling on a long journey, with Charlie still in it. Finally comes to a stop in the woods. They are met by a tough who holds them up and forces Pa to hand over his cash. At this point Charlie escapes from the barrel and rescues them. Pa rewards him with Vivian's hand.

ECLAIR.

THE CHARACTER WOMAN (Two Parts—August 26).—The character woman has grown prematurely old with the heavy burdens placed upon her shoulders; she sees her hold slipping and knows that her age will soon prevent her from securing an engagement. While her companions of the company enjoy life, she stints at every turn to save pennies. And then "the man," in the person of the new company manager, crosses her path.

The character-woman says nothing; the time for that has long since passed. She can only look on in dumb hope that some day justice will find him out. Yet she watches him—and she, of them all, observes the manager's violent courtship of the leading woman. Still, she says nothing.

One night the old actress, her mind on the mission that seems rising before her, forgets her cue. The leading woman, believing herself insulted, demands either an apology or the dismissal from her. It is on this night that the character woman discovers the preparations for an immediate elopement between the leading woman and the manager. She hesitates; in fancy she lives again her bitter experience of years ago with the same man; her mind is made up.

As the young actress is emerging from the stage door after the show she is met by the character-woman; she is forced back into her dressing room, protesting the while, and told the story of the manager's previous love affair, of how he deserted the character woman after wronging her. And the girl has to believe—there is something in the way the tale is told that makes her believe.

With her eyes open, the leading woman takes the train for New York, while the manager waits in vain. The character woman has played her best part and willingly she resigns herself to the dreary routine of one night stands as she sits back in the day coach.

GOLD SEAL.

DEAD RECKONING (4th of the Trey o' Hearts Series—Two Reels—August 25).—Rose, waking from her drugged sleep in the hotel in Portland, is smuggled out of the hotel, driven from Portland to Gloucester, where she is conveyed aboard the fishing schooner that intercepted the Seaventure. The schooner immediately sets sail. When Judith comes aboard Rose is locked up in a stateroom.

Alan and Barcus, having got ashore on Nauset Beach, stretch out panting and half exhausted, and watch the Seaventure burn into the water's edge and sink. A mile farther off shore Judith's schooner lies at anchor. Judith and five male confederates, all dressed as fishermen (including Judith), pile into a dory, leaving Rose imprisoned in her stateroom, and row cautiously ashore to capture Alan and Barcus. When not far from the beach, they burn a blue flare on the water. Judith, with a rifle in the bows, fires at the two men. They retreat down the beach, and strike off inland. Beaching the dory Judith strikes off in pursuit.

Eventually throwing off the chase, Alan and Barcus squirm, unseen, up to the lip of the bluff, where they overlook the dory and its guard. As the latter, unconscious of danger, lights his pipe, Alan clubs him down. Then Barcus and Alan steal the dory and make for the schooner. Judith and her companions return to learn of their loss. They fire upon the dory but without effect. Alan and Barcus take possession of the deserted vessel. Alan finds Rose in the cabin.

Judith's party tramp several miles to the nearest life-saving station which they find deserted. Breaking into the boat house they bring out and launch the motor-driven life boat. In the cabin of the schooner Rose tells Alan of the manner in which she was brought aboard. On deck Barcus fidgets with impatience because of the delay and finally calls Alan. Alan, cutting the anchor, they take in the lights and proceed to get under way. Judith and her party in the stolen life boat pursue. The schooner and the life boat round Monomoy Point. Day breaks and a fog closes in.

Judith at length runs across the schooner in the fog. The life boat bumps into it forward and the five jump aboard. The life boat, abandoned, drifts down the side and sheers off. Alan jumps for the companionway, where he has left his rifle, but slips. Before he can recover he is seized by two of Judith's party. The others grab Barcus. One man holds Rose a prisoner.

At this juncture a huge coastwise steamship, running through the fog at full tilt, runs down the schooner. Alan, Barcus, Rose, Judith and the five men, all in the stern, are thrown into the water. The steamship slips past and out of sight in the fog, then stops and lowers a lifeboat.

Barcus and Rose come to the surface together and the latter, aided by Barcus, swims to the abandoned motor lifeboat. He helps Rose into this. Alan coming to the surface, observes Judith swimming at a little distance but cannot tell whether she is Judith or Rose. He swims to her, offering her assistance. Judith changes her position and tries to drown him by clutching his throat. He manages to break her hold. Barcus finds him, draws him to the side and helps him aboard. Alan recognizes Rose, is much relieved, but is horrified by the thought of Judith drowning. Barcus restrains him from making a fool attempt at a rescue—and starts the engine, steering the life boat away from the scene. Judith comes to the surface unconscious. The boat from the steamship eventually discovers and rescues her.

IMP.

JIM WEBB, SENATOR (Three Parts—August 21).—Jim Webb, a new Congressman, arrived in Washington, after bidding his little mother in the southern village goodbye, dressed as his father dressed before him—with the wide-brimmed black hat, the "Prince Albert" and the flowing tie. But what Jim lacked in style, as city style goes, he made up for with his sturdy tongue, his ability to mould the opinion of others. Time soon found him the chairman of one of the important Senate committees.

Certain moneyed interests are desirous of having a bill passed. Through its lobbyists, Jim is approached and offered a bribe to throw his influence to the bill's support. Knowing the bill is crooked, Jim turns the offer down. Other means failing to reach Jim, the "interest" sets one of its most fascinating women lobbyists against him with the object of furthering the crooked measure. The plan works so successfully that Jim ultimately falls desperately in love with her. As an incident in her plan, she induces him to abandon the ante-bellum style of clothes for the latest thing in dress.

At the close of the Congressional session Jim has engaged himself to the lobbyist, Marion. He induces her to return with him and meet his parents. On arriving, Jim's constituents look askance at the change in his appearance. "He ain't the same old Jim" is their comment.

It is during Marion's stay in Jim's home town that she first awakes to her position; the associations with Jim's mother awakens the best in her woman nature.

At the beginning of the next session the crooked bill is brought up for its first reading. Marion, in the meanwhile having fallen in love with Jim, informs the men who have employed her that it is impossible for her to continue in the scheme. Later, she confesses all to Jim. This comes like the proverbial thunderbolt from a clear sky to Jim. Marion had become such a part of his life that he had, to please her, promised to put the crooked bill through.

The play closes with the last desperate effort of the lobbyists to shut Jim out of the meeting, their failure and denouncement, the foregiveness of Marion by Jim and a glance at the new road of happiness streaching out for the two young people.

WAR
is the theme of Gaumont's
next Feature release
A Woman's Bravery
an episode of the Balkan War
GAUMONT COMPANY
110 West 40th St. NEW YORK.

MATTY JOINS THE JUVENILE POLICE FORCE (August 27).—Yearning for a dog, our Universal Boy adopts one from the Home for Lost Dogs. Returning home with it, he is scolded by his aunt, but she finally consents to him keeping it. Later, the dog is stolen by a hobo. The hobo trades the dog at an East Side saloon for a glass of beer.

Heartbroken over his loss, Matty seeks aid of the newly-organized Juvenile Police force, admiring the snappy appearance of the boys. At this juncture we are shown how these boys train for their work in regenerating the bad boys of the neighborhood. Matty himself is instrumental in breaking up a gang; this gang afterwards become policemen and assist in reclaiming their companions.

Sometime later, while Matty is doing duty on a side street, he notes a little girl entering a saloon for beer. He follows and causes the arrest of the saloon-keeper. As he leaves the saloon he hears a familiar bark; running behind the counter he discovers his stolen dog. There is a happy reunion and Matty takes the dog to the station. Further on, the dog, trained to understand Matty's commands, assists by carrying messages in his mouth in rounding up miscreants.

JOKER.

THE LITTLE AUTOMOBILE (August 26).—Wife becomes disgusted with hubby's Ford car. Because he refuses to buy her a large touring car she goes home to her mother. Hubby receives a telegram from his father saying that he is coming to give him the $5,000 promised upon his getting married. Hubby fears that he will lose the money as he has no wife to present. Wife's brother, however, comes to the rescue. He gets a chorus girl friend of his to act the part of Hubby's wife. Father is fooled, but when Wife reads of Hubby's good fortune in the papers, she hurries home to be in on it. She discovers the other woman. Hubby tells her it is his father's wife. What she happens to overhear, however, lets her in on the true facts in the case. Meanwhile the chorus girl, at the instigation of hubby, has been making violent love to father. Hubby hopes to thus extort a further $5,000 from the "old boy," as heart balm for making love to his wife. Father "falls." Wife interferes. The chorus girl leaves and explanations follow, bringing the story to a happy ending.

WELL! WELL! (August 29).—Mrs. Henry's old well has gone dry. Mrs. Henry is a rich widow with many suitors. Among them are two who pester her much. One is Farmer Jones, and the other is Hank, her hired man. To decide between the two she set them to work digging the well, promising to marry the one who first strikes water. They dig like mad.

Matilda, the widow's maid-of-all-work, is deadly in love with Hank, the hired man. She schemes so that Jones shall be honored with the water's discovery. Meantime the widow meets the deacon, he proposes and they hie themselves to the village and are married.

Jones supposedly finds water first and rushes in search of the widow to claim her hand. Hank, disconsolate, will not heed the love avowal of Matilda, preferring to remain at the bottom of the well. Matilda leaves. Hank climbs out and, filled with jealousy, shovels the dirt back into the well.

Jones discovers that he has been deceived—that the widow has double-crossed him. Matilda returns to find the well filled with dirt; she imagines that the walls caved in and that Hank is at the bottom. Wild with excitement, she calls out the villagers; they all join in the work of digging the well over again. But Hank is not found at the bottom. He is found back of the barn filled with joy and a flask in his hand. As punishment he is made to marry Matilda. All are happy in the end but Farmer Jones. He goes to Nancy for comfort. Nancy is a donkey.

NESTOR.

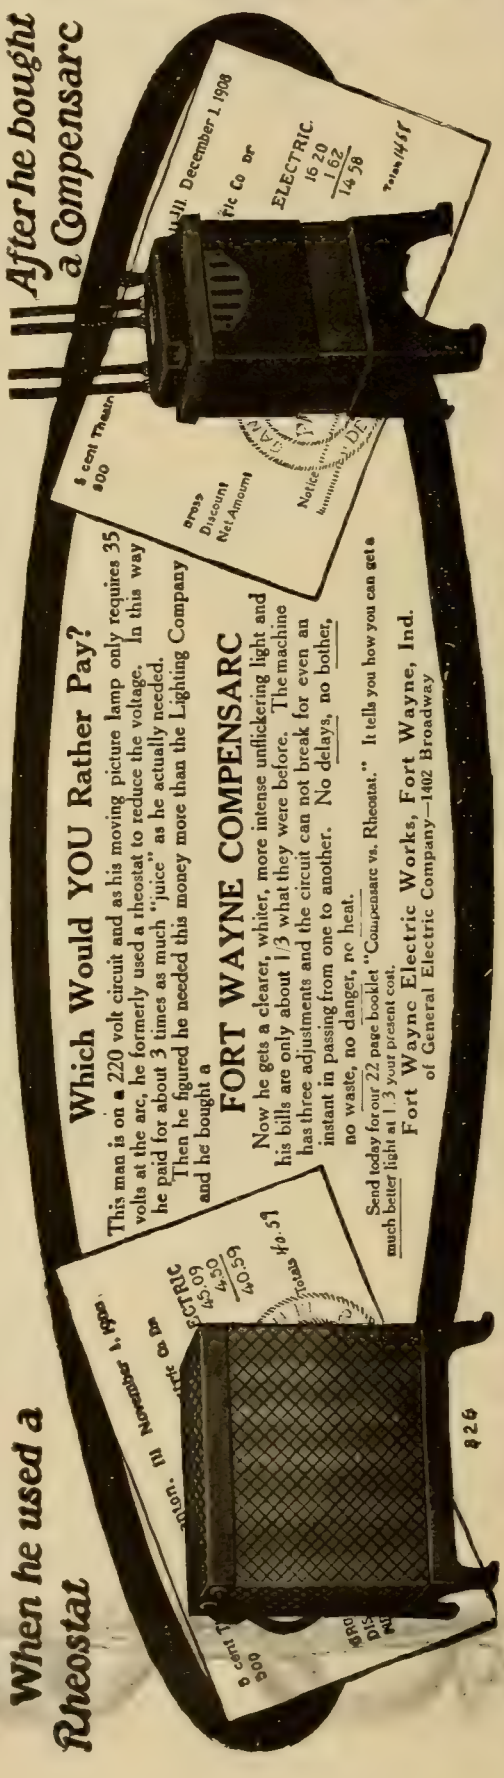
A MINER'S ROMANCE (August 26).—John Burns, "villain," meets a bear which chases him. Burns falls over a cliff. Bob Jenkins, a young miner, finds the unconscious Burns and carries him to his cabin.

The injured man is cared for by Bob and they become pals. Dave Williams and his daughter, Lucy arrive in the mining town. The girl and Bob begin to write for themselves the first chapter of the old, old story.

Burns meets the girl and at once loves her. She likes him but repels his advances. He finds that she cares for Bob. The worm of jealousy eats the heart out of him. Crazy with his love, Burns arranges a gun in the cabin with a string running from trigger to the door latch, so that Bob will be shot when he comes in. Fate, however, sends two mice who gnaw the string. Bob finds the gun and realizes the treachery. He fires his revolver.

Burns hears the shot, thinks Bob is dead and hurries to Lucy. With a tale of Bob's hurting himself he drags her away into the hills, determined that she shall be his. Bob has brought the men and the death of Burns ends the picture.

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc., 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY



After he bought a Compensarc
When he used a Rheostat
Which Would YOU Rather Pay?
This man is on a 220 volt circuit and as his moving picture lamp only requires 35 volts at the arc, he formerly used a rheostat to reduce the voltage. In this way he paid for about 3 times as much "juice" as he actually needed.
Then he figured he needed this money more than the Lighting Company and he bought a
FORT WAYNE COMPENSARC
Now he gets a clearer, whiter, more intense unflickering light and his bills are only about 1/3 what they were before. The machine has three adjustments and the circuit can not break for even an instant in passing from one to another. No delays, no bother, no waste, no danger, no heat.
Send today for our 22 page booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat." It tells you how you can get a much better light at 1/3 your present cost.
Fort Wayne Electric Works, Fort Wayne, Ind. of General Electric Company—1402 Broadway

FOR THE LOVE OF MONEY (August 28).—Three stunning young men at a seaside hotel and not a girl in the place. They sit on a bench and look out upon the ocean yearningly.

Presently the thing that must happen, happens. Victoria, the slender, beautiful and red-lipped, arrives with her father and mother. Buck, the unblushing, sets his eyes for her and receives a smart slap upon the cheek.

To relieve the monotony each of the four chums puts twenty-five dollars in a pot. The first to kiss Victoria is to win the money. Buck gets on her trail, as he thinks, and kisses a young negro woman.

Joe is determined to win the money, even at the expense of propriety. He grabs Victoria and kisses her. Victoria screams. Buck runs to her rescue and kicks the ungallant Joe. Victoria allows Buck one kiss.

Then Walter, the romantic and prim, comes upon the scene. He alone uses the right tactics. He swears eternal love and she listens. After awhile she listens a little closer and pretty soon she listens very close. He promises he will never tell and Walter, in turn, receives his kiss.

In the meantime the three chums are fighting over the bet. Each claims to have won and Victoria is summoned to settle the matter. She is chagrined and ashamed and she weeps. Walter alone recognizes the fine opportunity. He denies indignantly that he kissed her. She turns to him as her natural protector and from thence onward until the end Walter has smooth sailing.

POWERS.

THIS IS THE LIFE (August 28).—Edna and Beatrice, two typists, go to the beach for a holiday, each betting the other her bracelet that she will make the better male catch of the day. Beatrice meets a charming young fellow and feels sure that she has won the bet. Edna, however, soon has her efforts rewarded and feels confident she has made the better catch of the day.

Imagine the consternation of Beatrice, when she finds her hero enacting the role of Bell Hop at the hotel and later, that of Edna, when she discovers that her Beau Brummel is none other than a waiter in the dining room. Both girls are pretty sore until new quarry appears in the person of a prosperous looking broker. Both exert their charm upon the newcomer. To her great chagrin Beatrice learns that he is a married man.

The broker is astounded when he recognizes in the waiter his only son, whom he has sent from his door several months previous to earn his own living. He is taken into the paternal bosom and all is well. The broker's son seeks to have his father square him with Edna, which the father gladly does.

Beatrice sees that she is thoroughly beaten and, discovering the happy couple upon the beach, slyly slips her forfeited bracelet to Edna.

REX.

THROUGH THE FLAMES (Two Parts—August 13).—Bert Daley and Bill Hampton are firemen and close pals, although Bill is years older than his friend. Bert's sweetheart is Anna Jones, a seamstress, who lives with her tiny sister Olive in a tenement house.

One day Frank Carter, owner of the tenement, decides to collect some rent from tenants in arrears. Anna has found life difficult supporting the tiny tot who must have nourishing food and her child pleasures. Carter meets the girl and becomes fascinated with her. His advances are, however, met with disdain by the poor seamstress. He persists, and Bert comes in. Without fuss and feathers of any sort Bert tweaks the wealthy man's nose and throws him out of the place.

Carter, determined on revenge, waits for his chance. He is a member of the Board of Fire Commissioners. Visiting the fire-house, he sees the great friendship of the two men, and, having no way for a direct attack on Bert, strikes at him through Bill. The latter is retired on half-pay because of his age. Bert sees through the act, however. That night Carter, intoxicated, goes to Anna's door, but she refuses to open it. At the solicitous landlady's sugestion he decides to occupy an empty apartment for the night.

Fire from his lighted gas jet breaks out and soon the tenement is in flames. Bert rescues Anna, and Bill takes out the baby. They think all are saved, when the landlady thinks of Carter. She tells Bill. All thoughts of personal wrong are forgotten. Into the flames he darts and up the burning stairway. He drags Carter into the hallway; but the landlord, recognizing his rescuer, breaks away. Dazed, still under the influence of drink, Carter falls through the stairway before Bill can get to him. Escape cut off, the heroic fireman is soon overcome.

But Bert, too, is made of stern stuff. Into another building, over the roofs, down an elevator shaft he goes and pulls out his friend.

A month later, the Fire Commissioners, realizing that a wrong has been done, reinstates the convalescing Bill.

FOR THE SECRET SERVICE (Two Reels—August 27).—Bosnovia, a strong foreign power noted for its advances in aerial navigation,

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Holland Film Manufacturing Company will release on or about October 15, 1914, the following films, bearing the "Holland" brand:

TWO REEL "FEATURES"

THE POISONED HEIRESS—A powerful drama showing the dangers an heiress is subjected to by unscrupulous characters. Intensely emotional.

LOVE CONQUERS CRIME—A wonderful portrayal bringing into play the finer instincts of the human being as a means of salvation from crime.

ONE REEL "FEATURES"

MY WIFE'S PET—A comedy which has enough humor in it to make the audience come again to enjoy it.

VOTES FOR VIMEN—The suffrage question played up so humorously that even the militants will appreciate it.

SAMMY'S MATRIMONIAL DILEMMA—When you go home after seeing this film the neighbors will laugh at your recital and then go to see it themselves.

HOME AT FOUR—This comedy is unusual. Going along the street after the show you will find the audience chuckling at the comical situations.

THE DETECTIVE'S DUTY—Will the son in his capacity of detective be true to his oath or follow filial instinct, when he interrupts his father in the act of robbing a safe?

THINK WHAT THIS MEANS!

Think of utilizing the best of New England scenery. Think of the best actresses and actors trained in the Continental Schools of pantomimic expression. Then think of the combination of the two in original, spontaneous comedy and drama. Nothing Nearer Perfection Can Be Conceived.

A Few State Rights For Sale. Write Immediately for Details.

HOLLAND FILM MFG. CO.

45 BROMFIELD STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

succeeds, through its diplomatic secret service, in getting possession of the first model of Carlton's invention for detecting the coming of an aeroplane. The spies have injured the model by trying to disclose its secrets. Prior to this, Constance Chambers, United States Secret Service agent, has been assigned to the case and in carrying on her operations she has met the young inventor and fallen in love with him. Carlton has fallen in love with the girl also.

While trying to rescue Carlton from danger, Constance is captured by the Bosnovian spies. Through threats of injury to her, Carlton is forced to give in to the demands of his captors and repair the machine which they have broken down in endeavoring to extract its ominous secret with their lack of experience.

Constance, however, escapes with the aid of her chauffeur. The exciting pursuit by the Bosnovian secret agents and her wild ride for help on the desolate country road is shown to the bound and helpless Carlton on the reflector of his invention and his prompt use of the wireless to save the day and win the girl he loves supplies plenty of excitement and a happy ending to the drama.

STERLING.

A STRONG AFFAIR (August 10).—Mr. Heim has a daughter engaged to marry Schultz, the baker. Miss Heim, getting ready for the marriage, finds her slippers need repairing. Going to the cobbler shop she is admired by Mier, the cobbler, who forces his love on her. She resents and leaves.

During this time Schultz finds his shoes need mending. Going over to Mier he tells him of the wedding, and inviting him, shows the picture of the girl. Mier is sore, and swears revenge. Finished fixing Schultz's shoes, he goes into the side room to polish them. He discovers an idea smelling his Limburger cheese. He puts it in Schultz's shoes.

When Schultz arrives at the wedding everything goes lovely till the minister drops his book at Schultz's feet. Getting the smell from the shoes the minister looks Schultz over. Mier, arriving, takes this all in from the other room. Miss Heim, excited and nervous, drops her handkerchief at her lover's feet. In picking it up she smells and then the trouble starts. She stops the minister, telling him she can't marry the man. The father grabs Schultz and throws him out. Schultz takes his shoes off and finds the trouble. Going to the window he sees Mier, the cobbler, getting married to his sweetheart. He takes the cheese and throws it, starting a general fight. The minister runs out and calls the police. But the smell is too great for them. They retreat and seek refuge in a wagon with a sign "Limburger Cheese" on it.

AT 3 O'CLOCK (August 13).—Ford's sweetheart flirts with a gangster and finally turns Ford down in the gangster's favor. Ford determines on suicide, but has not the courage to carry out his intentions. Prof. A. A. Sassan offers his services in removing him from this vale of tears. The time is set for his death at 3 o'clock.

In the meantime Ford's sweetheart tires of the domineering gangster, and feeling her love returning, goes in earch of Ford. Overjoyed at the reunion, Ford forgets his appointment with the man-killer at 3 o'clock. Prof. A. A. Sassan finds it is getting time to kill Ford, and so drinks his killer liquid, which puts him in shape to do the deed. Ford fails to show up. The professor starts hunting his man.

Ford and his sweetheart approach the undertaking place. Ford is reminded of his appointment. Observing the professor's approach, he grabs his sweetheart and runs. The gangster gets the gang together to find his rival. They give chase. By this time the professor and his undertakers are on his trail. Ford and his sweetheart run into the professor's laboratory. Unknown to them the place is filled with explosives of all kinds. The gangster and his gang arrive. Ford and his sweetheart escape. The place explodes just as the professor and his undertakers arrive, blowing them to kingdom come. Ford and his sweetheart have a happy reunion.

UNIVERSAL IKE.

UNIVERSAL IKE, JR., IN THE DANGERS OF A GREAT CITY (August 11).—Ike, having produced the roll of money from the leg of Louise's father's trousers, rents a speedy automobile, and with Louise starts for the beach.

Meanwhile, father, ma and the sheriff, having extricated themselves from the roof of the hotel, start out in mad pursuit. Ike finds a notice in the paper that $100 will be given to any couple who will be married at Venice on that date. He and Louise decide that this is their chance.

The street car line running to Venice is robbed by Black Pete, a terrible bandit. The only thing of real value which the bandid procured was a silver vanity case. Leaving the scene of his crime, he runs into the road and holds up the very machine which is carrying Louise and Ike to the beach. He forces Ike to change clothes with him and attempts to get away in the machine. The nimble Ike springs on to the trunk rack at the back and the journey to the beach is continued.

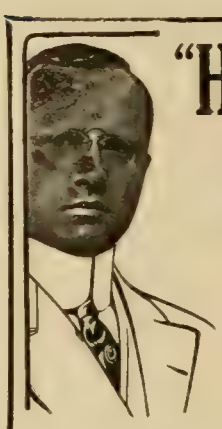
Ma, pa and the sheriff, short of money, take the street car. The sheriff's hat blows out the window and he attempts to stop the car by pulling the bell rope. He mistakes the cord and rings up several dollars on the car register. The irate conductor forcibly ejects him, also ma and pa from the car.

In the loot which the bandit has thrown away is a gold-headed umbrella. The party eventually arrive at the beach and are mistaken for the robbers of the car. Ike is arrested and put into jail with Louise. Ma is also arrested on account of having the incriminating umbrella. She sights the real bandit in Ike's clothes and denounces him to the police. Ma hikes herself to the jail and demands the release of her children. This is refused, and having knocked the guard out, she proceeds to pry the jail bars apart and rescue them.

VICTOR.

THE HONOR OF THE HUMBLE (Two Reels—August 14).—The Count de Marigny, a wealthy French nobleman, tiring of city life, makes arrangements to visit his lodge in Brittany. He is cared for by Jacques Soule and his good wife Martha, peasant folks, who have a beautiful daughter, Flo. The Count arrives, and the little family receive him warmly. He, in turn, is pleased with their attentions. Flo is especially attentive to him, being attracted by his polished manners and genuine manliness. Her beauty and simplicity in turn appeal to the Count. She is different from the type of women he has met in his social circle, and they seek each other's company frequently. This is done without the knowledge of Flo's parents.

One day, while hunting for game on the estate, Jacques captures a poacher, and is about to turn him over to the authorities, when the poacher pleads for mercy and promises to tell him something concerning his (Jacques) daugnter if he will let him off. He tells him of seeing Flo and the Count seated on a rock in the bushes, kissing. Jacques does not believe it at first, but to convince himself starts a search for the couple. Much to his humiliation, he finds the poacher's tale true. Realizing the attentions of a man of such high station could re-



"Hallberg"

TALK NO. 39

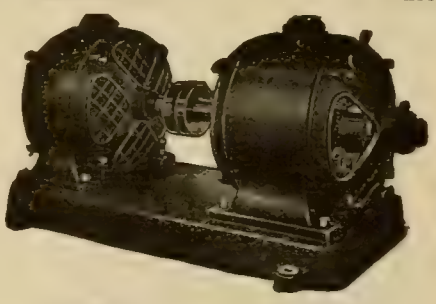
Expert Projection

Messrs. Moss & Brill of New York City control six of the handsomest and best vaudeville and picture theatres in this part of the country. Mr. Moss, through his manager, Mr. Hamil, uses every effort to produce a picture better than can be seen in any other theatre. These theatres are, in view thereof, being equipped with "HALLBERG" A.C. to D.C. ECONOMIZERS adjustable from 25 to 70 Amp. D.C. at the arc producing the most powerful and wonderful illumination ever exhibited on the screen. Mr. Moss has further displayed his confidence in me by retaining me in a consulting capacity in order to secure an ideal motion picture in all of his houses. These houses are not ordinary ones; they seat from 1500 to 3000 and are as magnificent as any in the country. I furnish all equipment for these Theatres and you, Mr. Exhibitor, may also benefit by dealing with "HALLBERG," the "MOTION PICTURE EXPERT," proprietor of the "HOUSE OF QUALITY."

I take old machines in trade as part payment for new ones, and I also make liberal allowance on your old rheostats, A.C. Economizers, A.C. to D.C. Converters and Rectifiers in trade for the celebrated "HALLBERG" A.C. to D.C. Economizers, which give the BEST LIGHT with the LEAST CURRENT.

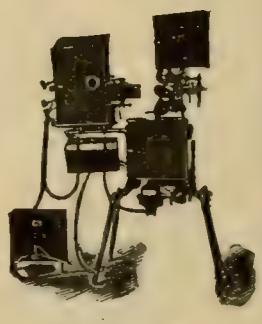
Distributor of the Celebrated Mirror Glass Screen and "Mirroroide" Curtain

Distributor Simplex Machines



HALLBERG A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR ONE OR TWO LAMPS

Distributor Power's 6-A Machines



POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS

I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circulars on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

THE IVAN FILM PRODUCTIONS, Inc.

Presents the World Wide Famous Emotional Actress

MADAM SARAH ADLER

With a Star Cast in

"SINS OF THE PARENTS"

IN 5 PARTS

A Powerful, Realistic Drama, Based on a Big Theme

Full of Gripping Situations and Dramatic Climaxes

The splendid story of love and sorrow, youthful errors, for which the innocent children are paying the penalty, makes its own moral clear in scenes that are truly thrilling and touch the soul of the spectator.

It is so interesting throughout every foot of its length that we believe it to be the most powerful dramatic play that can be found in any photo drama of modern life.

It will not be very long before you will hear what the critics will say about this wonderful production, and what an enormous box office attraction this feature will become.

Will be released August 25th. Get busy; don't miss the opportunity. State rights now selling. Full line of lithographs, such as 1, 3 and 6 sheets, and pictorial heralds in 2 colors.

IVAN FILM PRODUCTIONS, Inc.

32 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK CITY

sult in no good, he seeks revenge upon him by cunningly leading him to the edge of a great cliff. Turning upon him, he endeavors to hurl the Count upon the rocks below.

Thwarted by the superior strength of the younger man, Jacques fails in his attempt, and is only extricated from a perilous position by the heroic efforts of the Count. Flo comes upon the struggle just at its end, and misinterpreting it, orders the Count to leave. He returns to his city home.

Still harboring hatred toward the Count and obsessed by the thought that because of him Flo is unhappy. Jacques goes to the city, and gains entrance to the Count's home. Again he is foiled in his attempt to kill the Count. Leaving his lodgekeeper in the custody of his servants, with instructions to release him in one hour, the Count returns to Flo with protestations of his love. She accepts him. The lodgekeeper returns only to find he has misjudged his master. He finds that the Count is sincere in his love for Flo.

COUNTERFEITERS (Two Reels—August 28).—When Flo discovers that her mother is bent on having her marry the Count Bonci she appeals to her father, the judge. The judge, however, is one of those meek, mild-mannered men who fails to rule except where the law is back of him. To Flo's appeal he turns his hands down. Jack urges Flo to fly with him and Flo prepares to do it; but the Count learns of the scheme and, through the mother, has Flo made a prisoner in her own home.

Until Flo consents to renounce Jack and marry the Count she is to be kept a prisoner. She remains a prisoner. The Count calls and, putting his best manners to the front, attempts to win the girl over the flowers and candy. Flo tries to put her worst manners to the front to discourage the Count. As time goes on, however, Flo commences to weaken under her mother. She sends a note to Jack to that effect.

Jack is desperate. He writes a note to Flo urging her to stand out and assuring her that he has a plan to bring them out of the difficulty. His scheme, though, does not develop until after a healthy brain-storm. It is Tony and Marie, grinding the organ and begging pennies under his window that suggests a way out. Jack buys Tony's whole outfit, clothes and all. A short time later Flo finds him under her window thoroughly disguised with a trained monkey who carries a note to her. It is a matter of a few minutes before Flo is out of the window disguised in Marie's clothes.

The first break in their plans comes when they are surrounded by children and forced to carry out their roles as beggars. At this juncture Mattes comes along and recognizes the outfit of his brother, Tony. He makes a fuss, has Flo and Jack arrested and hauled off to the police station. More trouble comes when the pair refuse to give their names and explain. Meantime, Count Bonci and the mother have discovered the absence of Flo. They rush off to the judge's office. Flo, at the police station, has been glancing over the rogue's gallery. She recognizes a picture as that of Bonci. Assured by the police that they want to capture the party, she tells them to call up the judge and ask for Count Bonci. The climax comes when Flo and Jack stand before the judge and are recognized when Tony and Marie, who have been summoned, recognizes in Count Bonci their long-lost brother, when the mother is completely crushed with the embarrassment of it all and the judge, coming into his own, decides that Jack is the man for his daughter after all.

SIMPLE FAITH (August 10).—Amos Hartley, dean of the fishermen, has a beautiful daughter, Irene, who is loved by Henry Smith, a young fishermman. Albert Simpson is his rival. Irene favors Henry; he asks the father for her hand. Amos consents, making the condition that Henry first show that he can make a good living by his trade as fisherman.

Simpson overhears this, and that night, before Henry starts out to the fishing ground, he cuts his nets. Henry bids good-bye to Irene, and, with his helper, leaves. The following night he returns disheartened and shows the girl and her father his damaged nets. Shortly after the father asks Henry to join him as his helper, as his own is sick. Simpson has attempted to force his attention on Irene and has been repulsed. In revenge he damages the boat that is to take the girl's father and the rival out to sea, hoping to drown them.

At the appointed time the old man's boat fails to appear. The returning fishermen say they have seen nothing of it. As Simpson has planned, the boat had gone to pieces. Henry had assisted the old man, however, and they had found succor on a rock.

Irene meets Simpson and begs him to assist in the search for her father and sweetheart. Simpson, remorseful and softened, consents. The pair leave together. They find Amos and Henry on the rock and bring them off. Simpson is thanked for his aid and nothing is said of the boat's sinking. Simpson, thoroughly repentent, bids them good-bye and departs to start life over. Henry finds happiness with Irene.

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

AMERICAN.

THE SONG OF THE SEA SHELL (August 28).—Roy, a shepherd of the hills and a dreamer is lured from his flock by the "song of the sea shell" as created by Lydia, the beautiful fisherman's daughter, who has just found the wonderful seashell in the surf where she has been wading. Roy and Lydia meet on the big sea coast rocks and become fast friends. One day Lydia shows Roy where she lives and they are surprised upon reaching the house to discover that a traveler, the great musician Rolla, has arranged with Lydia's folks to shelter under their roof for the night. Roy returns to his flock of sheep and sitting under a big tree soon falls asleep and dreams that Rolla has stolen the heart of his new friend Lydia. Troubled over the dream, Roy returns to the house and finds Lydia and her folks and Rolla together. Lydia has been making music upon her shell and the professor, in great admiration for her musical ear, offers to take Lydia to the city and make a great lady of her. Roy has entered unseen by the group and overhears the professor's offer. Jealousy enters Roy's heart and stealing back to his flock sits under his favorite shade tree and again falls asleep this time dreaming that Lydia elopes with Rolla. Roy follows them to the city where meeting Rolla strolling in his beautiful gardens, he attempts to stab Rolla, but Rolla drawing a revolver shoots Roy. Immediately Roy awakes to find Lydia and Rolla bending over him. He tells them of the dream and when Lydia hears that he was killed she loses control of her feelings and clinging to Roy's arm tells him "you must not die Roy, not even in a dream." Roy gazing into her eyes sees the love there that he has hoped for and gathering her close to his bosom calls her "Sweetheart." Rolla retreats leaving them alone.

THIS IS TH' LIFE (Two Parts—August 24).—Farmer Brown, a man who clings to old ideas, is so set against the wheels of progress and modern science, that his son John is compelled to steal away from home in order to complete his education in electricity.

In contrast, Brown's neighbor, Farmer Miller, installs modern ideas and machinery. His farm products and stock thrive and bring great results, while his daughter Rita, can attend boarding school. Rita and John are sweethearts and Rita applauds and encourages John in his struggle toward progression. John becomes a genius and invents many electrical meters and a powerful X-Ray, but time nor success will soften his father's heart or reconcile them.

Miller even lightens his wife's household burdens by installing electrical washing and ironing devices, while Brown's frail daughter, Mary, is a slave to the heat and drudgery of the old methods of housekeeping. One day Mary, while lifting a heavy wash boiler strains her back and falls to the floor. Brown finds her and for the first time fully realizes the necessity of a telephone. Rita just home on her vacation comes to his aid and rushing over home summons a doctor, then by long distance summons John to bring a surgeon and his new X-Ray. The country doctor announces that Mary has suffered a paralytic stroke and will never recover. Brown's heart is crushed, but the next day John and the surgeon arrive. After an examination the surgeon declares to Brown that through the aid of the wonderful X-Ray and modern science his daughter will be permanently restored to health. The wedding day of Rita and John arrives and Brown's gift to the couple is in the nature of a new home completely equipped electrically even to the stove and cooking utensils. He becomes a convert to progress and modern science, and declaring "this is th' life" takes his neighbor Miller for a drive in his own electric car.

LODGING FOR THE NIGHT (August 26).—When Bob returns from a long tramp and starts to take his fiancee to his arms, a surprise awaits him. She returns his ring and he discovers that she loves another. Crushed he turns back and starts out again on a long tramp.

In a remote section of the mountains, Mara, a girl of the wilds lives unhappily with her parents who are unscrupulous, cruel and cold and do not hesitate to rob a traveller or treat Mara with cruelty. She makes one attempt to run away but is unsuccessful and is brought back roughly by Durkey.

Bob arrives at the foot of the mountain where Mara lives. He sees a faintly marked trail leading up into a section of wooded land and learns that it is seldom used. Just the place to forget the girl who jilted him he feels, and so he turns off. Here with the near approach of night he meets Mara, who is caught bathing in a secluded pool and an acquaintance is struck up. She leads him home with her to get "Lodging for the Night." At the cabin Bob incautiously shows his large roll to Durkey in meeting the demand for payment in advance and Durkey and his wife plan to rob and do away with Bob. But Mara suspects their plan and takes measures to protect the man who has just come into her life. At midnight Durkey steals in to rifle Bob's pack, etc. Bob wakes and Durkey is about to kill him when a well directed stone is sent through the window by Mara, destroying Durkey's aim and allowing Bob to grapple with him. In the struggle Durkey is shot and falls to the floor.

With the coming of dawn Bob leaves, sorry for little Mara. But, with Bob gone, the mother turns on the daughter and drives her from the house. Mara feels there is nothing to do but go to Bob. She does. Bob surprised suddenly realizes that he wants her and they start off over the divide together.

BEAUTY.

THE SILENCE OF JOHN GORDON (August 18).—A new parson arrives in the little village of Millville and, having a mother and sister dependent upon him, is more or less of a shabby appearance. Moving into the little house provided by the church, he settles down to do what he can for his new flock. The people of Millville are aristocratic and do not over-love a parson whose shabby clothing will permit of but little public intimacy. The parson later meets the Rector's daughter, Helen, a proud village belle, but she spurns him and flaunts her favoritism for Tom Black, a small town disciple of Bacchus, who has been called to account by the parson for his public dissipations.

One evening Black elopes with Helen and of necessity calls upon the parson to marry them. The parson has ideas of his own regarding the match, however, and as a result remonstrates. A quarrel follows which quickly comes to blows much to the amusement of a passing village lad, and the drunkard is forced to give up his matrimonial intentions. Friendship forms as a result of the fight and Helen becomes interested in the parson who, upon appearing in his pulpit the following Sunday with a black eye and refusing to tell where or how he got it, is dismissed from his parish. As he is about to leave town with his mother and sister, the rector who has been informed of the fight by the town lad, forces a confession from his daughter and hurries to the depot in time to right matters and reinstate the parson into the good graces of the villagers and once again place him in the little church pulpit.

The Parson ultimately wins the heart and hand of Helen and settles down to a happy life of peace and quiet in the midst of his little Millville flock.

BRONCHO.

THE SHERIFF'S SISTER (Two Parts—August 26).—Anna Mason, sister of Jim Mason, the sheriff, is in love with Jack Lewis. Lewis gets into a dispute in the gambling house, and the sheriff hustles him out, just as Anna is passing. She breaks the engagement. Lewis returns to the saloon to drown his sorrows in drink. An escaped bandit, his eye on the faro bank, waylays the gambler that night, murders and robs him. Finding a revolver in the path, he leaves it near the body. The weapon belongs to Lewis, who in his tipsy state has dropped it going home, and in its identification leads to his arrest and a prison sentence.

Shortly after, however, he makes his escape, and appeals to Anna Mason to hide him. The bandit and a companion enter the house, ransack it and threaten Anna, who is defending the sheriff's money. Lewis comes to her rescue killing one of the thieves and mortally wounding the bandit. His dying confession exonerates Lewis, and Anna and her lover are reconciled.

DOMINO.

THE VILLAGE 'NEATH THE SEA (Two Parts—August 21)—Red Elk, a young Indian brave, marries Little Fawn of the Sioux, and takes her home with him to his village on the California coast. Big Bear, fired with jealousy, tells Red Elk that he will not keep his bride many moons, and one night while they are sleeping, Big Bear enters the tepee and carries Little Fawn away. Red Elk pursues them all night, overtaking them at last by the sea. A glimpse of the Indian girl's face tells him that she is dead. The young brave returns to his people, half crazed. An aged woman of the tribe relates to him an old, old legend of the village under the ocean where Little Fawn awaits his coming. At midnight Red Elk throws himself into the sea.

KAY-BEE.

THE WINNING OF DENISE (Two Parts—August 21).—Jean St. Croix is dispatched from the frontier post of the Arctic Trading Company to Montreal with important messages. En route he is accidentally shot by Denise, daughter of Pierre De Luce, an independent fur trader. St. Croix is taken to Pierre's house, but the old man, on discovering whom he represents, orders him, wounded as he is, to leave. De Luce cannot forget that he was bitterly wronged by the Trading Company many years before. That same night a thief attacks the

We Have Bought the Exclusive Rights for the State of California, for

"THE ESCAPE"

"A Powerful Argument for the Eugenists"
—N. Y. American

Adapted from Paul Armstrong's Great Play

Produced in Seven Reels by D. W. GRIFFITH The World's Greatest Moving Picture Director

With an All-Star Cast, Featuring Mae Marsh, Donald Crisp, F. A. Turner, Blanche Sweet, Robert Harron, Owen Moore. With a Prologue showing the Origin of Life. The Imperial Theatre paid the highest price for THE ESCAPE ever paid for the rental of a picture.

FOR BOOKINGS WIRE OR WRITE

CLUNE FILM EXCHANGE

611 MARSH STRONG BUILDING LOS ANGELES

house, and only St. Croix's timely help saves the life of the aged trader. In gratitude, De Luce takes him into partnership and gives him his daughter's hand in marriage.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 85.

1. Europe is now ablaze with the conflagration of war.
2. Aviators will do tragic part in the great conflict.
3. New York crowds anxiously watch bulletin boards for war news.
4. Trans-Atlantic shipping practically abandoned on account of European war.
5. Three attempts to cross the Atlantic in small boats are started simultaneously.
6. Motor boat regatta at Lake George, N. Y. Baby Speed Demon II wins the championship cup.
7. "Two Moons," of Custer massacre fame, visits President Wilson at the White House.
8. Destructive forest fire burns several big lumber mills and menaces Portland, Ore.
9. Ceremonies at opening of the canal which makes an island of Cape Cod.
10. Burned bridge causes fatal wreck near San Antonio, Texas. Brave engineer saves passengers by emergency brakes.
11. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the President, dies at the White House. This picture was taken shortly before her last illness.

PRINCESS.

A RURAL ROMANCE (August 14).—John Winslow and Henry Jameson, who have been old business rivals, decide to bury the hatchet and seal a lasting peace with the marriage of Jameson's son, Boyd, to Winslow's daughter, Kate. When Boyd meets Kate, however, he decides that while she is a charming girl, he does not care to marry her. His father disowns him and, accompanied by his valet, the young man tours the country. In a remote village he falls in love with a delightful girl who is visiting her aunt. They are in the act of eloping, when they meet Jameson and Winslow. Then Boyd learns that his sweetheart is Kate's sister.

RELIANCE.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (No. 31—August 17.)—The Tiffany necklace that Mrs. Knickerbocker gave her niece for a birthday present was stolen in Chapter 30, by Anni, the German police dog, now turned thief, at the command of her master. It is now the next morning. Margaret, in her hurry to keep an appointment with Robert W. Chambers, the famous author, dresses quickly, and in the very novelty of the necklace, quite forgets its existence. So she doesn't miss it until, as her aunt keeps her waiting, she bethinks herself of it and goes back to her boudoir to have a little peep.

It is gone! Margaret cries out and brings Mrs. Knickerbocker to her rooms. At that moment Kid Joseph is brought to the drawing-room and the two, aunt and niece, are hastily summoned. For Kid Joseph has brought in the white satin case in which the jewels lay, but the case is empty.

The Kid has seen something. His innate hostility to Dunbar and a rather too quick mind have made him certain Dunbar is guilty. Kid Joseph found the box in the area-way of Mrs. Knickerbocker's house. When he finds out from the two women what has happened he instantly accuses Dunbar of the crime.

Thereupon Margaret determines to take the matter of catching the thief into her own hands. Mrs. Knickerbocker, firm in the belief that her servants are honest, starts an independent investigation and gets a private detective. Margaret goes to Police Headquarters and learns how to take and tabulate finger-prints.

For on the outside of the box is a grimy thumb-print. Clever as has been the thief in devising a new way to steal, he allowed himself to make that one break without which no criminal ever could be caught. And so, when Dunbar calls a little later in the day, Margaret, hearing him accused by Kid Joseph, decides to hold a finger-print party, and in this way the theft is traced to Dunbar.

THROUGH THE DARK (Two Parts—August 29).—Anne and May, two sisters, work in a jewelry store. May borrows a necklace from the store to wear at a dance, intending to replace it early next day. But in the morning she is late. The necklace is found to be missing, and to avoid discovery, May hides the jewelry in Anne's coat. Silent through fear, May sees her sister arrested and sent to prison.

On her release, Anne is hounded by Kane, a fellow prisoner. She escapes to a distant town where she eventually marries. Kane turns up, blackmails her, and reveals to her husband her prison record. May, who is living in the same city, married and happy, save for the torturing thought of her sister's punishment for her guilt, learns of the situation. She confesses the truth to Anne's husband.

THANHOUSER.

A DOG'S GOOD DEED (August 23).—Mr. and Mrs. Gladwin, a wealthy, childless couple, make the mistake of lavishing upon a dog all the affection and care which should have gone to some forlorn human being. The dog is not happy in his unnatural surroundings, and on the first opportunity, he runs away to the home of Mrs. Smith, the Gladwin's washerwoman, where he is in his element frolicking with Bobbie Smith's dog. When the Gladwins find him there, they see their error. They take Mrs. Smith and her boy home to live in their beautiful house, and the two dogs are given a kennel in the yard.

McCARN PLAYS FATE (Two Parts—August 18).—McCarn, a veteran police detective, has a protegee, Anderson, a young patrolman. Anderson captures "Bull" Klein, a noted crook, but through the influence of friends, Klein is released. Later, however, McCarn arrests Klein and he is sent to prison. When he gets out, he plans to revenge himself. McCarn is advised that Klein intends to fake a fight in the saloon so that when Anderson interferes they can put him out of the way. By a clever ruse, McCarn succeeds in turning Klein and his accomplice against one another. Anderson escapes the trap laid for him, and the two crooks are brought to justice.

HER BIG BROTHER (August 16).—Little sister was much looked down upon by brother Roy, two years her senior. He was always telling her what little girls could not do. Worst of all, he would not teach little sister how to swim. But Doris found another instructor, where only a very bright little girl would have thought of looking for help. She watched her pet dog in the water, and by imitating "dog paddle," became an adept, unknown to big brother. When the school swimming contest came around, Doris "swam rings" around Roy. And after that big brother had to admit that little girls could do lots of things even better than boys—sometimes.

FEATURE FILM STORIES

IVAN FILM PRODUCTIONS.

SINS OF THE PARENTS (Five Parts—August 25).—Laura Henderson, an orphan, is brought up by her aunt, Mary Sherman, who keeps a boarding house. Among the boarders is Angelo Angelini, an Italian violinist. Laura is infatuated with the handsome Angelo, who loves her, and they are engaged to be married. Angelo betrays the girl, and later leaves her, with the explanation that he is to make a western concert tour. A month later, the poor girl receives a letter from Angelo telling her that he has returned to Italy, where he has a wife and child.

Later a daughter is born to Laura, who is named Ruth. Unable to obtain employment in her own town, the unfortunate mother abandons her child to the care of her aunt, Mary, and goes to New York. Ill and weak from hunger, the poor young mother is picked up in the street by Reverend Henry Bradley, who takes her to his home. Dr. Bradley and his mother offer Laura a home, and work as secretary to the minister.

Later Dr. Bradley falls in love with Laura, and asks her to become his wife. Laura accepts his proposal, and she marries Dr. Bradley, without telling him that she has an illegitimate child, and she secretly sends money to her aunt for the support of her child, Ruth.

Nineteen years later, Dr. Bradley is now chaplain of the City Prison of New York. They have a daughter, Aline, who is about to be engaged to Walter Jordon, who comes from one of the finest families in New York.

Ruth, now a girl of 20 years, believes that Mary is her mother. One day she happens to find out through a letter that Laura sent to Mary, that she is not Mary's daughter. Ruth forces Mary to tell her, who, and where her mother is, and at last Mary confesses the truth. Ruth determines to go to New York and seek her mother.

Meanwhile Angelo has returned to America and, under the assumed name of Angell, lives in New York with his son, Tony. The boy refuses to work and becomes one of the vilest of all human creatures, a "cadet." Tony pretends to rescue Ruth from an attack by one of his pals, prepared by himself, and the poor girl, believing him to be a decent man, accompanies him to a restaurant. Then Tony takes Ruth to his own room, telling her it is the home of his "highly respectable aunt."

A letter sent by Tony to an accomplice, offering to sell the girl to him for white slavery in New Orleans, is seen by Ruth, who realizes her perilous position. She tries to escape from the room. Tony threatens her with a pistol, and in the struggle which follows Tony is shot dead. Angelo enters the room just as his son has been shot. The poor girl is arrested and taken to prison, where she meets Chaplain Bradley and tells him her sad story.

Unaware that it is his own wife's daughter, he is helping Ruth. The chaplain takes Mrs. Sherman to visit Ruth in prison. Mrs. Sherman is confronted with a terrible situation.

Laura's legitimate child, Aline, is celebrating her engagement to Walter Jordon in the magnificent home of the latter's parents. Mrs. Sherman decides it is her duty to the unfortunate Ruth to acquaint her mother with the terrible facts.

Laura while celebrating the betrothal of her younger daughter, learns that the child of her first love languishes in prison charged with murder. The unfortunate mother becomes temporarily deranged. Aline, the younger daughter, on learning of her mother's disgrace, is heartbroken, breaks off the engagement with Walter, and later her dead body is found by her father and lover, the second victim of the Sins of the Parents.

At the trial of Ruth for the killing of Tony, Angelo appears as a witness. The father is about to speak the words that will condemn his own daughter to the electric chair for the killing of his son, when a commotion in the rear of the court room causes him to be silent. Laura, the mother of the prisoner, has escaped from her nurse and has forced her way into the court room. She recognizes Angelo, the man who betrayed her 22 years ago, and who is now about to condemn his own daughter.

Angelo now learns, for the first time, that his own daughter killed his son; he suffers keenly, refuses to speak. The half demented mother is led out of the court room by her husband and court officers in a hysterical condition.

The jury brings in a verdict of acquittal on the ground of self-defense. Ruth is free, but alone in a great city. Dr. Bradley takes Ruth into his home to her mother. Laura, realizing the noble stand of the minister, and feeling that she is unworthy of her husband she has deceived, decides to leave the house with her daughter, Ruth, in hope that the disgrace she brought upon her husband will be forgotten, but Bradley resigns as minister and insists upon Laura staying where he will stay. He folds both, mother and daughter, in his arms, gives them his blessing, thanks the Lord that to him it has been given the honor to help two suffering souls into the light.

Angelo, sugering as the result of his youthful sins, decides to commit suicide, but has not the courage to do so.

Bradley receives a reply from the board of directors of his congregation, stating that they have looked into the misfortune that has befallen upon his family and tney congratulate him for his noble act, and ask him to remain with them, and as their minister.

Bradley shows the letter to his wife. Laura, heartbroken, falls on her knees and begs forgiveness of her husband.

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORP.

NORTHERN LIGHTS (Five Parts—August).—Captain Gray, of the United States Army, detailed to quell the Indian uprising, is wounded. A courier is dispatched to Gray's home with the news. Mrs. Gray, about to become a mother, receives a violent shock at the recital of the details of her husband's injuiry by the courier.

The child born at this inopportune time is Wallace Gray. The prenatal influence exercised over the child at the time of his mother being informed of her husband's injury marks him as a coward. The report of a shot or the sound of an explosion throws the lad into spasms of fear.

He is sent to college and there forms a strong comradeship with Swiftwind, an Indian, sent by his tribe to be educated.

Wallace also forms a strong attachment for Florence Dunbar, a ward of his father, who is now Colonel Gray. Swiftwind is made acquainted with the moral defect inherent in Wallace and pities and protects him whenever the lad is made the subject of the jeers of his friends because of his born defect.

Swiftwind becomes a graduate physician and receives a commission as assistant army surgeon, detailed to Fort Terry, in command of Colonel Gray. His immediate superior is Dr. Sherwood, an unscrupulous man.

Florence Dunbar and Wallace Gray, traveling in a stage coach to Fort Terry, are attacked by Indians. Wallace, with a cringing fear, deserts his companion, who is saved only by the timely arrival of Dr. Sherwood and troops.

Sherwood marries Florence, nothing more being heard of Wallace, who, however, enlists in another regiment under General Crook, deserts under fire, and ultimately surrenders himself to his father, in the hope that he will be condemned to death. The boy, however, is sentenced to the "pyramids."

While working under "ball and chain" he hears that his father and a small band of Americans are hemmed in a canyon by Indians with no hope of relief. The latter, having observed the Northern Lights in the heavens, follow their belief that the "Lights" fortell victory in battle and start on a massacre.

General Crook calls for a volunteer to pass

HEPWORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION

PRESENTS

THOMAS J. BENTLEY'S VERSION OF CHARLES DICKENS'

"THE CHIMES"

THE LATEST PRODUCTION OF THE HEPWORTH MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LONDON
MUST BE SEEN TO BE APPRECIATED—YOUR OPINION IS EARNESTLY SOLICITED

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING 3 PARTS RELEASED AUG. 29TH

ANOTHER HEPWORTH MASTERPIECE!

"THE TERROR OF THE AIR"

A THRILLING STORY, BRILLIANTLY PICTURED AND MASTERFULLY ENACTED
RELEASED AUG. 29TH TWO PARTS STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING
BONA FIDE STATE RIGHT BUYERS MAY, AT ANY TIME, VIEW THESE PRODUCTIONS AT OUR SHOWROOM

Hepworth American Film Corporation
WORLD'S TOWER BUILDING, 110-112 WEST 40TH ST.
Telephone 3095 Bryant NEW YORK CITY

ANIMA FILM RENTAL COMPANY

EXHIBITORS!

TO THE EXHIBITORS OF NEW ENGLAND,
GREATER NEW YORK, NEW YORK STATE AND NORTHERN NEW JERSEY

WE HAVE ISSUED A BOOKLET WHEREIN IS CONTAINED A CONCISE DESCRIPTION OF PHOTOPLAYS WHICH WE HAVE FOR RENTAL. INCLUDED IN THIS LIST ARE SOME OF THE BEST PICTURES OF THE HEPWORTH MANUFACTURING COMPANY AND THE TURNER FILMS, LTD., THE LATTER FEATURING MISS FLORENCE TURNER, THE POPULAR FAVORITE OF TWO CONTINENTS. TO THOSE WHO HAVE NEVER EXHIBITED OUR FILMS WE ARE ESPECIALLY DESIROUS OF PRESENTING THIS CATALOGUE AND WILL, UPON RECEIPT OF YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS, FORWARD SAME TO YOU.

COMEDY AND DRAMA—SINGLE AND MULTIPLE REELS

"WRITE RIGHT NOW!"

WORLD'S TOWER BUILDING
110-112 WEST 40TH ST., NEW YORK CITY
TELEPHONE 3095 BRYANT

CALIFORNIA EXHIBITORS APEX FEATURE SERVICE PANTAGES THEATER BLGD SAN FRANCISCO

through the Indian lines to deliver a message to Colonel Gray. Swiftwind volunteers, but being weak from exhaustion and privation, falls as he is about to commence his ride.

Wallace begs for the opportunity to redeem himself, and mounting his horse, arrives with the message to the besieged band just as they are about to recognize a false flag of truce of the Indians.

Sherwood attempts to kill his wife by substituting cholera germs in a bottle labelled morphine. He is injured, however, and Swiftwind, intending to alleviate Dr. Sherwood's suffering with morphine, inoculates him with the cholera germs, unwittingly putting an end to him.

Wallace's redemption restores him to the affection of Florence, whom he marries.

APEX.

THE SECRET SEVEN (Four Parts).—London, the refuge of political and criminal outcasts of all countries, adds yet another to its list of secret societies. This society, known as The Mystic Seven, the members of which have successfully carried out several daring raids, has for some considerable time been a menace to public safety.

The outcome of one notable robbery, the theft of Lady Seymour's valuable necklace, is that the famous detective, Paul Sleuth, is called upon to endeavor to put an end to the infamous exploits of this gang.

The loss of the necklace being discovered, Sleuth is immediately sent for and introduced as an old friend of Lord Seymour. The robbery was perpetrated by one of the Seven, who contrived by a clever ruse to be included in the list of guests invited to join the house party. Not satisfied with one haul, he endeavors to accomplish another, but is frustrated by Sleuth, who obtains possession of the plunder by adopting the disguise of an outside accomplice, whom he has overcome.

Collecting the servants, Sleuth strives to arrest the thief, who escapes through his bedroom window; an exciting chase ensues, culminating in the successful flight of the latter.

By similar means a rich heiress, the guest of the Duke of Axminster, is kidnapped, being carried off in a balloon, and held for ransom.

In this case also Sleuth's services are requisitioned, and while tracing the footprints he encounters the local postman, who tells the detective that, when emptying the pillar box the previous night, he saw a balloon ascend from the grounds at the back of the house and travel in a westerly direction.

Determined to follow up this clue, Sleuth charters an aeroplane and scours the surrounding country in his search. Eventually he discovers the balloon, and goes in pursuit. On overtaking it, he hovers above the balloon, and finally leaps on to the envelope, leaving the aeroplane to descend pilotless; clinging to the net he climbs down into the basket, where finds the girl a captive of one of the gang. A fierce fight ensues in which the detective is overcome and forced out of the basket.

Luckily he falls into a river, and except for the shock, Sleuth is little the worse for his hairbreadth escape. Returning to his clients, he tells of his failure and they decide to send the ransom, but devise at the same time a means whereby the haunts of the gang may be located. A cinema camera is fitted in one of the head-lamps and the car driven to the appointed spot, when the gang blindfold the driver and take over control. The girl is brought back safely; the film developed, and thus the headquarters of the society discovered.

Accompanied by a force of plain clothes men, Sleuth has the house surrounded, but a determined resistance is offered. Eventually after a fierce struggle the great detective has the satisfaction of seeing six of the gang in custody, while the leader lies at his feet lifeless, having jumped from the roof, preferring death to the fate which now awaits his late companions of the Mystic Seven.

COSMOFOTOFILM.

WHAT A WOMAN WILL DO (4 Parts—August).—Alice, the second wife of Philip Lewis, proves an unkind stepmother to his little daughter Dolly. The husband and his wife quarrel over Alice's treatment of the child and in a fit of passion the woman runs away with Frederick Bryce, an old lover. Heartbroken, Philip Lewis devotes his future life to guarding the welfare of his daughter. Ten years pass by. Lewis having met with business reverses, his daughter, now grown to a beautiful woman, is forced to seek employment and becomes a chorus girl. Frederick Bryce, now a ruined man owing to Alice's extravagance, meets Lewis in the street and recognizes him. He writes to Lewis saying that he is on the verge of ruin and contemplates suicide. He begs his former enemy to visit him and after some hesitation Lewis decides to grant the man's request. On reaching Bryce's home he finds the man, half crazy with drink, about to take his own life, and before Lewis can prevent the tragedy, Bryce shoots himself and the police, rushing in, the man he sent to prison. In starting back in horror from her Bryce overturns a pile of books and from the leaves of one falls the letter Lewis received from the suicide. Dolly, who has been searching everywhere for this letter, recognizes it at once and Bryce tells her that they will now be able to obtain a new trial for her father. Dolly hastens to Jack's side to tell him the news and through her careful nursing the young man recovers. Meanwhile Judge Bryce has exerted his influence on Lewis' behalf with the result that the man is released from prison. Father and daughter are reunited and Bryce at last gives his consent to the engagement of Jack and Dolly.

GENERAL FILM CO.

VENDETTA (Kleine—5 Parts—Sept. 1).—Fabio Romani is the husband of beautiful Nina, an Italian girl. They have a charming daughter, Stella by name, and their life in Naples on Romani's great estates is one of love and happiness. Both husband and wife are fond of Guido Ferrari, who is a constant visitor at their home, and whose friendship for Fabio has been lifelong.

A great cholera plague ravages the populace of Naples and Fabio one day decides to go to town in spite of the danger, on an errand of importance. On his return he is seized with the cholera, and drops to the street. He is picked up by the hooded doctors, pronounced dead, and, as a precaution against infection, his body is immediately placed on a cheap wooden casket and buried in the long disused Romani family vault.

After some hours of apparent death his body stirs. He breathes, feels, moves and his casket slips from the niche and falls to the floor of the vault, taking with it a coffin that had lain undisturbed for many centuries on a lower tier. Romani struggles to his feet and the truth dawns on him. He immediately plunges into the casket now broken open and finds tremendous riches in gold, silver and diamonds with a note stating that they had been placed there by a pirate many generations ago. Almost overcome by his adventure, and suffering an agony of mental torture, Fabio's hair turns white in a single hour. He finally breaks free of the tomb and rushes through the garden to his mansion. From behind an ornamental column he sees his old friend Guido embracing his wife and determines upon a horrible revenge. He hurries to the nearest town, buys a pair of green spectacles and a suit of clothes. Armed with almost inexhaustible riches of the treasure chest, he assumes the name of Count Oliva and after a lapse of time, returns to the scene of his misfortunes. He succeeds in obtaining an introduction to Guido and in course of time the two become fast friends. He professes himself to be an old friend of the dead Count Romani's father. In course of time he meets his faithless wife and soon becomes an almost daily visitor at his own home. At this time his child Stella is taken sick and dies. Before the little girl passes away, Fabio makes himself known to her.

The wealth of Fabio dazzles Nina and, being faithless, selfish and mercenary, he has but little difficulty in laying the foundation of his vengeance. Guido leaves town for a period and during the interval, Fabio receives the consent of Nina to become his wife and to jilt Guido. Fabio then announces a grand dinner in honor of Guido's return and, at the psychological mo-

TEXAS EXHIBITORS APEX FEATURE SERVICE DALLAS TEX. OKLA. ARK. LA.

FLA. GA. ALA. MISS. LA. APEX FEATURE SERVICE 315 RHODES BUILDING ATLANTA, GA. TENN. N. C. S. C. VA.

Cosmofotofilm Co

"Where the real featurers come from"

will shortly release

"THE BANDIT OF PORT AVON"

IN FOUR PARTS

(Copyrighted 1914)

"I give you two minutes to sign that confession that YOU are the Bandit of Port Avon"

STATE and TERRITORY RIGHTS NOW SELLING on this Intensely Dramatic Feature which is full of thrills and sensationalism and will draw Crowded Houses. Write, Wire or Phone for Free Heralds and Sample Posters, 1s, 3s and 6s.

"WHAT A WOMAN WILL DO"

IN FOUR PARTS

(Copyrighted 1914)

A Very Powerful Drama Feature. State Rights NOW SELLING. (For further details see last week's M. P. World, page 1003). Full line of highly artistic and attractive Posters, Heralds, etc.

SPECIAL! EUROPEAN WAR!

THE FOREIGN SPIES—An Early Release

Spies from the Enemy are in London in order to secure the secret plans of a new Automatic Machine Gun which has been ordered by the War Department. This is also a FOUR REEL FEATURE of Tremendous Drawing Power. Intensely Clever Plot, Superb Photography and Brilliant Dramatization

WRITE FOR HERALDS, POSTERS, ETC., AND FULL PARTICULARS

Cosmofotofilm Co

Phone, Bryant 8126

110-112 West 40th Street, New York City

ment, announces to the assembled guests the engagement of himself and Nina. Guido, stung to the quick, strikes Fabio and a duel follows, in which Guido is mortally wounded. Before he expires, Fabio removes his green glasses and reveals his identity to the dying Guido.

The night of the wedding arrives with its hundreds of guests. On that night just before the supper, Fabio takes Nina by the hand and leads her to the vault, telling her that he will show her the source of his fabulous wealth and the ever mercenary Nina follows to the door of the vault where she hesitates. Fabio seizes her and throws her through the open door and then follows himself. Safely in the vault, he discloses his identity and the shock drives Nina insane. The sight of the once beautiful woman now a crazed being with distorted face, playing among the jewels in the treasure chest, almost causes Fabio's cold heart to relent. Suddenly the earth moves beneath them. There is a rush and roar of crashing pillars, a mighty stone hurtles through the roof of the tomb, striking Nina and killing her instantly. Fabio, believing it the vengeance of the Gods, rushes from the ruined vault in panic. Thus is the Vendetta accomplished.

FAMOUS PLAYERS.

THE BETTER MAN (Four Parts—August 10.)—Mark Stebbing and Lionel Barmore are two young clergymen in a metropolis, both friends, both earnest workers for the cause in which they have enlisted, but of distinctly opposite types. Both love the same woman, the beautiful Margaret Wharton, the daughter of a proud and wealthy old capitalist, and a strong supporter of the fashionable church of St. Hilda's. The Bishop of the Diocese has two vacancies for which he must recommend rectors; one of the churches is that of the rich St. Hilda's, the other that of St. Osmund's, the broken and deserted church of the slums. Stebbing, the uncouth and self-made man, chooses the poverty-stricken church of the poor and sinful as the place that needs him most, while the polished and brilliant Barmore is glad to see the beautiful church of St. Hilda's fall to his lot. Barmore and Stebbing confess their love to Margaret on the same day, and she, in doubt as to which is the better man, answers them both evasively. Barmore takes his leave, gallantly desiring he may hope for a definite answer in the future; but Margaret's little coquetry is mistaken by the straightforward Stebbing for a disguised "yes," and he seizes her in his arms and fervently kisses her. Margaret is shocked and resentful, and in anger sends for Barmore and accepts him in Stebbing's presence. Stebbing, feeling that he has been ungentlemanly, in self-revulsion leaves her presence, and goes back to the slums. The old Bishop dies, and Barmore and Stebbing are both named as candidates for the Bishopric. The men naturally cease to be friends during the struggle for the two prizes, but Stebbing himself tells the people that Barmore is better fitted for the exalted position. Wharton's workmen go on strike, and Stebbing learns of a dynamite plot against the works, and stops it just in time to save Wharton's entire property from ruin, though much is destroyed. He pleads with Wharton to yield to his employes' demands, but without success. On the day of the election of Bishops, Stebbing leaves the Church to rush to the yards where he has heard strikers are rioting. He finds that the toughs among the infuriated strikers have placed Margaret in a shed in which deadly explosives are stored, which are about to be set on fire. He saves Margaret, and prevents the militia from firing upon the strikers, being himself nearly killed in the struggle. The Bishopric is given to Barmore, but through these circumstances the strength of Stebbing's character is revealed to Margaret, and she gives him her promise as "the better man."

R. AND M. (GRIFFITH).

THE AVENGING CONSCIENCE, OR, THOU SHALT NOT KILL (Six Parts—August 24).—A baby has been left in the care of a bachelor uncle, who lavishes all his love and tenderness on his charge. He plans a great literary career for his nephew; for the boy has shown promise of future greatness.

But he had reckoned without thought of a possible obstacle—woman. In the freshness of his youth, the young man meets a beautiful girl, whom he calls in the joy of his poetical nature, "Annabel Lee." The twain soon grow to love each other, with all the power which Poe has so vividly portrayed in his poems of the affections.

But the old uncle, his heart set upon the boy's future, interferes. When "Annabel" calls to invite her young swain to a garden party, the uncle insults her by accusing her of pursuing his nephew "like a common woman," hoping thereby to prevent her ever returning. The insult sinks deep into her heart, and, realizing that the boy's obligations to his uncle are too great to be honorably broken, the two decide to part forever. Meanwhile, however, the uncle undergoes a change of heart, as the young people, griefstricken and all unknowing, say their final farewells. Now comes to the young man thoughts that are black and evil. It seems to him that all Nature is but a series of systematic murders. He sees the spider devouring the fly, the ants consuming insects of other kinds. Only that day he had been reading the poems and stories of Edgar Allen Poe, among them the story of "The Tell Tale Heart." If only the old man, his uncle were out of the way, there might yet be joy and happiness with the girl he loves.

To make all the stronger this powerful impression on his mind, his uncle has only one eye, just as had the poor victim in the story of "The Tell Tale Heart." Brooding over the tragic blackness of the impending separation, he forms a diabolical plan.

With all the consummate skill of Poe's character in "The Tell Tale Heart," the plan takes form and execution. It is then that the great and saving grace of conscience demonstrates its power.

Avenging thoughts, such as Poe, himself, might have conceived, are visualized to the quaking youth. The subtle working of the inner conscience, beyond the power of mind to control, finds expression in the weird and terrible visions which torture the culprit brain. Relentless fate pursues him to the brink of the pit and then—a sudden awakening proves that part of his mental disturbance is a dream, and the dream is what causes him to realize the horror of murder and to abandon the idea of it.

HEPWORTH-AMERICAN.

THE TERROR OF THE AIR (Two Parts—August 29).—Gabrielle Townsend, an actress who retired from the stage on her marriage, wearies of the life of poverty which she seems condemned to lead, and, leaving her husband and child, returns to the footlights. Her husband, Philip, leaves the child in the doorway of the shop of Mr. Jacob Doubleday, a dealer in curios. Old Mr. Doubleday, having no one to care for, decides to adopt the child and bring him up as his own son.

Sixteen years pass, and the boy, now known as Roger Doubleday, has become a great inventor, and is already famous for an invention by means of which he can explode a mine upon the ground while flying in mid-air in his aeroplane. He has refused an offer of $50,000 for his invention from a foreign government, being determined that none but his own country should have the benefit of his invention. The foreign government having failed to get it by fair means, resolves to get by foul, and their chief spy has orders to secure the plans and the model at any cost. The spy makes several efforts, but none of them are successful, and he is about to give up in despair when fate sends him a strange instrument.

Gabrielle Townsend having failed on her return to the stage, and being unable to obtain any more parts, is rescued by the spy when on the point of committing suicide. He has already learned that Roger is only an adopted child and not really Mr. Doubleday's son, and he persuades Gabrielle to pretend that she is Rogers' mother, and when in his confidence to steal the plans and model and hand them over to him. Seeing nothing else before her except starvation or the river, the unhappy woman consents, having, of course, no idea that she is really going to rob her own son. In due course Gabrielle presents herself, and is accepted by Both Roger and old Mr. Doubleday as the boy's mother. Her better nature revolts against the part she has to play, but seeing no way out of it, she seizes an opportunity which presents itself a few days later, and hands the model and the plans through the window of Roger's labratory to a confederate outside. A few minutes later, however, Roger enters the room and, finding his mother there, and the plans missing, accuses her of the theft. Gabrielle confesses that she is the thief, at the same time announcing that she is not his mother at all. At that moment there is a strange interruption. Mr. Doubleday enters the room with a gentleman, who he presents to Roger as his real father, he having shown him absolute proof that it was he who left Roger on his step sixteen years ago. Turning round Gabrielle recognizes her husband, and, in a terrible moment, realizes that she has indeed robbed her own son. Attempting to repair the damage that she has done, she gives them the address of the spy's house to which the plans have been taken, whence they dash off with all possible speed. On gaining the house Gabrielle pleads with the thieves to return what they have stolen, only, of course, to be laughed at for her pains. But they find, however, that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing, for on attempting to experiment with Roger's model, it not only explodes the mixture on which they are testing it, but several other dangerous chemicals which are also in the room. The room is wrecked, and the thieves are rendered insensible, and thus the plans and the model are saved for the home government after all.

THE CHIMES (Three Parts—August 29).—While the last sound of twelve o'clock was humming through the steeple of St. Dunston's church, Trotty Veck was pacing up and down the sidewalk far below the belfry. It was New Year's Eve and the day was cold. Trotty is a ticket-porter awaiting just outside the church door for odd jobs. In his fancy he seems to hear the bells say that a job is coming presently and to keep a good heart. A voice arouses him from his reverie and he finds himself facing his daughter Meg. She carries a covered basket in her hand at which Trotty gazes curiously. The basket contains a repast, steaming hot, such as Trotty has not tasted in many a day. He and Meg repair to the steps of a house nearby to partake of the food. It is then that Meg tells him that she and Richard are to be married on New Year's Day. Richard, who had been standing aloof during this time, now approaches the couple. Trotty is about to address the old man when, without any warning the house-door opens and a footman comes forth, followed by three gentlemen. One of the trio, Alderman Cute, upon learning of Meg's and Richard's intentions of marrying, lectures them on the follies of matrimony. He then gives Trotty a note to deliver to Sir Joseph Bowley, who is a member of Parliament and who professes to be a friend and father to the poor. On his return home, Trotty happens to meet Will Fern and child Lilian. He takes Fern and the child to his humble dwelling and offers them lodgings for the night. When everyone has gone to rest, Trotty, seated in his chair by the fireside, falls asleep. He fancies the bells are calling him and he leaves his house to go to church. He imagines himself climbing to the belfry where monsters uncouth and wild arise. The spirit of the chimes is his companion and accompanies him through many weird scenes. He sees his daughter, Meg, the child Lillian, and he sees Will Fern, in the guise of a convict, break in upon a banquet, given at Bowley Hall by Sir Joseph Bowley. He sees him plead for better treatment of the poor. The vision of his daughter having been driven from her home and about to hurl herself into the river appears, but the bells ring in the New Year so lustily and merrily that he leaps to his feet and breaks the spell that had bound him. He collects his thoughts and realizes that it is his New Year's Day and his daughter's wedding day. Neighbors rush in to wish a Happy New Year and offer congratulations to Meg and Richard.

ECLECTIC.

GET OUT AND GET UNDER.—Wifie can't stand city heat and begs to go to the country. Hubby drives her to the station in the machine and then goes to the office, where he fires the chauffeur and tries to get a mash on the stenographer. Chauffeur, sore, gets another car and comes to take the stenographer for a ride. At the crucial moment it balks and hubby stealing the march drives off with the stenographer.

Missing her train, wifie rushes up in time to see hubby disappearing down the street. Chauffeur gets his machine under control and with wifie beside him races after hubby. Policemen, nurse girls, peddlers, hats, caps, shoelaces and skirts in fine pot-pourri, finally land in a park lake. Then comes the reconciliation on all sides.

THE MASHER'S MISHAP.—Hubby is a prize winner-flirter and Wifie is wise. Also Miss Beauty Eyes across the areaway doesn't care for Hubby's attentions. Wifie and Beauty Eyes get together and invent a scheme to cure Hubby of his flirting. Just when he thinks he is motoring with Beauty Eyes, Hubby finds himself dragged into an asylum and locked up.

Then Wifie relents and helps Hubby escape. Free again, he takes to the woods while a reward of $500 is posted for his capture. In his ramblings he meets a couple of campers. Each one wants the reward, and is suspicious of the other. Tricky Hubby's actions incriminate them all, and all are taken to the asylum in much humiliation. There Wifie and Beauty Eyes appear and a bunch of funny explanations sets everything aright. Hubby is "cured."

THE PERILS OF PAULINE (Eleventh Episode—Two Parts).—Owen, Pauline's rascally guardian, is growing desperate as the time of his guardianship passes, and is ready to resort to desperate measures and take great risks to secure Pauline's fortune. Although he has been ready with an alibi in each accident to Pauline, Harry has grown very suspicious and has decided that he will bear watching. Pauline receives an invitation from one of her girl friends to a wedding. A personal note accompanying the invitation mentions the fact that in order to make the wedding conspicuous arrangements have been made with a lion trainer to perform with some of his trained lions. Pauline accepts the invitation. A little later Owen enters the library and reads the letter. Harry sees him read the letter and decides to have him watched. Owen immediately proceeds to the animal camp and makes arrangements with the trainer to accidentally allow a couple of the lions escape when Pauline is standing near the cage. Harry, who has been following from a distance, sees Owen make these arrangements and decides to prevent Pauline attending the wedding. He fixes it up with his chauffeur so that the automobile will break down, and then arranges with the chauffeur to fake a telephone message to him from the office calling him away on important business. Owen overhears the chauf-

4 PARTS

A PRODIGIOUS AND POWERFUL DRAMA IN AN ENTIRELY NEW VEIN. A BIG DETECTIVE STORY WITH VIGOROUS CLEVER ACTION

COMING—THE SUICIDE CLUB—4 PARTS
QUEEN of the COUNTERFEITERS—4 PARTS

THE EVIL EYE—A Fascinating Drama of Hypnotism and Heroism—3 PARTS
THE SECRET SEVEN—Story of the Roundup of a Set of London Crooks—4 PARTS
THE MIDNIGHT MARRIAGE—A Romance of Prince and Peasant—4 PARTS
THE DARE-DEVIL DETECTIVE—Hayes, the Marvel, on the Job Again—4 PARTS

APEX FILM CO.

145 W. 45th ST., NEW YORK. P. P. CRAFT, MGR.
EUROPEAN OFFICE: H. WINIK, 35 LITTLE NEWPORT STREET, LONDON

HUGH HOFFMAN

feur's telephone message and tells Pauline, who is furious, not understanding Harry's reasons. Earlier in the day Harry had been approached by a man who asked for a job, and needing a gardener, Harry had given him the position and had taken Pauline to introduce her to the new gardener.

In this man Pauline recognizes a racing automobile driver whose photograph she had seen in the magazine in connection with an account of an accident in which he had been severely hurt, causing the loss of his memory. After the chauffeur had telephoned Pauline that the car had broken down and it would be impossible to use it that evening, Pauline goes to the gardener and asks him to drive her to the wedding. He disclaims all knowledge of an automobile, but Pauline persuades him to get into the driver's seat. The feel of the driving wheel and the hum of the motor evidently brings back some realization of the past, and he starts with her for the wedding. Pauline being late urges him to drive faster, and finally he evidently imagines that he is again driving in a race. The speed at which he drives alarms Pauline and when he will not slow down at her request, she foolishly seizes the driving wheel. This causes him to lose control of the car, and leaving the road it plunges down an embankment, throwing both of them out and severely injuring them. Harry on his way home from the office, satisfied that his plans have been successful, recognizes in an automobile which passes him at great speed his gardener and Pauline. He follows them, sees the accident, and arrives in time to have them both taken to the hospital.

THE MASKED MOTIVE (Five Parts).—Two girls in entirely different stations in life are very fond of each other. Sophie, the daughter of rich parents, and Marie Jean, her maid. Both are engaged to be married; Sophie to Count Rene and Marie Jean to Bertrand, a workman. Philip, the secretary to Sophie's father, is in love with Sophie, but dares not tell her of it. Finally the two girls are married the same day and are very happy. Count Rene, however, falls under the spell of Dr. Renault, whom he thinks a very good friend of his. In reality, Renault is in love with Sophie and is planning to have Rene put out of the way so that he can press his suit. He invites Rene to a dance and there has him meet a duelist who insults him. Rene to vindicate his honor meets the duelist and is killed.

Bertrand, Marie Jean's husband, has also fallen into evil ways and is led to drink by a friend. In course of time a child is born to both the girls. Sophie's daughter is very sickly and the doctor advises that the child be sent to the country to be nursed by an old lady, but the child dies. Doctor Renault sees an opportunity to get into Sophie's good graces and when Marie Jean becomes poverty stricken, owing to Bertrand's actions, he advises that her child be sent to the care of some institution. On the way there he contrives to steal the child from its guardian. He takes it to Sophie and tells of the care he has taken of her child in order to restore it to health.

Sophie, not knowing that her child had died, believes him and is very grateful. Philip, the secretary, who had been in love with Sophie before her marriage, hears of the death of Count Rene and returns to Paris to see if he can be of any aid to Sophie. When he hears of the loss of Marie Jean's baby he decides to help her recover it. While on the search he finds the death record of Sophie's daughter. This arouses his suspicions of Doctor Renault and he has the doctor watched. The shock of the loss of their child and the realization of the trouble he has caused forces Bertrand into a different mode of life. He swears never to touch another drop of liquor and gives every assistance to Philip in his quest. They are finally successful in running down several clues, and as a result of their efforts the lives of the two girls take a turn that assures happiness.

COL. HEEZA LIAR, EXPLORER.—Of course the Colonel's up to date, as well as snuff, but his trip down the wonderful River of Doubt tested him as he never was tested or bested before. With much care he starts down the Doubtful Stream in a novel boat of his own construction, and gets wrecked in the rapids on a desolate island. A man-eating cannibal tries to get him out of his fortress and fails. Then a man-and-cannibal-eating lion tries to make a beach sandwich out of them both, and gives up in despair.

But the poor Colonel catches the Doubting fever and is carried to the tin-can camp of the cannibals, where instead of being cooked he cooks the cook and frightens the guttapercha king into grotesque cannibal fits, gets crowned king, and then escapes. But fate never lets up on the ingenious old Colonel for long, and before he finishes his milk and honey explorations he makes a hero of himself in a number of side-splitting escapades, which serve to keep the spectator in one continual round of convulsive laughter.

NICK WINTER AND THE LOST PRINCE (Three Parts).—Prince Alexis of Granovia is traveling incognito under the name of H. Leslie. On his travels he meets Cecile Dubois, with whom he falls desperately in love. At the time she feels sure he is about to propose to her. He is suddenly recalled to his own country on account of the state of his father's health. He writes to Cecile telling her who he really is and that he is going away, never to return. Cecile does not propose to be cast off in this manner and gets her sister, Helene, who owns a hotel in the mountains, to let her come to see her. There she writes to the prince, asking for a last interview before he goes away. He goes to the hotel, which is an old converted castle. The sisters realize that they have a good opportunity to levy blackmail on the prince so they lure him to one of the old dungeons and lock him up to stay till he signs a paper agreeing to marry Cecile. The disappearance of the prince causes an awful furore and Nick Winter, the great detective, is called in to solve the mystery. He gets a clue and suspects that the sisters have some knowledge of the whereabouts of the prince. He has them watched and when he is sure of his ground he disguises himself as the father of the prince and comes to the hotel to stay. The sisters decide to risk everything on one great coup so they drug the people who they think are the court of Granovia.

As they are searching through the effects of their guests Nick comes to. He has been pretending all the time. Caught redhanded the sisters are in a predicament, and are forced to release the prince. The girls are lured to the kingdom of Granovia and are there cast into prison. The prince, however, remembering his former attachment for Cecile, arranges for their escape. He delegates Nick to get them out. Nick succeeds by employing his utmost ingenuity.

THE BOUNDARY RIDER (Five Parts).—The revenue men in New York are after the smugglers of opium and find that a certain Chinaman is in the habit of receiving a supply of the drug at stated periods. They follow him in the hope they will be led to the headquarters of the international band, who they feel sure are back of the traffic. The Chinaman fails to pay on time for the last supply he has received, and in turn the New York distributor is unable to send the money to the headquarters of the gang. This brings the chief to New York to investigate. While there he visits his broker, John Maxwell. He intends his visit to be secret, but is seen by one of the stenographers. This incenses him and angry words pass. In the meantime the Chinaman comes to the office and pays his bill. As the clerk is making out the receipt the detectives raid the place and find the dead body of the broker. All suspicion points to the clerk, who is accused of the murder of his employer. He is taken away by one of the detectives, but makes his escape. He goes to the North Country, makes application to join the Boundary Riders, and after a probation is accepted as an agent of law and order. On one of his patrols he finds a note that gives him a clue to the headquarters of the opium smugglers. The detective from the New York office of the Revenue Service comes to the camp of the riders to continue his investigations. There he recognizes the clerk. The clerk employs a clever woman investigator, who in guise of a Chinaman gets employment as a cook at the smugglers' headquarters. With the information she secures, he leads the revenue men to the headuarters of the gang. The raid is successful, but as all are congratulating the new member on his success the detective steps up and arrests him on the charge of murdering his employer. The investigator, however, has done her work well and produces a coat belonging to the head smuggler from which are torn two pieces which exactly match two pieces of cloth found in the hand of the dead man. This exonerates the clerk and puts added power in the hands of the government men.

BLACHE.

THE WAR EXTRA (Four Reels—August).—Twenty minutes before press time the Herald has received no news from the front in Mexico, where the interest of the nation is centered, and the editor is desperate. He listens to the pleading of the ambitious cub reporter, Fred Newton, and orders him to Mexico, with instructions to send back real news, regardless of the censors.

Accompanied by a telegraph operator assistant, Fred boards a steamer for Key West. He is fortunate enough to pass a battleship and transports bound for Vera Cruz, and communicating with them by wireless he gets some live news for his paper before he has reached the Mexican border. Flushed with success he pushes into Mexico by way of Eagle Pass, Texas, and succeeds in reaching the center of the Constitutionalist activities at Monclova, where he builds a shack and runs a wire of his own to the nearest telegraph line.

While delivering supplies to the shack, Dolores, the adopted daughter of a Mexican storekeeper, is set upon by outlaws and her rescue by Fred makes her his devoted friend, but also causes him to be hated by the men he opposed.

Prevented from accompanying the main body of the army, Fred and his telegrapher go on a scouting trip. They hear firing and, climbing a tree, witness the great battle of Monclova through field glasses. When the defeat of the Federals by the Constitutionalists is assured, they ride back to the shack and wire the important news direct to their paper.

At the Herald office all of the machinery of the issuing of a great daily paper is set in motion as the news of the battle is received from Fred. The story is edited at the copy desk, set up by linotypes, made up in the forms, and stereotyped and placed on the presses. As the papers are distributed and the bulletin boards announce the scoop of the "young reporter on the firing line," Fred's future as a newspaper man is assured.

But, as the dispatch is being received and published in New York, the outlaws, reinforced by Mexican irregular troops who have been told that the Americans are spies, attack the shack which is vigorously defended. Dolores attempts to stop the bandits and, failing, rides to the border to summon assistance. She enlists the aid of a large band of cowboys who arrive at the shack in time to engage the bandits in a fierce battle and rescue the now wounded Fred and his companion and make a dash for safety over the American line. A wild chase, in which many shots are exchanged, is about to end disastrously for the Americans just as they begin to cross the Rio Grande to United States soil, but the American regulars appear upon the scene and fire a volley across the river which sweeps a score of Mexicans from their horses and drives the rest to cover.

As Dolores dare not return, Fred persuades her to accompany him to New York and an enthusiastic welcome by his newspaper friends is quickly followed by his marriage to the beautiful little maiden, who is received with open arms by his mother and sister.

WORLD FILM CORPORATION.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN (Five Parts—August 10).—Geo. Shelby is forced to sell his faithful old slave, Tom, and the infant son of Eliza Harris, in order to save his property from Haley, the slave trader and holder of the mortgage. Eliza hearing she is to be separated from her baby makes her escape to join her husband, George Harris, who with Vance, were well on their way to freedom.

Learning of the departure, Haley immediately puts the hounds on her trail. The searching party arrives on the river bank in time to see Eliza leaping over the broken ice, upon which the dogs and men feared to tread. A second party is organized by lawyer Marks, but fails to capture the fugitive, who has been befriended by a kindly Quaker and has in the meantime joined her husband.

During the sail to Haley's plantation Tom's attention from his Bible is attracted by the cry of "Overboard!" Making a bold rush, this wonderful old man leaps into the water and brings little Eva St. Clair, who had wandered from her Aunt and fallen overboard, to safety. This noble deed caused his purchase by St. Clair, who treated him with every kindness, making him a companion for his small daughter Eva, who joyed in Uncle Tom's explanation of the Bible.

Sadness finally comes when little Eva dies and a second calamity when her father is killed while separating two roughs in a quarrel. This necessitates the sale of his slaves and property.

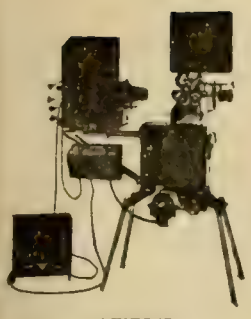
Uncle Tom falls into the hands of Simon Legree, the most brutal slave owner of the South. His life here is simply a matter of how long it can last under the terrible strain and treatment he receives. The final blow came when Legree's housekeeper, Casey, and his favorite slave, Emmeline, escape during one of his debauches. Going to Tom, he demanded to know their whereabouts. Being unable to give this information, Tom is flogged and cast into a corner to die.

Young Shelby, now a man, searches the South to fulfill his youthful promise to buy Tom. He reaches the little hut just in time to cheer the dying hour of his old slave, who has just enough life left to show his gratitude.

THE LURE (Five Parts—August 24).—While attending dancing school, Charlotte Baker meets a fascinating youth, Paul, with whom she becomes infatuated. Not being able to resist his declaration of love and promises to marry, she decides to elope with him, only to find herself drugged and taken to a resort of the underworld.

Bob Macauley, the celebrated detective, is called by the family and the case placed into his hands.

Bob Macauley visits a department store, where his life would have been taken in making an arrest of a pickpocket, had not the blow that was intended for him been warded off by Sylvia, a dainty little saleswoman, at whose counter the arrest was made. Bob becomes very much in love with her, but due to her poverty, she does not allow him to call. The task to keep her humble home and sick mother is a hard one. Light dawns one day when a handsome woman calls at her counter and offers her employment in odd hours. Going home one evening, she finds her mother's condition necessitated the services of a physician. The physician prescribed country air with the aid of a medicine, which is very expensive, as



POWER'S

We Sell Supplies of the Better Kind

Let us Prove It.

You Must Obtain That New Machine NOW!

If Your Business Is Bad, Don't Blame It on the Weather. You Can't Expect Your Patrons to Watch That Flickering, Eye-Straining Projection in These Hot Days.

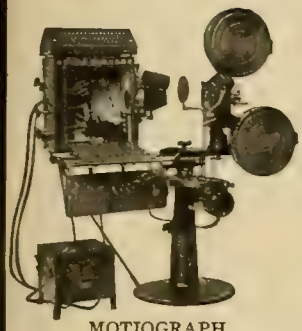
Improve Your Business by Installing One of These Modern Projectors

WIRE, WRITE OR CALL FOR PRICES ON THE

POWER'S 6A
SIMPLEX PROJECTOR
MOTIOGRAPH, 1914
EDISON'S NEW MODEL D

SIMPLEX

We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Completely



MOTIOGRAPH

EDISON

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 East 14th Street, New York City

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America

$50 a Week Extra for Moving Picture Theatres

In scores of motion picture theatres extra profit of $25 to $60 weekly, and in some places twice that much, is being made with our latest automatic all-electric machine for making "Butter-Kist" popped corn—crisp, crackling, melt-in-your-mouth, pure creamery-buttered corn—the kind that people will walk blocks to buy. This is a high-class machine that will harmonize with the finest theatre lobby. Some of the most-up-to-date motion picture theatres in the country have the inviting, handsome, nickel-winning "Butter-Kist" Corn Popper in their lobbies.

"Butter-Kist" Corn Popper

draws nickels like magic. While you are getting one nickel a day from each "movie" customer this machine produces anywhere from one to five extra nickels a day. And remember that 3½ cents out of every nickel is new net profit. This is new profit for you. It does not detract one penny from your picture business, in fact it has a tendency to increase it.

The "Butter-Kist" Popper looks different—works differently from any pop-corn machine you ever saw. A machine you will be proud to own. Superbly built of plate glass; metal parts of polished German silver and nickel; cabinet of mahogany, oak or ivory white enamel. Occupies but 30 x 24 inches of floor space. Stands six feet high.

This machine cleared $238.65 over all expenses in July in a Motion Picture Theatre.

One Wire Runs It

Our latest All-Electric Machine is a marvel of mechanical ingenuity. Simply make a one-wire connection and every part of the machine operates. Everything works automatically by electricity. It feeds the corn in proper quantity, pops it, separates unpopped grains if any, carries the popped corn to a buttering device, butters it and drops it down ready to be scooped, piping hot, into bags. Capacity can be regulated as desired. No labor, no watching, no time wasted. It does everything but make change. This the ticket taker can do.

Get the Facts!

Be first in your section with this spot-cash money maker! Two minutes time and a 2c stamp put all the facts before you. We'll send you facts, figures and photos that explain everything. Sold on easy terms. Will pay its way from the very first day. Write—right now!

[65]

Holcomb & Hoke Mfg. Co., 1460 Van Buren St., Indianapolis, Indiana.

the only means of possible recovery. Being unable to meet these extra expenses, Sylvia applies to the manager of the store in which she is employed for an advancement on her salary. This is refused, and a short time after loses her position. With poverty and the approach of her mother's death facing her, she is reminded of the kind lady who offered her employment and decides to call. Once inside of the house, she is trapped and made an inmate.

Bob disguised as a gas man, enters a house in search of Charlotte Baker, and to his surprise finds the girl he loves. Thinking this to be her reason for not allowing him to know her dwelling place, denounces her, but finally finds that she has been trapped and at once plans her escape, during which many thrilling adventures take place. She is finally restored to her sick mother, at the same time Bob has filled his mission as a detective in the employ of the Baker's and has succeeded in jailing the youth, Paul, with the man higher up.

WARNER'S FEATURES.

THE DAY OF RECKONING (3 Parts—August 10).—The Civil War was at its height. Donald and James Lorne were step-brothers. Donald, the elder, loved Dolly, the rich ward of his step-mother, but Mrs. Lorne was very anxious that her own son, James, should win the hand of the wealthy orphan.

To bring this about, she arranged to send her step-son away. But the lovers frustrated her. Dolly and Donald were secretly married before he departed.

The girl's guardian intercepted Donald's letters, and not aware that her ward was already married, made her a prisoner in her room in her efforts to force the girl to marry James.

Donald, sorely worried at his wife's strange silence, returned unexpectedly. In answer to his demands to see Dolly he was told that she loved him no longer, and had pledged herself to his step-brother.

Wishing for nothing but Dolly's happiness, Donald, with heavy heart, took James' place in the army, hoping to be killed and thus free Dolly so that she might wed the man of her choice.

Dolly, still held a prisoner in her room, heard that her husband had returned, but was now gone to the war. She escaped and followed him to the training camp, only to find him gone. She was overcome with grief and fell unconscious. The minister who had married her was at the camp, and had her removed to a neighboring house.

Mrs. Lorne and her son followed the girl, and found her dead, and a new-born infant in the doctor's arms. James, in order to get into his own, hands the dead mother's fortune claimed the child as his own—and disappeared.

Donald, at the front, was fighting in the armies of his country, in ignorance of the tragic fate of the woman he loved, and of the birth of his child. One night, while pacing the sentry line, he beheld a vision of Dolly. The spectre lured him far from his post. He was found wandering about, and was arrested for desertion in the face of the enemy. At the court martial he was still so dazed that instead of making a satisfactory explanation he incriminated himself by his incoherent replies. He was sentenced to be shot at sunrise. However, a comrade who knew the circumstances saved his life. He returned to his native village. Here he met a Captain Walling who told him the true story of Dolly.

Walling was later arrested for treason. He turned State's evidence, confessing that in partnership with James Lorne he had robbed the government on false contracts of fabulous amounts, and accused Lorne of double-crossing him. The U. S. Secret Service at once took up the trail of his accomplice.

Twenty years rolled by. James had gone West, where he was leading a double life. With him lived Dolly's baby, now grown to young womanhood, and bearing her mother's name. She supposed that James was her father. In the hills near James' ranch, a mysterious shepherd lived a life of solitude. Old before his time, sad, gentle and kind, he exerted a strange influence over the impressionable girl, who often sought his company, and confided in him her troubles and innocent secrets.

The false-hearted James recognized the shepherd as Don and planned by accusing him of stealing all the cattle that had been missed, to have him strung up by the outraged ranchmen.

An Indian girl who had been wronged by James and cast off overheard the plot. She told Dolly, who rode to warn her friend. She reached the shepherd's hut just as the cowpunchers were about to lynch him.

She begged for time, swearing that she could prove the shepherd's innocence. The men, respecting her word, left her with the hermit. In tears she told him that her father had forbidden her to see him again. As she was leaving she accidentally dropped her locket. The shepherd found and opened it. He was dumbfounded. It contained the picture of his wife, the Dolly of the past.

The girl, discovering her loss, returned. He asked who the picture represented.

"It is my mother," replied Dolly. "She died when I was born."

Without telling her that she was his daughter, he went to his step-brother to claim her. During the controversy that followed matters took an unexpected turn. Walling, now a secret service agent, appeared on the scene. After twenty years of searching he had found his man. As he was about to place the handcuffs on his prisoner, an interruption occurred. An Indian chief, leading a girl of his people, confronted James.

The guilty wretch, in desperation, broke away from his captors and fled.

But the day of reckoning had arrived.

The red-skinned maiden sighted him fleeing across the edge of a cliff. Seizing a rifle she fired. Horse and rider fell to death.

The gentle shepherd advanced to the girl's side. As he drew her to his bosom, he pointed to the faded face looking sadly at him from the locket.

"The mystery of my love for you is explained," he said. "Dolly, you are my own flesh and blood. The woman of the locket was your mother and my wife!"

THE EAGLE'S REFUGE (3 Parts—August 17).—The season was at its height when the charming Marquis of Terrefranca arrived at the Kulm Hotel, a fashionable Alpine resort. Although none of the guests had ever heard of him before, his gracious and engaging manners soon made him the lion of the ladies, and a source of envy to the gentlemen. Lucy Williams, an American girl, and her fiance, John Cook, were stopping at the hostelry.

One of the Marquis' first acts was assisting Lucy, who had been injured while skating, back to the hotel. She was much impressed by his gallantry, and, by often accepting his company, caused John to become jealous.

With the Marquis it was love at first sight, and with good-natured disregard of the prior claims of his American rival he pressed his suit with energy. Lucy wavered between her duty to John and a growing regard for the nobleman.

As the season advanced the hotel was disturbed by several cleverly executed thefts, which appeared impossible of solution. The proprietor, unable with the means at his disposal to check the robberies, placed a celebrated detective on the case. His first act was to request all the ladies to place their jewels behind the steel doors of the hotel safe. In the middle of the very night after his coming a loud explosion awakened the guests. They thronged the corridors and learned that the safe had been blown open, the valuables taken, and a note left in their place, which read:

"I cannot begin to express my grateful appreciation. I shall always remember your kindness, and will call again. Until then I beg that you accept these assurances of my highest esteem and respect."

The visitors were loud in their protests against the outrage, and none were more emphatic than the Marquis. The jealous American fiance said nothing. But he suspected that the nobleman knew more about the matter than was supposed. Seeking the detective, he expressed his suspicions. Leaving the Marquis engaged with the ladies in the hotel parlors the two made a thorough search of his apartment, discovering that the mysterious thief's note was written on paper that corresponded exactly with the suspected man's stationery. Returning to the parlors, the detective astounded the assembly by declaring the Marquis of Terrefranca under arrest. During the excitement, the lights were suddenly extinguished. A black object was seen leaping from a window. When they were turned on again, the nobleman was gone.

But out in the mountains the clever rogue was struggling through the deep snow. Arriving near the Eagle's Refuge he was met by a party of rough-looking men. To one of them he delivered a bag. The man hurriedly opened and peered into it. For a second the missing jewels glittered in the moon-light. The group were suddenly startled by the sounds of approaching voices. The Marquis' accomplices hastily covered their leader under a bank of snow, placing a tube in his mouth through which to breathe. A party from the hotel drew near in their search. The searching party went to the Eagle's Refuge, telephoned to the hotel that their search had been fruitless, then retraced their steps. The rogue escaped across the border.

John was overjoyed at the turn affairs had taken, but Lucy could not drive from her mind the image of the other man who loved her. The season was almost over when Lucy received a letter. It was from the Marquis. In it he ardently declared his undying affection for her, and said that his only aim in life now was to make reparation for the past, to redeem himself so that he might be more worthy of the love she bore him. He begged that she forgive him, cast her lot with his, and by her love help him work out his atonement for the past. He said he would be at the Eagle's Refuge the following Saturday night and begged that she would not fail to come to him.

Lucy, torn by conflicting emotions, decided to throw everything to the wind and fly to of snow she saw a lantern twinkling at the foot of the glacier. It was the penitent lover.

Lucy was ready to steal away when her fiance came to bid her good-night. He was surprised to see her attired in her climbing costume at such an hour. As she was trying to explain, the telephone rang. John, taking the receiver, heard the weak voice of his old rival, telephoning from the Eagle's Refuge. In husky whispers he said an avalanche had struck the hut, and he was being crushed under the falling timbers. His last faint words were that his lantern had been overturned and had set the ruins in flames.

Lucy in terror implored John to go to the rescue. For a moment he refused, but realizing that after all the nobleman was a fellow-being in distress he consented. Together with Lucy, without the aid of a guide, they started out over the perilous drifts. Arriving at the demolished hut, they found it in flames. Hearing the cries of the imprisoned man, John rushed into the ruins and carried out his helpless rival.

But help had come too late. The hand of death was upon him. The flames cast their lurid light on the face of the dying rogue, and as his life ebbed he asked forgiveness of all whom he had wronged. Lucy knelt at his side and wept.

THE TRAGEDY OF ROOM 17 (3 Parts—August 3).—Elsie and Amy Bertrand were two orphan sisters. They lived their life in great want and privation, and arriving at womanhood they parted. Amy went to a distant part of the country to earn her livelihood, while Elsie fortunate in her love affairs became engaged to a wealthy young count.

Amy, in the meantime, met a young civil engineer, Alfred Mason. A baby was born to them. Alfred went to the Congo, hoping by embracing the opportunities offered in a new country to make his fortune, and forever remove Amy, their child, and himself from want. He had not been away long, when Amy received a message stating that Alfred had died from tropical fever, expressing with his last breath the anguish he suffered in leaving Amy and the baby unprovided for.

Amy was prostrated with grief, and took to her bed. Feeling that death was near she sent for her sister Elsie, who immediately came to her. On her death bed Amy implored her sister to take care of the child, and keep locked in her heart the secret of her unfortunate love. Amy died and Elsie placed the child in an asylum.

Returning to her home, she was married to the Count. The wedding was barely over when she read in a newspaper that the asylum had been destroyed by fire, and all the children but one had been claimed. It added that this child had been placed into the hands of a physician named Firth. Elsie sought Dr. Firth, only to learn that he had just given the infant to a man named Bunting. In the company of the doctor she searched for Bunting. The address and references he had given were false, and their efforts to unearth even one clue by which he might be traced were fruitless. After engaging a detective with but fain hopes of success, she returned to her home grief stricken.

Welton, the detective, discovers that Bunting was the assumed name of a notorious child stealer and, by tireless efforts, he finally runs down his man, just as the latter was about to embark on shipboard for a distant port, with a number of children whom he had obtained by kidnapping and misrepresentation.

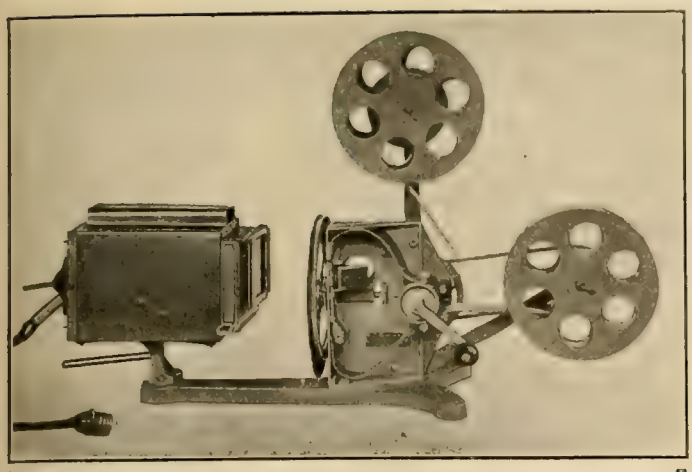
The suspense was telling on Elsie, and her husband fearing that she was ill, decided to take her to Lugano, a resort where she could regain her health. As they were about to start she received a telegram from the detective announcing the recovery of the child. She replied instructing him to meet her with the infant at the Helvetion Hotel, near Lugano.

The afternoon of Elsie's and her husband's arrival, while sitting in the hotel lobby, the Count became acquainted with an old guest of the hostelry. The elderly man noticing the number of the key to the room which the Count had been assigned, No. 17, appeared surprised. When questioned, the old man said that owing to a tragedy that had been enacted within the room, it was never used unless the hotel was entirely filled. The Count becoming interested urged the stranger to relate the tragedy of Room 17.

"Forty years ago," the old man said, "Countess of Chalant visited the hotel. While there she met and fell in love with a young nobleman also a guest. Count Chalant arrived unexpectedly one night and thinking to agreeably surprise his wife went directly to her room—it was empty—the sound of a kiss came from the room opposite room 17. The Count peered through the keyhole, saw his wife in the arms of the young nobleman. In a rage he battered down the door, rushed in upon the pair, and shot them both."

Count Charles was so absorbed in the tale he did not notice a man carrying a child enter the hotel, and signal the Countess, nor did he see his wife follow the stranger upstairs.

When the story was finished he was surprised to find her gone. Arising in haste, he ran to her room, No. 17. It was empty; as he stood her lover's aid. Saturday night arrived. Peering from her window across the wide expanse there in wonderment, he heard the sound of kisses coming from the opposite room. Shak-



THE PHANTOSCOPE

If the General Film Co., the Mutual Film Co., and the Universal Film Co. should turn their enormous photographic equipment to making industrial and educational film there would be an even greater demand for the Phantoscope, for film is but half a motion picture exhibition; a suitable projector is just as essential. To serve the purpose well, the machine must be light and convenient to carry, say 18 lbs. in its traveling case; must accept conditions just as they are, in office, classroom or home; easily and quickly set up without tools by screwing the attaching plug into the nearest lamp socket, and project a large, brilliant, steady picture. All this means Phantoscope, and the price is but $100, including everything.

Phantoscope Mfg. Co.

Bond Building, Washington, D. C.

WAR SLIDE SERVICE

GET IT NOW

25 SLIDES LEASED WAR VIEWS EACH WEEK $10.00

25 SPECIAL SLIDES INDIVIDUAL RULERS $10.00

Use the weekly service with the Special Rulers as the news breaks.

Slides of highest photographic quality —double glass.

If wanted exclusive local rights, add 50% to prices.

Sent C. O. D. upon receipt of telegram, or cash with order.

Can supply daily service 10 slides, if wanted.

Only actual photographs used.

Lobby display of 4 11 x 14 in. photographs with caption—$2.00 per week.

GLOBE PHOTO SERVICE

(The Krohmer Company)

Security Building, Chicago

ing in a jealous rage he grasped his revolver, bounded like a madman brandishing the weapon into the room, only to see his wife kissing a baby. He calmed down. Elsie explained about her sister and the child; then, introducing the detective, told of his work.

The Count adopted the child, banished jealousy from his mind, and thus what might have been a second tragedy of room 17 was averted and turned to happiness.

ACROSS THE BORDER (3 Parts—August 24).—Curley Smith, a lieutenant of the Texas Rangers, while patrolling the International line became suspicious of a load of hay which he saw going southward. Leaving a note telling of his intention for his comrade, he trailed the wagon into Mexico. After traveling half a day he saw the wagon descend into a deep gulch. Curley drew near and, peering from the overhanging bushes, saw at the bottom of the ravine a smugglers' camp. The men unloaded the hay and, as he suspected, the bottom of the wagon was filled with high-powered American arms and quantities of ammunition.

His presence was discovered. The outlaws in great numbers pursued the lone American. In the chase his horse plunged over a steep hill throwing its rider. Anita, the smuggler chief's daughter, who was taking part in the chase, found him lying unconscious and after reviving him helped him to her father's cabin. After dressing his wounds she and her mother placed him in bed.

Dean, a renegade American, who was deeply in love with Anita, recognized the prisoner and gave orders that he be closely guarded and not allowed to escape. Dean loaded his ponies and started off across the mountains to deliver the contraband to the Mexican general. During his absence Curley and Anita fell in love with each other. When Dean returned his jealousy was aroused and he determined to remove Curley by means fair or foul.

During the absence of his chief, Amador, he seized the American, bound him to the ground and tied a rattlesnake close at his side and left the helpless prisoner to die a horrible death. Anita, missing her sweetheart, went in search of him and arrived just in time to shoot the snake and save him. With her aid he escaped and in the attempt to swim down the river past the sentry he was again captured and brought back to the smuggler's camp.

In the meantime Dean had been trying to smuggle a load of Lydite bombs across the border, but in a fight with a party of Texas Rangers the bombs were exploded and Dean's men were forced to flee. He arrived at camp in a very ill humor and was enraged to find that his rival had not perished from the rattler's deadly fangs.

Amador, the chief, reproved his lieutenant for the treatment of the prisoner and Anita, horrified at her former lover's cruelty, spurned him. Dean, maddened by jealousy and his desire for revenge, planned a mutiny, and in the dead of the night again entered the cabin and laid violent hands on the prisoner, determined that nothing would interfere with his plans to make Curley pay with his life for Dean's misfortunes.

Anita, fearing evil and unable to protect her lover, stole from the outlaws' camp and rode at breakneck speed in the moonlight across the border to the American army camp. She begged that assistance be sent to the aid of the American. As the first streaks of the coming day lit the sky the American Cavalry with the Mexican girl at their head galloped forth to the rescue.

In the meantime Curley had been dragged to the plains above the outlaws' camp, his hands were tied behind him and a squad of greasers were about to send a death volley into him, when the cavalry came thundering down from the foot hills and charged the Mexican smugglers. A battle ensued and the Americans were victorious. Anita freed her lover. Dean, seeing that the game was up, determined to kill Curley and then sell his own life dearly as possible, but Curley, seizing a sabre which had fallen from a wounded American's hand, in a fierce encounter killed the renegade.

Curley went back to his regiment and after peace was declared he returnd, claimed Anita and brought her back to his own country as his bride.

MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY.

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY (Syndicate Film Corp., Sixth Episode—Two Reels—July 27).—Still firmly convinced that Florence Gray knows where her father's million is hidden, the Countess Olga and the conspirators, led by Braine, plan a coaching party to a suburban inn, where they have engaged the Egyptian room. Accordingly the Countess Olga calls upon Florence who is still unsuspicious of her supposed friend and invites her to join the coaching party.

Hidden behind the curtains in the Hargreaves' home, Jones, the butler, hears of the invitation and at once telephones Norton, the reporter. Jones conveys his suspicions of the Countess to Norton and the two follow the coach and four in a small cycle car of great speed.

They watch the party dining while they hide in the woods near the inn and are amused for a part of the time by the paid entertainers, who dance all the latest steps. While the entertainers are busy tripping the lulufardo and the maxixe, Jones and Norton creep up on Braine and a fellow conspirator and overhear their plans to lure Florence to the Egyptian room.

In one of the inn attendants Norton recognises an old nurse and the aged woman, eager to entertain, shows the reporter a secret passage leading out of the Egyptian room. A few minutes later they return to the spot where the party is still being amused and are just in time to trail one of the conspirators, who, disguised as a French count, leads Florence away from the table on the pretext of showing her the park.

Closely followed by Norton and Jones Florence and the conspirators stroll through the numerous apartments in the inn. When the conspirator has inveigled Florence into the Egyptian room he distracts her attention for a moment and then swiftly locks the door upon her. Florence turns to find herself a prisoner.

Vainly she beats upon the doors of the room. The conspirators, however, have taken good care to draw the great bolts and Florence finally sinks exhausted on a lounge. She realizes that for the second time she has fallen into the trap laid for her by her enemies. This time, she knows, they will not hesitate to use any means to force her to reveal the hiding place of her father's millions, information which the conspirators are unaware she does not possess.

The bogus count hurries back to the garden party and secretly tells Braine and the Countess that he has succeeded in entrapping the girl again and that they once more have the opportunity of using any means that they find necessary to force the girl to their will. Headed by Braine and the Countess Olga, the conspirators excuse themselves from the other unsuspicious guests and hurry to the Egyptian room.

Meanwhile, Norton and Jones, realizing from the actions of the conspirators that they have succeeded at last in trapping Florence, plunge into the mouth of the cave in the woods, which is hidden by shrubbery, and rush along its dark interior to the Egyptian room. They find Florence weeping hysterically with fear. Norton explains his intentions, hurriedly calms her and assists her into the tunnel.

They have barely reached the other end of the secret passage when the Countess Olga and the conspirators enter the Egyptian room. A hasty examination of the room discloses the manner in which Florence made her escape and the conspirators reach the end of the tunnel just as Norton, Jones and Florence mount three horses which they have hastily procured and gallop down the road.

The conspirators engage a powerful motor car and start in pursuit. Jones realizes that they will soon be overtaken and while Florence and Norton gallop on ahead he hides at a turn in the road. When the auto slows up the butler plunges a knife into both rear tires of the car and then runs back through the woods to his horse and gallops off. The conspirators, unable to follow, give up the pursuit in disgust.

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY (Syndicate Film Corp. Seventh Episode—Two reels—August 3).—Private detective and amateur sleuths kept Jones, the butler, busy answering the thumps of the great silver knocker on the front door of the Hargreaves' mansion for several weeks following the disappearance of the millionaire's treasure. Jones refused admission to many, but when the Duke of Manchester and Archibald White, two friends of the butler's missing master, asked to look over the ground in an effort to solve the mystery they were instantly admitted.

The Duke examined the safe and the relative positions occupied by the conspirators, Jones and his master on the night the house was broken into and Hargreaves was obliged to escape in the balloon of A. Leo Stevens, the aeronaut. He was unable to offer any suggestions which might lead to the capture of the conspirators, however, and left the mansion much puzzled by his old friend's disappearance. Later, Mr. White also examined the safe carefully, but was unable to detect any secret compartments in it within which the money might be concealed.

The conspirators, well aware that the money had been securely hidden, still clung to the theory that Florence Gray, Hargreaves' daughter, held the key to the solution of the mystery. A third time they began to weave their net for the girl, confident that on this occasion she would not escape them. Realizing that Florence and Norton and Jones must be aware of their identity the conspirators made no attempt in person to shadow their prey. Instead, they hired a gangster to keep track of their intended victim.

From a loose-mouthed groom in the Hargreaves' stables, the gangster learned that Florence each morning took a drive along the lake shore road near her home. The tip was sufficient and once Braine and the Countess Olga were in possession of this information they laid their plans accordingly.

Dressed as a feeble old man the conspirator, who already has been seen as an organ grinder and a French count, places himself in the roadway along which Florence was accustomed to take her morning drive. Leaning heavily on a gnarled cane and disguised in a workman's cap and a long beard the conspirator completely deceives Florence. As she rounds a bend in the road the conspirator falls upon his back, apparently in a fit. Florence leaps from her horse and is about to lift the suposed old man to his feet, when the latter turns upon her and drags her from the roadway. Her frightened horse runs off down the road.

Florence is taken to an abandoned cabin where she is placed in the care of a bully, who bears a resemblance to the original Bill Sykes. The conspirator dashes off to inform the other conspirators that for the third time the girl has been entrapped.

Meanwhile, Jim Norton, the reporter, is busy buying Florence an engagement ring. Their little love affair has progressed to a stage where words are not necessary to a complete understanding. Florence has confessed her love for the gallant young reporter.

Returning to the Hargreaves' mansion Jim learns that Florence has left for her morning gallop. Knowing her route and hoping to overtake her in his cycle car, Jim speeds along the country road. He has gone scarcely half a mile, however, when Florence's frightened mare gallops madly past and farther on he discovers her bouquet he had sent her that morning lying in the dust. Only a short distance away he comes upon her riding whip and hat lying by the roadside. A confused trail of footprints as though someone had been forcibly dragged along, convinces Jim that Florence again has fallen into the hands of her father's enemies. Hurriedly he trails the footprints to the deserted cabin where he rescues Florence after a desperate battle with the bully.

They have barely reached the woods leading to the road when the conspirators return and at once give chase in their high powered automobile. Putting on all speed they rapidly overhaul the small cycle-motor which Norton is driving with Florence.

The chase soon brings them into a small town, which is divided by a stream spanned by a drawbridge. Realizing that he will be overtaken before he reaches the river Norton takes careful aim with his revolver and succeeds in puncturing one of the tires of the pursuing car just as it reaches the open drawbridge.

The mighty splash which follows hides the conspirators from view. After a lapse of a few moments it is only too evident that at least one of the conspirators has been carried down to death beneath the car. The body of another shortly afterward rises to the surface and floats down the stream, while Florence looks on in horror at the catastrophe.

When Norton is assured that spectators and authorities will take care of the survivors of the accident, he and Florence, unwilling to be involved further in the affair, hurry from the scene. Reaching the Hargreaves' mansion Jim finishes the self-appointed task he undertook earlier in the day, before the conspirators interfered and, in the last scene of all slips an engagement ring on Florence's finger and gathers her to him in his arms.

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY (Syndicate Film Corp.—Eighth Episode—Two Reels—August 10).—Raging at the defeat of their efforts to capture Florence which ended in the tragedy of the drawbridge, as told in episode seven, but still determined to gain the secret of the millionaire's treasure, which they are sure she possesses, the conspirators form another plan. Jame Norton, the reporter, is the one man, who, with Jones, the old butler, has thus far successfully thwarted them at every turn. With him out of the way they argue it will be an easy matter to get Florence in their toils. Neither Braine nor the countess Olga as yet know of the closer bond, which now exists between Florence and Norton, although the latter's woman's intuition leads her to suspect something of the kind. Nevertheless, a little bird has whispered the secret abroad, and the Duke of Manchester and the Princess Troubetzkoy, both of whom had been warm friends of her father, together with some of their friends, call to extend their felicitations and good wishes to Florence. Also they seek to aid her in gaining a trace of the missing million, but are forced to leave the Hargreaves' mansion quite as much in the dark as when they entered it.

In the meantime the conspirators have not been idle. One of them (Albert C. Froome) has enlisted the aid of a band of thugs and cutthroats and to them he unfolds the plan which Braine has evolved. He shows them a manhole cover made to look, in every respect, like one of the big iron disks used to cover sewer openings, but which in this case is made of flimsy papier mache. He explains that they are to replace the regular iron manhole cover at the corner of a certain street at a given time with the papier mache duplicate and then await the coming of the victim.

One of the gang becomes a taxi chauffeur at

YOU WILL ULTIMATELY BUY THE SCREEN OF QUALITY — THE SCREEN DE LUXE

"THE PEERLESS" The Indoor Screen —THE DAY and NIGHT SCREEN— "THE PIONEER" The Outdoor Screen

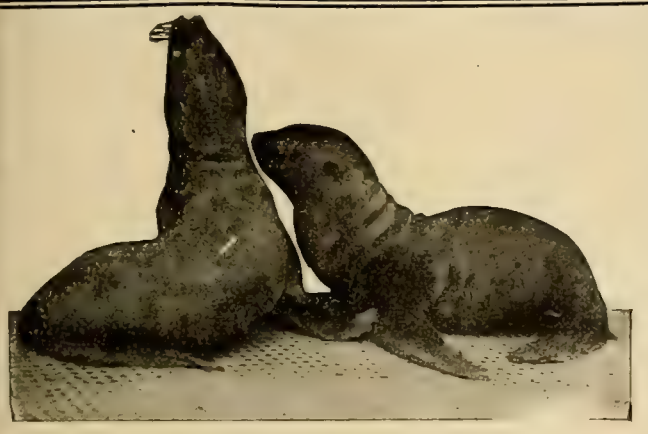
"THE SCREEN WITHOUT A SEAM"

WORLD'S TOWER BUILDING---110 WEST 40th ST., N. Y.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE — TELEPHONE 7930 BRYANT — ARRANGE FOR TEST

Branch Offices and Distributing Centers at

PHILADELPHIA, NEW ORLEANS, ATLANTA, EL PASO, MEMPHIS, KANSAS CITY, DES MOINES, SAN FRANCISCO
WASHINGTON, LOS ANGELES, SEATTLE, PARIS, BERLIN, LONDON



Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt's

Arctic Hunt

in six reels

Native and Animal Life in the North. A revelation of life and affairs in the frigid zone. An intimate, close range study of Moose, Caribou, Sea Lion, Polar Bear, Great Kodiack Bear, Walrus and millions of Birds on rookeries. Icebergs the size of twenty-story buildings, precipitated headlong into the sea.

Chance to secure the bargain of a lifetime in Exclusive State Rights

Lecture, Press matter, Lobby display, Lantern Slides
Attractive Litho Paper 24 Sheets, 6, 3 and 1 Sheets

Arctic Film Co. Suite 1209—220 W. 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 3559

Booking New York State

Gundlach Projection Lenses Are the Best You Can Get

In addition to superior quality and the maximum illuminating power we offer you a service which insures your order being filled with lenses which will make the picture exactly the size you want it.

To get Lenses in a hurry TELEGRAPH the distance from front of machine to screen, width of picture and name of machine. We will ship promptly C. O. D., subject to approval. New Lenses can be returned for exchange or your money back if you want it. We can supply lenses to fit any operating condition at regular prices.

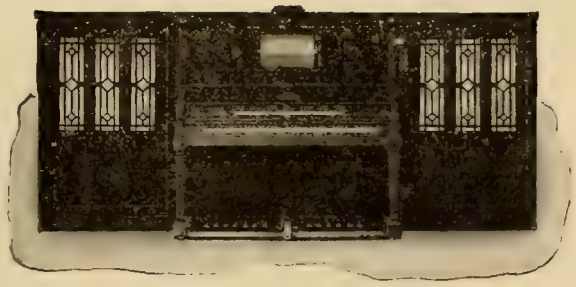
Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Co.

808 Clinton Ave., So., Rochester, N. Y.

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

SEEBURG "MOTION PICTURE PLAYER"

It has solved one of the Big Problems of the Moving Picture Business.



Played either manually or automatically, it produces real music for the pictures.

"The Wonder of them all"

Get Complete Information on it by Addressing

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO., Manufacturers, 209 S. Republic Building STATE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

the instigation of Froome, as none of the chief conspirators wish to take direct part in carrying out the plot, fearing that Norton will recognize them no matter how cleverly they disguise themselves. This man having received his instructions, waits in his car outside the newspaper office where Norton is employed. A telegram, purporting to be from Florence, is then sent to Norton, urging him to come to her with all speed, as she is in danger. Norton's face pales as he reads its contents and seizing his cap he leave the office without delay.

Hailing the nearest taxi, which happens to be that of the conspirators, he rides off, never suspecting that he is a victim of a plot, his only thought being to hasten to the side of the girl he loves. He urges the chauffeur to put on all speed, but suddenly, as the car comes to the place where the trap is set, the man brings it to a dead stop opposite the manhole with its papier mache cover.

"Something's the matter with the motor," volunteers the chauffeur with a leer, in response to Norton's hurried inquiry. "You'd better walk it or get another machine."

And Norton, his whole thought centered on Florence's need and quite unsuspicious, steps from the car and plunges into the blackness of the sewer.

The conspirators, who have been nearby, replace the manhole cover and hasten away. But the accident has been seen and a few hours later the bulter brings the news to Florence and her companion Susan, in the library of the Hargreaves' home, where they had been awaiting the reporter's coming.

They are still reading, with horrified feelings, the accounts in the afternoon papers of Norton's tragic taking off, when the door of the library opens, and he enters, little the worse for his terrifying experience. Florence embraces him tearfully, while he tells them how, unconscious, his body had floated out of the sewer into the river, where he was picked up by some boatmen. He narrates the clever plot of the false manhole cover by which the conspirators have endeavored to make away with him and vows that he will not again so easily be a vicitm of their wiles.

The next day, the Countess Olga calls to condole with Florence over Norton's disappearance and learns to her astonishment and disappointment, that not only is he not dead or missing, but extremely alive and well, considering his mishap. Dissembling her real feelings before Florence, who thus far does not suspect her, the Countess returns to the headquarters of the conspirators and upbraids Braine and the others for consistently making a fizzle of their plans for sequestrating Florence, making away with Norton and learning where the missing million is located.

"You men have done your best—and failed," she says scornfully. "Now let a woman try. I'll show you how to break up this friendship between Norton and the girl. The rest will be easy."

The Countess' plan is simple. Florence has promised to call upon her the following afternoon and, by a subterfuge, Olga gets Norton to call also, but shortly before Florence is due. Previously she arranges with her maid, that when the latter arrives, the girl shall press an electric button which lights a handsome standing lamp in the drawing room where she and Norton are seated.

When this signal comes, she knows that an instant later Florence will enter the room.

Norton arrives and is listening to her rambling talk, wondering just why she has sent for him, when the light flashes. The Countess staggers to her feet, pressing her hand to her heart.

"I am ill," she gasps, tremblingly, her voice full of appeal.

She totters as if about to fall, and Norton, who has also risen, catches her for an instant in his arms. A fatal instant, for within its brief space, Florence has entered the room, seen all, and indignantly withdraws, with Norton none the wiser. A little later, the Countess having now fully recovered, he, too, leaves the house.

When he arrives at his lodgings he is startled and pained to find a coldly formal note from Florence severing their engagement and returning his ring. He is wounded and hurt by this action and the sudden change in her attitude toward him, which seems quite inexplicable, and all his efforts to obtain an explanation are balked. Nevertheless, he sends candy and flowers and pleading notes without end to the Hargreaves' mansion in the hope that she will relent.

But Florence is obdurate. Convinced that she has seen unquestionable proof of Norton's fickleness, she refuses herself to all callers, even declining to discuss her trouble with the sympathetic Susan. Outwardly, she is not unlike the Florence of yore, although coldly indifferent to the things that were most wont to interest her. But inwardly, she is a veritable volcano of conflicting emotions. For she realizes, that in spite of all she has seen, she still loves Norton dearly. And as she battles with herself, torn between pride and love, the conspirators lay their plans for another coup.

NEW THEATERS.

ST. PAUL, Minn.—A permit for a motion picture theater on the east side of Ohio street, between Winifred and Robie streets, St. Paul, was issued by the building inspection department yesterday. The structure will be of brick 36x80, and will cost about $6,000.

QUINCY, Ill.—Buerkin & Kaempen have been awarded the contract for the construction of the new Orpheum theater on Hampshire street between Sixth and Seventh. The contract price is $40,000.

CHICAGO, Ill.—The West Side has another beautiful theater devoted entirely to the "movies." The Gold Theater, 3411 West Twelfth street, opened recently with "A Million Bid." The theater cost $100,000, the plans being prepared by Architect Alex L. Levy, and it is said to be one of the most modern picture playhouses in the city. A feature is that exits are at the side, while the front of the theater will be used only as an entrance, which is expected to eliminate crowding.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Edgar Allan and N. S. Epstein, Inc., of New York, will take title quite soon to a large plot at South Broadway and Prospect street, Yonkers, which they have purchased from J. Romaine Brown for a five-story office and theater building. It is announced that a playhouse seating 2,000 will be erected.

RICHMOND, Calif.—A theater and office building will be erected on the corner of Ninth street and Macdonald avenue.

WAVERLY, Ill.—The new Eijou movies were opened to the public recently. Cloud and Son having completed the remaining work at their new location on the south side of the square.

IOWA FALLS, IA.—One of the finest motion picture houses in Iowa will be opened at Iowa Falls about the middle of August by Middleton and Gebhart. The new house is a credit to the city as well as to the men behind the improvement. It will seat 350 people and will be equipped in the most approved manner. It will be known as the Rex theatre, and makes a fine addition to the business part of the city.

PARKLAND, Ky.—The management of the Parkland theater, at 2817 Dumesnil street, announced July 22, the opening of the new moving picture theater.

FROSTBURG, Md.—Work on the Colborn and Watts theater is being pushed rapidly and if the present calculations are carried out, the auditorium will be open for business early in the autumn.

CARROLTON, Mo.—Jarboe, Rupe and Miller, who are erecting a new theater on South Main street, have constructed an air dome within the walls of the main building, and will show there until the main building is completed.

CLEVELAND, O.—Plans are being prepared by Architect J. D. Aley, 151 E. 138th street, for a moving picture theater to rise at East 148th street and St. Claire avenue, Collinwood.

WILLMAR, Minn.—The contract was let recently by the Wilmar Opera House Company to Contractor John Skoolheim for the remodeling and rebuilding of the opera house, the purpose being to put up a structure that will be modern in appearance as well as adequate handling of theatrical attractions.

TRACY, Minn.—Tracy is soon to have one of the most complete and up-to-date opera houses in this part of the state. J. C. Filkins, who for some time has been studying plans for such a building on the corner of Fourth and Morgan streets which he acquired this past spring, has let the contract for the construction of the building, H. B. Fulton of Marshall being given the general contract. The architects are Van Dusen and Stevens of Winona.

FRANKFORT, S. D.—Will Gay received the machinery and fixtures for the new moving picture theater which he intends to open in the Oak's building on Main street.

CINCINNATI, O.—It is understood I. Frankel is back of the plan to construct a picture theater on Monmouth street near Seventh, Newport, which will be the largest playhouse on the other side of the river, having about 1,700 seats.

AUSTIN, Texas.—Local capitalists have signed contracts for the erection of a $200,000 theater building in Austin on the site of the present Avenue Hotel. John Eberson of Chicago, who has designed some noted playhouses, is the architect. Those behind the new venture are Ernest Nalle, Eugene Tips, Wilbur Allen, M. E. Milligan and two or three others. The structure is to be completed by Feb. 1, 1915.

DYERSVILLE, Ia.—Mr. A. V. Lippert, manager of the Photo-Play, is arranging to secure plans for the erection of a modern fireproof theater building, with a large seating capacity. Work on the same is to begin in the near future.

SPOKANE, Wash.—Plans for the Liberty theater, to be erected on the site of the Lauman building, north side of Riverside avenue, were filed recently with City Building Inspector George Mackie by William Cutts, general manager for the theater company erecting the building.

The structure will be of steel fireproof construction, three stories high, and will cost about $75,000. Francis P. Rooney of Spokane is the architect.

DETROIT, MICH.—Property with frontage at 3067-73 East Grand boulevard, having depth of 173.5 feet has been leased by Dr. Alois Thurner for 20 years to a syndicate which plans to use the land as the site for a large photo-play house to be known as the Grand Boulevard theater. Cost about $150,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—The Walton Amusement Company purchased the lots at 733-735-737 East Chelten avenue. At the present time the lots are improved by a two-story brick dwelling but this will be razed for the erection, it is reported, of a motion picture parlor.

THEATER TRANSFERS.

BILLINGS, Mont.—A deal has been completed whereby lease on the Broadway theater was transferred from Woods and Snidow to a firm composed of E. C. Keefe, manager and proprietor of the Luna theater, and V. D. Caldwell, a member of the clerical staff of the American Bank and Trust Company.

The buyers announced that they will run a strictly feature photo-play house, with the price of admission slightly higher than that of the ordinary "movies."

DELAVAN, Wis.—The Hexagon Light & Amusement Company has taken over the moving picture business recently installed by Mr. Pierce at the Delavan Lake Assembly. The new company has leased the auditorium for the balance of the season and each evening are putting on a high class motion picture show. The members of the enterprise are: F. F. Lewis, Janesville; R. S. Young, Darien; J. C. Elakey, Union Grove; William Topping, Elgin, Ill.; C. T. Schlada, Delavan.

OCONOMOWOC, Wis.—The Palace theater has been sold by Harry Strand to E. C. Main and John A. Cook of Oconomowoc, who took immediate possession.

MALVERN, Ark.—Emmett Nunn has purchased the Princess theater and the Airdome, both motion picture houses, from the old owners, Joe Chamberlain, Ralph Adams and Hogan Stevens.

ODON, Ind.—A. D. Goosey has sold his moving picture theater to parties at Newberry, who will give free shows in that little town every Saturday night.

BILLINGS, Mont.—A deal was completed whereby lease on the Broadway theater was transferred from Woods and Snidow to a firm composed of E. C. Keefe, manager and proprietor of the Luna theater and V. D. Caldwell, a member of the Clerical staff of the American Bank and Trust Company.

TIPTON, Ia.—The Gem Theater of Tipton has changed hands and will reopen on or about the first week in August. Mr. Kerwin and Mr. Dvorsky are the new proprietors. Mr. Kerwin has been associated with the Princess theater at Iowa City for the past year and has been actively engaged in the amusement business for the past ten years. Mr. Dvorsky comes here from California where he has conducted several large and prosperous motion picture theaters.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—The Brown-Weiss Realties bought from the McKinley Square Casino Co. (W. H. Weissager, Pres.), the three-story building, 98.11x109, at Nos. 773 to 781 East 169th street, together with the three buildings at Nos. 1283-87 Union avenue, 668x122.9. The Brown-Weiss Co. gave in part payment the Temple theater and office building at Camden, N. J., Market street, 90x175. Alfred Furst secured a long term lease on the Casino last March just after it had been renovated and remodelled. The deeds in the transaction were placed on record.

CRYSTAL FALLS, Mich.—The Stolberg Bros. who have managed the Uno since it was started in this city will surrender the show house next week to W. H. Needham, of Escanaba.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—A. J. Rich & Co. announce, the sale of the Princess theater to S. Morton Cohn of Portland, Oregon.

This theater is well known to San Franciscans. It is a steel and concrete fireproof building, with a seating capacity of 1,500, on the southerly line of Ellis street, between Fillmore and Steiner streets, built on a lot 86 by 137½ feet. The property was owned by J. Chas. Green.

ANDERSON, Ind.—G. E. Gerhart of Indianapolis, has purchased the Star Theater of S. B. Sampson. It is reported that the new owner will take possession immediately. The deal was made by Cornelius and Son.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

SITUATIONS WANTED.

OPERATOR. At liberty September 1; six years' experience; $20 week, no less. Address O, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

AT TRAP DRUMMER—Wants to locate; complete outfit; salary reasonable. Address C. L. Ward, Gen. Del., Minneapolis, Minn.

MANAGER OR OPERATOR.—Six years' experience; married; can give best references. State all first letter. Address LOGAN, 143 N. Main, Wabash, Ind.

PIANIST—Wants position; used to moving picture work; sober and reliable; single. Address George Reynolds, 1520 Market street, Galveston, Tex.

CAMERAMAN GLOBETROTTER. — Expert studio and laboratory. Will consider only first-class proposition, traveling or studio. Owns outfit. Address C. A. N., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

EXPERT PHOTOGRAPHER, with practical knowledge chemistry and electricity, desires opportunity to enter motion picture industry; sober, studious, ambitious to advance. Address A. H. C., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

CAMERAMAN.—Expert and experienced, desires position with reliable people; also first-class practical photographic and film manufacturing experience. Address G. E., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

MOTION PICTURE MAN.—Expert on projection, also own and operate moving picture camera and understand developing, etc. Desire position in studio, high-class theater or showroom; can furnish best references. Address RELIABLE, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

ORGANIST, PIANIST, LEADER.—Fine improvisor, with comprehensive library for orchestra, having held present position two years, wants position with or without organ, where artistic methods, similar to those employed at Strand Theater, New York, would be appreciated. No ragtime on organ. Atlantic or Pacific coast preferred. Address ORGANIST, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED.—Cameramen, all sections, owning their own outfit, to submit undeveloped negative of current news events to "Pictorial News Film." Only experts, whose photography is first class need apply; by mail only. S. J. VAN FLEET, 141 West 142d St., N. Y. City.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

A FINELY-EQUIPPED film exchange in Oklahoma is for sale. It is now netting a good sum weekly. This is a rare opportunity, as the owners want to withdraw from the business. Nothing but cash will be considered. A chance to step into a well-established business that does not come often. Address B. A. C., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

THEATERS WANTED.

PICTURE THEATERS—Wanted in Colorado, Nebraska and Wyoming. If you have one to sell, write Denver Theatrical Exchange, 1554 California street, Denver, Colo.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

MODERN EQUIPPED THEATRE (moving picture) in city of 3,000; no competition; capacity 400; stage, curtains, scenery all complete; $1,100 cash. Address D. C. BROWN, Star Theater, Box 31, Madisonville, Tex.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER, seating 250, on main street in Bloomington, Illinois; city of 30,000; good reason for selling; big chance for live wire. Address G. W., Gen. Del., Bloomington, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Coleman Theater, Southington, Conn., seating 800, fine building, large stage, two machines, only place in good manufacturing town; population 10,000; long lease; price, $3,000, half cash, balance easy terms; real bargain. Address CARL MICHELFELDER, Montclair, N. J.

PALACE THEATER, Pleasantville, N. J.; Capacity 800; population of city, 6,000, thickly populated surrounding country to draw from; completely equipped; no capital required, except rent security; a good proposition for a live wire. Personal interviews only. Address S. M. BRAUNSTEIN, 1420 Atlantic avenue, Atlantic City, N. J., owner.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

PRINTING MACHINE WANTED—Step type with pressure gate; used machine in good condition. Name lowest price. Address Wm. V. D. KELLEY, 105 Liberty street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

MOVING PICTURE CHAIRS.—2,550, new; 98c each in small lots. Second hand chairs, 65c to 75c each on hand at all times. ATLAS SEATING CO., 501 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES.—For one, three and six sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. The Newman Mfg. Co., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Powers' 6-A machine complete, perfect condition, $165. Simplex only slightly used, $195. Standard No. 4, complete, like new, $75. Edison Model "D" helical gears, two months old, $85. Edison rebuilt exhibition model, $50. Powers' No. 5 with new and complete equipment, $85. Compensarc, $40. Model "B" gas outfit, $15. Machines perfect; no junk; fully guaranteed. We sell new machines and take old outfits in part payment. STELZER BROS., 417 Broadway, Lincoln, Ill.

FILMS WANTED.

WANTED.—To buy one wild animal feature, one sensational western feature, one detective feature. Must be in fine condition, with plenty of paper. Nothing less than three reels to a subject. Territory must be unrestricted so they may be played anywhere in the United States. A. L. Brown, Orpheum Theater, Lansing, Mich.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR SALE.—Twenty reels film all in perfect condition, $75 for lot. FREDERICKS, 2017 N. Twelfth St., Philadelphia, Pa.

NEW ENGLAND MANAGERS Book the delightful seven-reel feature, "David Copperfield." Exclusive rights owned by Dorva & Deleon, 17 Berwick Park, Boston, Mass.

TEN THREE REEL FEATURES, good condition, plenty of paper, dirt cheap. FRED F. GOODROW, Room 314, Masonic Temple Bldg., New Orleans, La.

SEVERAL COLD COPIES of weekly news film for sale. All subjects are unique, interesting and educational. Rare opportunity. Bargain price. GAUMONT CO., Flushing, N. Y.

HAVE SEVERAL three and four-reel features for state of Michigan for sale; films in first-class condition, each film having been run not over 15 days. Address F. D. NICHOLS, Apollo Theater, Grand Rapids, Mich.

FEATURES ON PERCENTAGE.—We furnish reliable exchanges, big features never shown in their localities on percentage. Full line advertising. Write for information. FIDELITY FILM CO., 145 West 45th street, N. Y. City.

MR. STATE RIGHT BUYER.—Going to the San Francisco Exposition? For sale to the highest bidder, state right of California to "The Siege and Fall of the Alamo." An historical and powerful 4-reel feature of quality, spectacular scenes, admirably acted. Infantry, cavalry, artillery. Lecture, press matter, lobby display, lantern slides, attractive lithos, paper 1-3 and 6-sheets. Address replies to JNO. R. BLACK, 516 Hicks Bldg., San Antonio, Texas.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS FOR SALE.

ELECTRIC PIANOS.—With keyboards $140. Orchestrion pianos with pipes $250 all guaranteed. Closing out electric piano business. Every picture show has use for one. Send for circular. J. F. Herman, 1420 Pa. Ave., Washington, D. C.

F. O. NIELSEN, booking

"THE SPOILERS"

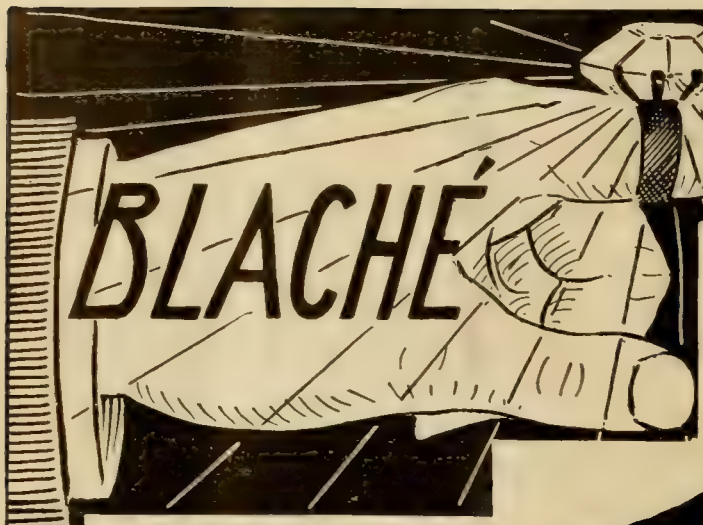
For the States of

OHIO, WISCONSIN, MICHIGAN, INDIANA and ILLINOIS

(EXCEPT COOK COUNTY)

WRITE OR WIRE

720 SCHILLER BLDG., CHICAGO



BLACHÉ SPECIAL

The STUPENDOUS

THE WAR

16000 MEXICAN SOLDIERS IN ACTION

During the staging of "THE WAR EXTRA," the BLACHÉ players suddenly found themselves in the midst of the bloody battle of Monclova. Cameraman Charles Pin succeeded in photographing the terrible onslaught of the Constitutionalist army upon the doomed city, the smoking ruins of which are also seen in this remarkable photodrama. Following the battle, the BLACHE Actors were placed in a special train by General Francisco Murguia and sent under heavy guard to the United States Border Post at Eagle Pass, Texas.

BLACHÉ FEATURES INC.

STATE RIGHTS FEATURE

MEXICAN WAR DRAMA SENSATION

EXTRA

IN 4 REELS

SENDING CONSTITUTIONALIST SOLDIERS TO THE FRONT

PRODUCED IN MEXICO

FORT LEE, NEW JERSEY.

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS.....1091
ADLER, MME. SARAH.....1086

BANGS, FRANK C.....1084
"BETTER MAN, THE" (Famous Players)..1085
BRITISH NOTES 1081

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES..1122
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES. 1124
"CALL OF THE NORTH, THE" (Lasky)..1080
CHICAGO LETTER. 1103
"CHIMES, THE" (Hepworth).....1076
"CHIP OF THE FLYING U" (Selig).....1074
CHOOSING A LOCATION.....1088
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)..1099
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent). 1100

"DEVIL'S FIDDLE, THE" (Apex).....1075
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES.....1087

EUROPEAN ARMIES IN ACTION.....1079
EXHIBITORS' NEWS 1113
EXPRESSIONS OF LIFE.....1073

FACTS AND COMMENTS.....1071
FEATURE FILM STORIES.....1146
"FIRST RUNS" 1072
"$5,000,000 COUNTERFEITING PLOT, THE" (Dramascope) 1083
"FORBIDDEN TRAIL, THE" (Kleine)....1106

GARRITY, BABY. 1089

"HE DANCED HIMSELF TO DEATH" (Vitagraph) 1082

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES.....1138
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.....1164
INQUIRIES 1094

JENNINGS, LOUIS B.....1102

"KAISER WILLIAM II" (Kaiser Films)..1086
KALEM FINDS BUSINESS EXCELLENT..1084
"KIT, THE ARKANSAW TRAVELER" (Kalem) 1075

"LAST VOLUNTEER, THE" (Eclectic)....1081
"LAY DOWN YOUR ARMS" (Gt. Northern).1078
LESSEY, GEORGE A.....1089
LICENSED FILM STORIES.....1127
LICENSED RELEASE DATES.....1166

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES....1108
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR.....1105

"NEXT IN COMMAND, THE" (Pasquale)..1107
NOTES OF THE TRADE.....1112

OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN.1090

PHOTO PLAYWRIGHT, THE.....1093
PICTURE THEATRES PROJECTED.....1111
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 1095

ROTH, EUGENE H.....1111

"SHOCKINGLY MISINFORMED" 1082
SUBMARINE PICTURES ON EXHIBITION.1106
"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN" (World).....1077
"VALLEY OF THE MOON, THE" (Bosworth) 1079
VITAGRAPH THEATRE CHANGES BILL..1085

WILLIAMS, EARLE 1077
WILLIAMS, ESTHA 1087

TO ADVERTISERS.

ASBESTOS SUPPLIES.
H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO.....1134

CARBON IMPORTERS.
KIEWERT, CHARLES L., CO.....1170

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.....1171
BELL & HOWELL CO., THE.....1172
CANFIELD GAS ENGINE CO.....1168
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO.....1168
DETROIT MOTOR SUPPLY CO.....1173
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.....1167
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS.....1140
FULTON, E. E.....1172
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO.....1163
HALLBERG, J. H.....1142
HOKE, GEORGE M. SUPPLY CO.....1172
KLEINE OPTICAL CO.....1066
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE.....1168
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO...1153
SMITH, L. C., & CO.....1172
STRENLINGER, CHARLES A., & CO.....1134
TYPHOON FAN CO.....1162
WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC AND M'F'G CO. 1136

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS.
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION....1135
ANIMA FILM RENTAL CO.....1147
APEX FILM CO.....1151
ARCTIC FILM CO.....1157
BLACHE FEATURES, INC.....1160-61
BROADWAY PICTURE PRODUCING CO.1133
CELEBRATED PLAYERS FILM CO.....1128
CLUNE FILM EXCHANGE.....1145
COL. WM. F. CODY (BUFFALO BILL) HISTORICAL PICTURE CO.....1039
COSMOFOTOFILM CO. 1149
DRAMASCOPE CO., THE.....1053
ECLECTIC FILM CO.....1060
EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM CO.....1172
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.....1046-47
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.....1173
GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO.....1134
HEPWORTH-AMERICAN FILM CO.....1147
HOLLAND FILM MFG. CO.....1141
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS.....1129
ITALA FILM CO. OF AMERICA.....1058-59
IVAN FILM PRODUCTIONS, INC.....1143
KEANOGRAPH CO. 1054-55
LASKEY, JESSE L., FEATURE PLAY CO..1052
NEILSIEN, F. O.....1159
O Z FILM CO., THE.....1056
PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO.....1121
RAMO FILMS, INC.....1118-19
RENFAX FILM CO., INC. 1057
RENOWNED PLAYERS FEATURE CO...1172
SAWYER, A. H., INC.....1048-49-50-51
WARNER'S FEATURES, INC.....1132
WORLD FILM CORPORATION....1062-63, 1137

FILM EXCHANGES.
APEX FEATURE SERVICE.....1148
BRADENBURGH, GEORGE W.....1167
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.....1131
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL Co. 1166
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE.....1171
WESTERN FILM BROKERS.....1131

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO..1165
GAUMONT CO. 1139
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.....1174
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION. 1043
THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION.....1038
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO. 1040-41-42

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL CO...1157

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH COMPANY. 1123
EDISON, THOMAS A.....1067
ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO. 1044-45
KALEM CO. 1070
KLEINE, GEORGE 1064-65
LUBIN MANUFACTURING CO.....1068
PATHE FRERES 1061
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.....1175
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA.....1069

MISCELLANEOUS.
BARR & BRUNSWIG.....1134
BOTANICAL DECORATING CO.....1134
CENTAUR FILM CO.....1170
COMMERCIAL FILMERS 1017
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 1159
CORCORAN, INC., A. J.....1140
EASTMAN KODAK CO.....1167
ESTRICH BROS. 1134
FILM CORP. (care M. P. World).....1134
G. Y. Z. (care M. P. World).....1136
GUNBY BROS. 1172
HOLCOMB & HOKE MFG. CO.....1153
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.....1172
KRAUS MANUFACTURING CO.....1167
MOVING PICTURE WORLD.....1169
N. S. T. CO.....1131
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.....1131
NATIONAL TICKET CO.....1164
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.....1169
SCENARIOS CRITICIZED. 1131
STANDARD ENGRAVING CO.....1131
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.....1172
TEEVIN'S CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL..1136
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE.....1134
THEATRE RECORDS PUBLISHING CO...1134
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO....1172
UNITED FILM CO.....1134
UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO. (Scenario Dept.). 1172
VITAGRAPH CO. (Scenario Dept.).....1168
WYANOAK PUBLISHING CO.....1170

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA MANUFACTURERS.
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD. 1018

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTO PLAYER CO.....1131
DEAGAN, J. C.....1130
LYON & HEALY.....1171
SEEBURGH, J. P., PIANO CO.....1157
SINN, CLARENCE E.....1173

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO.....1173
ANDREWS, A. H., CO.....1173
BENNETT SEATING CO.....1173
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO.....1173
STEEL FURNITURE CO.....1173
WISCONSIN SEATING CO.....1173

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO.....1122
HENNEGAN & CO.....1167
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO.....1130
THEATRE SPECIALTY CO.....1131

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO.....1170
ERNEMANN PHOTO-KINO WORKS.....1169
PHANTOSCOPE MANUFACTURING CO....1155
POWER, NICHOLAS 1176
PRECISION MACHINE CO.....1125

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO.....1157
JONES, S. H.....1171
GENTER, J. H., CO.....1168
MIRROR SCREEN CO.....1172

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
ERKER BROS.....1168
GLOBE PHOTO SERVICE.....1155
MOORE, AUBBELL & CO.....1172
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.....1167

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO.....1171

VENTILATION COOLING HEATING

Heating and cooling problem revolutionized by Typhoon System.

You keep cool in front of a desk fan and not in back; apply this common sense and blow the air into your theatre.

A 48" Typhoon Multiblade Blower has sixteen blades, an ordinary exhaust fan has six; it is the blades that do the business.

A Typhoon Tubular Air Warmer will heat and ventilate at the same time.

The low price of effective apparatus will surprise you. Catalogue "W" gives information.

TYPHOON FAN CO. NEW YORK CITY 1544 BROADWAY

"The Rectifier for handling A.C. Current is the solution"

Lyric Amusement Company
Operating High Grade Motion Picture Theatres

H. H. Johnson, President
Champaign, Illinois

"Any manager that says that perfect results can be accomplished on A.C. current with a rheostat or these so called transformers is blind to his own interests, because it costs a little more to have PERFECT results.

According to my investigations along this line, I HONESTLY BELIEVE THAT THE RECTIFIER IS THE SOLUTION FOR HANDLING A.C. CURRENT; a rotary convertor, or motor generator, will give good results; that is, it will make you direct current, but the first cost is lots more and the efficiency is less.

If I were to open a new house in a town where I could get either a.c. or d.c., I would use the a.c. with the rectifier, although d.c. would cost less to start with, but the rectifier with its first cost would soon pay for itself in the difference in your current bills, then you get away from the troublesome rheostat.

If you want any information regarding the rectifier just let me know; if you have any one that must be shown send them to me and I will surely put them wise."

H. H. JOHNSON

The above tells the story in a nutshell of the G-E Mercury Arc Rectifier.

Shall we send you further particulars in Booklet B-3274?

General Electric Company

General Office Schenectady, N. Y.

SALES OFFICES IN ALL LARGE CITIES

5095

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.
Aug. 24—This is th' Life (Two Parts Dr)....
Aug. 26—Lodging for a Night (Drama).....
Aug 28—The Song of the Sea Shell (Dr.)....
Aug. 31—The Aftermath (Two Parts—Drama).
Sept. 3—The Wrong Birds (Drama).....

BEAUTY.
Aug. 11—Suzanna's New Suit (Com-Dr.).....
Aug 18 The Silence of John Gordon (Com-Dr.) .....
Aug. 25—Susie's New Shoes (Comedy-Drama).

"101" BISON.
Aug. 15—The Oublette (Three Parts—Drama).
Aug. 22—The Lure of the Geisha (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 29—Law of the Lumberjack (Two Parts—Drama) .....

BRONCHO.
Aug. 12—Shorty and the Fortune Teller (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 19—The Robbery at Pine River (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 26 The Sheriff's Sister (Two Parts—Drama) .....

CRYSTAL.
Aug. 11—Some Crooks (Comedy).....
—Willie's Disguise (Comedy).....
Aug. 18—Vivian's Best Fellow (Comedy).....
Aug. 25—Barreled (Comedy).....
—Bashful Ben (Comedy).....

DOMINO.
Aug. 13—A Romance of the Sawdust Ring (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 20—The Defaulter (Two Parts—Drama)..
Aug. 27—The Village 'Neath the Sea (Two Parts—Drama) .....

ECLAIR.
Aug. 12—The Price Paid (Two Parts—Political Drama) .....
Aug. 16—A Pearl of Great Price (Society Dr.)
Aug. 19—Bransford in Arcadia (Three Parts—Western Drama) .....
Aug. 23—The Miracle (Drama).....
Aug. 26—The Character Woman (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 30—Mosquite Pete's Fortune (Western-Drama) .....

FRONTIER.
Aug. 16—Memories of Years Ago (Drama)....
Aug. 23—The Strange Signal (Drama).....
Aug. 30—The Janitor's Son (Drama).....

GOLD SEAL.
Aug. 11—The Trey o' Hearts (Series No. 3) (White Water) (Two Parts—Dr)..
Aug. 18—The Trey o' Hearts, Series No. 3 (The Seaventure) (Two Parts—Dr.)
Aug. 25—The Trey o' Hearts. No. 4—Dead Reckoning (Two Parts—Drama)....

IMP.
Aug. 13—Universal Boy (Series No. 3—Comedy—Travelogue) .....
Aug. 17—Love's Refrain (Drama).....
Aug. 20—On the High Seas (Two Parts—Dr.)..
Aug. 24—Jim Webb, Senator (Three Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 27—Universal Boy in the Chinese Mystery (Juvenile-Drama) .....

JOKER.
Aug. 15—What Happened to Schultz (Com.)..
Aug. 19—Pass Key No. 2 (Comedy).....
Aug. 22—The Diamond Nippers (Comedy).....
Aug. 26—The Little Automogobile (Comedy)...
Aug. 29—Well! Well! (Comedy).....

KAY-BEE.
Aug. 14—The Stigma (Two Parts—Drama)....
Aug. 21—The Winning of Denise (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 28—The Old Love's Best (Two Parts—Dr.)

KEYSTONE.
Aug. 6—A New York Girl (Two Parts—Com.)
Aug. 8—A Coat's Tale (Comedy).....
Aug. 10—The Face on the Barroom Floor (Comedy) .....
Aug. 13—Recreation (Comedy) .....
—The Yosemite (Educational) .....
Aug. 15—Such a Cook (Comedy) .....
Aug. 17—That Minstrel Man (Comedy).....
Aug. 20—Those Country Kids (Comedy).....

KOMIC.
Aug. 16—Bill Saves the Day (No. 4 of the "Bill" Series—Comedy) .....
Aug. 23—A Physical Culture Romance (Com.)..
Aug. 30—Bill, No. 5—Bill Organizes a Union (Comedy) .....

MAJESTIC.
Aug. 18—The Inner Conscience (Drama).....
Aug. 21—A Lesson in Mechanics (Drama)....
Aug. 23—The Second Mrs. Roebuck (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 25—Granny (Drama) .....
Aug. 30—Frenchy (Two Parts—Drama) .....

NESTOR.
Aug. 14—On Rugged Shores (Drama).....
Aug. 19—The Creeping Flame (Western Dr.)..
Aug. 21—A Lucky Deception (Two Parts—Comedy) .....
Aug. 26—A Miner's Romance (Western-Dr.)..
Aug. 28—For Love or Money (Comedy).....

POWERS.
Aug. 14—The Barnstormers (Comedy).....
Aug. 21—The Divorcee (Drama).....
Aug. 28—This Is the Life (Comedy).....

PRINCESS.
Aug. 14—A Rural Romance (Comedy).....
Aug. 21—The Belle of the School (Comedy-Drama) .....
Aug. 28—The Keeper of the Light (Drama)....

RELIANCE.
Aug. 15—The Wagon of Death (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 17—Our Mutual Girl, No. 31 (News).....
Aug. 19—Izzy Gets the Wrong Bottle (Com.)..
Aug. 22 For the Last Edition (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 24—Our Mutual Girl, No. 32 (News)...
Aug. 26—The Stolen Ore (Drama).....
Aug. 29—Through the Dark (Two Parts—Dr.)

REX.
Aug. 13—Through the Flames (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 16—The Hedge Between (Drama).....
Aug. 20—A Bowl of Roses (Drama).....
Aug. 23—The Hole in the Garden Wall (Dr.)..
Aug. 27—For the Secret Service (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 30—Out of the Depths (Drama).....

ROYAL.
Aug. 15—Cupid Dances a Tango (Comedy)....
Aug. 22—His Long Lost Friend (Comedy)....
Aug. 29—A Run for His Money (Comedy)....

STERLING.
Aug. 17—His Wife's Flirtation (Comedy).....
—Close to Nature (Educational).....
Aug. 20—Lost in the Studio (Juvenile Com.)..
Aug. 24—A Rural Affair (Juvenile-Comedy)...
Aug. 27—Snookee's Disguise (Comedy).....

THANHOUSER.
Aug. 16—Her Big Brother (Drama).....
Aug. 18—McCarn Plays Fate (Two Parts—Dr.)
Aug. 23—A Dog's Good Deed (Drama).....
Aug. 25—Conscience (Two Parts—Drama) ....
Aug. 30—Arty the Artist (Comedy) .....

UNIVERSAL IKE.
Aug. 11—Universal Ike, Jr., in the Dangers of a Great City (Drama) .....
Aug. 18—Universal Ike, Jr., on His Honeymoon (Comedy) .....
Aug. 25—Universal Ike at the Dance of Little L. O. (Comedy) .....

VICTOR.
Aug. 17—Weights and Measures (Two Parts—Political Drama) .....
Aug. 21—The Slavey's Romance (Drama).....
Aug. 24—There is a Destiny (Drama).....
Aug. 28—Counterfeiters (Two Parts—Drama)..

FEATURES.

ALL STAR FEATURE CORP.
July—Dan (Five Parts—Comedy Drama).....
August—The Nightingale (Drama).....

APEX.
July—The Secret Seven (4 parts—Drama)....
July—The Midnight Marriage (4 parts—Dr.)...
August—The Devil's Fiddler (Three Parts—Drama) .....

AUSTRO-SERVIAN FILM CO.
August—With Serb and Austrian (Four Parts—Drama) .....

BLACHE.
August—The War Extra (Four Parts—Top.)..

COSMOFOTOFILM.
August—What a Woman Will Do Four Parts—Drama) .....

ECLECTIC.
August—Whiskers (Comedy).....
August—The Boundary Rider (Five Parts—Drama) .....
August—The Masked Motive (Five Parts—Dr.)
August—Perils of Pauline No. 11 (Two Parts—Serial) .....
August—Get Out and Get Under (Comedy).....
August—All Love Excelling (Three Parts—Dr.)
August—The Siren (Five Parts—Drama).....
August—The Masher's Mishap (Comedy).....
August—Nick Winter and the Lost Prince (Three Parts—Drama) .....

FAMOUS PLAYERS.
July 20—The Scales of Justice (Five Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 10—The Better Man (Four Parts—Dr.)..

GAUMONT.
July 25—The Curse of the Scarabee Ruby (Dr.)
August—War (Drama) .....

GEORGE KLEINE.
August—Anne Boleyn (Three Parts—Drama)..
August—A Kingdom at Stake (Three Parts—Drama) .....
August—Othello (Five Parts—Drama) .....

HEPWORTH-AMERICAN.
August—The Tragedy of Basil Grieve (Three Parts—Drama) .....
August—The Girl from the Sky (Comedy Dr.)..
Aug. 29—The Chimes (Three Parts—Drama)..
—The Terror of the Air (Two Parts—Drama) .....

HISTORICAL PICTURE CO.
August—The Indian Wars (Five Parts—Dr.)..

IVAN FILM PRODUCTIONS.
Aug. 25—Sins of the Parents (Five Parts—Dr.)

ITALA.
August—Cabiria (Twelve Parts—Drama).....

THE KAISER FILM CO.
Aug. 15—Kaiser William II (Topical).....

LASKY.
July 13—The Man on the Box (5 parts—Drama)
Aug. 10—The Call of the North (Five Parts—Drama) .....

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORP.
August—Northern Lights (Five Parts—Drama)

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO.
Aug. 10—The Oath of a Viking (Three Parts—Drama) .....

RAMO.
August—The War of Wars, or the Franco-German Invasion of 1914 (Drama)....

SAWYER.
Aug. 20—The Envoy Extraordinary (Five Parts Drama) .....
August—Zingara (Three Parts—Drama).....
August—Her Brother's Disgrace (Three Parts—Drama) .....

SELECT PHOTOPLAY PRODUCING CO.
August—At the Old Cross Roads (Five Parts—Drama) .....

THE DRAMASCOPE CO.
August—$5,000,000 Counterfeiting Plot (Six Parts—Drama) .....

THE I. S. P. CO.
August—Held for Ransom (Four Parts—Dr.)..

UNITED KEANOGRAPH.
August—Money (Six Parts—Drama).....

WARNER'S FEATURES.
Aug. 3—The Tragedy of Room 17 (Three Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 10—The Day of Reckoning (Three Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 17—The Eagle's Refuge (Three Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 24—Across the Border (Three Parts—Dr.)
Aug. 31—The Kidnapped Heiress (Three Parts—Drama) .....

WORLD FILM CORP.
Aug. 10—Uncle Tom's Cabin (Five Parts—Dr.)
Aug. 24—The Lure (Five Parts—Drama)...

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand	$1.25
Ten Thousand	$2.50
Twenty Thousand	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand	$5.50
Fifty Thousand	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000 $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

SEE AMERICANS FIRST

FLYING "A" FEATURE FILMS

THIS IS TH' LIFE

An absorbing two part drama exploiting the advance of civilization.
Dramatic interest drifts from pathos to comedy in an even tenor.
One, Three and Six Sheet Posters, Photos, Slides and Heralds.

Featuring ED COXEN and CHARLOTTE BURTON

Under direction of Henry Otto

Release Monday, August 24th, 1914

AMERICAN BEAUTY

Featuring MARGARITA FISCHER & HARRY POLLARD

"THE SILENCE OF JOHN GORDON"

Romance in a Minister's Life
One and Three Sheet Lithos
Release Tuesday, Aug. 18th, 1914

NEXT WEEK

"SUSIE'S NEW SHOES"

"LODGING FOR THE NIGHT"

A Thrilling Tale of the Hills

Under direction of Thos. Ricketts — Release Wednesday, Aug. 26th, 1914

"THE SONG OF THE SEA SHELL"

Vivid and Impressive—Strong in Imaginative Power — Release Friday, Aug. 28th, 1914

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO.

CHICAGO

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Geo. Kleine, Pathe, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Aug. 8—They Would Bandits Be (Comedy)..
—The Deadly Cheroot (Comedy).....
Aug. 10—The Condemning Hand (Drama).....
Aug 13—The Mix-Up at Murphy's (Comedy)...
—Cheering Mr. Goodheart (Comedy)....
Aug. 15—The District Attorney's Burglar (Dr.).
Aug 17 Tim, the Terror (Comedy).....
—The Game of Freeze-Out (Comedy)..
Aug 20 The Smuggler's Wife (Drama).....
Aug 22 The Gypsy Talisman (Drama).....

EDISON.

Aug. 8—One Touch of Nature (Comedy).....
Aug. 10—All for a Tooth (Comedy).....
Aug. 11—A Tale of Old Tucson (Drama).....
Aug. 12—Andy Learns to Swim (Ninth Adventure of Andy—Comedy)
Aug. 14—The One Who Loved Him Best (Special—Two Parts—Drama).....
Aug. 15—While the Tide Was Rising (Drama).
Aug. 17—The Adventure of the Pickpocket (Eighth of the Octavius, Amateur Detective, series—Comedy) .....
Aug. 18—By the Aid of a Film (Tenth of "The Man Who Disappeared" Series—Drama) .....
Aug. 19—The Old Fire Horse (Comedy).....
Aug. 21—The Gilded Kidd (Special—Two Parts—Comedy) .....
Aug. 22—In Lieu of Damages (Drama).....
Aug 24—Nearly a Widow (Comedy).....
Aug. 25—The Mystery of the Octagonal Room (Tenth of "The Chronicles of Cleek" Series—Drama) .....
Aug. 26—The South African Mines (Industrial).
Buster and His Coat (Comedy).....
Aug. 28—The Birth of the Star-Spangled Banner (Special—Two Parts—Drama)..
Aug 29—Treasure Trove (Drama).....

ESSANAY.

Aug. 8—Broncho Billy's Fatal Joke (Drama).
Aug. 10—Topsy-Turvy Sweedie (Comedy).....
Aug. 11—Stopping the Limited (Com. Dr.)....
Aug. 12—The Fable of the Manoeuvres of Joel and Father's Second Time on Earth (Comedy) .....
Aug. 13—Slippery Slim and His Tombstone (Comedy) .....
Aug. 14—A Gentleman of Leisure (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 15—Broncho Billy Wins Out (Drama)...
Aug. 17—Sweedie and the Double Exposure (Comedy) .....
Aug. 18—The Black Signal (Drama).....
Aug. 19—The Fable of the Two Mandolin Players and the Willing Performer (Comedy) .....
Aug 20—Slippery Slim and the Claim Agent (Comedy) .....
Aug. 21—The Masked Wrestler (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 22—Broncho Billy's Wild Ride (Drama)..
Aug 24—Sweedie Springs a Surprise (Com.)...
Aug 25—Two Men Who Waited (Drama)....
Aug. 26—The Fable of "The Difference Between Learning and Learning How" (Comedy) .....
Aug. 27—Slippery Slim and the Fortune Teller (Western-Comedy) .....
Aug. 28—Seven Sealed Orders (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 29—Broncho Billy's Indian Romance (Western-Drama) .....

KALEM.

Aug. 8—Grey Eagle's Revenge (Drama).....
Aug. 10—The Rajah's Vow (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 11—Old Man Higgenbotham's Daughter (Drama) .....
Aug. 12—At the End of the Rope (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 14—A Substitute for Pants (Comedy)....
Aug. 15—Near Death's Door (Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Old Army Coat (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 18—The Storm at Sea (Drama).....
Aug 19—The Bond Eternal (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 21—Sherlock Bonehead (Comedy).....
Aug. 22—Kidnapped by Indians (Drama).....
Aug. 24—The Primitive Instinct (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 25—The Counterfeiter's Plot (Drama)....
Aug. 26—The Cave of Death (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 28—When Men Wear Skirts (Comedy)....
Aug. 29—The Car of Death (Drama).....

GEORGE KLEINE.

July 14—The Rival Actresses (Cines—Special—2 parts—Drama).....
July 21—The Stronger Tie (Cines—Special—Two Parts—Drama).....
July 28—On Temptation's Toil (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 4—When War Threatens (Cines-Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 11—The Forbidden Trail (Celio—Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 18—When the Beacon Failed (Cines Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....

LUBIN.

Aug. 8—Love and Flames (Comedy).....
Aug. 11—He Wanted Work (Comedy).....
—The Cook Next Door (Comedy).....
Aug. 12—The Downward Path (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 13—The Heart Rebellious (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 14—Latin Blood (Drama).....
Aug. 15—They Bought a Boat (Comedy).....
—The Puncture Proof Sock Man (Com.)
Aug. 18—Back to the Farm (Comedy).....
Aug. 19—The Dreamer (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 20—His Brother's Blood (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 21—The Love of Ora San (Drama).....
Aug. 22—Sometimes It Works (Comedy) .....
—Making Auntie Welcome (Comedy)...
Aug. 25—The Widow and the Twins (Comedy).
—The Lucky Rube (Comedy).....
Aug 26 The Attorney's Decision (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 27—The Aggressor (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 28—The Better Man (Drama).....
Aug. 29—The Kid's Nap (Comedy).....

MELIES.

Aug. 8—Gratitude (Special—Two Parts—Dr.).
Aug. 11—The Burglar Alarm (Comedy).....
Aug. 12—Sinews of the Dead (Drama).....
Aug. 13—A King by Force (Comedy).....
Aug. 13—The Biltmore Diamond (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 15—Voice of the Bells (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 18—A Slight Mistake (Comedy).....
Aug. 19—Children of Fatality (Drama).....
Aug. 20—A Surprising Encounter (Comedy)...
—A Mason's New Assistant (Comedy)..
Aug. 20—The Bulltrainer's Revenge (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 22—The Tell-Tale Photograph (Drama)..

PATHE.

Aug. 4—Training Army Dogs (Sweden) (Military-Edu.) .....
A Basque Wedding (Manners and Customs) .....
Aug. 5—Pathe's Weekly, No. 48 (News).....
Aug. 10—From Grenoble to Aix Les Bains (Travel) .....
Aug. 10—Typical Russian Dances (Dancing)...
—A Rousing Reception (Comedy).....
Aug. 11—The Art of the Furrier (Vocational)..
Iron and Steel Industry (Bombay) (Educational) .....
Aug. 12—Pathe's Weekly, No. 49 (News)....
Aug. 17—Dakar, the Principal Port of Senegal, French West Africa (Travel)..
—Military Trained Dogs, Belgium (Mil.)
Aug. 18—Cairo, the Capital of Egypt (Travel).
—Uriage and Vicinity (Scenic).....
Aug. 19—Pathe's Weekly, No. 50, 1914 (News).

SELIG.

Aug. 8—Carmelita's Revenge (Drama).....
Aug. 10—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 47 (News) .....
Aug. 10—Willie (Special—Two Parts—Comedy)
Aug. 11—The Jungle Samaritan (Drama).....
Aug. 12—The Family Record (Drama).....
Aug. 13—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 48 (News) .....
Aug. 14—Meller Drammer (Comedy).....
—The Day of the Dog (Comedy).....
Aug. 15—Nan's Victory (Comedy-Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Speck on the Wall (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 17—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 49 (News) .....
Aug. 18—If at First You Don't Succeed (Com.-Drama) .....
Aug. 19—When a Woman's 40 (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 20—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 50 (News) .....
Aug. 21—The Reveler (Comedy) .....
Aug. 22—What Became of Jane? (Drama).....
Aug. 24—The White Mouse (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 24—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 51 (News) .....
Aug. 25—The Sealed Oasis (Drama).....
Aug. 26—The Decision of Jim O'Farrell (Drama) .....
Aug. 27—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 52 (News) .....
Aug. 28—A Low Financier (Comedy).....
—Breaking Into Jail (Comedy).....
Aug. 29—The Harbor of Love (Drama).....

VITAGRAPH.

Aug. 8—The House On the Hill (Special—Two Parts—Drama).....
Aug. 10—Through Life's Window (Drama)....
Aug. 11—David Garrick (Special—Two Parts—Comedy Drama) .....
Aug. 12—The New Stenographer (Comedy)....
Aug. 13—The Horse Thief (Drama).....
Aug. 14—Polishing Up (Comedy).....
Aug. 15—The Wheat and the Tares (Special—Two Parts—Drama).....
Aug. 17—Private Dennis Hogan (Drama).....
Aug. 18—An Innocent Delilah (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 19—Taken by Storm (Comedy Drama)...
Aug. 20—The Woes of a Waitress (Drama).....
Aug. 21—The Honeymooners (Comedy).....
Aug. 22—Lily of the Valley (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 24—Ward's Claim (Western—Drama).....
Aug. 25—Rainy, the Lion Killer (Special—Two Parts—Comedy) .....
Aug. 26—Josie's Declaration of Independence (Comedy) .....
Aug. 27—The Mysterious Lodger (Drama).....
Aug. 28—Such a Hunter (Comedy).....
Aug. 29—Josie's Coney Island Nightmare (Special—Two Parts—Comedy)....

Greater New York Film Rental Company

All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street. Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York.

Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

"How clear the pictures are!"

You've often overheard that remark—and it's as strong a commendation, brings as much business as does a favorable comment on the picture story itself.

The "clearest pictures" are on Eastman film because the product is right, chemically and physically.

It is easily identifiable by the stencil "Eastman" in the margin.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

A NEW DRESS

for your lobby will be just the thing for your [illegible] opening. OUR LARGE HAND COLORED Pictures will attract the crowd to your Box Office and that's more than half of the BATTLE. If you give THEM A PHOTO PLAYERS POST CARD they are sure to come back for more.

28 Big Hand Colored Lobby Pictures of the Stars 28

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 400 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards

For the better class of Souvenirs, 60 of the most popular players, all factions, $10.00 per thousand.

Photo Post Cards

For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—60 Popular Players $5.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 400 different names, 20 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14. Prominent players, $2.00 per set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.

Special 22x28 Hand Colored Pictures of 28 Favorites
75 Cents Each. Framed $2.50 Each

KRAUS MFG. CO., 14 East 17th St., N. Y.
MIDDLE WEST OFFICE—LYRIC THEATRE BLDG., DAYTON, O.
Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples free. Write us, giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

HENNEGAN'S COLORED PROGRAMS

Beautiful productions of the Off Set Press, printed in colors on heavy paper. Low in price, rich in color, handsome designs. Just the thing for enterprising managers, who desire to add tone to their houses. Send for Free Samples and Prices.

Series Nos. 2 and 4	5,000	$17.50	10,000	$34.00
Series No. 3	5,000	12.50	10,000	24.00

HENNEGAN'S PILLOW TOPS

A splendid assortment of 18 players. Beautiful Sepia Photo, on heavy Lusterine—18 x 18 inches. Price 50c. each—50 for $20.00—100 for $35.00. With every 50 order we furnish 1,000 coupons, intended for distribution to your patrons at matinees or dull nights.

New Date Strips—Day Strips—Three-Sheet Panels—One Sheets, etc.

HENNEGAN & CO. LITHOGRAPHERS PRINTERS
Cincinnati, O.

Awarded Medal at London, England, Printing Exposition, May, 1914.

PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

Ask for Bulletin 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.
Springfield, Ohio.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:
24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th Street Brooklyn, N. Y.

G. W. BRADENBURGH

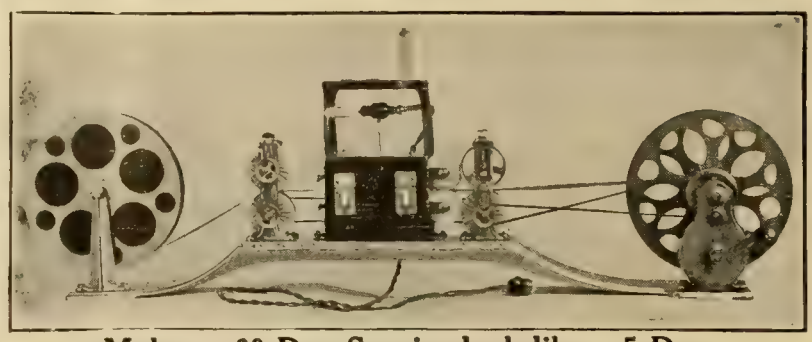
802 VINE STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Cheapest House in the Trade for Second-Hand Films

ALL FILMS SUPPLIED WITH POSTERS. WRITE FOR LISTS. EVERYTHING FOR THE EXCHANGE CARRIED IN STOCK, Leader—$5.00 per 1,000 ft.; cement, $1.00 per quart; titles, 5 ft., 40c. Films renovated and repaired, $1.00 per reel. Developing, printing, and camera work at moderate rates. Jenkins-Armat 1915 Model Camera, 200 ft. capacity, $150.00.

WANTED FOR EXPORT—
HIGH-CLASS FILMS, ALL MAKES

Better Pictures. Better Patronage. More Money.



Makes a 60-Day Service look like a 5-Day

You can save $10 to $20 a week on your service cost and still give cleaner and brighter pictures. A sixty-day service will look just as good as a five-day if you use

THE GREEN FILM CLEANING MACHINE

Completely removes all oil, carbon dust and dirt. Cleans your films perfectly while rewinding. With the Patching Attachment you can quickly repair all broken and mis-framed films. No breaks during the show. No loss of time. This machine will pay for itself in ten days. Write for full particulars.

MANUFACTURED BY

Canfield Gas Engine Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

New York Office, Mark Sclair, Room No. 1103, 145 W. 45th Street, Exchange Bldg.

The Vitagraph Company of America
(WESTERN BRANCH)

Is in the Market for Strong, Original 1-Reel Photoplays—Western Stories Preferred.

Send to The Vitagraph Company of America, 1440 Second Street, Santa Monica, California.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY
(INCORPORATED)

Jobbers for Powers, Edison, Motiograph and Simplex

LARGEST LEADING SUPPLY HOUSE IN AMERICA

Mercury Arc Rectifier	Wagner Converters
Flame Arc Lamps	Brass and Wood Frames
Automatic Ticket Registers	Ticket Choppers
Exit Signs	Asbestos State Booths
Slide Ink	Ft. Wayne Compensarcs
Carrying Cases	Fire Extinguishers
Tickets	Fire Boxes
Condensers	Carbons
Pianos	Cement
Chairs	Trap Drum Effects

MIRROR SCREENS

PROMPT SHIPMENTS BACKED BY A SOLID GUARANTEE

A Few Slightly Used Machines

N. W. corner 13th and Race Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

War in Europe Will Not Stop Us Selling You Meniscus Bi-Convex Condensers.

Fortunately we received last week six months' consignment of our now world wide famous condensers. Even the biggest and best jobbers and machine manufacturers in the country are wiring and 'phoning us for MENISCUS—BI-CONVEX CONDENSERS—WHY? Because Mr. Richardson, in his Projection Dept. Columns in August 1st's edition of The World said he had to hand it to us for giving the theatre man and his operator one of the best condenser combinations ever. We have convinced every hard to please man who has given us a chance; WE WILL YOU, TOO—if you want to improve your light 50% and decrease your electric light bill 40%. If you don't believe, we'll prove it. Don't try and order from your local exchange—send it direct—if you wish we will gladly give your exchange proper credit, but we prefer to fill all orders direct.

GOOD	BETTER	BEST
Two Plano Fig. 1	One Meniscus One Plano Fig. 2	One Meniscus One Bi-Convex Fig. 3

PRICES

Jena Imported Plano Condensers	$1.50 each.	Half Doz., $7.50
Jena Imported Meniscus Condensers	2.00 each.	Half Doz., 9.00
Jena Imported Bi-Convex Condensers	2.00 each.	Half Doz., 9.00
Jena Imported Meniscus Bi-Convex Combination		$4.00 per Pr.
Jena Imported Meniscus Bi-Convex Combination		Half Doz., $20.00

Add 20c. additional for postage.

For information concerning improved and perfect projection address Projection Dept., LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE, 252 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

THE J. H. GENTER CO., Inc., Newburgh, New York
THE SYMBOL OF SUPERIORITY IN PERFECT PROJECTION IS
$1000.00—MIRROROIDE—$1000.00
THE SCREEN THAT MADE MOVIES FAMOUS THE WORLD OVER

Get our large free samples. Test against any screen on earth

USE THE EYES GOD GAVE YOU

Mirroroide is Sold Under a Positive 5-Year Guarantee. Over 8000 Now in Use : 8000

MADE IN THREE TINTS—PALE GOLD, SILVER FLESH, SILVER WHITE

$1,000 CASH—NO SCREEN ON EARTH CAN STAND THE TESTS THAT MIRROROIDE WILL. LET US SHOW YOU.

SOLD THE WORLD OVER AT 36 1-9 Cents a Square Foot. $3.25 a Square Yard.

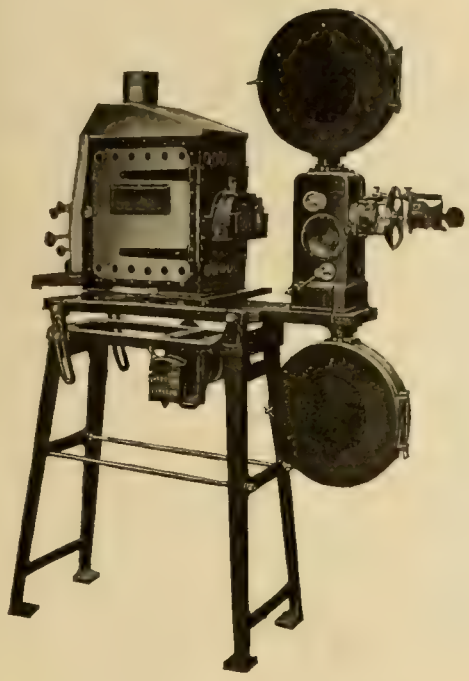
WRITE NOW—DO IT NOW

MIRROROIDE PATENTS PENDING

The Imperator Is Built Like a Battleship



but is not engaged in the European War.

Battleships can be beaten, but not the All Steel Imperator Projector.

Mr. Exhibitor, protect yourself against trouble on the screen and get the best Projector built.

Price $450.00

Write for complete particulars.

ERNEMANN-PHOTO-KINO-WORKS
163 West NEW-YORK 48th Street

NOW READY

BOUND VOLUMES

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

VOLUME No. 20
APRIL—JUNE, 1914

$1.50—EACH—$1.50

Express Charges Collect.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
17 Madison Avenue, New York City

The Light Which Does Not Interfere With Projection

The day of the dark theatre has passed. This is due primarily to the perfection of the EYE COMFORT LIGHTING System. This system is neither an imitation nor a substitute. It is based on fundamental principles discovered by us and proven by long practice to be absolutely correct. It is the original indirect lighting.

Indirect Light does not interfere with the clearness of the picture. It has no glare, does not distract attention or cause headaches. It lights the house evenly. It relieves eyestrain.

The Eye Comfort Lighting System

is so good and so successful that it is imitated. But these imitations, which are offered you because they are "cheap," lack the powerful one-piece silvered mirror X-RAY EYE COMFORT reflectors which control and direct the light by their scientific design and evenly light the house. These are the most powerful reflectors made and require less current than any others.

Fill in the blank below and allow our engineers to lay out a plan for lighting your theatre. This won't cost you a cent and does not obligate you in any way. But it will tell you exactly how much EYE COMFORT LIGHTING for your theatre would cost.

Distance Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height .....
Width of House .....
Height Under Balcony .....
Distance Rear Auditorium to Front of Balcony.....
Name .....

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO. Chicago:229 W. Jackson Blvd. New York: 6 East 39th St.

THE QUESTION

LONG LIFE SMALL UPKEEP

IS ANSWERED

IN THE 1914 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH

Whenever you can have the BEST of anything for the price of the average—which do you get?
ANSWER——and you have the reason why experienced Theatre Owners everywhere are demanding

MOTIOGRAPH

There are "CHEAP" Machines at "CHEAP" prices to catch inexperienced buyers.
There are ordinary machines, priced high to give the impression of quality.
BUT when you can buy a MOTIOGRAPH which represents QUALITY (and we can prove it) at a reasonable price, you have made a big SAVING.

WRITE FOR OUR PROOF

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.

Eastern Office 21 E. 14th St., New York City Western Office 833 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

It's Up To You

You Have To Do Something
TO IMPROVE YOUR BUSINESS

You know this:
We know this:

Our plan to attract an audience has proved a success

It costs you $15.00

TO TRY IT

You do a cash business
You don't expect credit

To show our confidence in the proposition, we give you
30 DAYS

WRITE OR WIRE FOR THE PLAN

WYANOAK PUBLISHING CO.

136-146 W. 52nd St., New York

TITLES

Our Title Department has been reorganized, elaborately equipped and placed under the direction of recognized experts.

Its highly perfected apparatus, linotype machine and job presses enable us to produce the most difficult title work in any language—artistically, accurately and quickly—and at lower prices than have ever yet been quoted.

Developing & Printing

Save money and insure the best results by entrusting your work to the largest and most complete commercial plant in America.

CENTAUR
FILM COMPANY

Bayonne, N. J., and 1600 Broadway

BIO CARBONS

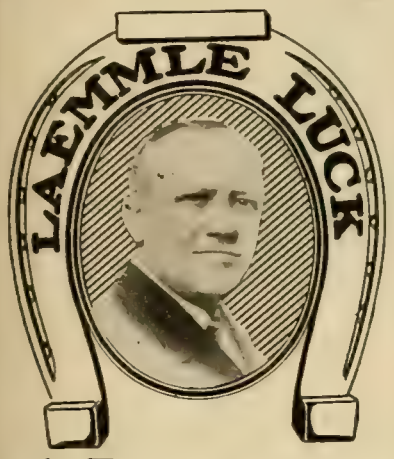
DECIDEDLY SUPERIOR

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. MILWAUKEE 114 Huron St. SAN FRANCISCO 143 Second St.

And All Live Film Exchanges and Supply Dealers

THE PERKINS ELECTRIC CO., Ltd. SOLE CANADIAN DISTRIBUTORS Montreal, Quebec



A Friendly Tip from Carl Laemmle

"The new Universal serial story, 'THE TREY O' HEARTS,' by Louis Joseph Vance, will be the hit of the new season. You can take my word for it that it is by far the hottest, liveliest, most exciting, most interesting story ever shown in moving pictures before a discriminating public. You know that I have never given you a wrong tip, and I am not going to start now. To be sure, 'LUCILLE LOVE' was a big money maker, but 'THE TREY O' HEARTS' will beat it to a frazzle. By making arrangements now, you are absolutely assured of a record-breaking business the day you show the picture, for a period of fifteen weeks. It will cost you a little extra money, but it is well worth it. 'A word to the wise, etc.'"

CARL LAEMMLE, President

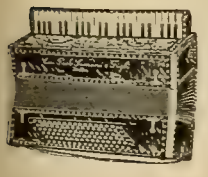
The Laemmle Film Service

205 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
252-A Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.
1122 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Hubbell Building, Des Moines, Iowa.

Agents for All Makes of Machines and Accessories

"The Biggest and Best Film Renter in the world"

GREAT PIANO ACCORDEON



Every Professional appearing in vaudeville knows by now that a well played Accordeon (with piano keyboard) turn "Stops the Show" (as it was expressed by one of our professional customers). Every musical act employing the ordinary piano can insure instantaneous approval to the turn by the introduction of this—the Greatest Musical Novelty appearing before the American public in many years. Write us at once for catalog and full particulars, professional discounts and favorable terms of payment.

LYON & HEALY 21-42 E. Adams St., Chicago

FILM MAKING OUTFITS

for Professional Film Work, for the Manufacturer, Traveler, Explorer, Scientist and Private. The well-known fool-proof Junior Camera, 200 feet capacity; Tripods, Tilts, Printers, Developing Outfits, Projectors, Lenses, Polishers, Measurers, Menders, Winders. Special Film Work. Quick, reliable repair.

Establ. 20 years. Largest Inst. in U. S.

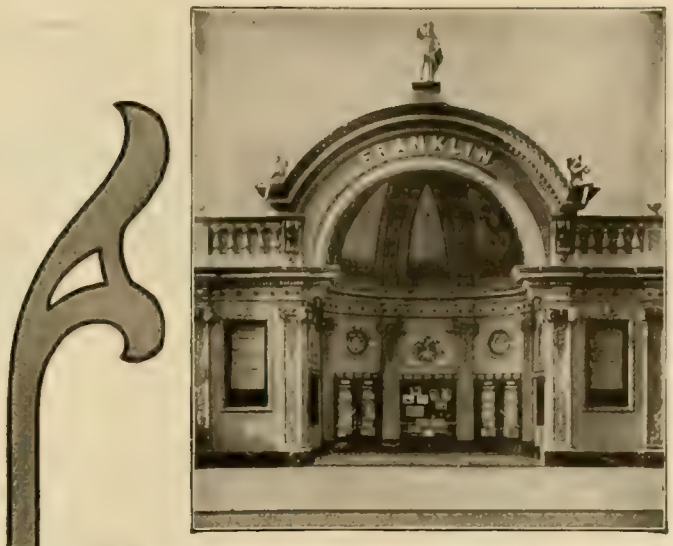
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
219 Second Ave. New York



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Leo St., CHICAGO, ILL.

THE GOLD KING SCREEN

BEST

IN PROJECTION
IN QUALITY
IN PRICE

Take down your rag curtains, give your patrons something for their money. The GOLD KING WILL DO IT! Perfect satisfaction guaranteed. 30c. per square foot.

S. H. JONES, Altus, Oklahoma

P. O. BOX NO. 294

REBUILT MACHINES AS GOOD AS NEW

All machines entirely rebuilt and only genuine parts used.

Power's No. 6	$140.00
Motiograph, 1913	150.00
Power's No. 5	75.00
Edison Exhibition	75.00
1912 Dissolving Motiograph	165.00

Many others. Write for complete list. All the machines are complete with the electrical attachments. A-1 condition guaranteed.
We carry complete line of new machines and supplies. Will take back your old machine in part payment of new one.

Time or Cash. Send for Catalog today.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY

169A NO. FIFTH AVENUE - - - - - - - - - - CHICAGO

COMING—"A Great Mistake" Featuring Madam K. Lipzin

Renowned Players Feature Company, 220 WEST 42nd STREET NEW YORK

Manufacturers of the Wonderful

REMBUSCH PATENTED GLASS MIRROR SCREEN

And all other kinds of Curtains for Moving Picture Projection, White Opaque, Glass Transparent Screens for Rear Projection, Goldcloth Fibre Screens, Mirrorcloth Fibre Screens, Seamless with Stretchers or Rollers.

Phone Seven-Eleven F. J. REMBUSCH, Pres.

MIRROR SCREEN COMPANY, INC.
SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA

The Orpheum Theatre, the largest in the West, located on State Street, Chicago, Ill., tried everything and then the Glass Mirror Screen. The money spent on experimenting will pay for several.

Glass Mirror Screen.

Eventually, Why not now?

Nine different finishes. For wide or narrow houses.

PRINTING and DEVELOPING FILM TITLES
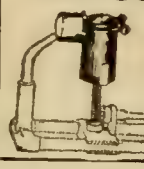
Give us a trial. All work guaranteed.
Prompt service. Prices right.
If there is any event that you want photographed, we can furnish expert camera men.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
Phone, Central 2353, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

Gas Users — Attention!



The "Gull Pastil" doubles your light. Each (large size), $1.25; 6 for $6.75. "Fulco" adapter makes Pastil fit any calcium burner, $1.00 each.
We carry most complete line in stock of picture machines and supplies in America. E. E. FULTON, 152 W. Lake St., Chicago, Sole American distributors for "Gull Pastil."

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
176 N. State St. (bet. Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill.

Your negative developed, printed and titled complete
5c. per foot
Delivered within 12 hours
Titles 6c. per foot
GUNBY BROS., Inc., 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City.

Moving Picture Theatre Mailing Lists For Sale

20,192, covering United States and Canada, price $40.00, or $3.50 per thousand for such states as you want.

670 Film Exchanges, U. S.	$3.50
70 Manufacturers and Studios, U. S.	1.00
34 Moving Picture Machine Mfrs. and Dealers	1.00
231 Film Exchanges, Foreign Countries	3.00
520 Moving Picture Theatres, Foreign Countries	3.00

Ask us for full particulars.
TRADE CIRCULAR ADDRESSING CO.
166 West Adams Street, Chicago
Established 1880

2-Reel Scenarios Wanted

Must be NEW IN IDEA, NEW IN PLOT

For the Universal Stars
BEN WILSON,
KING BAGGOT
MARY FULLER
HARRY C. MYERS

Best Prices Paid. Prompt Acceptance or Rejection.

Address: Universal Film Manufacturing Co.
(Scenario Department)
1600 Broadway, New York City

EASTMAN PERFORATED NEGATIVE
3¼c PER FOOT 3¼c
GUARANTEED HIGHEST GRADE STOCK AND ABSOLUTELY FRESH BELL & HOWELL PERFORATIONS INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE COMPANY
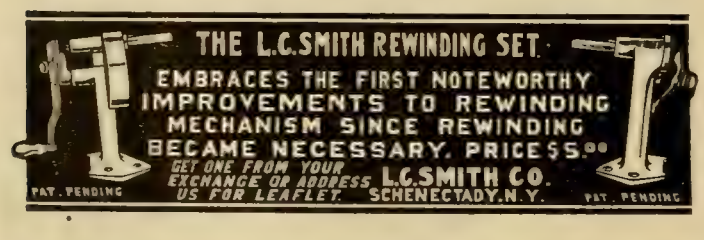
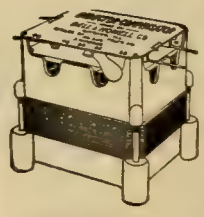
223-233 WEST ERIE STREET, CHICAGO

WAR PICTURES HURRY! HURRY! HURRY! Be the first. Photographs of "World's Greatest War" taken from life—Not Newspaper Cuts. By special arrangements with Associated Press and several similar foreign associations, we are supplied with the latest original and up-to-date copyrighted photographs. Title is on bottom of each slide. Issued in weekly series of 14 colored slides. Price, each series, including large poster, $2.75. A booster for your business.
MOORE, HUBBELL & CO., 713 Masonic Temple, Chicago



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET.
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
PAT. PENDING
PAT. PENDING



THE INDUCTOR-COMPENSATOR
An Alternating Current Transformer
Designed by an electrical expert in motion picture practice. Built and guaranteed by leading manufacturers of motion picture machinery in the world. Simple, inexpensive and wholly efficient. Order from your exchange or from
THE BELL & HOWELL COMPANY,
1883 Larchmont Avenue, Chicago, Illinois

INQUIRE FOR OPEN TERRITORY ON
"THE TOLL OF MAMMON"
IN FOUR PARTS
EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM COMPANY, Inc. 110 West 40th Street, New York

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL and CAST IRON

HIGH Quality

LOW Price

Opera Chairs

immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.

Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave. Pittsburgh, 318 Bissell Blk.; Boston, 69 Pearl St.

OPERA CHAIRS

Latest and Best in Seats

SEND FOR OUR PRICES BEFORE BUYING

BENNETT SEATING CO

537 West Market St.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Are You Tired

of playing waltzes and popular songs for all your pictures? Try "bringing out" the dramatic scenes with dramatic music. The

Orpheum Collection

contains the best music of this kind published. Issued in Three Series:

No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3

Piano, (24 pages each), 58 cts. for each series; $1.15 for any two; $1.70 for all three. Violin, 40 cts. each; 75 cts. for any two; $1.05 for all three. Cornet, 35 cts. each; 65 cts. any two; 95 cts. all three. First and second series have parts for Cello, Flute, Clarinet, Trombone and Drums. Practical for piano alone or in combination with any above instruments. Discounts on orders for four or more parts. Send for free sample pages. Note new address.

CLARENCE E. SINN

1942 West 21st St. Chicago, Ill.

Steel Standards will not break

STEEL OR IRON STANDARDS

AGENCIES:

H. S. Ansley, 1476 B'way, Long Acre Bldg., New York City. 'Phone 5619 Bryant

California Seating Company, 720 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Cal.

H. A. Johnson Seating Company, 1214½ Third Ave., Seattle, Wash.

THE WISCONSIN SEATING COMPANY

New London, Wis., U. S. A.

REAL QUALITY CHAIRS

FOR

QUALITY REEL SHOWS

Ask for FREE booklet V-2 upholstered Veneer Seating V-3

If you are interested in

Motion Picture Theatre Seating

send ground sketch and we will draft for you FREE seating plan showing the most economical arrangement of seating for your theatre.

American Seating Co.

Display Rooms and Installation Service

14 E. Jackson Blvd., CHICAGO 15 E. 32nd St., NEW YORK

Pittsburg, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Forty Other Large Cities

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE

1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865

WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.

115-117 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.

Branches in all Leading Cities

New York Office 1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.

Seattle Office 508-10-12 First Ave., So.

San Francisco Office 782 Mission St.

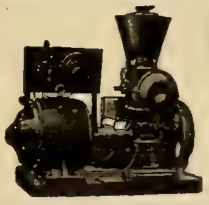
COMING!

The Great Train Robbery

(IN FOUR PARTS)

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

220 WEST 42d STREET NEW YORK CITY



Good Light Means Big Crowds

The Sandow Moving Picture Electric Light Plant gives perfect light any time you want it, at 1-10 the cost of public service. Light enough to ship as baggage. Carry your own electric lights. Catalog 201 tells you how and how much. Want it?

Detroit Motor Car Supply Company, Detroit, Michigan.

The "Standardized" Theatre Chairs

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

The HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

Thousands Have Convinced Themselves

That the Best Way to Sell Any Motion Picture Commodity Is to ADVERTISE IN THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

A WORD TO THE WISE IS SUFFICIENT!

THE MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

Releases for Its Two Part Feature SUNDAY, AUGUST 30

FRENCHY

WESTERN CHARACTER COMEDY DRAMA
ADAPTED FROM GEORGE PATTULLO'S
SHORT STORY OF THE SAME NAME.

The regular Majestic one reel release for Tuesday, August 25th

GRANNY

Dorothy Gish

Featuring the inimitable favorite

DOROTHY GISH

The Komic release for August 23d

"A PHYSICAL CULTURE ROMANCE" introduces for the first time in pictures

MARGARET EDWARDES

who has been pronounced the most perfect example of physical development in the world.

THE MAJESTIC GUIDE FOR EXHIBITORS

(In which we try to tell only the truth about all Majestic releases)

THE INNER CONSCIENCE (1 reel) Release date, Tuesday, August 18th—An interesting drama of fisher folk fairly well produced, with beautiful sea shore backgrounds.

A LESSON IN MECHANICS (1 reel) Release date, Friday, August 21st—Another pleasing comedy drama with Robert Harron and Dorothy Gish as young sweethearts.

THE SECOND MRS. ROEBUCK (2 reels) Release date, Sunday, August 23d—An interesting society drama featuring Blanche Sweet in an attractive part. Photo drama adapted from short story in Smart Set Magazine.

GRANNY (1 reel) Release date, Tuesday, August 25th—A picture of pathos and humor with Dorothy Gish in the leading part.

FRENCHY (2 reels) Release date, Sunday, August 30—A George Pattullo feature of which we can tell you more next week.

Studio,
4500 Sunset Blvd.
Los Angeles, Cal.

Majestic Motion Picture Co.

Business Offices:
29 Union Sq. West,
New York City

Selig

PROFITABLE SELIG PICTURES

THEY WILL GET THE MONEY

DEMAND THEM AT YOUR EXCHANGE. SAY YOU WANT SELIG'S

2 BIG SELIG FEATURES

IN TUNE WITH THE WILD

(Already Released)

Startling, thrilling and vivid Selig Jungle-Zoo 3-reel picture.

Featuring KATHLYN WILLIAMS

CHIP OF THE FLYING "U"

(Released Aug. 29)

A hilariously funny Selig western comedy. In Three Reels. Featuring KATHLYN WILLIAMS as the "little doctor."

OTHER BIG SELIG PICTURES COMING. DON'T MISS THEM

SELIG CURRENT RELEASES AUGUST 24-29

RELEASED AUGUST 24

The White Mouse

In Two Reels.

A SELIG DRAMA OF THE SNOWS—Featuring BESSIE EYTON in an intensely interesting and thrilling story.

RELEASED AUGUST 24

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial

RELEASED AUGUST 25

The Sealed Oasis

In One Reel

A SELIG DESERT TRAGEDY—Featuring GUY OLIVER in a tale of toll of the sands of the desert.

RELEASED AUGUST 26

The Decision of Jim O'Farrell

A SELIG MELODRAMA in One Reel—Featuring WM. STOWELL, in a heart-drama, illustrating the code of love.

RELEASED AUGUST 27

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial

RELEASED AUGUST 28

A Low Financier

(Split Reel.)

A SELIG FARCE COMEDY. On same reel with BREAKING INTO JAIL. A pair of excruciatingly funny comedies full of laughs.

RELEASED AUGUST 29

The Harbor of Love

A TYPICAL SELIG DRAMA, in One Reel. Demonstrating the result of an imperious call of love.

RELEASED AUGUST 29

Chip of the Flying "U"

3 Reels.

A BIG SELIG SPECIAL FEATURE. A Western comedy in which KATHLYN WILLIAMS plays the leading part as the "little doctor."

"THE SPOILERS"—State rights for sale. Write direct to our General Offices, 20 East Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL

Twice a week—Mondays and Thursdays

The best and most skilled camera artists with every army in Europe. Show the latest and most interesting news pictures in your theatre.

WATCH OUT FOR BIG WAR NEWS PICTURES!

FIRST IN WAR—FIRST IN PEACE—FIRST IN POPULARITY

Demand HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL at your Exchange.

Order a HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL canvas streamer, ten feet long. In three colors. Price, only 35c.

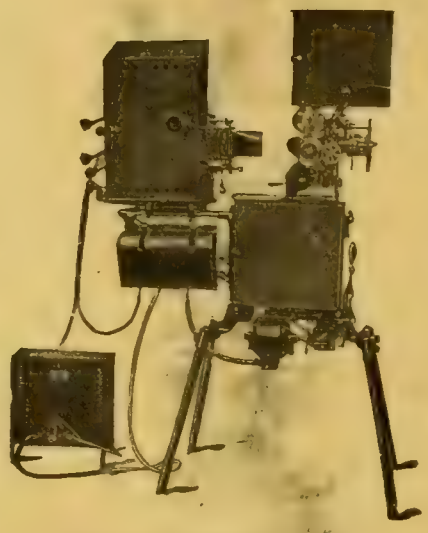
"THE ROSARY"—Now being produced in the great Selig 2-million dollar studio, will be a big hit. The scenario is from Rowland & Clifford's soul-inspiring play.

Four-color posters can be supplied for all Selig releases. Order from your Exchange, or direct from our General Offices.

The Selig Polyscope Company

General Offices, 20 East Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

This machine is not found in every motion picture theatre



POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6-A

But it is never found in any theatre that isn't a model of what a good theatre should be

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

NINETY GOLD STREET NEW YORK CITY

Vol. 21, No. 9 August 29, 1914 Price 10 Cents

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "The Avenging Conscience" (Mutual).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

It's Packing Theatres

The startling story by Harold MacGrath, the exceptional motion-pictures, the all-star cast enacting this play, the $10,000.00 offer for the best 100 word solution—these things are responsible for the public's keen interest in The Million Dollar Mystery. The result is PACKED HOUSES everywhere on "Million Dollar Mystery Night."

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

Story by Harold MacGrath Scenario by Lloyd Lonergan

Thanhouser's Million Dollar Motion Picture Production

10 two-reel episodes have already been released. The entire production will take 23 episodes. One episode released each week. Many great thrills are still coming. The Million Dollar Mystery is an independent release and may be obtained regardless of the regular program being used. Bookings may be arranged by applying at once to

SYNDICATE FILM CORPORATION

71 W. 23rd Street, New York Room 411, 5 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago or Syndicate Film Corporation Representative at Any Mutual Exchange in the United States and Canada

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

Tuesday, Aug. 25th. "Conscience." A two-reel drama of modern life, featuring Irving Cummings, Mignon Anderson, Mrs. Farrington, Edward N. Hoyt, Eugene Moore, Jr., E. C. Ward and N. S. Woods.

Sunday, Aug. 30th. "Arty The Artist." A clever one-reel comedy and love story, featuring Vic Forsythe, Lydia Mead, Fan Bourke, Justus D. Barnes and Mr. Crane.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Head European Office, Thanhouser Films, Ltd., London, W. C., England

Thanhouser releases will continue to be features of the Mutual Program

41

JESSE L. LASKY

PRESENTS

THE PEER OF AMERICAN DRAMATIC ACTORS

ROBERT EDESON

IN THE ARTISTIC SCREEN CLASSIC

THE CALL OF THE NORTH

BY GEO. BROADHURST FROM THE NOVEL "CONJUROR'S HOUSE" BY STUART EDWARD WHITE

THE WRITING ON THE WALL

"The Greatest American Classic"
W. STEPHEN BUSH, — MOVING PICTUE WORLD

"Movies as they should really be"
W. A. JOHNSTON, — MOTION PICTURE NEWS

"An Artistic Symphony"
MABEL CONDON, — MOTOGRAPHY

"The Greatest Picture of the year, excepting none"
FRED. J. BEECROFT, — MIRROR

"It is really art in all the term implies"
LLOYD ROBINSON, — TELEGRAPH

THE VOICE OF THE CRITICS AN UNBROKEN LINE OF PRAISE

NOW PLAYING

JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY COMPANY

LONG ACRE THEATRE — W. 48TH STREET

JESSE L. LASKY, PRESIDENT — N. Y. C. — SAMUEL GOLDFISH, TREAS. & GEN'L MANAGER

CECIL B. DEMILLE
DIRECTOR GENERAL

FEIGNING DEATH RICHELIEU OUTWITS THE MOB

"GO, DO BATTLE—SEEK HONOR IN DEATH"

RICHELIEU—LORD OF FRANCE
MURDOCK MAC QUARRIE

Book "Richelieu"

I wish every Universal exhibitor would make a special effort to exhibit and boost

"Richelieu"

our next 4 reel Universal special—released week of August 31st

To miss this is to miss one of the choicest productions the Universal ever attempted

Carl Laemmle

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

ALEN DWAN DIRECTING "RICHELIEU"

"ENTER DE MAUPRAT, HIS HIGHNESS AWAITS YOU"

"FOR HONOR, FOR FRANCE, AND JULIE DE MORTEMAR"

"ADIEU, DE BERINGHEN, THE CARDINAL'S WILL BE DONE!"

BOOK THESE ALSO!

You never had such a chance for features in your life—all of them released week August 21st:

IMP—Mr. Burglar, M. D., with Mary Pickford.

VICTOR—The Man from Nowhere (Two Reel Kerrigan).

GOLD SEAL—The Trey O' Hearts—Episode No. 5, The Sunset Bride (Madison and Larkin).

ECLAIR—The Jackpot Club—(Two Reel Dr.)—Edna Payne and Bob Frazer.

STERLING—A Bogus Baron—with Ford Sterling.

VICTOR—The Derelict and The Man—(Two Reel Dr.)—Irene Wallace and Walter Miller.

BISON 101—The Return of the Twin's Double—(Three Reel Detective Dr.)—Grace Cunard and Francis Ford.

IMP—Tempest and Sunshine—(Two Reel Dr.).

AND DON'T FORGET THE BEST OF THEM ALL FOR THE WEEK—RICHELIEU

CARL LAEMMLE, President

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

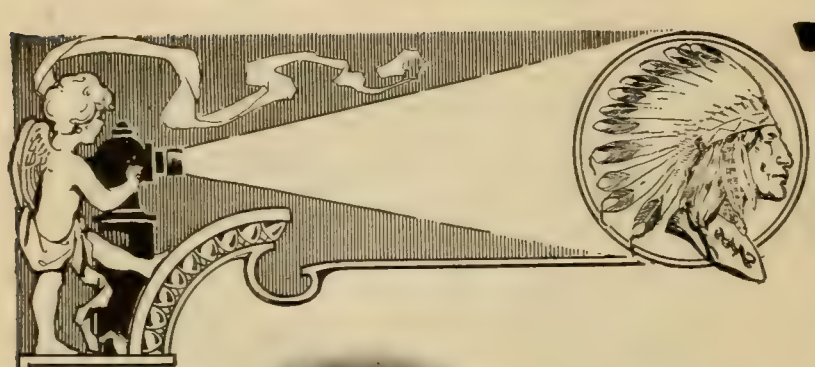
1600 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

JULIE DE MORTEMAR
PAULINE BUSH.

UNIVERSAL MOVING PICTURES

"I SEEK YOUR MERCY, O! DE MAUPRAT—RICHELIEU'S WILL BE DONE"

"HOLD! THE CARDINAL IS DEAD! LONG LIVE FRANCE!"



ESSA
Six - A

Three Big Laughs

Three Big Thrills

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

Released Monday, August 31

"Love and Soda"

A side-splitting comedy, in which a plumber shows his marksmanship in hurling eggs.

Released Tuesday, September 1

"No. 28, Diplomat"

How a little clerk played Cupid and made possible her own marriage. Adapted from the Munsey Magazines.

Released Wednesday, September 2

THE FABLE OF

"The Regular Beanery and the Peachy Newcomer"

By GEORGE ADE

How the occupants of a "Hash Repository" discover the Beautiful New Boarder is a Married Woman.

LILLIAN DREW

Released Thursday, September 3

"When Macbeth Came to Snakeville"

As usual, an extremely funny comedy, showing how Sophie nearly frightened a "ham actor" to death with a butcher knife.

Released Friday, September 4

"Under Royal Patronage"

(In Two Acts)

Adapted from the Munsey Magazines.

One of the most realistic dramas of the year, with gorgeous European settings and costumes that alone make it distinctive and unusual. FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN featured.

Released Saturday, September 5

"Broncho Billy, the Vagabond"

A heart interest drama in which Broncho risks being hanged to get food for a starving family—featuring G. M. ANDERSON.

G. M. ANDERSON

Superb Films
Famous Stars
Unequaled Service

MARGARET JOSLIN
as the famous "Sophie Clutts"

Essanay Film

Laboratory and Studios, 133 Argyle St., Chicago. Downtown Offices 152 First -Week

A Few Big Features

A Scene from "One Wonderful Night"

"One Wonderful Night"
(A great mystery drama)

A scene from "Blood Will Tell"

"The Good-for-Nothing"
(A drama in 4 acts, featuring G. M. ANDERSON)

A Scene from "The Good-For-Nothing"

"Blood Will Tell"
(A Colonial drama in 3 acts)

"Ambushed"
(A new 3 act drama of adventure)

A scene from "Ambushed"

Manufacturing Co.

National Bank Building. Branch Offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona.

What Service

MR. EXHIBITOR, WHAT SERVICE ARE YOU GOING TO USE THE COMING SEASON?

WHEN YOU DECIDE, DON'T OVERLOOK THE FACT THAT THE MONEY GETTERS OF TODAY ARE

Kay-Bee Keystone
Domino Broncho

ALL MADE UNDER THE PERSONAL DIRECTION OF THOS. H. INCE and MACK SENNETT

Lobby Display

8 x 10 PHOTOS OF OUR PLAYERS CAN BE HAD BY SENDING TO PUBLICITY DEPT. 15 CENTS FOR ONE, 50 CENTS FOR FOUR, ETC.

A SET OF "KEYSTONE MABEL" IN FOUR POSES, 50 CENTS.

PENNANTS OF OUR FOUR BRANDS, 35 CENTS FOR ONE
$1.25 FOR SET OF FOUR

New York Motion Picture Corporation

Longacre Building, 42nd St. and Broadway, New York

WORLD'S LARGEST

SAWYER INC.

FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK
A. H. SAWYER
Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

The Climate is Healthy

IN THE

SAWYER "ZONES"

FOR THE EXHIBITOR WHO PLAYS

SAWYER'S FEATURES

YOUR NEAREST ZONE MANAGER WILL BOOK YOU

SAWYER HAS BEEN SECURING PICTURES ALL SUMMER TO SUPPLY YOU ALL FALL

Twenty-five Features NOW
Ten More in SEPTEMBER
IN OCTOBER=WELL

WATCH FOR THE THUNDERBOLT!

IT WILL STARTLE THE FILM WORLD

FOUR New ZONES This Week

EXHIBITORS!
Book from the NEAREST "ZONE"

30 in All Before October 15

ZONE 1-New York
"Sawyer," 1600 Broadway

ZONE 2-Boston
Phoenix Feature Film Corporation, 164 Federal St.

ZONE 3-Newark
State Film Co., 60 Bank St.

ZONE 4-Albany
"Sawyer," 29 N. Pearl St.

ZONE 5-Montreal
"Sawyer," New Birks Bldg.

ZONE 6-Philadelphia
"Sawyer," address next issue

ZONE 7-Pittsburgh
"Sawyer," 115 4th Ave.

ZONE 8-Buffalo
"Saywer." Open Sept. 1st.

ZONE 9-Dayton
Edwards-Zettler Feature Film Co., U. B. Building
(Will move to Columbus, Sept. 1st.)

ZONE 10-Detroit
Progressive Film & Equipment Co., 97 Woodward Ave.

ZONE 11-Indianapolis
Progressive Film & Equipment Co., address next issue

ZONE 12-Chicago
Union Film Company, 166 W. Washington St.

ZONE 13-Davenport
"Sawyer," Cor. 2nd and Main Sts.
(The Davenport office to move to Omaha Oct. 1st)

ZONE 14-Minneapolis
Sherman Feature Film Service, Temple Court Bldg.

ZONE 15-St. Louis
"Sawyer," Lasalle Theater

ZONE 16-Knoxville
Frank Rogers, Knoxville, Tenn.

ZONE 17-Dallas
Will open Aug. 31

ZONE 18-Denver
Will open Sept. 1

ZONE 19-San Francisco
International Film Producers' Co., Pacific Bldg.

ZONE 20-Seattle
International Film Producers' Co., Pacific Bldg., will open Aug. 24

ZONE 21-Washington, D. C.
Heffert National Film Co., 225-227 Woodward Bldg.

ZONE 22-Syracuse, N. Y.
"Sawyer"

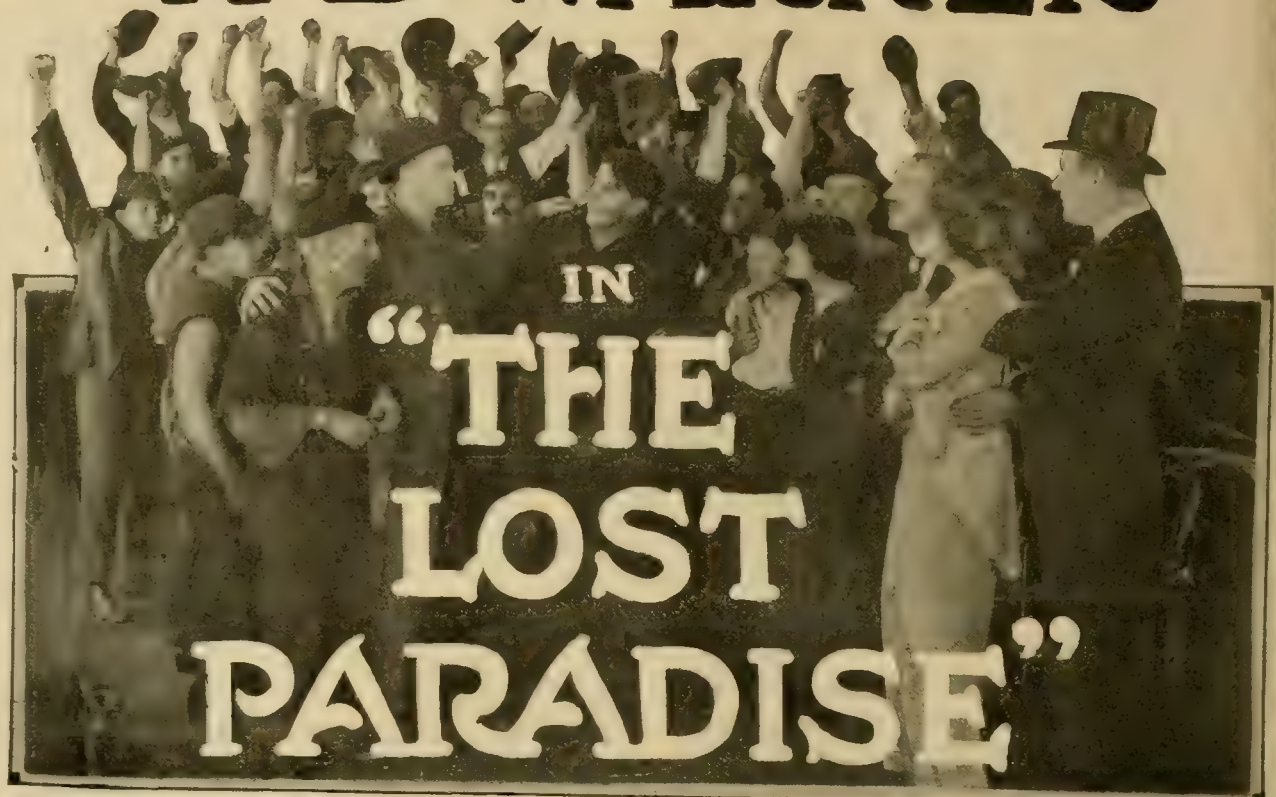
"36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

DANIEL FROHMAN
Presents

H. B. Warner's first appearance in motion pictures

The Eminent Star,

H·B·WARNER



IN

"THE LOST PARADISE"

The World-Famous Drama of Capital and Labor

By Ludwig Fulda and H. C. DeMille,

In Five Reels of Motion Pictures,

First Paramount Release—AUG. 31st.

SPECIAL LABOR DAY FEATURE.

"36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

FAMOUS PLAYERS

EXECUTIVE OFFICES
213-229 W. 26th STREET
NEW YORK

The subject is an inspiration

"36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

"WHERE IS THE LEAF YOU TORE FROM THE LEDGER?"

"The Lost Paradise" is universally conceded to be the greatest capital and labor play ever written. It portrays with vivid realism the gigantic struggle between the two master forces of industry. Mr. Warner plays the part of the man who strives to reconcile the contending elements.

I CANNOT TELL YOU THE SECRET OF THE MISSING PAGE.

WARREN MAKES A DISCOVERY

"THE LOST PARADISE" will appeal to those on both sides of the great dividing line of poverty and wealth.

FILM COMPANY

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

"36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR"

A BORN WARRIOR

and its sequel

EXILED

Vividly portraying the armies of Europe in deadly conflict. A stupendous and thrilling war spectacle, showing with splendid realism the terrific battles, the bloody victories and the disastrous retreats that led up to the death grapple on the field of Waterloo—not far from which titanic struggle of 1914 is now in progress.

BOOK these Features NOW

They are exactly what your public wants to see—the armies of Europe in action. Write your nearest Warner's exchange for information.

WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc., New York

The BATTLING BRITISH

a stirring picture of

NAVAL WARFARE

Terrible fighting on the high seas near Trafalgar, with the crash of battle so realistically produced that you can almost hear the deafening din. It's a case of hand to hand and steel to steel, as the men-o'-war's-men board the enemy.

WRITE FOR INFORMATION

To-day is the time to arrange your booking of this great, new war feature.

WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc., New York

A Thrilling, Gripping, Stupendous

5 Part Production

ALONE IN NEW YORK

From the Famous Play of that Name

With MR. STANDING, the Celebrated Actor
In the Leading Role

EXCLUSIVE BOOKING RIGHTS CONTROLLED BY

WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

GET IN TOUCH WITH THEIR NEAREST EXCHANGE

A TERRIFIC SENSATION

AN OVERWHELMING SUCCESS

12 Styles of Photos A Big Line of Paper

Plenty of Advertising Matter

WORLD'S LARGEST
SAWYER INC.
FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK
A. H. SAWYER
Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

Beautiful! Stupendous! Gorgeous!

And Every Other Adjective of Praise

CAN TRUTHFULLY BE USED TO DESCRIBE

THE TYRANNY
OF THE MAD CZAR

PRODUCED BY THE COIGNE MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

FOUR PARTS

A DRAMATIC REPRESENTATION OF THE TRUE STORY OF

PAUL THE FIRST OF RUSSIA

ALL SAWYER ZONES WILL BOOK YOU

THE WAR IS ON RUSSIA IS IN IT THIS SUBJECT IS TIMELY

THE LITHOGRAPHS

MAGNIFICENT!

RAMO FILMS, Inc.

ANNOUNCE

TWO WEEK ENGAGEMENTS OF

THE WAR OF WARS

OR

The Franco-German Invasion of 1914

Commencing MONDAY, AUGUST 24th:

FORREST THEATRE - PHILADELPHIA, PA.
NIXON THEATRE - - PITTSBURG, PA.
GRAND OPERA HOUSE, TORONTO, CANADA

Others Will Be Announced In Next Issue

WE WILL ONLY DEAL WITH THE BEST THEATRE IN EACH CITY OR TOWN

Remember: It's the "KICKIEST" Two-Hour Show Ever Presented in Motion Pictures

An Eternal Masterpiece of Tremendous Magnitude

FOR BOOKING OR TERRITORY—WIRE

RAMO FILMS, Inc.
C. LANG COBB, JR., Mgr. Sales and Publicity
Columbia Theatre Bldg., New York

BOSWORTH
INC.

PRESENTS

JACK LONDON'S

ODYSSEY OF THE NORTH

Featuring Mr. Hobart Bosworth

in a tremendous acting part, in fact the greatest part that he has ever played. This is Mr. Bosworth's first appearance since his masterful production of the Sea Wolf. Mr. Bosworth is admittedly the leading legitimate screen actor of the world. The Odyssey of the North is easily his masterpiece.

RELEASED SEPTEMBER THIRD

Exclusively by

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

110 West 40th St. New York

The Patchwork Girl of Oz

Was recently given a preliminary showing to 3500 people at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. The crowd was carried away with enthusiasm. Endless laughter and applause greeted scene after scene.

"Taking it all in all, nothing of its kind has ever been seen before, and from a commercial standpoint, The Patchwork Girl of Oz will be a drawing card throughout the world for years to come," says one review.

"The scenic settings are the most wonderful ever made."

"The costuming was pronounced the most wonderful and elaborate ever seen in any picture."

"A splendor that is far above imagination."

"The children laughed to their hearts' delight and the grown-ups became children again."

We are now busily producing our second Big Feature Film—another winner!
This is a photo-visualization of L. Frank Baum's

The Magic Cloak of Oz

EVERY LIVE EXHIBITOR WILL DEMAND THESE FILMS

The Oz Film Manufacturing Company

STUDIO AND LABORATORIES:

Santa Monica Boulevard, from Gower to Lodi Streets

Los Angeles, California

WORLD'S LARGEST
SAWYER INC.
FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK
A. H. SAWYER
Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

HERE'S ANOTHER

The King of the Bowery

(FOUR PARTS)

Real Life in New York's Most Interesting Locality

SEE
The Bowery
The Political Ball
The Christmas Dinner to the Poor
The Bread Line
The East Side Election

All Actual Views of the Bowery and shown in this

DRAMATIC SENSATION

Now Ready in All Sawyer "ZONES"

NEXT WEEK

ANNOUNCEMENT OF FIRST RELEASE OF THE Liberty Motion Picture Co.

MR. OWNER OF FEATURE PICTURE

SEE SAWYER

AND HAVE 30 PRINTS MAKE MONEY FOR YOU

UNITED KE

JAMES KEANE - PI

MOR

WRITTEN AND PRODUCED

OVER 60

DIVIDED INTO

TWO HUNDRED AND SIXTY TWO

INTENSE RAPID EXCITING ACTION

RELEASED

UK

Cop

STUDIOS - FAIR

NOGRAPH
ENT AND GEN. MGR.

NEY
BY JAMES KEANE
OOFEET
SEVEN PARTS
SPECTACULAR SCENES

EVERY INCH TINTED
AND TONED

IN SEPTEMBER

ght 1914
CALIFORNIA
UK

WAR WAR

Appropriateness is the scaffolding of success. The best speech given at the wrong time falls flat and it's the same with moving pictures—they must be timely. All Eclectic releases are timely. Today your patrons want war pictures and the Eclectic has on hand the most complete set of multiple reels featuring European War obtainable. Don't hesitate—be appropriate.

HERE THEY ARE—The Eclectic's Offering of War-Time Feature Films

The Last Volunteer

A 5-reel American made patriotic drama, showing how International relations are strained and broken. Laid at the seat of the present war So real you can see the damage of the bullets. War on land and in the air—a faithful presentation of modern engines of destruction and the resulting carnage. Wonderful 1, 3, 6 and 24-sheet Posters.

Faithful Unto Death

France and Germany in their relentless struggle for the mastery of Europe. A rousing 4-part war drama showing actual engagements and the pathetic sacrifice of a woman to aid her nation. Bursting bombs, blown-up bridges, severed telegraph wires, sparing none of the horrors of war. 1, 3, 6 and 24-sheet posters.

"War is Hell"

4 reels in natural colors, featuring modern war in the air. An aeroplane duel, burning war balloons, and the last desperate stand of a fallen aviator are incidents of this unsually absorbing film. 1, 3 and 6 sheet Posters—the kind that get the crowd.

Napoleon

Warfare by one man against the whole of Europe, which is comparable with the present situation of the German Emperor. A historic drama recounting the meteoric career of the world's most famous warrior in the last great struggle for European supremacy. 1, 3 and 6-sheet Posters.

All Love Excelling

Another war-time story in 3 reels—a tale of a woman's undying devotion, which carries her through the Crimean War—France and England at war with Russia. 1, 3 and 6-sheet Posters.

BASEBALL

McGraw Wins

Napoleon of Baseball Shines as Photoplay Star in Detective Swift

In this release, a 3 part detective story, Manager McGraw proves his skill as a moving picture actor in the leading role. The plot deals with the detective's pursuit of an International crook. Real Arabs on a real desert are connected with this story, which draws World Series crowds.

BASEBALL

In the Lions' Den

A 3 part feature in natural colors showing the adventures of a day old bridegroom among the lions of a former sweetheart. The woman, a prominent moving picture actress, is the possessor of jealousy as wild and untrammeled as that of her great African cats and she betrays her faithless lover to their mercy. A great climax to scenes of intense excitement.

Eclectic 4-a-Week

Monday—The Perils of Pauline every two weeks. Short subjects alternate weeks.
Tuesday—American one or two reel comedy.
Wednesday—Super-excellent multiple reel production.
Friday—Surpassing attraction of several reels.

ECLECTIC FEATURE FILM EXCHANGES FOR YOUR USE.
Atlanta, 61 Walton st.; Boston, 3 Tremont Row; Chicago, 5 So. Wabash Ave.; Dallas, Andrews Bldg.; Los Angeles, 114 E. 7th St.; Minneapolis, 4th and Hennepin Sts.; New York, 115 E. 23rd St.; Pittsburgh, 715 Liberty Ave.; San Francisco, 67 Turk St.; St. Louis, 3210 Locust St.; Syracuse, 214 E. Fayette St.; Cincinnati, 217 E. 5th St.; Salt Lake City, 68 South Main St.; Cleveland, 622 Prospect Ave., S. E.; Portland, 392 Burnside Ave.; Philadelphia, 1235 Vine St.; Washington, 7th and E Sts. N. W.; New Orleans, 910 Gravier St.; Seattle, 810 Third Ave.; Omaha, 1312 Farnam St.; Denver, Nassau Bldg.; Kansas City, 928 Main St.

The Eclectic Film Company

110 West 40th Street — New York City

ECLECTIC FILMS PARIS NEW YORK

"The Cream of American and European Studios"

The Perils of Pauline

Pauline stepped into favor with her first bow on the screen and she stepped into trouble too. With each episode she steps into more trouble but she always steps out again while she stays in favor. She's so entertaining—that's what makes her the favorite with patrons, and she's so reliable—that's what makes her the favorite with exhibitors. She can be depended upon to fill the house always.

Pauline Fills Your Seats and Doubles Your Receipts.

WAR NEWS

Convert the Public's War-Time Interest Into War-Time Profits

There's only one sure way to make money—give the people what they want at rates satisfactory to all. You make the rates and

. . . THE . . .

PATHÉ DAILY NEWS

will give your patrons what they want just when they want it. Just now they want war news and the PATHE WAR NEWS will show them more about the war in Europe than any other medium. Get new patrons—hold them—now's the time to do it and the PATHE DAILY NEWS IS THE WAY TO DO IT. (Issued semi-weekly.)

The Pathé Daily News

1 Congress Street Jersey City, N. J.

Atlanta, 61 Walton St.; New York, 115 E. 23rd St.; Cleveland, 622 Prospect Ave., S. E.; Denver, Nassau Bldg.; Minneapolis, 4th and Hennepin Sts.; Cincinnati, 217 E. 5th St.; Seattle, 810 Third Ave.; Boston, 3 Tremont Row; Pittsburgh, 715 Liberty Ave.; Portland, 392 Burnside Ave.; Omaha, 1312 Farnam St.; Chicago, 5 So. Wabash Ave.; San Francisco, 67 Turk St.; Philadelphia, 1235 Vine St.; Salt Lake City, 68 South Main St.; Dallas, Andrews Bldg.; St. Louis, 3210 Locust St.; Los Angeles, 114 E. 7th St.; Syracuse, 214 E. Fayette St.; Washington, 7th and E Sts., N. W.; New Orleans, 910 Gravier St.; Kansas City, 928 Main St.

VENDETTA

FROM THE NOVEL BY MARIE CORELLI

Five Parts (5071 Feet)

Quite the Most Beautiful, Realistic and Absorbing Novel the Famous English Novelist Has Yet Written

A Man Buried as Dead, returning to consciousness in his coffin, knocking it by his struggles from its niche in the wall; thereby breaking open a casket filled with jewels; smashing his way out the tomb to his castle only to find his wife and dearest friend unfaithful to him; plotting a revenge Hellish in its execution; the killing of his faithless wife in that self-same tomb by earthquake the night of his second marriage to her—these are the essentials of a story we firmly believe unrivaled in the annals of filmed Novels. One thrill treads upon the footsteps of another. Pantomime finds its highest expression in "VENDETTA."

The settings are more than beautiful—the photography as clear and brilliant as a mountain stream. In "VENDETTA" we offer all that is possible in Motion Photography.

For Release Through Special Feature Department, General Film Company, September 1

(Complete publicity campaign, including 1, 3 and 6 sheets. two styles, 3 and 6, heralds, slides, etc.)

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State St., Chicago

WE ARE NOW BOOKING

European Armies in Action!

4000 FEET

Of Timely, Up-to-the-Minute Views of Christendom's Greatest Catastrophe, Showing Intimate Glimpses of Statesmen and Generals of the Nations Involved with Interesting Pictures of Soldiers and Sailors now Engaged in the Mighty Struggle for World Supremacy.

CONTAINING THE FOLLOWING:

1. GLIMPSES OF HIS IMPERIAL HIGHNESS CROWN PRINCE FRANCIS FERDINAND of Austria, reviewing the Austrian Military Forces. (His assassination by Servians precipitated the War.)

2. THE FRENCH ARMY IN ACTION. The French Artillery Corps is said to be the finest in the world. See them at work, moving, loading and firing the great guns.

3. LIFE ABOARD A FRENCH BATTLESHIP. Showing close-up views of sailors aboard the Edgar-Quinet, one of the mighty men-of-war, now with the French squadron.

4. GERMAN ARTILLERY MANOEUVRES. See the Crown Prince of Germany directing the manoeuvres of the Famous German artillery corps. There's a noticeable difference between their methods and those of the French. See if you can find it.

5. BELGIUM CAVALRY IN ACTION. The success of Belgium cavalry in repelling German attack at the outbreak of War has been a great surprise to the Civilized World. See these wonderful men and horses in action!

6. THE SERVIAN AND MONTENEGRIN ARMIES will be tremendous factors in settlement of the War. They're fresh from the Battlefield now and all Veterans. Splendid pictures taken during the Balkan War showing them in Actual Battle. It's interesting to note the difference in their military operations and those of the big nations farther north.

7. BRITISH FIELD GUN EVOLUTIONS. The Great English Fighting Machine at its Best. Entertaining and Educational Views of the British Marines, showing how an entire army crosses a chasm thirty feet wide; how quickly the big artillery guns can be unlimbered and again brought into service!

8. SWISS ARMY MANOEUVRES. Clean-Cut, Courageous-Looking soldiers equipped with the latest and best in field artillery. See them at their exercises. The pictures will convince you that Switzerland will play a large part in the Land Battles.

9. HOW THIRTEEN-INCH GUNS ARE MANUFACTURED. Timely, highly interesting views of the manufacture of mammoth naval guns. See the hot metal as it comes from the furnaces, its long and careful treatment and its final completion as an awe-inspiring, death-dealing Monster.

NOW BOOKING THROUGH THE FOLLOWING GEORGE KLEINE OFFICES

GEORGE KLEINE

CHICAGO
166 N. State St.

NEW YORK
226 W. 42nd St.

ATLANTA, GA.
43 Moore Bldg.

DENVER, COLO.
405 Railroad Bldg.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
210 Temple Court Bldg.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
509 Lyceum Theatre Bldg.

SEATTLE, WASH.
213 Orpheum Theatre Bldg.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
407 Monadnock Bldg.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.
701 Majestic Theatre Bldg.

WORLD FILM

— NOW READY —

THE SENSATIONAL WAR DRAMA

GERMANIA

IN 5 ACTS

DEPICTING THE WAR BETWEEN GERMANY AND FRANCE IN 1814

THE ATTACK

The Strand Theatre
(NEW YORK)
PLAYED THIS WONDERFUL PRODUCTION TO A FULL HOUSE FOR A SOLID WEEK — YOU CAN DO THE SAME

ATLANTA
BOSTON
BUFFALO
CHICAGO
CLEVELAND
CINCINNATI
DETROIT
DALLAS
DENVER
INDIANAPOLIS
KANSAS CITY
LOS ANGELES

WORLD FILM CORPORATION
TRADE MARK
130 W. 46TH ST. N.Y.C.

MONTREAL
MINNEAPOLIS
NEW YORK
NEW ORLEANS
PHILADELPHIA
PITTSBURG
SEATTLE
ST. LOUIS
SAN FRANCISCO
TORONTO
WASHINGTON

HOME OFFICE — 130 W. 46TH ST., N.Y.C.

CORPORATION

· SHUBERT · FEATURES ·

The LURE

5 ACTS
READY
AUG. 24TH

THIS STORY — WHEN PLAYED ON THE AMERICAN STAGE — RECEIVED MORE COMMENT THAN ANY OTHER BEFORE OR SINCE. MOTHERS AND FATHERS SIDED WITH THE NATIONAL BOARD OF CENSORS BY SAYING IT WAS A WONDERFUL MORAL LESSON FOR ALL.

CHIMES

READY
SEPT. 7TH

By CHARLES DICKENS

5 ACTS

FEATURING

TOM TERRISS

THE GREAT ENGLISH ACTOR
AND MOST FAMOUS DICKENS IMPERSONATOR

A BEAUTIFUL STORY — WONDERFUL PHOTOGRAPHY
SUPERBLY ACTED

WHAT ABOUT RENTING AN EXTRA

ATTRACTIONS IN THE FORM OF SPECIAL FEATURES?

THE CURSE OF GREED in 5 Parts
THE THUMB PRINT in 4 Parts and
'NEATH THE LION'S PAW in 3 Parts

THREE ALLIES

WHICH WILL BRING RESULTS TO YOU

Released through General Film Co.

MELIES FILMS

Eight Kalem Masterpiece Films

KIT, THE ARKANSAW TRAVELER

So tremendously popular is "KIT, THE ARKANSAW TRAVELER," that for decades it was the only production in which the late F. S. Chanfrau appeared on the stage. Kalem's Three-Act production of the famous drama is even stronger than the stage play. The steamboat fire; the famous gambling episode; Mary's elopement with Bond; the deadly bowie-knife duel between Kit and Bond in the Mississippi, are all just as real as life itself.

The most sensational events shown on 1, 3 and 6-sheet Posters

THE BOER WAR

The part played by the British troops in the present titanic European struggle, makes this Five-Act story of the last great English conflict of extraordinary interest. Critics pronounce it the most realistic war production ever filmed.

Two 1-Sheet, Two 3-Sheet, Two 8-Sheet and One 24-Sheet Posters

SHANNON OF THE SIXTH

A stupendous Five-Act production of Edward E. Kidder's famous drama, based upon the Sepoy Rebellion in India. The destruction of the arsenal containing the English women and children one of the sensational incidents.

Two 1-Sheet, Two 3-Sheet, Two 8-Sheet and One 24-Sheet Posters

WOLFE, or THE CONQUEST OF QUEBEC

Every incident in Wolfe's famous campaign, from the bombardment of Quebec by the English fleet to the Battle on the Plains of Abraham, have been reproduced in this wonderful Five-Act production. Filmed at authentic locations in Canada.

Two 1-Sheet, Two 3-Sheet, Two 8-Sheet and One 24-Sheet Posters

FRANCIS MARION, "The Swamp Fox"

Marguerite Courtot and Guy Coombs are featured in this vivid Three-Act story of the famous Revolutionary hero's campaign against the British.

Striking scenes on 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters.

A CELEBRATED CASE

Alice Joyce, Guy Coombs, Marguerite Courtot and Alice Hollister are featured in this Four-Act picturization of an incident arising from the famous Battle of Fontenoy between the English and French.

1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters that catch every eye

THE DEATH SIGN AT HIGH NOON

A Three-act Western classic, featuring William H. West, Jane Wolfe, Marin Sais and Paul Hurst.

Attention-Attracting 1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters

THE OTHER HALF OF THE NOTE

An exciting Three-Act Drama based upon the Government's efforts to run down a daring band of smugglers.

1, 3 and 6-Sheet Posters that stand out.

Released through General Film Masterpiece Service

LUBIN

LUBIN MASTERPIECES

are the best attractions in the Exhibitors' hands today. The remarkable success of the six features mentioned below is known throughout the World, and even greater results will be accomplished with the four extraordinary pictures now ready for release

EXHIBITORS, BOOK THESE PICTURES!

(Through the General Film Special Service)

5 Reels "THE THIRD DEGREE" By CHARLES KLEIN
Produced by Barry O'Neil, with Geo. Soule Spencer, and Lilie Leslie

6 Reels "THE LION AND THE MOUSE" By CHARLES KLEIN
Produced by Barry O'Neil, with Geo. Soule Spencer, and Ethel Clayton

5 Reels "DAUGHTERS OF MEN" By CHARLES KLEIN
Produced by George Terwilliger, with Geo Soule Spencer, and Ethel Clayton

5 Reels "THE GAMBLERS" By CHARLES KLEIN
Produced by George Terwilliger, with Geo. Soule Spencer, Ethel Clayton and Earl Metcalfe

6 Reels "THE WOLF" By EUGENE WALTER
Produced by Barry O'Neil, with Geo. Soule Spencer, Ethel Clayton, Ferdinand Tidmarsh, Bernard Siegel and Ruth Bryan

5 Reels "THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR" By J. HARTLEY MANNERS
Produced by Barry O'Neil, with Geo. Soule Spencer, Ethel Clayton, Edwin Barbour and Joseph Kaufman.

FOUR EXTRAORDINARY FEATURES NOW READY AND TO BE RELEASED SOON

5 Reels "THREADS OF DESTINY" By William Clifford

FEATURING

EVELYN NESBIT THAW

and her son, Russell William Thaw

AND THE FOLLOWING CAST:

MARIAN GRUNSTEIN — EVELYN NESBIT THAW

ISAAC GRUNSTEIN (Marian's father) ..... BERNARD SIEGEL
RACHAEL SHAPIRO (Marian's friend) ..... MARGUERITE RISSER
ABRAHAM SOLMAN (Rug Merchant and Leader of Jewish Colony) ..... JOSEPH STANDISH
THE NUN ..... MARGUERITE MARSH
FEDOR TOMSKY ..... JACK CLIFFORD

Produced by JOSEPH W. SMILEY

5 Reels RAYMOND HITCHCOCK

"The Funniest Man on the Stage"

In a distinctly unique comedy drama written especially for him by Lawrence McCloskey. Produced by George Terwilliger. Costumes and Scenery are particularly beautiful.

5 Reels "EAGLE'S NEST" By Edwin Arden

FEATURING

EDWIN ARDEN

Late star of the Broadway Success "To-Day" Produced in Colorado by Romaine Fielding

5 Reels "THE FORTUNE HUNTER" By Winchell Smith

FEATURING

WILLIAM ELLIOTT

Late star of "Madame X" Company, assisted by the Lubin All Star Cast

Produced by BARRY O'NEIL.

Special One, Three, Six and Eight Sheet Posters

Lubin Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office - - - 154 West Lake Stree

LUBIN

ANNOUNCES A NEW RELEASE

BEGINNING MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 14TH
(AND CONTINUING EACH MONDAY THEREAFTER)

A SERIES OF
SINGLE REEL DRAMATIC PHOTOPLAYS
UNDER THE GENERAL TITLE OF

"THE BELOVED ADVENTURER"

By EMMETT CAMPBELL HALL
FEATURING

ARTHUR JOHNSON
AND LOTTIE BRISCOE

in parts exceptionally adapted to the display of the Special talents of these popular players.

THE SERIES CONSISTS OF 15 PARTS.

EACH PART IS A COMPLETE DRAMATIC PICTURE—NEVERTHELESS THE COMPLETE SERIES FORMS A CONSISTENT AND CONTINUOUS NARRATIVE.

THERE IS, IN THIS SERIES, PATHOS, ROMANCE, HUMOR AND ADVENTURE.

No expense has been spared to make this, the first Lubin Serial Release, in every respect noteworthy and one which will command an enthusiastic reception by the trade.

An entirely new feature, which will excite the highest degree of interest, is the publication in book form, of the complete story of the Series, this book being written by the author of the plays and in every respect a novel of the highest standard. This will serve as a tremendous additional power in the hands of Exhibitors.

SECURE BOOKINGS IMMEDIATELY!

EXHIBITORS SHOULD ARRANGE AT ONCE FOR THE BOOKING OF THESE PICTURES and they are particularly urged to place orders for this book at the earliest possible date, as the Edition is limited. Details upon application.

FIVE REGULAR RELEASES EACH WEEK

"THE WIDOW AND THE TWINS" }
"THE LUCKY RUBE" } Split Reel Comedy ..... Tuesday, August 25th
"THE ATTORNEY'S DECISION"—Two Reel Drama ..... Wednesday, August 26th
"THE AGGRESSOR"—Two Reel Drama ..... Thursday, August 27th
"THE BETTER MAN"—Drama ..... Friday, August 28th
"THE KID'S NAP"—Comedy ..... Saturday, August 29th

Special One, Three and Six Sheet Posters

Lubin Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office - - - 154 West Lake Street

EDISON

VIKING QUEEN

A Drama by Y. SPINNER.
IN TWO PARTS.

THE story of the Viking Queen, as every one knows, concerns a legend in Norway that has become classic. The plot is here unfolded in a most picturesque manner. Queen Helga's body, found on a lonely island, the supposed result of foul play, is brought home and a great funeral is arranged. During the procession the queen starts from her death-like trance and lives again to the joy and happiness of her native land.

To be released Friday, September 4th

COMING EDISON RELEASES

Saturday,	Sept. 5	HEARTS OF THE FOREST	1,000 ft.	Drama
Monday,	Sept. 7	AN ABSENT-MINDED CUPID	1,000 "	Comedy
Tuesday,	Sept. 8	THE BLIND FIDDLER	1,000 "	Drama
Wednesday,	Sept. 9	GETTING ANDY'S GOAT	1,000 "	Comedy
Friday,	Sept. 11	FACE VALUE	2,000 "	Drama
Saturday,	Sept. 12	DICK POTTER'S WIFE	1,000 "	Drama
Monday,	Sept. 14	GENERALS OF THE FUTURE	525 "	Descriptive
		BUSTER BROWN ON THE CARE AND TREATMENT OF GOATS	550 "	Comedy

Order Edison Posters of the Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland, Ohio, direct

TRADE MARK
Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.,
239 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.
Makers of Edison Kinetoscope, Model D.

VITAGRAPH

"Ward's Claim"
Drama.....MONDAY, AUG. 24

To get possession of the claim, the Mexican abducts the girl. A young prospector snatches her from the Mexican's saddle while her abductor dashes on his horse headlong over the precipice. MYRTLE GONZALEZ and an all-star cast.

"Henry Stanley, the Lion Killer"
Two Part Comedy.....TUESDAY, AUG. 25

He is mistaken for the famous hunter. He has a hard time living up to his reputation. He unexpectedly makes a hit and wins a lot of undeserved glory. SIDNEY DREW in the title role.

"Josie's Declaration of Independence"
Comedy .....WEDNESDAY, AUG. 26

She takes a day off to celebrate. She loses her job and retaliates with the garden hose and Hank's assistance. They have a lot of fun and excitement. BILLY QUIRK and JOSIE SADLER are the leads.

"The Mysterious Lodger"
Drama.....THURSDAY, AUG. 27

He doesn't disclose his identity until he is far from the possibility of being wrongfully accused. The woman who shares his secret also shares his happiness. MAURICE COSTELLO is the principal.

"Such a Hunter"
Comedy.....FRIDAY, AUG. 28

BUNNY is a better talker than hunter. His modest rival makes him look like a four-flusher in the eyes of FLORA FINCH, the girl they are both courting.

"A Coney Island Nightmare"
Two Part Comedy.....SATURDAY, AUG. 29

After reading a book of adventure and indulging in cheese and sausages, Josie sees things at Coney Island. She wakes up just in time. BILLY QUIRK and JOSIE SADLER are the leads.

SIX A WEEK

"THE WRONG FLAT"		"THE UPPER HAND"
Comedy	Monday, Aug. 31	Drama	Thursday, Sept. 3
"THE HIDDEN LETTERS"		"THE BARREL ORGAN"
Two Part Drama	Tuesday, Sept. 1	Comedy	Friday, Sept. 4
"THE LOST CORD"		"TOO MUCH UNCLE"
VITA-LAUGH Comedy	Wednesday, Sept. 2	Two Part Comedy	Saturday, Sept. 5

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX-SHEET POSTERS.

The Vitagraph Co. of America, E. 15th St. and Locust Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

9 PHOTOPLAY MASTERPIECES RELEASED

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

2 WONDERFUL PICTURES COMING

Produced by the Vitagraph Company of America

RELEASED

5-PART DRAMA A Million Bid
3-PART COMEDY Goodness Gracious
6-PART DRAMA Mr. Barnes of N. Y
3-PART COMEDY Love and Luck Gasolene
6-PART DRAMA Captain Alvarez
3-PART DRAMA Shadows of the Past
3-PART COMEDY Mr. Bingles' Melodrama
5-PART DRAMA My Official Wife
3-PART COMEDY Uncle Bill

COMING

SIDNEY DREW, EDITH STOREY and Star Cast in the 5-Part Fantasy

A FLORIDA ENCHANTMENT

By ARCHIBALD CLAVERING GUNTER

ANITA STEWART, JULIA SWAYNE GORDON and Specially Selected Company, in the 3-part drama

THE PAINTED WORLD

By JACQUES FUTRELLE

As Presented at the

Vitagraph Theatre

New York City

For Terms and Particulars Apply

General Film Co.'s Special Service

By Arrangement with Broadway Star Feature Co. (Inc.)

STATE RIGHTS STILL AVAILABLE FOR "THE CHRISTIAN" Apply VITAGRAPH-LIEBLER FEATURE FILM CO., 116 NASSAU ST., N. Y.

THE DEVIL'S DANSANT

An Intensely Dramatic Two-Act Feature based upon the Fad of the Hour. Featuring Alice Hollister

An exact replica of one of New York's most famous Dansants was built specially for this production. Two prominent artists give a superb exhibition of the Maxixe and Hesitation dances. How Dominique enmeshes the district attorney's wife in his net, and the denouement which takes place when the district attorney captures his wife in the gambling hall raid, will electrify every audience.

Released Monday, September 7th. Striking scenes on 1, 3 and 6-Sheets

A Mother's Atonement

Because her daughter has married contrary to her wishes, the heartless society woman disinherits the girl. Years later, the granddaughter is the instrument Fate uses to reveal to the woman the result of her cruelty.

Released Tuesday, September 8th.
Unusually strong 1 and 3-Sheets

Ham, the Lineman

Flirt? Why, he's the father of all flirts! But he gets into trouble—bunches of it—when he tries to flirt with Detective Johnson's wife. Ruth Roland and Lloyd V. Hamilton are simply immense in this farce.

Released Friday, September 11th.

The Fuse of Death

Princess Mona Darkfeather in a Two-Act Western Drama
In a drunken stupor, the villainous trader fails to notice the sputtering fuse which leads to the hidden powder. The terrific explosion which hurls the man to his doom is shown in an extraordinary climax.

Released Wednesday, September 9th.
Eye-catching 1, 3 and 6-Sheets

The Path to Ruin

About to operate on the maimed fireman, the surgeon discovers the man to be his successful rival in love. What follows is shown in one of the most remarkable situations ever filmed.

Released Saturday, September 12th.
Attention-attracting 1 and 3-Sheets.

KALEM COMPANY, 235-9 West 23d St., New York

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)

J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
J. F. Chalmers.....Vice-President
E. J. Chalmers.....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie.....General Manager

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands .....$3.00 per year
Canada ..... 3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid)..... 4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.
DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The Index for this issue will be found on page 1294.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, August 29, 1914.

Facts and Comments

OUR esteemed contemporary and namesake, The New York World, after looking with favor upon the motion picture and prophesying nice things for it has suffered a relapse into its worst form and launches one of its editorial thunderbolts against the higher possibilities of the art. In an article bearing the title, "The Movies' Highest Art," the paper adverts to a sensational detective story in films and records its belief "that photoplays of underworld life with films fresh from police records and detectives' note-books are the things that count in the movies." The esteemed contemporary then proceeds to re-discover that strange body known as a "typical movie audience." Such an audience, we are informed, likes "the dime-novel flavor and wants to see cowboys riding across the plains and Indians fighting, burglars at work, white slavers foiled, lost wills discovered in secret drawers and wronged heirs restored to their heritages." We do not know what special revelations the editor had in regard to typical "movie audiences," but if the daily observation of such audience by experts is any criterion our friend is much mistaken.

*

Just let him or one of his reporters try to book a film of the description he mentions and see how far he will get. Cowboys and Indians are absolutely at a discount and exhibitors fight shy of them. Producers have long ago called a halt on the overproduction of such films. Four or five years ago at least three big companies specialized in Western films; today we only see an occasional Western. We urge our friend to study the list of regular and special releases of films and he will find that the day of the dime novel film, the lurid detective feature and the cheap and stereotyped melodrama have very little room in the exhibitor's program. The pen far more than the picture is guilty of an elaborate description of crime. The columns of our esteemed contemporary are largely given up to stories of crime and scandal, which no reputable producer of films would dream of putting on the screen. Just now, of course, war takes up a good deal of space, but in piping times of peace the burglar and the hero of the melodrama have never lacked space and appreciation in the columns of The New York World.

* * *

SUBMARINE photography, for the beginnings of which the world is indebted to three young Americans, is no doubt destined to play a most important part in scientific research. It will have its commercial value, as it will be the best instrument ever devised for discovering hidden treasures and locating wrecks. By means of the new invention it will be possible to watch and accurately record many phases of submarine life. In time this branch of kinematography will develop as a science of its own. The results we may confidently look forward to will be of benefit to the whole human family.

* * *

THAT there should be any misunderstanding between the factions of exhibitors in New York State upon the question of getting together is a matter of regret in view of the very positive statements on the part of the representatives of the Independent Motion Picture Association that they were satisfied with the terms agreed upon at Dayton and that they would all be back in the fold within thirty days or less. The New York member of that committee was especially vociferous in declaiming his allegiance to the new administration of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and everyone, taking him at his word, was correspondingly jubilant. Recent developments tend to cast some suspicion upon his sincerity. Elsewhere the MOVING PICTURE WORLD prints the substance of a set of resolutions adopted by a committee appointed to consider plans of amalgamation which appear to dictate the terms upon which that much to be desired end is to be accomplished. It would seem that the Dayton resolution was sufficiently explicit upon the subject, especially as to the procedure, to remove all doubt as to how amalgamation is to be effected.

Just now the eyes of all members of the League are turned toward New York. It is not forgotten that much was sacrificed at Dayton in the interest of harmony when practically all of the demands of the representatives of the Independent Exhibitors' Association were granted, and it will be expected of the New York adherents of that organization that they keep their word.

Morals and the Film

By W. Stephen Bush

THE most brilliant and withal the most frivolous mind of our day and generation has entered the arena of discussion touching the morality or immorality of the motion picture. George Bernard Shaw scintillates for the space of a few thousand words in a most entertaining contribution to the literature of censorship.

Before he dashes at his opponents, tumbling them from their horses with one or two clever thrusts to the roaring delight of his audience, he makes a very pretty bow to the motion picture itself. He says there is no doubt "that the kinema is going to form the mind of England." "The national conscience," says he, "the national ideals and tests of conduct will be those of the film." One cannot be too sure when George Bernard Shaw is serious and when he is not; indeed there are many who doubt whether he is capable of being serious at any time. We are inclined to think that in this instance he speaks more in sober earnest than in mere jest. The Moving Picture World in an article printed in June, 1911, undertook to prophesy "that in a year or two the public taste will be molded altogether by the products of the film-makers, and thus molded will manifest itself in plain and numerous ways." We are not ashamed to be seen in a line of prophets standing next to the most distinguished G. B. S.

Very curious are the deductions which Shaw draws from the universal effort to make the motion picture conform to every dictate of conventional morality. First, he states his own observations of the motion picture theater. He says that "certain people who have never been inside a picture palace are alarmed at the hideous immorality of the film plays and are calling out for a censorship and for the exclusion of children under sixteen. Certain others who, like myself, frequent the kinemas, testify to their desolating romantic morality and ridicule the moral scare."

Shaw probably knows nothing of the censoring mania in this country and is unacquainted with the horrible examples of legal censorship. If he knew his argument might be made ever so much stronger. He does, however, say a very true thing when he tells us that the "kinema must be not merely ordinarily and locally but extraordinarily and internationally moral." Yes, indeed. It must meet the views of the censor who has the militia back of him as in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and it must likewise meet the views of self-constituted private and semi-private censorial institutions with which this land of ours is afflicted. It dare not advance above the level of the copybook maxims on pain of fine and imprisonment. Here our friend cannot refrain from scoffing. Says he: "The result may be studied at any picture palace. You have what an agricultural laborer thinks right and what an old-fashioned governess thinks properly sentimental."

Unwittingly, of course, Shaw has hit at least two of our official censors pretty hard.

We go along with him still sympathizingly until he breaks out into the following savage indictment of the motion picture:

> The melodramas are more platitudinous than melodrama has ever been before. The farces, more crudely knock-about than any harlequinade ever enacted by living performers, are redeemed only by the fantastic impossibilities which the trickery of the film makes practicable. There is no comedy, no wit, no criticism of morals by ridicule or otherwise, no exposure of the unpleasant consequences of romantic sentimentality and reckless tomfoolery in real life, nothing that could give a disagreeable shock to the stupid or shake the self-complacency of the smug. In the early days of the kinematograph, when it was a scarce and expensive curiosity, some of the films were clever and witty. All that is gone now. The leveling down has been thoroughly accomplished. The London boy is given the morality of the mining camp; and the Chinese pirate has to accept with reverence the proprieties of our cathedral towns.

Some of the things he says are true, others are emphatically untrue. We have had scores upon scores of motion pictures which gave a disagreeable shock to the stupid and shook the self-complacency of the smug. Shaw has not seen many film plays or he has been singularly unfortunate in the choice of his "picture palace" if he alleges that there has been no criticism of morals by ridicule or otherwise. We are glad to be able to assure him that there is a school of film playwrights and of directors who specialize in this sort of thing and whose productions have met with decided approval at the hands of the public. There is not enough of this kind of film drama and there never can be too much of it, but it is only just to say that there has been some of it. Let us keep the record straight. The promise of Shaw to contribute "a few sample scenarios" we look upon as a most welcome assurance and earnestly hope he will lose no time in fulfilling his promise. We need the pungent spice on the film, there is altogether too much of the dull and the commonplace and the conventional, which means the moral gone to seed.

Between the censor argus-eyed and little-brained on the one hand and the ambitious satirist who wants to use the kinematograph as a weapon for social betterment the road of the film is beset with many thorns. Take any film, no matter where made or by whom, and submit first to Breitinger or Maude Murray Miller and then George Bernard Shaw and what would be left of it? Nothing whatever, I am afraid. Whatever was unconventional would be expunged by the sturdy guardians of morals on the Schuylkill and the Ohio, while every thing conventional would rouse the destructive ire of George Bernard. The producer would be lost.

We agree with Shaw when he says that there are but two attitudes possible in the relation of the state toward motion pictures—one is ignorant meddlesomeness and the other is to let them alone and allow them to work out their own salvation. As we have often said before the censorship mania will die out in the natural course of events. There never has been any honest, widespread demand for official censorship. The "demand" was created by self-seeking politicians who thought it was time to exact a toll from this rich and growing industry. The attempt to induce Congress to pass a censorship law has failed miserably. In fact, the Smith-Hughes bill never got out of the hands of the committee. It would have been otherwise if there had been a genuine, nation-wide sentiment in favor of the legalized censorship of motion pictures. The legislatures of more than a score of states will meet in a few months. Let us all get together and work hard to influence public opinion to the end that legalized censorship may be kept off the statute books of every state in the Union.

Drawing the Audience

By Louis Reeves Harrison

OUR people differ widely in their ideas of religion, politics and society, but they are moved in common by a few very powerful motives. Those of foreign birth came here to seek better fortunes for themselves and families. A certain portion of these newcomers have the same spirit as colonial Americans. They found Old-World conditions intolerable and hoped to here realize liberty of existence in accordance with their own ideals. They are willing to brave dangers and endure hardships in order to attain freedom of thought and action. Americans, old and new, are therefore very much in accord on the question of personal liberty and in a state of continuous revolt against conditions which operate to restrain ambition and achievement. Any man who has closely studied our people knows this. He knows this and a great deal more, and it would seem only reasonable that a creator of moving pictures should understand the spirit of a people whose interest in his product he expects to enlist.

Who studies the audience? Look around you at an exhibition of moving pictures. Attention is fastened upon the screen. An occasional exhibitor seeks an expression of opinion among those who patronize his place, or he may judge of what pleases by the noise of the unthinking and easily pleased, but there are larger ways of getting at public taste. The unexampled prosperity of moving pictures has made many of us indifferent to what stirs universal feeling. We must get close to the life, literature and varied expression of sentiment among the millions who attend the picture show to formulate any generalizations about themes for the picture play. What are our people reading about, thinking about and talking about? What are the themes universal as distinguished from those provincial or purely sectional?

A fact, pleasant or unpleasant, as the case may be, is that exhibitors place great stress on what is commonly designated as "paper." Not being an expert on poster publicity, I dislike offering any opinion on that subject. I am not in a position to know exactly what proportion of drawing power the billboards exert in all parts of the country. In this immediate neighborhood, merely a straw in the wind, I have seen some theaters fail after covering their entrances with lurid announcements and others succeed on quality alone. The loudest outside advertisers of what proved unsatisfactory within have closed their doors, while others prosper on merit of presentation alone. Steady good quality seems to win its way within my limited field of observation, and I am naturally inclined to think that the same policy would succeed among intelligent people elsewhere. The question of quality, therefore, is supreme in any views I may offer, and it alone will be given consideration, other attractions, such as music and general comfort, being equal.

"Let us go to the picture show!" says one of a social group, home entertainment having palled on the members. "Where shall we go?" is the first query. There will be a difference of opinion on most occasions, but a certain amount of insensible attraction is exerted by the most dependable house in the neighborhood, the one whose offerings have been most uniformly good. "Let us go where we get the best for our money," is a very common conclusion. The red poster, like the "Country Store," may have its attractions for the younger element, but those who pay the bills will oftenest decide in favor of getting some adequate return from expenditure, judging from past experience rather than deciding on impulse. Among people of intelligence and constantly developing taste, that exhibition will be chosen which honestly attempts to supply what the people demand.

It is beyond discussion that cleanliness and comfort count, that good music is one powerful factor and fine projection another. In fact, it is paradoxical that an argument for quality should be made. However, the truth and absurdity of expecting to hold patronage by inferior exhibitions is well known. There are plenty of men who still regard an audience in the abstract as a body of irresponsible human beings who take an actual pleasure in being fooled. Besides, there is a question of criterion involved. By what standard of judgment shall quality be manifest? What universally valid principles exist by which pictures under consideration can be tested? Are published criticisms dependable? Are critics, even when unmoved by other influences than their own perceptions of right and wrong, capable of making nice distinctions and of determining the merit of a production? A very large proportion of press critics are fearlessly honest and incorruptible, but they are under constant strain, under pressure brought to bear by advertising producers, particularly those who regard a review as part of the publicity game.

Are we not brought back to a judgment of our people as a whole? Believing as I do in criticism of an honest and capable sort as the life of development in an art, I am constrained to admit that an exhibitor must exert his own intelligence of selection in supplementing what is offered in reviews. He should make a study of his business, should get at the impressions of his audience in a general sort of way, apart from what he has shown them. Our present forms and methods are far from perfect, and our present themes may be remote from the ideals of an audience. Whether the strongest message is from dead lips or from hearts beating in our midst, it has always seemed to me that this new art has more than one tremendous mission. It can help us to perfect ourselves by new ideals. It can help us shield ourselves from the perils of existence.

Let us closely examine a play. Why was it produced? Is it a cheap product, made at a minimum of cost, to sell for a large profit irrespective of the general result? Is it a mere corpse revival? Do we feel a sense of purification or of satisfaction after it has been shown on the screen? Is there a punch in it that justifies a concentration of energy in its making? Do we get anything out of it besides watching a lot of actors move through varied situations? Is the crisis interesting enough to warrant the elaboration of incident leading up to it? Does it excite curiosity and awaken suspense during the period of preparation? Watching the screen day after day, studying his audience as often, considering all that goes to make a photodrama worth while, why should not the exhibitor be a fairly good judge of quality himself? He is, when unaffected by prejudices.

The exhibitor who makes a serious effort to give his patrons the best he can find in the market is up against only one obstacle to large success and that is a lack of such photodramas as people really care to see. That he cannot obtain these in sufficient numbers at reasonable prices is due to the indifference of producers, an indifference fostered by those exhibitors who howl for red "paper" and explosions. Drawing larger and better audiences, therefore, appears to be up to the organization. It is now so strongly knit as to demand and get such improvements in quality as will endear moving pictures to an audience comprising all humankind.

"Vendetta"

A Five Part Photodrama of Tremendous Interest, Adapted from Marie Corelli's Story of That Name, to Be Released by George Kleine.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

LEST her readers should deem her story of the "Vendetta" one of improbability and evolved solely from imagination, Marie Corelli, in her preface to the work, asserts that "its chief incidents are founded on an actual occurrence which took place in Naples during the last scathing visitation of the cholera in 1884." And possessed of a wonderful imagination she sets down in the same preface that "the romances planned by the brain of a novelist or dramatist are poor in comparison with the romances of real life—life wrongly termed commonplace, but which, in fact, teems with tragedies as great and dark and soul-torturing as any devised by Sophocles or Shakespeare." As the photodrama follows the story closely in the main incidents, some of them positively terrific in their visualization, it is well to remember that there are more things in real life than are dreamt of in our philosophy.

The story has been filmed by Eclipse, and very worthily. We are treated to views of several fine exteriors, notable among them being the Villa of Count Fabio Romani. Whether the original is located in Naples or not matters little, as the effect is charming. The gloom and horrors of the family vault of the Romanis are also vividly recreated. The effect of the earthquake shock as shown in the Romani ballroom, where the guests are gayly celebrating the wedding of their host, and in the gruesome vault, where the avenging husband is meting out the full measure of his own sufferings to a false and heartless wife, are really terrifying in their realism. The fall of the ponderous stones from the roof of the vault on the unhappy woman makes one shiver with fear. It is difficult to understand how Mme. Regina Badet, the impersonator of the Countess Romani, escapes injury in this instance, even granting that the dislodged stones are made of stucco work.

The cast is exceptionally strong. Mme. Regina Badet, as the Countess, carries the difficult role with the convincing art of an accomplished actress. With feline, sinuous grace she betrays, by physical deportment, the treachery and serpentine mazes of an unholy mind. That smile and her twining attitude before her victims give us a clear insight of the soul of the most strongly drawn character of this Corelli story. In the vault scene Mme. Badet is truly great, especially so when the Countess has been driven mad by the awfulness of her impending fate. It will be interesting to know that Mme. Badet is a celebrated opera singer in Paris, and that many of her successes have been made in the Sarah Bernhardt Theater.

Count Fabio Romani is in the able care of George Baud, whose fine physique and good looks fit happily with the description of the Count in the story. Charles Angelo is also well cast in the role of the artist, Guido Ferrari, who betrays the noble-minded Fabio and in turn is betrayed by his heartless paramour, the Countess.

Special mention is due the quality of the photography in these films. It is, indeed, a delight to study the soft and well-defined effects throughout.

Count Fabio Romani lives happily in his beautiful villa in Naples, delighting in the smiles of his beautiful wife and in the companionship of his little daughter, Stella. He is proud, too, of the friendship of Guido Ferrari, whom he treats as a member of his family.

One day, while cholera rages in Naples, he spies a victim of the plague during a walk through the city. He attempts to succor the unfortunate and is himself taken suddenly ill. A good monk takes charge of him. The malady quickly reaches its climax and the Count, fearing for the safety of his wife and child, begs the good priest not to inform them until his remains have been laid away in the Romani vault. There he is buried (the evening of the day of his attack) by several monks.

But it must have been a case of sunstroke, instead of cholera, this illness of the Count; for that same night he awakens in his flimsy coffin. Horrified, and in his fearful struggles to break open the thing that shuts him in with death, the coffin falls from its niche and is broken to pieces. The Count soon afterwards escapes from the vault by a secret passage, providentially discovered.

The Challenge Scene from "Vendetta" (George Kleine).

Soon afterwards he arrives at his home, to which he gains access by a lattice door to which he had a key that was left in one of his pockets at his hasty burial. Entering he seeks to surprise his adored wife. A laugh that he knows well falls on his ears. A few steps more and he discovers Scene from "Vendetta" (Kleine).

Guido and his wife love-making, and listens to words that convince him of the falseness of both.

How Count Fabio steals away and assumes the role of Count Oliva; how he shoots Guido in a duel; how he contrived to marry his own wife the second time and wrought vengeance on her in the ghost-peopled vault of the Romanis is told in the films.

The release date is Sept. 1, through the special feature department of the General Film Company.

Three Cosmofotofilm Offerings

Three New Offerings Each Four Reels in Length With Pleasing Choice of Atmosphere and Treatment.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

PERHAPS the most noteworthy of the three offerings is a four reel picture, "The Foreign Spies." It is a product of the Regent studio and is a detective story. The hero is one of a type—a Sherlock Holmes kind of man—and the quarry is a trio of foreign spies. The object of these three, one of whom is a beautiful woman, is the new design of a rapid fire gun which the British government has purchased from the inventor. The action is clearly portrayed and there are some brand new and exciting incidents such as one expects in this kind of tale. The acting is competent and altogether it makes a very interesting and serviceable offering.

Scene from "The Foreign Spies" (Cosmofotofilm).

The story opens in the home of a government official who has just been intrusted with the plans of the new gun. He has a pretty daughter, and there is a butler whom we soon catch at an attempt to steal the secret papers. The pivotal point of the early part of the action is the unwillingness of this butler to get and deliver the plans except for a larger sum than the conspirators will offer. He is too crafty to take them in and bargain with the plans in hand; for he knew that they would force him to give the plans up for nothing. They are, indeed, waiting for just that chance. The butler gets papers and hides them under a stone in the walk leading from the house and has the location indicated in shorthand; this is what he intends to sell. But there is a fight and the butler is killed. It is after this that the detective is placed on the job and ferrets out the band. They capture him at one turn, but he escapes from them and then he follows them down to a capture.

Another four reel offering is "What a Woman Will Do." This is also pleasingly acted and well staged and is also a product of the Regent studio. It is very melodramatic; but has plenty of that romantic quality that goes with many, especially the young among the spectators. The heroine is very attractive and the photography is clear and often beautiful. The picture has a very poor title we think; a title that is more on the "ten, twenty, thirty" scheme than the story, although the story is decidedly melodramatic. It is a pleasant offering and should furnish good entertainment.

The third offering is "The Bandit of Port Avon;" it was made in the Aquila studio and tells an Italian story. This is in its favor in many neighborhoods where there are many Italian patrons. The story interests, the scenes are often delightful, and the acting is acceptable. It tells one of those yarns somewhat strung out but, although never deeply dramatic, yet entertaining all through. It is also one of those tales that are plausible without being really convincing. The center of interest changes from a daughter of a marquis, who has made a secret marriage, to her child whom her husband has intrusted to a fisherman, and then to the fisherman's sister who comes to a tragic fate trying to escape the solicitations of her miserly landlord. Then the fisherman, who has been absent but returned and is accused wrongly of murder, takes the center. This is now given to the son of the miser, the real bandit of Avon, who kills the husband of the marquis's daughter. Then the child, who has grown up under the care of the fisherman, now a steamboat captain, becomes again the hero. But no matter who holds the attention, the spectator is fairly glad to give his attention all the way through.

Scene from "The Bandit of Port Avon" (Cosmofotofilm).

"SOME BOOK."

Columbia, Pa., August 5, 1914.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—Inclosed is your check for $3 for subscription of the World for the coming year, beginning September 1. It is indeed some book, and every exhibitor should have it; in fact, I do not see how any live one can get along without it. Wishing you success in the future as in the past, I remain,

Yours truly,

T. JOHNSON KRODEL,

Happy Hour Theater. Owner and Manager.

"Cricket on the Hearth"

A Two-Reel Biograph of Clear Delineation of Dickens' Charming Christmas Story.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Caleb Plummer.....B. Jack Drounier
Edward Plummer .....Alan Hale
Bertha Plummer .....Marie Newton
Dot .....Betty Gray
May Fielding .....Gretchen Hartman
John Peerybingle.....Robert Drouet
Tackleton .....William Russell
Mrs. Fielding .....A. C. Marston

OF ALL Christmas stories, "The Cricket on the Hearth" is very generally declared to be the best, but it is not so generally known that it is also a marked exception in its suitability for dramatization. It has the completeness, motive and structure in itself that go to make a play, especially one designed for screen visualization. The two distinct plots are artfully woven together just as in the photodrama of more than one reel.

Scene from "Cricket on the Hearth" (Biograph).

Something new to the photodrama lies in the human way Dickens had of treating his arch-villain, Tackleton, in "Cricket on the Hearth" is seemingly an arch-villain. It is he who steals the betrothed of Edward Plummer, when the latter is reported lost at sea, and it is he who poisons the mind of John Peerybingle in leading the honest husband to suspect his sweet little wife, when Edward Plummer returns in disguise on the eve of Tackleton's wedding. Out of sheer goodness of heart, Dickens brings about a last minute conversion in the character of Tackleton, causing the conspirator to convey his own wedding cake to the celebration of his rival's nuptials.

Scene from "Cricket on the Hearth" (Biograph).

The difference between us and the man Tackleton, in spite of the fact that he dated back a century, may be a certain sense of superiority that we feel over those who had the misfortune to live before we did, but our habit of telling stories has not greatly improved. Those of the screen seem too often molded in one eternal form, developed through a sense of incidents antagonistic to the course of true love with the inevitable embrace at the end, as soon as possible after the villain dies or is otherwise disposed of. Tackleton is punished, but he exhibits a philosophy worthy of screen imitation.

The visualization of such stories as "Cricket on the Hearth" during the present outburst of screenic art is worth while, particularly when as honestly done as the Biograph version. It is exquisite in setting and costume, and the types of importance are admirably chosen. The construction is almost exactly that of the author, and nothing has been spared in outlay to make an accurate presentation of the story. But it is cold. The optimistic warmth of Dickens is probably there, and it may be felt by the non-critical, but it failed to reach me. One fault is that of introducing a large number of characters at the outset; another is that of destroying suspense by beginning with scenes that should be held up to excite curiosity. Another is the lack of mental revelation by dissolving views, and the free use of subtitles from the text might have been very effective. The spirit of Dickens was very largely in the terms he employed.

The acting is well balanced, uniformly good and it does not over-reach the action. This and the beauty of well-selected backgrounds constitute the real charm of the play, and rank it far above the average. It is a clear-cut cameo as a picture and may take on greater warmth to the accompaniment of appropriate music.

PICTURE PLAYER HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

The zeal of the California Motion Picture Corporation's producing corps for realism would have undoubtedly proved fatal to Miss Beatriz Michelena, the celebrated prima donna whom it is featuring in the first few of its big productions, had it not been for the heroism of House Peters.

During the latter part of last week it was decided to devote a day in making a number of retakes for "Salomy Jane," the film dramatization of Bret Harte's story which is to be released shortly in six reels. One of the big scenes was the escape of the leading man from the vigilantes. During his spectacular flight the rowboat with which he put out down the river became swamped and he then went over the rapids clinging to a log.

Scene from "Salomy Jane" (California).

At just this point Miss Michelena, in the role of Salomy Jane, was supposed to swim out to mid stream and join him. Meantime the posse and horses were floundering up stream in the quicksand. Miss Michelena is an excellent swimmer and was making fine headway against the broadside of the swift surrent when she was taken with a sudden cramp. The rapids were already driving her under a steep embankment when House Peters reached her just in the nick of time and pulled her, very much exhausted but still safe, on to the log.

"In the Lions' Den"

This Three-Part Brilliantly Colored Eclectic Is an Animal Picture With Good Dramatic Interest.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN this fine production of the Pathe Berlin studio we see an excellent example of finished picture making. "In the Lions' Den" is not only elaborately staged, well acted and well photographed, but its brilliant, rich coloring gives it value above the ordinary as a desirable release.

It is a story in which, as the title indicates, there is a den of lions—good husky ones, none of those superannuated bags of bones which sometimes are thrust upon us as the fierce article. There are no revolting scenes, but there are some thrilling ones, as when the former lover of the actress, hanging to the chandelier, swings back and forth over the animals.

While of course, the suggestion in a sub-title would be artistically impossible, still it is to be regretted there were no means of indicating to the many who will view this subject that the enormous glass-roofed building shown in the first part is the Pathe studio in Berlin, now closed on account of the war. We get a fine view of it. So, too, do we see a part of its spacious interior. This is shown when Herbert, a young medico, has appealed to his friend the producer to permit him to meet Miss Aut Nissen, a young actress with whom he has fallen in love through watching her work on the screen—an occurrence well within the bounds of probability, as many of those who follow the telling of the story will appreciate. The director promptly brings forward the inevitable chair and the visitor watches the taking of an interesting scene and afterward is introduced to the actress.

Scene from "In the Lions' Den" (Eclectic).

The actress in leaving the studio drops her purse, which of course is picked up by Herbert. This most unfortuitous incident provides the young man with a sufficient and happy excuse for calling upon Aut. It is the beginning of a friendship which leads the actress to assist Herbert when he is obliged to aid his mother. The friendship ceases when Aut is too free with her endearments at a reception. Herbert breaks the engagement. Aut tells him in a strongly worded note that he will come to her one day which he will remember. That time comes when following his marriage to another Herbert responds to Aut's insistent notification to call on her. He is led into the lions' den by the woman he has scorned. He escapes injury only to die of shock. The repentant coquette then throws herself over the balcony among the lions. The animals are shown in a compact group. What is below them we cannot see. We may assume it is Aut.

The picture will interest all the way. Strengthening this undeniably are the richness of the settings and the splendid coloring. Miss Nissen—her name is given to the character—is extremely youthful, but she is experienced. She finely portrays the woman who is naturally a coquette, but who, through pride, is perverted from revealing to the man she has offended her deep love for him and to promise there will be no more "unregulated moments." Miss Nissen is finely supported.

"A Suspicious Wife"

Alternative Solution of Carman Murder Mystery Offered in Four Reels by 20th Century Feature Film Company.

Reviewed by Hanford C. Judson.

OF COURSE, the general tone of this picture is rich in what is often termed "yellow." Yet why not? one might quickly ask. Has not everyone read all the minute details of the Carman murder mystery? Have not most of us offered our own solution? If the 20th Century Film Company has a solution, is it anything out of the way? No, not at all. Yet there are some who deplore the newspapers as purveyors of the morbid details of murders. This picture is likely to "get" that kind even more than do the yellow newspapers. In certain quarters the yellow sensational papers are popular, in others not so much so. Every exhibitor knows what his patrons like and, if they want pictures like this, they'll like this one and be thankful for it.

The picture, "A Suspicious Wife," shows and explains the crime that recently was committed in Freeport, N. Y. There is nothing in it, except this clear parallel all through, as far as the facts are known, that refers to any specific living individual. As far as the spectator can tell, it is fiction solely. In the picture, which has some tremendously and at one or two points almost gruesomely realistic scenes, the wife of the doctor is shown to be innocent and the criminal is made out to be a trained nurse, a cocaine fiend, who passionately loves the doctor, her employer. The doctor does not love her and has ordered her to leave the house. The shooting takes place a few nights later when the dope fiend, thinking she sees the doctor's wife, fires through an open window and kills a woman she didn't know, who looks something like the doctor's wife.

Scene from "A Suspicious Wife" (20th Century).

Some one asked us if we thought that Dr. Carman had anything to do with the picture. We answered at once, no. There is more fiction in it than truth, and the position in the doctor's house as "trained" nurse of the slum girl who as the picture opens is resuscitated by him is not quite convincing. She had jumped off Brooklyn Bridge, but had been dragged out of the river.

It is a well written picture and has been acted effectively. The work of the camera man is not up to standard. The story is clear and will be followed and understood by even the simplest.

THE ADVANCEMENT OF THE ART.

Gainesville, Ga., August 6, 1914.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—We inclose check for $3 in payment of renewal of subscription from September 1, 1914, to August 31, 1915. We wish to express our hearty appreciation of your publication.

It is, in our opinion, the only trade paper which has aimed solely at the advancement of the art and the betterment of conditions in general. In these respects it has undoubtedly worked wonders. Very truly,

THE PIEDMONT AMUSEMENT CO.,
A. R. Nininger, General Manager.
Grand and Alamo Theaters.

Lubin's First Serial Noteworthy

"The Beloved Adventurer" Features Arthur V. Johnson and Lottie Briscoe—Story Published in Book Form.

"THE BELOVED ADVENTURER" is the general title under which the Lubin Company will release its first serial, consisting of fifteen single reel installments, the first part appearing on September 14, the remaining reels on Monday of each week for the fourteen weeks following.

Several factors appear which render the success of this series a certainty, the tremendous popularity of Arthur Johnson and Miss Lottie Briscoe being the first to suggest itself. These talented photoplayers will appear at their best, moreover, the parts which they play having been drawn with especial reference to their particular characteristics and capabilities. From a dramatic standpoint, the series will take high rank, it being unquestionably the best work so far turned out by Emmett Campbell Hall, who has established an unusual reputation as a photoplaywright, and who has, in this work, demonstrated not only creative ability, of exceptional vividness, but a thorough mastery of technique. No expense, time or pains have been spared in the production, all the enormous resources of the Lubin plants at Philadelphia and elsewhere being freely drawn upon.

Emmett Campbell Hall.

In the series there appear fifteen separate casts, yet so unique is the formation of the story as a whole and so distinctive the unit or single reel, that this large number of characters is not in the slightest degree confusing. Each of the fifteen parts of the series is a dramatic unit, telling a complete story, and yet the entire fifteen combine to make a single master-story of perfect continuity of consistent and unbroken theme, this being a feature destined to set a new standard for serial photoplays, the greatest objections to which have hitherto been that the incidents of the various parts were so interwoven as to make it impossible to grasp the thread of the story, if a single installment should be missed, or that the installments were really independent incidents with little or no real relation one to the other.

In "The Beloved Adventurer" there is a constant freshening of interest through the shifting of atmosphere and location, every variety of life, from aristocratic drawing rooms of London to the raw mining towns of the West being depicted. There is tragedy, humor, pathos, and romance with the scarlet thread of real adventure running through it all. In "Lord Cecil," the character created for portrayal by Mr. Johnson, and "Betty, the Girl From the West," played by Miss Briscoe, Mr. Hall has given us friends we will love and remember.

An entirely new idea, and one which it is believed will prove extremely popular, is the publication in book form of the complete story of "The Beloved Adventurer." Emmett Campbell Hall has written the novel as well as the photoplays. This book is a handsome volume of 160 pages, full cloth binding, with fifteen full-page illustrations consisting of portraits of the leading players appearing in the series and scenes from the plays. It will be supplied to exhibitors at a very low cost, and will be a source of direct profit as well as a means of increasing patronage by creating an interest in the series among many who will see the book but who might not have attended the theater, and will practically assure the continued attendance of all who see one installment—after reading the thrilling tale each person will desire to see the events described and portrayed upon the screen.

Bon Ray Film Plant

Large Structure at Woodside, N. Y., Adapted to Needs of Picture Trade and Now Ready for Business.

WITHIN the last week the Bon Ray Film Company announced the completion of its big plant at Woodside, L. I. The factory is now in operation and is daily turning out a product of which the makers are proud. The Bon Ray property comprises nearly twenty acres of land within a few minutes' walk of the Woodside Station, which in nine minutes out on the Long Island Railroad from the Pennsylvania Station at Thirty-third street and Seventh avenue, New York City. In addition to this the Jamaica Station surface cars, leaving from the New York side of the Queensboro Bridge, pass directly by the plant. The new Long Island elevated system and subways, when completed a few months hence, will have stations within five minutes' walk of the Bon Ray factory, the latter transportation bringing the plant within six minutes of Times square without change.

The Bon Ray Film Company took over an enormous brick and concrete building some months ago on Betts avenue and Queens Boulevard, and it has had a large force of men at work ever since converting the property into a motion picture manufactory. About $25,000 was spent in interior improvements and a great many more thousands have been spent in installing machinery of the most modern type. Most of this machinery has been built especially for the Bon Ray Company and constitutes a distinct departure from the usual motion picture producing mechanisms. A number of Duplex Step printers have been installed for old or defectively perforated film, but all ordinary film is put over the company's continuous printers, of which there are four. These four printers can be speeded up to a capacity of one hundred thousand feet an hour if necessary. The machines have been run at this speed and have turned out perfect results. The source of light used in the printing machines is absolutely new and unique and has never been utilized before in any motion picture plant, each machine having a specially constructed lamp giving three thousand candle power. All the printing machines are equipped with automatic negative racks, which enables one man to attend to the entire printing room. It is only necessary to reload the positive side of the machine from time to time. This obviates the necessity of rethreading the machine each time a negative passes through it. The films are dried by an original method which calls for the services of but one man and a boy to dry sixty thousand feet an hour. The title machine is also a new device, which by a simple adjustment will give a title of unlimited length.

View of Bon Ray Plant at Woodside, N. Y.

The Bon Ray plant is absolutely fireproof, equipped with every modern means of preventing and fighting fire. Its water supply is drawn from its own 300-foot well and is not only double-filtered, but between the filters passes through a bleaching process. Water at that particular point on Long Island is said to be the purest within fifty miles of New York City, but after it has passed through the various processes in the Bon Ray factory, it is absolutely free from all organic, metallic or other substances.

The plant represents a total investment of nearly $150,000. The president is F. E. Holliday and the treasurer is A. B. Roberts.

"Sheep's Clothing"

A Two-Reel Edison Melodrama of Strong Suspense and Artistic Presentation.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Thaddeus Craven.....Bigelow Cooper
Mrs. Thaddeus Craven.....Marjorie Ellison
Lydia, their daughter (aged 8)..Elsie Wartemburg
(aged 18)...Gertrude McCoy
"Southpaw" Paw Smith.....Joseph Girard
"Colonel" Gordon.....Harry Bates
Matron of Boarding School..Mrs. Wallace Erskine
Betty Merriles .....Mabel Dwight
Mrs. Beggarstaff.....Mrs. William Bechtel
Peter Trait .....Edward Earle
Addison Quoin, a detective.....Frank McGlynn

ADAPTED for screen purposes from a novel by Vance, appearing in the Associated Sunday Magazines, Inc., "Sheep's Clothing," is an artistic presentation and holds interest tight throughout in spite of an ending that is obvious and conventional. Interest is enlisted more by the plight of an innocent and attractive young girl, whose father is an arch-villain of the dress-suit variety, than in the outcome of his machinations. He is a fascinating villain as portrayed by Bigelow Cooper, and a human one in most respects. Having been saturated with underworld habits during most of his life, there is no conversion promised, nor is it needed. He is what he is to the last, with the redeeming traits of loyalty and love for his daughter.

Scene from "Sheep's Clothing" (Edison).

Craven, handsome gambler and crook, is unaffected by his wife's death and leaves his little daughter Lydia in charge of the matron of a boarding school. He returns to old haunts and strikes up an agreement to work the Atlantic steamers in conjunction with two professional thieves, "Colonel" Gordon and "Southpaw" Smith. They are deeply impressed by his superior skill, but become in the end distrustful and notify him that if he does not play square with them that he will receive three notices in the nature of warnings, the Jack of Diamonds, the Jack of Clubs, and Jack of Spades, the latter meaning that he will meet with sudden death. They are "bad guys to double-cross."

Scene from "Sheep's Clothing" (Edison).

Lydia grows up amid refined surroundings abroad, but becomes intolerant of restraint when the matron attempts to exercise selection in the matter of a husband for the beautiful young girl. She runs away and boards a steamer with the idea of joining her father in New York. She is given part of a double stateroom and makes the acquaintance of a wealthy society woman, Mrs. Beggarstaff, known as the "Dowager Dragon." Through this latter, Lydia meets the man of her natural choice and their courtship advances rapidly aboard ship.

She has chanced, however, to take passage on a liner which becomes the scene of operations for her father and the two crooks with whom he has been associated. He is about to attempt a grand coup on his own account. He has secured a paste imitation of a diamond and pearl necklace which has been purchased by an American lady of wealth and he manages to substitute the imitation for the genuine article. The latter he places in a case and intrusts to his daughter, with instructions to guard it carefully, as it contains documents of an important nature.

Craven's cronies discover that they are being "double-crossed" and rob Lydia, but they are forced by a secret service man to make restoration. All this action and reaction keeps the play going at a high melodramatic pace. Lydia discovers in the end that her father is responsible for the substitution and restores the jewels to their rightful owner. This last theft proves her father's undoing. He is not punished by the law, but he is relentlessly dogged by his pals and dies miserably. Lydia is restored to the life for which she was fitted, and all ends well.

The character of Craven is made fascinating by the personality of Bigelow Cooper, his mantle of theatricalism laid aside in this interpretation, his interesting individuality given more freedom than usual. He is strongest when he forgets that he is an actor and remembers that he is a man of striking characteristics. Miss McCoy adds natural charm and beauty of costume to her role and plays well up to her opportunities. The rest of the cast is more or less obscured by the centering of interest on two individuals, but their work is that of an intelligent and well-balanced company, one that seems to grow stronger by virtue of certain eliminations.

"Capt. Jack" For the Screen

Widely Known "Poet Scout" and Campaigner for Peace Under Contract With Group of Williamsport Business Men.

CAPT. JACK CRAWFORD, idol of the "common people" from coast to coast through his dissemination of the doctrine of peace in verse which has given him the name of the "Poet Scout," is soon to appear on the moving picture screen.

"Captain Jack" hails from the anthracite coal mining district of Pennsylvania and it was from this district that he enlisted as a soldier in the War of the Rebellion in 1861. In recent years, starting from his headquarters in his home district, he has been covering the lyceum field, appearing in a program made up for the most part of readings and poems of his own composition. Some days ago a group of well known Williamsport, Pa., business men, who had organized a company for the purpose, secured Captain Jack's signature to a contract permitting the use of his poems and readings on the photoplay screen and also providing that the author appear in the productions. Jacob A. Brown, C. Thomas McClaren, W. E. Villinger and J. Harry Rakestraw are the Williamsport men whose names appear in the contract of agreement between Captain Jack and the company.

Plans have already been made for the production of the first of the photoplay elaborations, which is to be entitled "The Poet Scout's Pledge," and will visualize a number of picturesque incidents in Captain Jack's life.

GRIFFIN TO STERLING.

Frank C. Griffin, for the past year or so one of the Lubin comedy directors, has left that connection to direct for Ford Sterling. He arrived from Jacksonville last week and departed for Los Angeles on Wednesday.

He had a narrow escape from drowning just before he came north. He was playing in a picture in which he is supposed to be fished out of the ocean by the anchor of the Clyde liner "Lenape." The cable slipped and the anchor fell, carrying him down with it, the fluke becoming entangled in his vest, but he managed to tear the buttons loose and make the surface just about in time.

"The Barefoot Boy"

A Three-Part Kalem Subject in Which Young Miss Courtot Does Work Beyond Her Years.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

THE Kalem Company will shortly release "The Barefoot Boy," a three-part drama, in which Miss Marguerite Courtot has the leading role; she is chiefly supported by Alice Hollister, Tom Moore and Robert Walter. Mrs. Owen Bronson is the author of the story. Robert G. Vignola produces it. Mr. Vignola has laid his scenes in the far South, and he has chosen for his exteriors backgrounds that charm. The plot is one of gradual and extended development, with situations of real strength in the concluding reel.

Miss Courtot has the part of Frances, a girl deserted in her babyhood by a mother who tires of her surroundings and returns to her home and the lively social circle of which it is a part. Her father goes into the woods and takes up a life of seclusion. Hating women, he raises his daughter as a boy. When the father is killed years later by a falling tree the child is taken to the city and adopted by a surveyor. She meets Rives, an artist for whom in the woods she had posed as a boy. Rives falls in love with the girl and proposes marriage, to the despair of the woman who had been his companion so many years. Rives does not know the miss is the daughter of his mistress, nor does the latter know the identity of Frances. The best of the story is in the scenes following the adoption of Frances by the surveyor and the gradual revelation of the truth.

Scene from "The Barefoot Boy" (Kalem).

Miss Courtot is charmingly naive in her characterization of the child of the woods and as the girl of the city. Alice Hollister is strong in her interpretation of Eleanor, the woman who makes her choice of a well-to-do man, a good man surely as women would describe him, and becomes discontented for no apparent sufficient reason. The action in which she participates covers a range of two decades. She is shown as a girl, as a discontented young married woman, and as the mature woman who clings to one man, all the stronger perhaps as she has no legal claim to his protection.

Tom Moore as the artist who in his struggling days is jilted by Eleanor gives a good performance. He faithfully portrays the man who yields to the importunities of a woman married to another, although his heart is not in the unsanctioned union; that he is capable of love is shown in his affection for the daughter of Eleanor. His death by his own hand when Frances spurns him is evidence of this. Robert Walker capably fills the role of the husband.

The picture is well produced, although so far as the story is concerned it may strain the credulity to understand how Frances in the garb of a boy could have misled all with whom she came in contact. The best scenes are of the artist's studio, where from a floor above Eleanor watches Rives making love to the girl for whom he has such an infatuation, not knowing that it is her own daughter; and the uncovering of the identity of Frances.

S. S. HUTCHINSON IN SWITZERLAND.

Word comes by cable via London that S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Co., accompanied by Mrs. Hutchinson and their two sons, Hobart and Winston, are in Switzerland. All avenues of egress excepting via Italy and the Mediterranean Sea are cut off, but no anxiety is experienced as the Swiss Government is well able to care for all tourists within its boundaries.

James B. Kelly

IT was with pleasure that we recently "met up" with James B. ("Smiling Jimmy") Kelly, who, when he is at home in Dallas, Texas, represents William Oldknow, the boss of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company. Mr. Kelly's jurisdiction covers, besides Dallas, Memphis, El Paso and San Antonio, the southwest portion of "Bill" Oldknow's bailiwick. Mr. Kelly has been on a trip to New York, which, of course as is said by every man who comes to this old town was for business purposes. As "Jimmie" gave utterance to this assurance he smiled. To prove that the smile was not in this instance entirely Pickwickian he said that there was going to be a big exposition in Dallas, and that he had come north to interest in the project the moving picture manufacturers. And then "Jimmy" smiled again. He has been successful in his mission.

James B. Kelly.

The exposition will be held simultaneously with the state fair in the last two weeks of October. The public will be expected to pay the freight, to the tune of 25 cents apiece. "Film men in the South are very enthusiastic over this big show," said Mr. Kelly; "they realize that it will be a big thing for the moving picture business in that section.

"How is business as I see it down South? Conditions right now are very good for us, speaking generally, and for the Consolidated particularly they are excellent. Of course, we do an immense supply business. I do not think the war will affect us to any great extent, unless it ties up cotton. In that event we might feel it. We have got some mighty fine houses in Texas. In Dallas alone we have five houses devoted exclusively to pictures. These structures represent an investment of over half a million dollars. In Houston there are four big theaters. In San Antonio there is a picture house costing $125,000. Fort Worth has three, each of which cost from sixty to seventy-five thousand dollars.

"The public down our way is getting crazier every day about pictures. So it naturally follows that in the exchange business film rentals are strong. When I look over things up North here I don't mind saying I am glad I am in the South. The boys certainly have a lot of competition here. Of course, a feature has got to be good to get by in my section. Southerners are skeptical; you have got to show them."

In Dallas the film men have organized the Motion Picture Trades Club. Every week the members hold a dinner, and every month there is a ladies' night, at which dancing follows the discussion of an elaborate menu. At these latter functions there is issued at times an eight-page program, containing among other things paragraphs in which are thinly veiled facetious allusions to the various members. Such organizations must do good and be good for the film business and the men who are engaged in it.

Mr. Kelly following his visit to New York went to Atlantic City for a bit of recreation before returning to his warmer home town. More power to him, "and the likes of him."

MURRAY LEAVES MORGAN LITHO.

Geo. R. Murray has severed his connection with the Morgan Lithograph Co. of Cleveland, O., with which he has been connected as special New York representative for the past two years. Mr. Murray has decided to seek new connections: whether he will return to the theatrical business in which he has been identified many years or take an active part in the lithograph or motion picture industry will shortly be determined, as he has several propositions now under consideration. In the meantime he is taking a well deserved rest at his country home, Port Washington, L. I.

Ad. Film Folks Meet To Discuss Organization

Enthusiastic Representatives of Specialized Branch of Motion Picture Industry Foregather at Brighton Beach

COMMITTEE ON PLANS IS APPOINTED

Problem of Providing Circulation for Industrial and Advertising Pictures Which Big Business Agencies Are Anxious to Use Is the Knotty One to Be Solved—Some of the Achievements Already at Hand Are of Interest.

REPRESENTATIVE men of the specialized branch of the motion picture industry which has to do with the manufacture and circulation of industrial and advertising films were present at an informal gathering at Reisenweber's Casino, Brighton Beach, Saturday afternoon, August 15, for the purpose of discussing ways and means of furthering the interests of their business through the organization of a co-operative association. While the only definite result accomplished was the appointment of a committee to formulate some comprehensive working plan, it may be said that the gathering was a particularly helpful one and one which is likely to be remembered as having given initial impetus to a movement of great importance in the motion picture industry.

The committee, which is to meet again in New York City Tuesday, August 25, is constituted as follows: Alfred Sommerville, of the Topical News Co., New York; J. L. Davis, of the Knickerbocker Film Co., New York; John H. Gill, of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Orange, N. J.; H. K. Elkins, of Pathe Freres, Jersey City; W. R. Rothacker, of the Industrial Motion Picture Co., of Chicago; Nelson M. McKernan, of the Colonial Film Co., Washington, D. C., and Arthur N. Smallwood, of the Smallwood Film Corporation, New York. H. K. Elkins, who had been called away from his home office in the East just before the time appointed for the meeting, was the only man appointed on the committee who was not in attendance on Saturday. In addition to the remaining members of the committee the following gentlemen participated in the conference at Brighton: Charles R. Fox, of the Smallwood Film Corporation; N. J. Balmer, of the Lifeograph Co., Chicago; R. W. Davis, of the Knickerbocker Film Co.; Nat Burgess, of the National Advertising Motion Picture Weekly, Inc., also representing the Dadmun Co., of Boston; J. M. Torr, of Moving Picture Publicity, New York City; G. T. Ames, of the International Educational League, New York City, and L. G. H. Smith, of the Society for Electrical Development.

A lot more men than those at present actively engaged in the production and circulation of industrial and advertising motion pictures hold the opinion that a great future for animated photography lies in its use as an advertising and sales agent. The little group at Brighton, individually and collectively, were enthusiasts in this doctrine and most of them were enthusiastic in the light of what they had already accomplished with pictures as a strictly commercial agency.

Circulation Plan Needed.

The thing that is holding up the industrial and advertising picture is the fact that up to the present time there has been no way devised to give the industrial and advertising agencies which are expected to buy them. Advertisers and advertising agencies have been convinced of the "punch" of motion pictures as a supplementary selling force, it is said, but they persistently decline to buy such pictures as suit their needs until they can be shown just how these pictures can be kept working on a screen before the eyes of the countless thousands of motion picture fans throughout the country and not allowed to repose peacefully in their cans to be taken out every now and then and exhibited as a mark of progression on the part of the advertiser.

The plan of the industrial and advertising picture men, although it has not yet been worked out, aims to provide this circulation which is essential to the complete success of the business.

Organization Plans Discussed.

The desirability of forming an association in the industrial and advertising field for the purpose of solving the various problems which are now presented was discussed at great length at the meeting at Brighton. There was not even a temporary organization of the men in attendance; as a consequence there is no record of any motions or resolutions to indicate that any progress toward the formation of the association was made. There was no enthusiastic agreement that the association would be of any great value in solving the big problem of circulation although it seems quite likely that an association will eventually be formed to further the interests of the various manufacturers.

Suggestion From Smallwood.

Arthur N. Smallwood, of the New York concern which bears his name, was sponsor for the association idea, in its broadest sense, proposed at the gathering. Mr. Smallwood outlined a plan which called for each individual company in the industrial and advertising fields securing contracts from the exhibitors in its district through which they would agree to show, for a specified consideration, such industrial and advertising motion pictures as were provided them. The "circulation" so secured, according to Mr. Smallwood's idea, was to be sold to the association of industrial and advertising picture manufacturers at a slight advance in price over what it had cost to secure, giving the individual manufacturer a small initial profit. This combined circulation—or such part of it as was desired from time to time—was to be salable to any member of the association upon application at a small advance over the cost price to the association, the profit to the association providing funds for general maintenance and further promotion of the association.

In the hands of the individual manufacturer, the combined circulation provided by the association was planned to be the selling argument which would induce advertisers and advertising agencies to authorize the manufacturer of industrial and advertising pictures and, moreover, pay the manufacturer for circulating them. Mr. Smallwood expressed the belief that if the plan which he outlined was followed it would soon be possible for any member of the association to guarantee any advertiser that motion pictures advertising his products could be exhibited in as many as 5,000 theaters throughout the country, reaching 30,000,000 people each week, figuring the average daily attendance at each of the theaters at 1,000.

This plan of exchanging circulation met with much favor on the part of the men assembled, but not all of them were confident of their ability to line up the theaters in their districts. A counter plan to place the exchange of circulation in the hands of a specially formed corporation allied with the organization was also presented—this one by Mr. Rothacker, of Chicago—and met with considerable favor.

Was an "Experience Meeting."

In many ways the conference at Brighton was an "experience meeting," a number of the conferees relating in intimate detail just what progress they had made in the business of pushing their special product of motion pictures for industrial and advertising purposes. That more of the actual experiences were not related and that there was, every now and then, an undercurrent which made itself felt and prevented dealings which were genuinely frank, is probably the reason that no definite movement toward the formation of an association, or a circulating corporation, was made.

Alfred Sommerville, of the Topical News Co., Inc., with a pad and pencil constantly in hand, made it quite evident that he was present at the meeting for the purpose of garnering all facts which might prove helpful to him in his business. In return moreover, his recital of just what his company had accomplished in the matter of securing circulation for industrial and advertising pictures must have proved quite helpful to the other members of the assemblage. The Topical News proposition is the one backed by the Duke of Manchester, Lord Winburne, Zimmerman, the Cincinnati capitalist, and others. The company's plan is to provide exhibitors throughout the country with a service of topical news events on reels totaling 1,000 feet in length. In consideration of the company's being allowed to include in this reel, on space not to exceed 200 feet, "a picture of advertising intent," the topical news service to the exhibitor is to be given free. Mr. Sommerville exhibited a sheaf of contracts which his company has already signed with some of the foremost exhibitors throughout the country and said that his concern was already in a position to guarantee an advertiser motion picture publicity in a chain of theaters which would thoroughly cover the South and would provide a very respectable showing in other sections of the country.

Mr. Burgess, of Boston, representing the National Advertising Motion Picture Weekly, Inc., told of the plan which his company had worked out. The latter part of this month Mr. Burgess' concern is to inaugurate an advertising service in picture theaters in New England. The Bowdoin Square in Boston and other houses of similar class are among the sixteen which are already signed up to use the N. A. M. P. W. service for a period of twenty-six consecutive weeks.

The pictures to be shown are reels which will run about five minutes and will be introduced as straight advertising. Each reel will exploit the wares of five or six advertisers, a minute's time being devoted to each subject. A close-up demonstration of the working of some particular brand of suspenders for which superiority is claimed, trade-marked characters in actions which tell a straight advertising story, etc., are some of the things which will be shown.

Not the least enjoyable thing about the gathering at Brighton was the luncheon which was served. It was between such toothsome tidbits as soft shelled crabs on toast and tender young broilers served a la Creole that the discussion went on.

Much Litigation.

Motion Picture Patents Company Sues on Edison Re-issue Patents—Some Copyright Cases.

THE legal campaign instituted by the Motion Picture Patents Company to protect its rights under the Edison re-issue patents has extended to the retailer. Maurice G. and Gustav C. Gennert, trading as G. Gennert, photographic supplies, at 24 East Thirteenth street, are named as defendants in an action on file in the United States District Court to secure injunctive relief and an accounting of profits.

John Robert Taylor, counsel for the plaintiff, has procured an order from Judge Grubb directing the defendants to show cause why a temporary injunction should not be issued restraining them from selling cameras which are alleged to embody claims described in the patents in question.

Accompanying the application were affidavits submitted by agents of the plaintiff reciting that they had visited the store operated by the defendants and inspected the machines offered for sale and found them to be similar to the cameras embodying the Edison inventions. A catalogue prepared by the defendants containing elaborate cuts and descriptions of their cameras was presented with the papers.

The Motion Picture Patents Company also filed suits against the Broadway Picture Producing Company, Leon Wagner, proprietor of the Sterling Camera & Film Company; the Photo-Cines Company, the Progressive Motion Picture Corporation, the All-Star Feature Corporation, the Gene Gauntier Feature Players, Inc., the Mittenthal Film Company and Whyte's Motion Picture Enterprises, Inc., in the United States District Court during the past week, alleging that the several defendants have infringed on the claims described in the Edison re-issue patents which were recently sustaind by Judge Mayer as valid. An accounting of the profits which it is alleged has accrued to the various defendants and injunctive relief is sought in each case.

Judge Grubb in the United States District Court has approved a decree enjoining the Gaumont Company from using a motion picture camera embodying the claims contained in the Edison patents, but the operation of the injunction was suspended upon the filing of a $6,000 bond to enable the defendant to dispose of the cameras it has on hand.

Copyright Cases.

As a result of a stipulation entered into by counsel for the Vitagraph Company and Jerome K. Jerome, author of "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," the deposition of the latter will be taken by John L. Griffiths, the American Consul at London.

The author has brought an action in the United States District Court through his attorneys, Ernst & Cane, to recover damages against the film company on the ground that it produced the story in photo play form without his knowledge or consent, depriving him of royalties which would otherwise have accrued to him, he alleges.

The trial of the suit has been stayed for a period of 60 days to enable the opposing attorneys to submit a list of interrogatories and cross-interrogatories for Mr. Jerome to answer.

The Broadway Picture Producing Company and the Eagle Feature Film Company, which have been manufacturing and leasing a photo play entitled "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," in an answer to an infringement suit instituted against the film companies by Klaw & Erlanger, Charles Scribner's Sons and John Fox, Jr., deny that the play was presented in the movies without acquiring full rights.

The defendants allege that Mr. Fox, the author of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," assigned all of his rights in the publication or dramatization of the work to Charles Scribner's Sons, the publishers of the novel. Subsequently it is admitted the publishers granted Klaw & Erlanger the rights to dramatize the story, but it is claimed by the film companies that this grant applied only to the presentation of the work on the stage and not on the screen.

Last April the film companies assert in the answer that they negotiated with Frank H. Rice, as agent of the publishers, with a view to obtaining the rights to present the work in the movies. As the result of the negotiations the defendants assert the publisher's agent executed an assignment transferring those rights to the film companies.

Abraham Polacoff, who operates the Quality Feature Film Company at 145 West Forty-fifth street, is named as the defendant in an action on file in the United States District Court involving the rights to the photo play entitled "The Golden Beetles," which was produced by the Societa Italiana Cines, Ltd., of Rome.

George Kleine, of Chicago, who is the plaintiff in the action, alleges that he procured the American rights to the play from the Italian company, but notwithstanding his rights, he asserts, the defendant leased films of the production for exhibition in motion picture theaters without his knowledge or consent. The value of the American rights exceeds $10,000, the plaintiff asserts, and he asks that the defendant be compelled to render an accounting and that he be enjoined from continuing the acts complained of.

Leslie Wins Again

Supreme Court Decides All Stamp Cases in His Favor. Decision of Importance to Motion Picture Industry.

Arthur Leslie has just won another decisive victory in the Supreme Court, which settles his right to use the portraits of motion picture actors and actresses on portrait stamps. Two weeks ago he won a case in which Lillian Walker was mentioned. The decision, in Leslie's favor, denying motions for injunctions sought for, was most sweeping in character, practically declaring that no cause for action was shown by the Pakas Company, the plaintiff in the case.

James H. Westcott, counsel for the defendant, who makes a specialty of motion picture cases, in speaking of the suit, said it was "one of great importance to every motion picture actor and actress and to every motion picture producing company."

Motion picture folk generally are much interested in the outcome of the case for personal reasons, as it establishes the fact that they have no legal right to give exclusive rights to any one to a photograph that has already appeared for publicity purposes. There also arose the question as to whether the individual actor or actress has any personal rights in a picture issued by the company with which they hold an engagement. All the portraits Leslie used were from photographs that had appeared in his newspaper syndicate page and thus came within the first category.

The actresses whose portraits attempt was made to prevent Leslie from using were Lottie Briscoe, Edith Storey, Dorothy Kelly, Leah Baird and Ormi Hawley. They all made affidavits in his favor and against Manfred Pakas, of the Pakas Company, who sued on the strength of alleged contracts he claimed to have made with them to control the reproduction of their portraits on stamps. The affiants said they never intended to give Pakas any exclusive rights, that they had received no money or other consideration from him and that therefore any such contracts, if they existed, were null and void; and, further, that they had no objection whatever to the use by Leslie of their portraits on his syndicate page or on stamps. Their affidavits were indicative also of indignation at Pakas for making them unwilling parties to his lawsuit.

SAWYER TO RELEASE A COMEDY.

Lorimer Johnston, chief director of the Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company, has been known in the moving picture industry as a very versatile director. His comedies made for the American Company have been equally successful with his dramatic productions. The second picture to be released by the Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company which will be handled through Sawyer, Inc., is entitled "Thirty Minutes of Melodrama." In this picture many well-known theatrical managers and stars are humorously caricatured and the result should be a big scream. The picture will be in two reels. The scenario is a burlesque on a barnstorming troup, playing tank towns, and the situations that occur and the complications that arise when the troup try to secure money enough to pay their hotel bills are very funny. Although the story is a farce comedy it does not contain anything to suggest slapstick methods, all the comedy effects being secured legitimately. This picture will be ready for exhibition in New York the latter part of August.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

ON the European continent the picture industry is at a complete standstill. All factories are closed and picture theaters as well. In Great Britain and Ireland business is carried on almost as usual. The London representatives of American manufacturers have made no complaints about business to their home offices thus far, as nearly as can be ascertained. There is a fear, however, of a slump in the near future.

George Kleine, the heaviest importer of films in America, was seen the other day and he viewed conditions calmly. What with the features and negatives he has on hand, together with the films now being made, or to be made, for him, he will have sufficient to meet the demands of his business for the next four or five months.

Many men who entered the manufacturing field recently are being caught hard by the new conditions created by the war. They are frantically seeking a market for the few films already made or partly made, for money is tight and loans are hard to arrange.

The fall outlook looks very promising for Chicago exhibitors. Few can grumble over the business done during the summer, as it has been the most moderate season we have had for years. Indeed, Chicago has been a great summer resort, where cool breezes and fair skies have been the rule.

Chicago's Ordinance Governing Moving Pictures.

Chicago has gained much publicity by reason of the rigorous censorship of moving pictures indulged in by its police department. The code of 1911 has been amplified by a recent ordinance governing the exhibiting of moving pictures adjudged fit for viewing by adults only, the age limit being fixed at 21 years.

This office has been so often requested to mail a copy of the ordinance that the code of 1911 governing moving pictures and the adult ordinance passed recently are given herewith in full:

1625. PERMIT REQUIRED TO EXHIBIT MOVING PICTURES. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to show or exhibit in a public place or in a place where the public is admitted anywhere in the city of Chicago any picture or series of pictures of the classes or kinds commonly shown in mutoscopes, kinetoscopes, cinematographs, and such pictures or series of pictures as are commonly shown or exhibited in so-called penny arcades, and in all other automatic or moving picture devices, whether an admission fee is charged or not, without first having secured a permit therefor from the general superintendent of police of the city of Chicago.

1626. APPLICATION FOR PERMIT. Before any such permit is granted, an application in writing shall be made therefor, and the plates, films, rolls or other like apparatus by or from which such picture or series of pictures are shown or produced, or the picture or series of pictures itself as shown or exhibited, shall be shown to the general superintendent of police, who shall inspect, or cause to be inspected, such plates, films, rolls or apparatus or such picture or series of pictures and within three days after such inspection he shall either grant or deny the permit. In case a permit is granted it shall be in writing and in such form as the general superintendent of police may prescribe.

1626a. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to show or exhibit in any public place of amusement in the city of Chicago any immoral or obscene picture or pictures, or any picture of a riot or other disorderly or unlawful scene, or any picture which has a tendency to disturb the public peace, or to take a picture of or photograph any riotous, disorderly or other unlawful scene for the purpose of showing or exhibiting the same in any such place of amusement.

1627. IMMORAL PICTURES—PERMIT NOT TO BE GRANTED. If a picture or series of pictures for the showing or exhibition of which an application for a permit is made, is immoral or obscene, or portrays any riotous, disorderly or other unlawful scene, or has a tendency to disturb the public peace, it shall be the duty of the general superintendent of police to refuse such permit; otherwise it shall be his duty to grant such permit.

1628. NO TRANSFER OF OBJECTIONABLE FILMS—CONFISCATION PENALTY. In case a permit shall be refused for any such moving picture plates, films, rolls or other like articles or apparatus from which a series of pictures for public exhibition can be produced, it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to lease or transfer the same to any exhibitor of moving pictures or otherwise put same into circulation for purposes of exhibition within the city.

In every case where such objectionable moving picture plates, films, rolls or other like articles or apparatus from which a series of pictures for public exhibition can be produced shall be put into circulation contrary to the provisions of this section the same shall be confiscated, and in addition thereto the person, firm or corporation so leasing, transferring or putting the same into circulation shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars for each offense.

1629. FEE FOR PERMIT. The permit herein provided for shall be obtained for each and every picture or series of pictures exhibited, and shall be required in addition to any license or other imposition now required by law or ordinance.

The fee for each of such permits shall be fifty cents and shall be paid to the City Collector before same shall be issued.

1630. NOTICE OF TRANSFER OR LEASE DELIVERY OF PERMIT. When a permit to show a picture or series is once granted to an exhibitor, the picture or series of pictures may be shown by any other exhibitor; provided, that the written permit is actually delivered to such other exhibitor and that a written notice of the transfer or lease to such other exhibitor is first duly mailed by the transferee or lessee to the general superintendent of police. Any number of transfers or leases of the same picture or series of pictures may be made provided always that the permit is actually delivered to the transferee or lessee and that such written notice be first mailed to the general superintendent of police. Said written notice shall contain the name and a brief description of the picture or series of pictures, the number of the permit and the location of the building or place where the transferee or lessee proposes to exhibit such picture or series of pictures. The exhibition by any transferee or lessee of any permitted picture or series of pictures, without first mailing such notice, shall be considered a violation of this article, and a separate offense shall be regarded as having been committed for each day's exhibition by a transferee or lessee of each picture or series of pictures, without the mailing of such notice.

1631. POSTING OF PERMIT. The written permit herein provided for shall be posted at or near the entrance of the theater, hall, room or place where any permitted picture or series of pictures is being exhibited, at such a place and in such a position that it may easily and readily be read by any person entering such theater, hall, room or place at any time when any such permitted picture or series of pictures is being exhibited whether in the daytime or in the nighttime. The exhibition of any such permitted picture or series of pictures without the posting of the permit as herein provided shall be considered a violation of this section, and a separate and distinct offense shall be regarded as having been committed for each day's exhibition of any such permitted picture or series of pictures without the posting of the permit as herein provided.

1632. PENALTY. Anyone violating any of the provisions of this article shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each offense. A separate and distinct offense shall be regarded as having been committed for each day's exhibition of each picture or series of pictures without a permit.

ADULT ORDINANCE OF 1914. SECTION 1. That in all cases where a permit for the exhibition of a picture or series of pictures has been refused under the provision of Section 1627 of The Chicago Code of 1911, as amended, because the same tends towards creating a harmful impression on the minds of children where such tendency as to the minds of adults would not exist if exhibited only to persons of mature age, the General Superintendent of Police may grant a special permit limiting the exhibition of such picture or series of pictures to persons over the age of twenty-one years: provided, such picture or pictures are not of such character as to tend to create contempt or hatred for any class of law abiding citizens.

SECTION 2. Whenever a special permit has been issued for the exhibition of a picture or series of pictures limited to persons of twenty-one years or over, as provided for in Section 1 hereof, it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation exhibiting same to allow any persons under the age of twenty-one years to enter the place where same is being exhibited or to remain in said place while any part of said picture or series of pictures is being shown. Any person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this section shall be fined not less than ten ($10) dollars nor more than twenty-five ($25) dollars for each offense, and the admission of each person under twenty-one years of age, or permission to remain of such person under twenty-one years of age, shall constitute a distinct and separate offense; and in addition thereto the Mayor may, in his discretion, revoke the license of any person, firm or corporation conducting a theater where the provisions of this section are violated

Chicago Film Brevities.

J. D. Frazier, owner of the Lowell Theater, Lowell, Ariz., wrote as follows to the Selig Polyscope Co. recently: "Gentlemen: My patrons, in the majority, accuse me of only charging half enough for 'The Spoilers,' and I charged 50 cents for regular admission and 75 cents for loge seats. It was a most pleasing success, and greatly appreciated by all who saw it. The Lowell seats 375 people in all and the house was packed for four shows, for the two afternoons and two evenings. I have been in the game for about 12 years, but 'The Spoilers' is the first moving picture I ever saw." Mr. Frazier lives in a small town of 2,500 inhabitants. He paid $100 per day for "The Spoilers," but he managed to pull out with good profit to his credit. How did he do it? He went around and sold tickets by subscription. Before he had paid rental for the films, he had already in hand considerably more than the rental called for. His patrons believed in him and he did not abuse their confidence. There is nothing of the "Cheap John" about Mr. Frazier.

* * *

F. L. Frazer, owner of the Palace Theater, Mendota, Ill., paid a visit to the World office last week. The Palace seats 310 people, and admissions of 5 and 10 cents are charged for programs of General Film Company's and Famous Players' features. Mr. Frazer reported good business.

* * *

E. Andrew Barrymore, Western manager of the Morning Telegraph, has announced that he will move his office from Room 201, Schiller Bldg., to Room 403 in the same building, on Sept. 1.

* * *

The Essanay News, issued weekly by Essanay's publicity department, now presents quite an attractive appearance, being typographically neat. It also contains interesting news paragraphs, which treat of the weekly doings of the Essanay forces and of the success of the output.

* * *

"Cabiria" has reduced its prices at the Illinois Theater.

It now costs only a quarter to see the matinee, and 25 and 50 cents at nights.

* * *

Statistics gathered by the Selig Polyscope Co. from reports of social workers and others, show that out of a total of several thousand school children interviewed, 90 per cent. of them visited moving picture theaters about five times a month. Comedies were in demand by a great majority of the children. Selig animal pictures were next in favor. The investigation also showed that historical subjects and travelogues were in high favor among the older pupils.

* * *

E. H. Calvert, the producer of "One Wonderful Night," is a graduate of West Point. He distinguished himself in the Spanish-American war, in Cuba, and at its close received his commission of captain. Mr. Calvert left the army for the stage, and later entered the moving picture field. In addition to his success as a directing producer, Mr. Calvert is an actor of sterling merit.

* * *

"My Friend from India," an Edison three-part feature adapted from H. A. DuSouchet's comedy, is now being presented with great success at Orchestra Hall, sharing honors with "The Wolf."

* * *

A recent cablegram to this city from the well-known traveler and lecturer, E. M. Newman, announces that when hostilities began in Germany, Mr. Newman was in Berlin with a complete photographic outfit. This fact brought him pretty near to arrest. Mr. Newman arrived safely in London with some hundreds of negatives taken during his recent trip through Egypt, the Holy Land, and along the Riviera, for use in his travel talks this winter. The pictures and story of his hasty departure from Berlin will be a feature of the coming season's travel talks.

* * *

The Quebec government has appointed Pierre Gravel, of Montreal, as inspector of the moving picture theaters for that province. His duties enjoin him to visit the various picture theaters and keep strict watch that no uncensored pictures are being exhibited.

* * *

The police closed a moving picture theater recently in San Francisco and arrested the owner on a charge of inciting to riot, because the pictures shown were represented as being scenes of the present war between Germany and France. Hotel managers throughout the city have ordered their orchestras to play no national or patriotic airs, in order to prevent clashes among their guests. The playing of national airs of the countries at present involved in strife, especially when partisanship is at high fever, should be carefully supervised in picture theaters.

* * *

John Pribyl, personal representative of Wm. N. Selig, who has been undergoing treatment at the Michael Reese Hospital for several weeks, returned to his home in Winetka, Sunday, Aug. 16. His many friends throughout the country and in the trade will be much pleased to hear of his recovery.

GEORGE AMES NOW HANDLING EDUCATIONAL FILM.

George T. Ames, formerly of the General Film Company and recently assistant manager of the Mutual Film Exchange, is leaving his post at the Mutual to take charge of the newest and most important organization yet formed for the booking and exploitation of educational film. The name of this company is the International Education League, of which the Duke of Manchester is the president. Mr. Ames is to be the assistant general manager of this concern as well as general manager of a sub-coroporation known as the Church and School Service Bureau, Dr. Wm. Carter, president.

Mr. Ames is one of the most widely and favorably known men in the film exchange business in New York, and the fact that he has elected to enter the field of educational film renting is significant as showing the serious attention that even the most experienced and conservative of the "regular" film showmen are devoting to this new branch of the business. Mr. Ames states that it is the intention of the new corporation eventually to make educational and historical film as well as to market it, and that within a few months the concern will have its own companies in the field all over the world. Mr. Ames' new address is 18 East 41st street. He assumed control of his new office Monday, August 3.

STAMP OF NATIONAL CENSORSHIP.

The campaign against all forms of legalized censorship, which is being inaugurated by the National Board of Censorship under the direction and management of J. W. Binder is receiving the hearty support of all interested in the industry. During the past week, the board has received assurances of support in its campaign from men who make raw stock, musical instruments, projection machines and screens, as well as from the largest manufacturers and exhibitors of motion pictures in the country. One of the largest theater managers' associations in the country, speaking through its president, has not only indorsed the movement, but has also promised financial support.

The new insignia by which the Board will register its approval of films is being very favorably received by all legitimate manufacturers. It will be used on their film approved by the Board from now on. The insignia is copyrighted and the signature of Chairman Frederic C. Howe, which appears on it, will make the unauthorized use of it a forgery punishable by law. This is a reproduction of the new seal:

OFFICIAL STAMP

One of the features of the Board's campaign of education will be an advertising campaign to tell the general public just what this seal stands for when it appears on a picture. This will be done through the magazines and newspapers as well as through the trade press. In the advertisements the names of the concerns who habitually bring all of their pictures before the Board for criticism will be printed so that the public at large will be enabled to know who it is that makes high grade pictures. How these pictures are passed upon by the National Board, what the standards of criticism are that are applied to them, and who the persons are that constitute the Board will also be brought out in the advertisements.

BLANCHE CHAPMAN JOINS CALIFORNIA CORPORATION.

Blanche Chapman, who created the role of Mrs. Wiggs for the legitimate stage and, according to the estimate of the Liebler Co., interpreted the part with greater success than any other actress, arrived recently in San Francisco for a special engagement with the California Motion Picture Corporation.

This concern is now filming "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and Mrs. Chapman is playing the title role. The fact that the producing company should have brought one of Mrs. Chapman's reputations away across the continent for one production is indicative of the character of feature photoplay that the firm is striving for.

It is understood that Alice Hegan Rice, author of the novel, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," and co-author of the play, was instrumental in securing Mrs. Chapman's services for the California company. Mrs. Chapman had already signed a contract for the coming theatrical season and was to open with an engagement in Winnipeg on the first of August. The motion picture people, however, bought her release for a period of sufficient length to complete their production. Mrs. Chapman herself welcomed the picture engagement since she is very partial to the part of Mrs. Wiggs.

The cast for "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" appears to be one of the best balanced ever assembled for motion pictures. Miss Beatriz Michelena is being starred as Lovey Mary, House Peters is playing Mr. Bob and Andrew Robson is essaying the part of Mr. Wiggs.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by CLARENCE E. SINN

E. RUSSELL SANBORN of Boston, Mass., promised us something about organ music for the pictures. Mr. Sanborn is an organist of exceptional ability and I am sure anything he may have to offer upon this subject will be interesting to the fraternity of moving picture organists. Here is his first letter:

"A word from this quarter regarding the musical setting for pictures. Realizing the education of public thought is a very serious matter, and knowing what an influence the daily press has in shaping public affairs, is it not easy to conceive how deeply the lesson told by the picture on the screen imbeds itself into ones thought? Therefore, if each one connected with the important work of producing the films—from the conception of the story itself to the presentation of the same upon the screen, would realize his individual responsibility in the shaping of the public thought, what a change would ensue. The moving pictures could advance the world's condition many a 'league in a night,' so to speak; but here we come to a point of divergence—the most contested one perhaps in the continual discussion. The cry is, 'the people do not want the best; they want the tragic, the sensational. We want to keep the people coming. We do not care for art.'

E. Russell Sanborn.

"I will give an illustration showing the lack of responsibility in the musical end. A musician employed in one of the largest and best known houses in this country recently said to me, 'Oh, it's easy; just improvise and play most anything you want to; quick in the hurried scenes, slow in the sad ones, etc.' A few months ago I heard him accompanying a picture, and will speak of a place which called for the national anthem. He was improvising for a hurried scene, and although he brought the national anthem in at very nearly the proper place,—played it in the same hurried sense and rhythm. The whole thing fell flat from almost every standpoint. Had he been a man of high ideals, what could he not have made out of that one point? The speed with which he took it was beyond all reason. It would seem, had he been a musician trained in the higher branches of the art, and had seriously studied the rudiments of music,—that the feeling of the audience could have been completely changed. Play it, not as a scherzo or rondo, but in a thoroughly dignified manner, approaching it if you can, by a contrasting tempo and rhythm, thus making it stand out in bold relief, giving it itself rightful prominence.

"My work is that of a concert organist (having given recitals from coast to coast), and in all probability I have the largest and most modern pipe-organ in any private studio in America. Previous to last September I had never accompanied a picture. My first experience was with the great photodrama 'Les Miserables.' It was given here in one of the largest church auditoriums in the country. When one of the owners came to me, I was reluctant to accept the offer for fear it would hurt my musical reputation. However, upon his urgent request, I agreed to play and went with the determination to put the music for this picture upon a high musical level. I continued throughout its long engagement here, and 'credit to whom credit is due,' I feel that Mr. Gordan of the Gordan theaters gave me my first valuable points in regard to pictures.

"After 'Les Miserables' came 'David Copperfield' for an extended engagement. The sub-titles and synopsis of the suggested music were given me. I selected my own music, however, which seemed better suited for the scenes and it was frequently said how beautifully it fitted the picture.

"Then came 'Quo Vadis?' and the music which had been arranged for this was sent me. This I laid aside, again making my own selections. My request for additional instruments was granted, having with the organ, violin, cello and harp. The best of music was given which was appreciated by crowds of people. Picture men who heard it said it was without doubt the finest music ever put to pictures. Music which the majority of people know naturally appeals to them more than that which they do not know. Consequently I feel that the bringing in of some old fashioned tunes of the 'long ago,' some present day good ballads, some familiar opera airs or favorite hymns in their natural places, appeals to all classes of people and brings out the picture more strongly than a lot of cheap music having no association or value. I firmly believe good music judiciously selected and properly rendered will appeal to the masses and make the picture more effective than a lot of faked stuff which is served up to them.

"Yours for an ideal picture setting
"E. RUSSELL SANBORN, Boston, Mass."

Perhaps Mr. Sanborn can be induced in the near future to give us some hints as to how he goes about "laying out" his musical settings. We all understand the difficulty of explaining exactly why certain scenes suggest the musical themes they do when we see the picture for the first time, but may be if the writer will tell us something in detail of what he has used in some picture it would be of great value to others who play for the picture in the future. These big and really good features will be shown for a long time to come, and anything tending to help in their showing will be duly appreciated by our constituency.

An Orchestral Setting.

Roy J. Bassett, Hartford, Con., favors us with the following:

"We played 'Antony and Cleopatra' (George Kleine's master picture), which was a great feature, and I enclose the music I used for its accompaniment. This picture had a piano score, but I did not use it as we have an orchestra and it would have taken too long to arrange the music for us. The enclosed program brings out the picture very well. This was given at the Star Theater; at present we are at the Crown. Had a ten-piece orchestra all winter, but for the summer season have four pieces. When I get time I will write an article on how I play pictures. Your music section of the Moving Picture World is very interesting."

(Thanks for your appreciation of this department, and hope you will soon find time to send us that article.—Ed.)

"Antony and Cleopatra."

Introduction: First part of "Light Cavalry Overture" (Suppe—published by C. Fischer) until "Act I. Part I." "Fresh from Victory at Phillipi."

(2) Selection "La Tosca" (Puccini-Ricordi). N. B.— This selection will bring you to the third reel (Part III of Act I).

(Act I, Part III) "In Rome One Year Later."

(3) "Cheops." Egyptian Intermezzo (Cheops-Cobb-Jacobs) until entrance of Cleopatra.

(4) "Egyptia" (Alman—Rossiter) until Flight of Charmian.

(5) Dramatic music; after flight, go back to "Egyptia" until: "Oh! Mighty Queen!"

(6) "Zallah" (Loraine—Feist).

Act II, Part I: "Unconscious of Danger, Antony, etc."

(7) "Amina" (Linke—Stern) until: "Charmian Hastens to Cleopatra."

(8) Dramatic music until cue: "Stand Back!"

(9) "Ballet Egyptian No. 1 segue to No. 2 same suite" (Luigina—C. Fischer) until end of act.

Act II, Part I.

(10) "War March of the Priests" (Mendelssohn) until: "Departure for Rome."

(11) "Shubert's March Militaire" until end of Act II.

Act III, Part I.

(12) "Cleopatra Suite No. 1" (Cleopatra Suite of Four—Oshmler: published by C. Fischer) until "Landing by Night."

(13) "Attaque des Ulans" (Bohm—Fischer) until: "Tragic Awakening."

(14) "Ballet Egyptian" (No. 3 of the suite) segue to:

(15) Dramatic music until: "Antony—All Is Lost."

(16) "No. 2 of Cleopatra Suite" until: "Thou Art the Last of the Race."

(17) "Solvig's Song" (Peer Gynt suite No. III. Greig) until: "Brooding Lends Wings, etc."

(18) "March Pontificale" (Gounod) until end of Part II

Act III, Part III.

(19) "Evening Star" (Wagner) until Cleopatra is discovered dead.

(20) No. IV of Cleopatra suite until "Triumphal Return of Octavius."

(21) "Marche Russe" (Ganne—C. Fischer) until end.

THE EUROPEAN WAR.

By the Rev. E. Boudinot Stockton, S. T. B.

As the present war in Europe is not only one of the most important events of modern history, but also an engrossing timely topic, the following catalog of "educationals" released during the past two years is recommended not only to the attention of educators but also to the up-to-date exhibitor, who wishes to give his patrons what they want when they want it. As heretofore, the synopses (marked "S") and the comments on the film (marked "C") published in the Moving Picture World are indicated by giving the volume number before and the page number after a colon.

The Contending Armies.

French Army.

BATHING CAVALRY HORSES. Pathe 20 Ap 1912. S. 12:162; C. 12:426.

THE FRENCH ARMY IN WAR MANOEUVRES. Pathe 12 Ja 1912. n.s. or c.p.

FRENCH ALPINE MANOEUVRES. Gaumont 4 F 1913. No S.; C. 15:466. An unusual and exceptional picture of how troops and guns are transported over mountain passes.

FRENCH ARMY MANOEUVRES. Pathe 7 F 1913. S. 15:498; C. 15:780. A very interesting picture of large masses of troops engaged in mimic warfare, showing how temporary telegraph lines are laid, pontoon bridges built and cavalry transported across rivers.

EXERCISES OF THE 23D FRENCH DRAGOONS. Pathe 21 Je 1913. No S.; C. 17:427.

A SCHOOL OF GYMNASTICS. Pathe 18 Ap 1913; S. 16:200; No C. Military gymnastics of the French army.

FRENCH ARTILLERY MANOEUVRES. Pathe 11 Mr 1913. S. 15:1020; C. 15:1220.

THE FRENCH ARMY IN ACTION. Eclipse 24 July 1912. S. 13:268; C. 13:545. An excellent picture of the French troops in action, defending a bridge, bringing forward artillery, etc.

Belgian Army.

CAVALRY TEST MARCHES IN BELGIUM. Pathe 15 June 1912. n.s. or c.p.

British Army.

ENGLAND'S KING AT LIVERPOOL. Kalem 28n 1913. 518:896; C. Good view of British army at work and play.

German Army.

GERMAN CAVALRY MANOEUVRES. Eclipse 30 Ap 1913. S. 16:408; No C. The Crown Prince of Germany commanding his world famous regiment in manoeuvres.

Russian Army.

COSSACKS IN THE URAL COUNTRY. Mutual Educational 20 Mr 1913. S. 15:1134. No C. Also Eclair Educational Catalog No. 93 (123 Oural).

In addition to the above and excellent release illustration the use of aeroplanes in warfare is

ARMY AVIATION PRACTICE. Lubin 19 F 1912. S. 11:710; C. 11:780. Manoeuvres of the U. S. army aviation corps at Governor's Island, N. Y.

The Contending Navies.

FRENCH NAVAL MANOEUVRES. Pathe 27 D 1912. S. 14:1224; No C. An excellent picture of severe tests of French naval efficiency, taken during a storm in the English Channel.

FRENCH FLEET MANOEUVRES. Gaumont 4 F 1913. No S.; C. 15:574. The French Mediterranean battle fleet.

EXHIBITION DRILL ON H.M.S. "EXCELLENT." Eclipse 24 Ap 1912. S. 12:256; C. 12:527. An excellent picture illustrating the handling of the big guns on a battleship.

In addition to the above the following releases will illustrate other naval practices and manoeuvres.

TORPEDO PRACTICE—U. S. NAVY. Vitagraph 28 F 1912. No S.; C. 11:961.

TEN DAYS WITH A FLEET OF U. S. BATTLESHIPS. Edison 11 Je 1912. S. 12:950; C. 12:1127. An excellent picture of routine life at sea.

TARGET PRACTISE OF THE ATLANTIC FLEET, U. S. N. Edison 19 Je 1912. S. 12:1060; C. 13:42. A remarkable picture of the firing of big guns and the effects of the missiles.

BATTLE PRACTICE ON A CRUISER. Gaumont 19 N 1912. n.s. or c.p.

THE NEWEST METHOD OF COALING BATTLESHIPS AT SEA. Edison 26 F 1913. S. 15:920; C. 15:1103. Showing how battleships replenish their coal supply from colliers.

THE SWEDISH SUBMARINE MANOEUVRES. Pathe 4 F 1913. S

Joseph A. Golden

HERE is a good likeness of the new president and treasurer of the Crystal Film Company, Joseph A. Golden. It is only recently that Mr. Golden purchased the interest of and succeeded in office Mr. Erb, who has severed connections with the company in which he has been so prominently connected and in the organization of which he took so prominent a part. The Crystal Company is well known not only for being the producer of Crystal films and special features, but also as having exceptional facilities at its big studio and laboratory at 430 Claremont Parkway for commercial work, the quality of which has been of the highest. Mr. Golden will be aided by Ben Goetz, formerly studio manager who now becomes general manager of the company. Mr. Goetz thoroughly understands the film business and will be a most efficient right-hand man.

Joseph A. Golden.

Mr. Golden is one of the veterans of the motion picture business. His first work for the screen was as a producer with the Biograph in the early days of that pioneer company. For the Crystal Company Mr. Golden has written and produced all of the subjects issued on its program. He has besides directed the production of "The Resurrection," in which Blanche Walsh was starred; "Monte Cristo," with James O'Neill, the old-time stage star, and "Oliver Twist," the medium in which Nat Goodwin made his bow to picture followers. We feel sure that Mr. Golden will enjoy the success in his new sphere to which his technical training, natural ability and personal qualifications entitle him.

THE EXHIBITORS' FRIEND.

Columbus, Miss., July 29, 1914.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—Please find enclosed check for $3.00 as payment for one year's subscription to the Exhibitors' Friend. I had just as soon be without my films as to miss an issue of the Moving Picture World. We are operating the Princess Theater and Princess Airdome. Business is especially good at the Airdome; the program consists of four reels of General Film pictures and an eight-piece orchestra. The matinee business is poor at the theater at present on account of the extremely warm weather.

With sincerest best wishes for the Moving Picture World, I remain,

Sincerely,

E. KUYKENDALL.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

THE local exhibitors who are sacrificing personal interests in order to devote the time that should be given them to bringing about an amalgamated organization of all exhibitors in this state were keenly disappointed over the past failure of some of the up-state people to put in appearance at the first meeting called to perfect arrangements. The representation at the meeting was very gratifying, however, and the prospects for accomplishing the work the committee was appointed for are very bright. One of the most active exhibitors in the movement said he believed everything will be satisfactorily adjusted within a few weeks. Time is required for all movements of such a character, he said, some people require more time than others to get into their minds the significance and ultimate results of amalgamations, especially when they involve surrender of some charters and adoption of others. "We hope to have have all concerned fully convinced within a short time that if the exhibitors of this country are to be protected they must amalgamate," said the exhibitor. "Experiences of the past year demonstrated conclusively that we have lost many advantages through being divided."

* * *

At the national convention in which amalgamation received its first boost the exhibitors declared official censorship as an unwarranted and illegal measure. Many of the delegates returned to their homes assuming that this proclamation was a knock-out blow to the repugnant regulations. Some of them have been heard declaring that the sentiment of the exhibitors would sway public sentiment against official censorship and they will not be victimized by it in the future. All this is but a dream. All the resolutions the Dayton convention adopted, combined with a unanimous public sentiment, must fail in effect if not followed by action. So long as the various ordinances and state laws remain as they are the motion picture people will continue to be victimized. Two things must be done. One of them is to have a decision of the United States Court on the constitutionality of official censorship. The motion picture people have a right to know why county and state courts bar them from that part of the Constitution of the United States which protects all others against the abridging of free speech and freedom of the press. For several years both manufacturers and exhibitors have contended that it is unconstitutional to muzzle the screen and allow newspapers, magazines and books almost unlimited license in the publication of pictures. The question has never been adequately tested. It should be and all the exhibitors should get together and assume their share of the work with the Ohio people in having it done. The Ohio courts practically only touched upon the subject and left the final adjudication to the highest court of appeal. Should that court sustain the decision now in force, then the amalgamated exhibitors should resort to their political power and have the unjust laws revoked. They are in a position to go before the people and show that every official censorship board that has acted thus far has been glaringly capricious and the only actual results attained have been the creation of soft political berths at the expense of the taxpayers.

* * *

An amalgamated body of exhibitors will also be able to conduct a country-wide campaign to show the people that there is a safe and sane system of censorship which every city and town in the country can adopt with satisfaction to all and injustice and expense to none. Every legitimate exhibitor in Greater New York is in hearty accord with the system Commissioner Bell has in operation in conjunction with the National Board of Censors, which has been doing admirable work. But the honor and pap seekers in other places do not want such a system and befog the people with arguments that the motion picture people do not want any kind of censorship.

* * *

Another advantage to be secured by the exhibitors through amalgamation is an opportunity to get in closer touch with the manufacturers of films and thus bring about a better understanding between each other. Now that the fall and winter seasons are drawing close many exhibitors are heard declaring what they are going to do with certain exchanges and certain makes of film. They place emphasis on their value of certain productions and tell their fellow exhibitors what they will pay and will not pay for certain reels. It is noticeable, however, that such statements do not come from exhibitors who are willing to pay a price that is commensurate with quality. Affairs of this kind keeps alive a feeling of distrust on the part of exhibitors against manufacturers and could be wiped out if an opportunity were given for exhibitors and manufacturers to understand conditions on both sides. This understanding can never be reached by individuals. A standard value cannot be placed on films by individual exhibitors. It is not uncommon for some exhibitors to say they would rather have a certain one-reel subject at a price asked for some feature subject, and others would not take the single reel at any price.

* * *

Speaking on this subject a manufacturer said: "Every legitimate manufacturer in the business would welcome an amalgamation of the exhibitors and a spirit of co-operation with us. We are continually striving to keep in touch with the pulse of the public, but dealing individually with exhibitors we cannot do so. We seek their suggestions, but receive replies so varied in character that our time in trying to strike a fair average is almost wasted. We must contend with the differences of opinions on the part of audiences as well as managers. We long ago gave up trying to satisfy everybody and are content if we reach a majority of the people. If the exhibitors were co-operating with each other we feel that conferences at their meetings, or with their committees, would bring about the results we have been trying to accomplish by individual solicitations. Most exhibitors fail to realize that the motion pictures are on the same plane as stage productions. Scores of plays that meet with success in New York fail on the road and the results are frequently reversed when plays come into this city. You cannot expect more from the pictures. In fact not as much. A bad play in action and scenic effects is frequently saved by the lines of the players. A bad picture cannot be rescued by lines. But in proportion to the number of productions the successes on the screen far exceed those on the stage. For this we seldom receive credit. There is another thing some exhibitors do not understand and that is the excess of labor and expense required for some subjects over others, when companies are making varied productions. Many will not believe that features are often produced at a loss, owing to the demands of the people along the lines of elevating the standard of photoplays. Hundreds of exhibitors who have never seen studio operations fail to realize that a fortune is expended on some productions before even the negative is finished. I understand, and I believe it to be true, that over $60,000 has been expended on a photoplay by one concern and not a film has yet been placed on the market. I told an exhibitor one day that our largest profit was derived from single and double reels, and he laughed. He told me I was trying to make him believe that our features were the result of a philanthropic spirit. He either refused or failed to understand that we are obliged to make features to keep up with the procession. The features have brought to the box offices people we could not reach with small subjects. They are responsible for the large houses that are now operating and for the number that will be opened during the coming season."

* * *

"Let me tell you this," continued the manufacturer, "large picture houses are coming fast and the greater they increase in number the sooner the smaller theaters will be able to get features nearer to their prices. As our sales increase the more certain we will be of realizing profit on the original investment and we will be able to meet the smaller exhibitors on terms. Of course, the latter complain that the large houses get the cream, but what else can be expected? A ten-cent house cannot compete with the houses getting higher prices and which can afford to pay for early runs. But the small houses will eventually profit by the advertising the subjects that are successful and people who cannot afford to pay the higher prices will go to see them. I do not agree with exhibitors who claim that the large houses will eventually drive the small ones out of business. The poor will always be with us and so will the cheaper grade of picture houses, but they will be reduced in number. It is all a matter of location. The cheaper houses located in places where people can afford to pay higher prices for a better grade of show will naturally suffer. All these problems could be solved with reason if there was a disposition to let the exhibitor and manufacturer get together and discuss them, and the theory that the latter is unfavorable to the small exhibitor would be dissipated. If, at the present time, the manufacturers were to depend solely on the large houses many of them would have to go out of business, and if the small houses were to be solely depended upon features would be greatly reduced in number."

ANNOUNCE NEW RELEASES.

Sawyer, Inc., have been silently gathering new pictures and producing companies into its fold as the following list of new releases will show: The Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company's initial release, "The Envoy Extraordinary of the World's War" This is in five parts and was written and produced by Lorimer Johnston. "Doc," the first release of the Bosburn Photo Play Company, was written by Eleanor Gates. The picture is in four parts; "Her Brother's Disgrace," a three reel production made by the Canadian Bioscope Company, and one of the best yet turned out by this company; "The Zingara," a thrilling three reel subject of life among a band of traveling gypsies; "The Tyranny of the Mad Czar," is the production of the Coigne Motion Picture Company and is a big spectacular production.

H. B. WARNER IN "THE LOST PARADISE."

The first release of the already celebrated Paramount Pictures Corporation scheduled for August 31 is a notable Famous Players' production, H. B. Warner in the world-famous drama of capital and labor, "The Lost Paradise," by Ludwig Fulda and H. C. De Mille, collaborator in the famous Belasco-De Mille successes.

The subject marks the first appearance in motion pictures of the eminent dramatic star, who recently won such a distinguished triumph in "Alias Jimmy Valentine."

The production was exhibited at the Strand Theater during the week of the Exhibitors' Exposition.

"The Lost Paradise" portrays with vivid realism the gigantic struggle between the two master forces of modern industry. H. B. Warner assumes the role of the man who strives to reconcile the contending elements and who is willing to sacrifice name and fame for the woman he loves.

By reason of its strong labor note, the production is a powerful Labor Day feature.

OHIO CENSOR LAW IN FULL FORCE SEPT. 1.

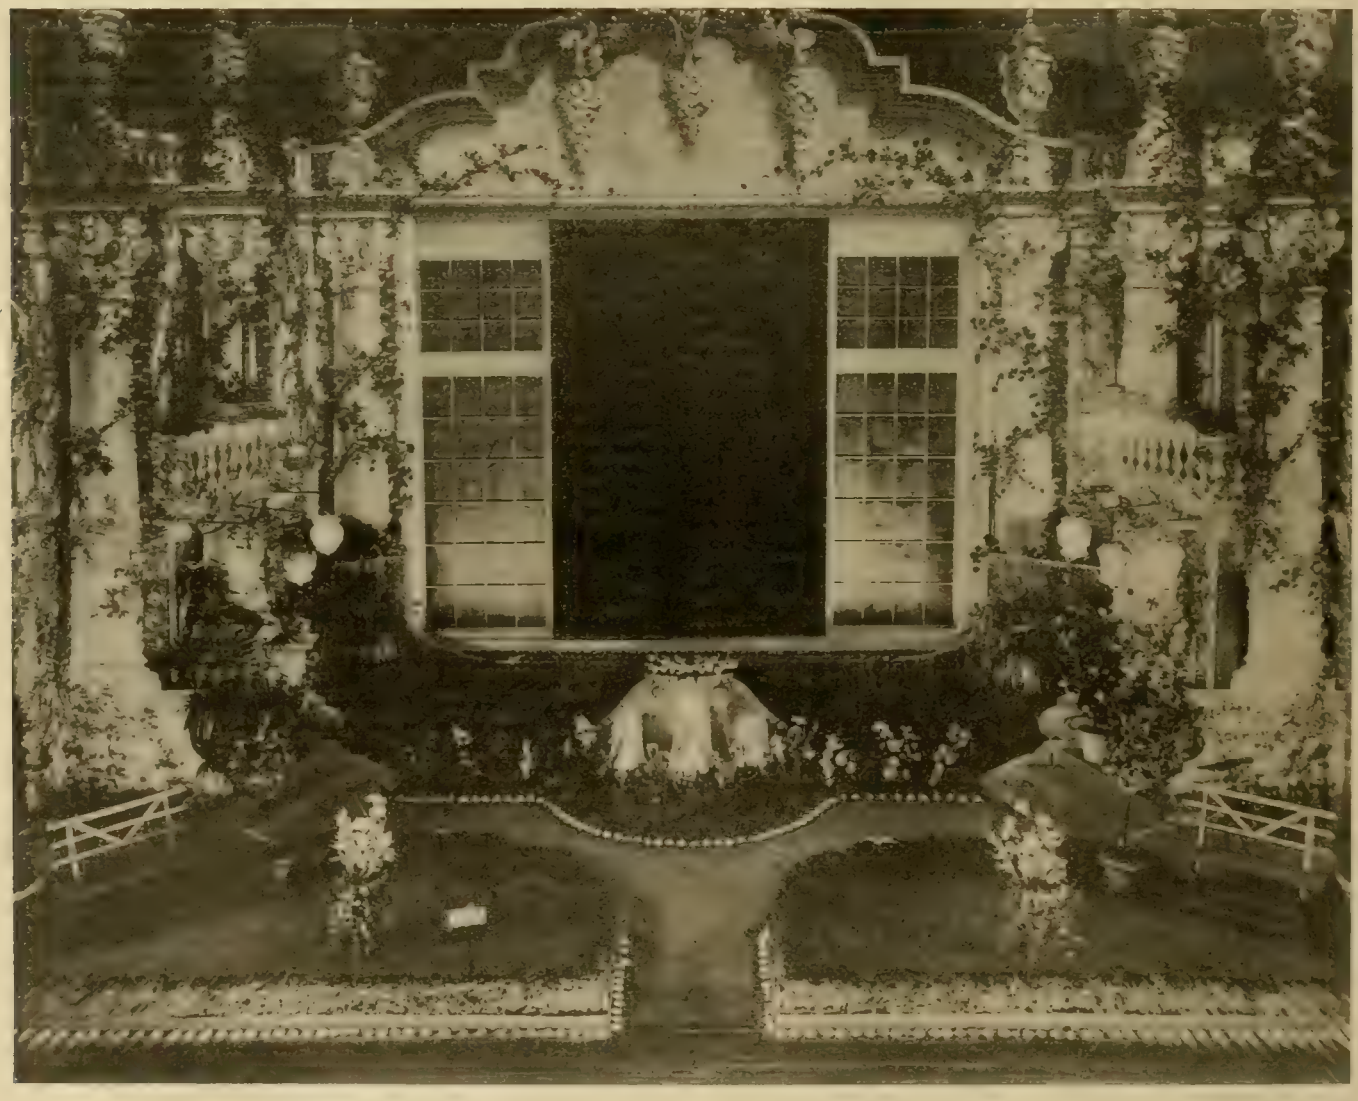
H. E. Vestal, chairman of the Ohio Board of Censors, states that by August 18, 1914, all leaders for all films that have been censored up to that date will have been shipped, and further advises that it is the sense of the Censor Board and The Industrial Commission of Ohio that on and after September 1, 1914, no films should be shown in the State of Ohio unless they be shown in full compliance with every requirement of the censor law. In other words, the Commission feels that all causes for delay being past, there can exist no reason whatever why full enforcement of the law shall not be insisted upon.

FINE STAGE SET AT THE STRAND, NEWARK.

Jules Gerstle, assistant manager of the Strand Theater, Market street, Newark, N. J., sends in the accompanying photograph of the unusually artistic and splendid stage setting at that theater, which setting was designed by himself. By this it will be seen that the Strand is another of those progressive theaters that are rapidly coming to the front as the higher exponents of the motion picture art, and whose managers form growing aristocracy in the exhibiting ranks.

The stage at the Strand Theater has been metamorphosed into a Japanese fairy garden. Japanese flowers spread their fragrance through the house, Japanese birds and butterflies flutter about, their gay plumage vying in iridescence with the sparkling colors of the electric fountain. Sand-covered walks lead from the beautiful French chateau's porticoes at each side of the stage to the fountain, which sends forth its scented streams high up into the air in the background, behind which is seen the charming facade of the central wall of the chateau.

To add to the realism of the park-like effect, a sign, "Keep off the grass," has been put up.



Beautiful Stage Setting of the Strand Moving Picture Theatre, Newark, N. J.

Canada Enters the Film Field

Dominion General Film Corporation, Ltd., of Montreal, to Manufacture Motion Pictures in Canada—Policy Outlined.

WHILE the United States holds—and probably always will hold—the supreme position in the film industry, Canada is making a strong bid for showing her natural resources and majestic scenery to the world in purely Canadian motion pictures.

Careful organization and the injection of American enterprise have created the Dominion General Film Corporation, Limited, with headquarters in Montreal, a large and well-equipped studio at Longueuil and a vast tract of land in the Laurentian Mountains, where the outdoor scenes will be produced.

View of Dominion Studio.

The company has been organized with an authorized capitalization of $300,000, made up of $100,000 preferred stock and $200,000 common stock, with the preferred stock carrying a bonus of 40 per cent. in common stock.

So great has been the interest manifested by Canadians in the broad operations planned by this company that financial as well as moral support has been drawn from all classes of society in Canada, including the dignitaries of the church, statesmen and the leading business men throughout the Dominion.

Canada and Canadian history lend themselves so thoroughly to moving picture productions that it needed only the master hand of a clever producer to insure the success of this undertaking. The company has already arranged for the services of a well-informed man in this line.

The directors are men of wide experience and keen business acumen—men who are familiar with public tastes and requirements in both the United States and Canada. They realize that the former will naturally be a big market for Canadian films, and for that reason Rudolph Bergman, treasurer of the National Society of Music, of New York, and Leslie Harris, secretary of the same organization, are members of the Board of Directors.

M. Marcelot and J. W. Peachy, of Montreal, both of whom are intimately familiar with the film industry, largely represent the Canadian interests of the company.

Already arrangements have been made for a very wide distribution of the films throughout this continent and Europe, for the field of historic interest is so wide and dramatic that it naturally lends itself to pictorial treatment at the hands of a successful producer and a highly skilled company of artists.

Not merely will the productions be devoted to stirring and epoch-making scenes from Canadian history, but three-reel photoplays of the most striking character will form a very large part of the program that has already been mapped out as part of the company's policy.

So much depends upon the plays and the players that a carefully organized committee of selection has been brought together, while the artists will be drawn from the principal film companies of the world—and very largely from the United States.

Active operations are already in progress for staging these Canadian feature plays and pageants, and in a very short time important announcements will be made regarding their casts and other matters of interest to the moving picture world.

FAVORITE PLAYERS SIGNS EDNA MAYO.

EDNA MAYO, a dazzling beauty of the blonde type, has signed a contract to play leads for the Favorite Players Film Company at their studio in California.

After carefully considering several hundred applicants, the directors of the Favorite Players Film Company decided that Miss Mayo's beauty and vivaciousness, combined with a natural talent for acting, would make her a valuable support to Carlyle Blackwell.

Edna Mayo.

This is not Miss Mayo's first venture in motion pictures, she having played leads with the Pathe Freres Company. She has also had considerable experience on the stage, having played important roles in the New York productions of "Help Wanted," "Excuse Me" and "Madame X."

The first release of the Favorite Players will be a photo dramatization of Charles Neville Buck's famous story, "The Key to Yesterday," with Carlyle Blackwell, who will be featured in their production of popular novels and stage successes.

Interior View of Studio Sun Room, Dominion General Film Co.

Doings at Los Angeles

THESE are indeed busy days for western film makers. Nearly every studio around here is working at high speed, and but few people are out of work. Of course there has been a spell of fog and high clouds, but most of the companies have arranged their work so as to make it correspond to the varying weather conditions. The industry from the manufacturer's point of view is as it should be, and no war scares have as yet struck the coast colony.

Many new theaters are being built in different parts of the city, and several are being erected in a number of out-of-town places. California made films are particularly popular with the people who live here, and many watch the bulletins to see when their favorites appear and when certain brands of films are to be shown. One theater in a small town near here makes a specialty of heralding the local films, and many people patronize the theater on that account.

A trip to Long Beach, which means the Balboa, disclosed several changes in the personnel of that company. Arthur A. Lotto, who assisted H. M. Horkheimer as manager, is no longer associated with the company, and Clifford Howard, who attended to the scenario end of the business, also has severed his connection with the firm. William Wolbert is starting to direct some comedies. William D. Taylor is as busy a director as there is, being engaged at present on a whopper of a five-reel story which is a feature production. He was measuring a deep set when spoken to and only had time to tell a few details of the play. Mr. Horkheimer is overjoyed at finding so good a director in "Cap" (Alvarez), and has highly commended the young producer by saying that his work is the best that has been turned out of the studio, and that's going some.

H. Pathe Lehrman, who came back to the coast a short while ago, has decided to remain here some time and make this part of the sphere his home. In making his residence here he has decided that single blessedness is no way to live and so the engagement has been announced. Miss Selby is the young lady who is soon to be Mrs. Lehrman. One of the monster Fiat cars has been bought by the former Keystone and Sterling director and he intends taking some long trips while honeymooning. He goes to the altar with our best wishes.

Jessie J. Robbins and his electric system of lighting has proved that time is worth money, for the company is always busy, even if the fog does keep out the sun. The young maker of Robbins' films has had quite a row to hoe, but now things are running smoothly and everything points to a good season. He is working industriously on "The Escape," which is not a travesty on the other escape. It is a good, wholesome rube comedy with plenty of action. "When a Woman Loves," made by this company and shown here, has made quite an impression on local picture fans.

"Broken Nose Bailey" is a detective drama being put on at the Mutual by Jack Adolfi. Bailey has a fractured nose which disfigures him for life and in his work he needs disguises, so a little putty on the olfactory member does wonders, and the film shows the wonders.

Bertram Bracken, whose middle name ought to be Balboa, has gone on a vacation to the mountains to be away from the comedy grind at the Long Beach studios. Henry King, the handsome leading man, has taken the reins and will produce in the place of Bracken, having as his leading lady Miss Nell Franzen, who last week joined the Balboa company. William D. Taylor has been made an official of the Photoplayers.

A young woman's struggle to keep a valuable mine, her woes and work, and the outcome of the efforts of a band of crooks, is told in "The High Grader," a drama directed by Sheriff Mackley at the Mutual studios. The studio is a busy place with its army of directors and actors.

The first private running of the Oz company's first production, "The Patchwork Girl of Oz," was made this week in the gymnasium of the Los Angeles Athletic Club. There were many hundred members present who saw the beautiful film, and if their opinions coincide with those of the exhibitors this film company has certainly struck no slippery rocks in the river of prosperity, for their films are good. They have started on the second story, and the third is being prepared for the director, Joseph F. Macdonald. L. Frank Baum, author of the fairy myths, has returned from a vacation spent at Del Mar. The studio is a-humming with many workers and everything is lively.

Down at the Balboa they are building something all the time. Only recently a few feet were added to the stage and an addition put up on the property room. Now they have completed a large addition to the carpenter shop and furniture storage room. Mr. Horkheimer announced that the negative output has been increased from six thousand to nine thousand feet, and in September it will go clear up to twelve thousand, which is quite an output.

The Kinney company, which runs the resort city of Venice, near here, has bought a camera and plan to make pictures of all local interest events. They shot about 500 feet of the annual Catholic picnic on the 8th and then did some quick developing and exhibited the film in their theatre the following week.

Many new members are being added to the ranks of the Photoplay Authors' League, and the organization seems to be stepping in the right direction, for many writers are asking about the league and "The Script."

CLARKE IRVINE.

BRITISH NOTES.

THE trumpet blast of war has echoed its first notes over Europe and although yet only a few days advanced there is scarcely any department of commerce upon the whole Continent that is not beginning to feel the pinch of the international conflict. So far as it is possible to judge the moving picture industry in Great Britain is in no immediate danger of paralysis, although there is good reason to suppose that a graver state of affairs exists across the Channel. In the first place imports and exports of stock between the principal Continental centers have been abruptly suspended, even from such countries that are not actually involved in the struggle. Secondly, not only in France, but in this country, too, a vast number of producing and renting houses have suffered depletion of their staffs through the call to the colors. Fortunately some of the French firms and most of the American have laid in a stock of films to maintain the normal supply until well into the Autumn, and only today the Flying A Co. announce their intention of marketing all the releases on their calendar without alteration until September.

* * *

The Eastman Kodak Co. has a manufacturing plant near London and it has already assured manufacturers that there will be no shortage of stock, so should the worst come to the worst we shall be able to make out with reissues.

* * *

Quite conceivably an occurrence like this stimulates public appetite for any pictures in the slightest degree military. This has not been satiated by the illustrated press, for I have not yet seen a single war photograph, but co-incidentally three or four feature subjects, all military or naval dramas, are down for release next week. One in particular has been taken full advantage of by exhibitors and is a lengthy naval drama entitled "England's Menace," by the London Film Co. This and another entitled "The Curse of War" constitute the principal attraction at a vast number of exhibitions in England next week, many prearranged programmes being suspended. Shortly we may expect a rush of reissues of all the army and navy pictures of the past year or two. Even now old topical films of bygone army and navy maneuvers are given pride of place at some of our leading London theaters.

* * *

A large number of American people are stranded in London and Paris, owing to the curtailed steamship service, and I hear that one or two men engaged in the moving picture line in America are among the unfortunates. Mr. Bland, who portrayed in such a reverential manner Christ in Kalem's great religious picture, sailed yesterday for New York.

* * *

Twelve moving picture operators are reported to be already upon the Franco-German frontier, but I very much doubt whether any films worth screening will be taken. Special restrictions and censorship accompanies the proclamation of martial law, and should views of the actual fighting be secured it is doubtful whether they would be allowed to be exhibited. Belgium has announced the prohibition of such pictures.

* * *

The Blackpool Corporation, not satisfied with circulating extra good scenic films of their seaside city among exhibitors, made a new experiment the other day with moving pictures for advertising purposes. Two noted comedians were commissioned to enact a local comedy to be taken by the Kineto Co. Beginning at the station they performed a diversity of mirth-provoking activities and kept them up at all of the sights and places of amusement they visited. This idea is one that might be copied by enterprising exhibitors.

* * *

The Hepworth Co. is now exceptionally busy preparing an important film version of "Barnaby Rudge," and early reports indicate that the result will be one of the finest Dickens pictures yet released.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

We Think He Can.

A CORRESPONDENT who writes that he has been in business since March and who thinks this paper largely responsible for his success, wants to branch out. In a nearby town is a house built but not opened because the original backer's money gave out. There are two going houses, one using Mutual and the other Universal service, four reels and two vaudeville acts, reels from 60 to 100 days old. Five and ten cents. Population, 6,000. He wants to know if he can get into the town with a thirty-day licensed service, no vaudeville, and good music.

We certainly think that he can if he goes about it right. In the first place there are a lot of people who do not like the sort of vaudeville that comes to a small town. Not all the population of a town that size care for a comedy act made up of profanity, obscenity and the American flag, the good old standbys of the incompetent. They do not want their children to see that sort of thing. The kiddies simply will have pictures. Make a good big stand on the fact that vaudeville is not used, and why. Show how it is possible to put the salaries of cheap acts into a better run of films and better music. Don't say that the Star and the Gem run rotten vaudeville. Don't know that there is a Star and a Gem, or whatever the houses may be. Don't say they run vaudeville. Tell why you don't. Hit right out from the shoulder.

Then take up the question of service. Do not decry the other services. Simply brag up your own. Tell why it is that a thirty day service is apt to be better than one twice that old.

Show how and why it is that better music makes a film seem better. Talk a little of the care and attention the big city managers give this feature. Intimate that you are going to run your house big city style because you think the people of Dashville as just as capable of appreciating something good as the New Yorkers or the Chicagoans or whatever is the nearest big town. Artfully suggest that the only reason they didn't know this before is that they never did hear pictures properly played. Then labor with your players. Work them a week before the house opens to show them how. If you have one of those reels where everyone gets killed don't let your orchestra play "Everybody's doing it," even if it does sound appropriate. Don't let them play the so-called "popular" songs at all except in farces. Get them the lighter classics. The Mendelssohn Spring Song is every bit as tuneful as "I used to do the tango but now I hesitate." Advertise good music and then be prepared to deliver the goods.

Work up interest in all these points before you open, and do not open until you are absolutely certain that things are right. The other day we dropped into a new shop in a town of 15,000. It was a nice little house with an alert and attentive manager, but the projection was so poor that we quit on the second reel. The man knew how, but he was out of focus and half the time did not seem to be pulling enough juice. The house had a black eye right at the start. Run your house all by yourself for a whole day before you open. You'll lose a day's receipts, but you'll be sure it is right.

Talk modestly and positively about what you are going to do, but don't know (officially) that there is another house in the same State. Do that and with a proper service and a properly run house you are all right.

Uses Criticisms.

The Best theater, Hillsboro, Texas, uses in its program criticisms taken from this paper, with this explanation:

> For the benefit of our patrons we give below the criticisms of the photoplays constituting our week's program. These are taken from the "Moving Picture World," the highest authority upon such subjects. The World is the most authentic critic of the trade and does not fear to condemn a picture that is not up to the standard. As an instance of this we find that it has scant praise for one of our Wednesday's films and in line with our policy to show only the best we have booked a special to take the place of that film.

Kind to the Dying.

There is only one thing we do not like about G. S. Clarke, of German, Texas. He does not run a typewriting machine. But we think enough of his letter to copy it off, having some respect for the printer, who is paid by the job and who can set type faster from even the sort of typewriting we are able to do. Mr. Clarke sends in a piece of advertising and says it is partly borrowed from this department, but completed by himself. He says in part:

> I am one of the small town exhibitors who get suspected of being in the John D. Rockefeller class. The doctor (and he is a good doctor) butted in and after he had satisfied the public's curiosity to see the new place, I personally put one of these in each house in town and also gave one to the older boys and the single men. Then my medical friend stood in front of his place and watched them come to me and wondered why they did not come to his show. But the best part of it is that my house was crowded nightly and mostly with money, comparatively few of the recipients using the pass. Now the doctor (he ran six reels a night up to the night he had one paid patron for each reel of film) is offering to sell on the purchaser's terms and is willing to confine himself to the practice of medicine. Notice that I did not, in my advertising, say anything about his profession. Just blew my own horn.

There is a lot in the last few words. A physician sees that Mr. Clarke is doing business. He starts a show. For a time people want to see what the new house is like. They cannot be kept away. Mr. Clarke knows that. He does not buck against the impenetrable. But comes the time when the novelty wears off, and he shoots this circular into every home and makes certain himself that it gets there:

> DON'T BE LONESOME.
>
> Follow the crowd and you will find yourself in one of the comfortable seats at the Moving Picture Show. Years of experience, we think, qualifies us for running the kind of show the people want to see. We don't know how to repair an auto, or run a bank, that is not in our line, but running a picture show is.
>
> We get the very best films that money will buy, and pernaps you did not know it, but all our pictures bear the approval of the National Board of Censorship of Moving Pictures, the majority of said board being ministers of the gospel of the leading denominations, and they certainly will not approve of a suggestive or immoral picture, or one calculated to set the example for the commission of a crime.
>
> We are honestly trying to give the people of this town the most and the best for their money of any town, regardless of its size anywhere.
>
> If you can think of anything which will improve the show your suggestions will be gratefully received and carefully considered.
>
> We want to know the kind of pictures you like, and will appreciate it if you will write your preference on the back of the coupon below, and present same to cashier, who will admit the entire family free on any night you choose to come, in accordance with terms stated in coupon.
>
> We hope you will use this free coupon at an early date and that we may have the pleasure of seeing you often at the show.
>
> Yours very truly,
>
> G. S. CLARKE.
>
> This coupon, if presented to our cashier, on any night except Saturday or when we have a special program, will admit one entire family absolutely free. Not good for children unless parents accompany them.
>
> The Moving Picture Show,
> G. S. Clarke, Owner.
>
> (Tear off on line above, and write your name and the kind of pictures you prefer on back.)

Maybe Mr. Clarke is too well known to need more than "The Moving Picture Show" as identification, but we would have a real name for the house and make that name familiar against the time some other doctor starts making experiments. Outside of that, the circular is well done. After the first signature there is a perforating rule to make the detachment of the coupon easy. Mr. Clarke admits he knows nothing of banking or automobiles. Everyone knows he means medicine, but he has not said so and they cannot and will not hold it against him. He adds that the allusion to the Censorship pulled him through two weeks of a church revival meeting. Just to clinch things he ran the Passion Play for the benefit of the churches and netted them twenty dollars. Mr. Clarke seems to be "all there" all the way around. We like his circular immensely and recommend it to others. We don't believe that he cares much what the people write on the back of the slips. A man like that already knows what goes best and gets it when he can, but he creates the impression he is doing his durndest to please, and most people like to help advise.

It certainly does seem odd that only one per cent. of the good stuff in this department comes from the cities. Don't ANY of you big town men ever do anything? We pause for a reply—and we hope we get it.

There It Goes Again!

J. L. Frazier, of the Lowell Theater, Lowell, Arizona, writes:

> Herewith please find inclosed two of my regular weekly programs. I have noticed in the Advertising for Exhibitors' Department of the World that there are a number sending in their house programs regularly, and I have held back, thinking, perhaps, my effort would hardly be worth your time to look over. However, I'll try it once, and if they do not meet with your approval I will not annoy further. They are getting the business just the same. Our printers are not equipped for high-class work, and this is about their limit.

There it goes again! Any time that we grow annoyed because some one sends in advertising matter we are going to plead with the boss to bounce us if he doesn't beat us to the idea. We like to be "annoyed" with programs and other advertising and photographs of unusual advertising displays and anything else that pertains to this column, and the more we get the wider our smile of "annoyance." We hope that Mr. Frazier continues to "annoy" us in precisely the same way.

Getting over to the program, we think that there must be something Japanese in Mr. Frazier's make-up. They have a habit of decrying what is their own, and this Lowell program needs no apology. For that matter it may interest Mr. Frazier that he and the printers in combination are turning out a good job. He uses the railroad folder style printing in brown and purple on white, the brown being used for border and emphasized type on the two outer pages only, the issue being an eight-pager, with pages 4 by 9, heavy paper. Five of the eight pages are used by the house, with small advertisements top and bottom on three of those pages. The other three pages are all advertising. Two of the inside pages run the program and the other inside page is gossip. We think it would make for a better layout to set the gossip in eight point, or even six, adding a little and using a couple of inches in four pages, so that each page carries "pure reading," so much desired by the intelligent advertiser. It will cost a little, perhaps, to break up the solid ad pages each week, but not much, and the effect would be decidedly better. The typographical display is excellent and the press work reasonably good. Purple, as a rule, works well on the forms where some colors give trouble. We think that Mr. Frazier cannot complain of what he gets. He gets better than most.

Three in One.

The Elite, Fifth Avenue and Alhambra Theaters, Nashville, Tenn., combined in their program and present a sixteen-page issue with a cover of coated paper, twenty pages in all. The inner pages are on news stock, but the few illustrations used show up well because the right screen is employed. There is a good but not obtrusive showing of advertisements. In spite of the size there is no general reading matter, the text being confined to the daily program given by readers of the subjects, with casts where these are obtainable. It would pay to cut these down a little, using the page or so gained, for matters of interest to the patrons of all three houses. As the Crescent Amusement Company, which owns these houses, also has houses in seven other cities, the cost of getting up a snappy page or two could easily be distributed among the eight cities, and in a city the size of Nashville some clever newspaper chap could be found to do the work for five or ten dollars a week. There is no reason why an eight-page form could not be gotten up for all eight towns, the other eight being prepared for each special town or combination. It is beyond argument that general matter gains readers for the program and so for the house announcements. More than that general reading makes friends and helps the odvertiser as well.

Thinks It a Record.

Manager Block, of the Victoria Theater, Beaufort, N. C., thinks he is the first manager in a town of his size to put on Kleine's "The Last Days of Pompeii." He writes:

> I am inclosing herewith a copy of a recent issue of a local paper containing a page advertisement of "The Last Days of Pompeii," which is to be produced at the Victoria Theater in this city June 18—matinee and night. Beaufort has a population of only 2,500, one-fourth of which are colored, and are therefore not to be considered in this connection. I am calling your attention to this for the reason that I doubt if there is another town in the United States with a population no greater than that of Beaufort that would put on as expensive a play as "The Last Days of Pompeii."

If anyone can beat this, let's have the facts. The advertisement is well planned. The title is set in a sixteen line letter and the smaller text is all attractively phrased and well set. And he is getting a quarter for the attraction in a town of that size where it is but recently no one in Denver could be convinced that any picture was worth more than a nickel.

From Houston.

The missing Pearce program from the Pearce Theater, Houston, Texas, has turned up. It is a four-page issue of good size and tends strictly to business. There is the usual calendar program, and the rest is given over to house stuff and comment on the films. This clipping may be useful to others. It is set in large type directly beneath the program for the week. In some of the issues the heading carries what newspaper men call "ears"—small rule boxes on either side of the heading, calling special attention to the biggest of the coming attractions.

> PICKEMOUT It's a new game easily played by any number of players. Close your eyes, place the index finger or any of the above dates, open your eyes, go to the telephone and call up your best girl, invite her to Pearce's Theater for the date selected. You will be surprised how pleasantly you will spend the evening. This game can be played every day during the week without becoming monotonous; try it out. For any further information call at Pearce's Theater.

Later on we think the issue will go to eight pages with some general matter, for they are climbing down there in Texas. What there is is decidely good, but the modern program gives a little general film reading in addition to the specific data for the week.

They Stick.

Herschel Stuart, one of the few press agents in a picture theater, sends in the folder he devised for the Queen Theater, Dallas, Texas, and says that only a very small percentage of the 10,000 he distributes weekly are thrown away on reaching the sidewalk, a trouble they had when a larger program was used.

It is a card roughly, 4 by 4½ inches and is folded once. The front gives the title of the house, the town and the date covered by the program. The back carries a cigar advertisement. Inside the weekly program is given in brief, the column running across the page and not being broken into two pages. It is printed on marble stock of excellent quality. The house is now preparing a mailing list of 5,000 names.

Mr. Stuart will be glad to send a sample to any interested manager who will inclose a stamped and self-addressed return cover. For those who desire a vest-pocket program, this model will be hard to beat. It can be put out so cheaply that it can be used to supplement a larger program where there is a demand for a larger issue.

Know About Strings.

Some of you door-knob specialists might be able to come to the aid of Hay and Nicholas, of the Haynic, Fairmount, Minn. Listen:

> We wish you would publish this inquiry in the interests of all the "Doorknobbers" of the country.
>
> Who can tell us where to buy strings in large quantities for our "Door Knob Specials"? The biggest problem connected with getting out the program is the tying of these hundreds of strings every week. There is some places somewhere these strings can be bought, ready tied, in large quantities. Will some user tell us where it is?

Going Up.

You know enough of the advertising of the feature companies to realize that when you can read 60 per cent. of a feature house organ with real interest and amusement there must be a real editor in charge. One of the best is George E. Carpenter, of Real Reels, Salt Lake City, put out by the Notable Feature Film Company. A recent "Open Letter" is good enough to pass along, and back of the jesting is sound common sense. How do you treat your own exchange?

"Mr. Exhibitor: Far be it from us to criticise your house and the way you operate it; our relations have been most pleasant in the past and they are going to continue so to be. We are writing you this letter, however, so that you may co-operate with us in saving a young and blithesome soul, to wit, that of our handsome and debonair shipping clerk.

"Publish it not abroad, but between you and us and the office cat this worthy gentleman is exhibiting symptoms of breaking out into a chronic case of spontaneous profanity. We have diagnosed his case and traced it to its source, and it would appear that his lamentable condition is occasioned by the thoughtlessness of the man you have in your employ whose duty it is to return cuts, slides and photographs.

"Please take him kindly, but firmly, by the ear, lead him to some secluded spot and place this lamentable case before him. He is human and will promptly aid you in this glorious soul-saving proposition. Break it to him gently that in best film circles it is not considered au fait to drop a slide loose into a film box and ship it back to the exchange. Broken glass is apt to cut the finger of our shipping clerk, and then he gets peevish. The slides are shipped to you in a neat separate box. Should your employee need a box wherein to place his matches, cigar stubs and other effete bric-a-brac, we will gladly present him with an extra one.

"Then, in the little matter of photographs: It is not advisable to tack them in your lobby frames with horseshoe nails. However, if your man feels called upon to utilize a nut and bolt on each corner please instruct him to use a monkey-wrench rather than rip the picture out of the frame in impetuous fashion. The photograph is apt to get torn; then sometimes when pictures have not been returned promptly we have to ship a few wrecks along for lobby display—and then another exhibitor writes us a torrid letter and says unkind things that hurt our feelings. We realize that all our pictures are works of art and that your man is starting an art gallery of his own. Nevertheless, we would esteem it a favor if the pictures were returned.

"We note that your employe is a smoker. However, we would suggest that he refrain from striking matches on the surface of fine screen cuts, because this habit is responsible for some very bizarre effects. This habit, too, of going over to the newspaper office once a month and indulging in one grand cleanup of cuts is to be frowned down, because the cuts are liable to get all balled up and eventually reach their wrong destination. Cuts exploiting Barnum's Circus are of no use to us, so it is hardly worth paying expressage on this dead metal. We don't want to rob the rightful owner of these works of art. All we want is our own returned promptly. A cut of Douglas' $3 Shoe, for instance, despite the visible fact that it bears on the back of the label, "Mary Pickford in 'Hearts Adrift,'" is absolutely worthless to us, as we do not contemplate going into the shoe business just yet.

"We might add a few lines on the inspection of films, the cute patterns cut by the take-up sprocket wheel, ripped leaders and titles and general chaos superinduced by careless operators, but we refrain. We feel if we continued in this strain that we might be misunderstood."

Has he got your number, or are you the other fellow?

Too Cheap.

Admission is two for a nickel over in Newark. The Majestic theater is issuing a card which, with five cents, will admit two persons to "a three hour show." That's less than a cent an hour, a little too cheap, but can a man stand three hours of the sort of show he probably will get?

They Did It.

Evidently the Third Street Theater, Easton, Pa., got away with their determination to put out their own reels. Their first release, A Willing Lover, has been shown, apparently with success. We think the Third Street is the first house to produce its own dramatic production. More power to them. We didn't think they could do it, but they did.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

The Situation.

ONE of those trouble hunters wants to know what is the use of learning to write plays. "More and more directors are writing their own plays," he remarks, "and it must come to a time when there will be no chance for the outside writer."

Now that is the way it looks to the outsider and in a way we do not blame the correspondent for feeling discouraged, but we take it that he is in a position to make money elsewhere at present, and we think that nothing is going to help the outsider more than the fact that more and more directors are writing their own scripts.

We can imagine nothing more likely to drive the manufacturer to the open market than some of the scripts these puny-minded directors write. It needs only a glance at the synopsis pages of each issue to see that the stories are getting poorer and poorer, and it needs but a slight acquaintance with the fans to see that the present popularity of the pictures is based on the personal pull of the individual stars. Were this not so the motion picture business would dry up.

Fully half of the directors in the Western studios of the Universal are writing their own scripts. It is only a question of time when the discovery will be made that many of them are writing rot. It is the same on the licensed side. Then, when that time comes, the people who can write will be encouraged to write by being offered more money.

Just so long as manufacturers think they are saving money by having the directors write their own stories, they will keep on standing for the same old thing, but the public is not going to be as complacent and it will not be long now before some of the makers who are addicted to this practice will realize that if the director writes his own script, saving the company twenty-five to one hundred dollars, and the script he writes costs the company several times that in lost prestige, there is no real saving.

At this very moment the best pictures are being made by companies that hire writers to write scripts and directors to direct. If you are observant you can tell from merely reading the stories of the films which companies have writers and which think they are saving money. It is only a question of time when manufacturers come to their senses and save money by spending it and fire the men who protest that they must write their own scripts. Between the only half intelligent director and the non-intelligent cutting room man it is a wonder, sometimes, that we get anything at all, but hold fast, for a better day must come.

It's Serious.

Lately Arthur Hotaling, of the Lubin company, came up to the home office for a chat; at least he says it was a chat, though we know what the temperature in Jacksonville has been and even in Philadelphia it is cooler. But that's another matter. The point is we introduced him to a friend and the latter could not believe that a man who looked so stern and forbidding could make comedies. A couple of days later William Lord Wright quoted from a letter from Mrs. Emily Brown Heininger, the Essanay star comedy writer, in which she says "The slap stick comedy business is a near tragedy in every stage of the game."

It all works out to the one point that writing comedy is a business and not a matter of a jovial disposition. One of the meanest tempered men we ever knew was a comedian and one of the saddest comedians we ever knew was a most amusing cuss when you got him off the stage. He thought he was a comedian because he could crack jokes, but on the stage he stuck to a dreary routine of work.

Don't think that because you are regarded as a natural born comedian by your friends that you are destined to write great photoplay comedies. Comedy writing is a serious business and must be approached in a business-like manner. The only difference between writing comedy and drama is that in one case you aim at creating laughs and in the other seek to bring tears. Comedy requires the same intense concentration for the moment, the same careful plotting and an inherent sense of what will look funny on the screen. The village cut-up seldom has the concentration necessary to the work. His comedy is what the stage calls "ad lib stuff," dependent on the situation of the moment.

The comedy writer is not a heaven-sent humorist who just bubbles out on paper. He is the more or less serious minded man who puts this situation and that situation together because he knows that the combination will gain a laugh as surely as the chemist knows that sugar and chlorate of potash will form an explosive mixture. He does not sit down to his machine, giggle a couple of giggles and dash off a screaming farce. He works like any artisan with care and certainty, knowing that certain causes will produce certain effects. He is a student of idea, of situation, of business, and he works with the same careful earnestness that the dramatic writer displays.

Just because your friends think you are "real funny," do not regard it as a call to write comedy. There are too many of that sort now. Try drama, for that is more simple.

Beatimtoit.

One of our correspondents thinks it would be nice if we had a regular department in which some author would tell just how, when and where he got the idea for some story success. We would point out that this has been done several times already and we do not think that it would pay to give space to such a department each week for the reasons that it would be repetition in a way and confusing at the same time since there is a wide difference in method.

No two writers work in precisely the same manner and the trained man does not always work along the same lines. He may get his idea from a chance remark, a picture, a happening, or some idea. Now and then we even take the synopses printed in this paper and get a comedy hint from some dramatic story. We recently wrote an acceptable farce on the title alone of Kalem's "The Show Girl's Glove." The whole thing can be put into a nutshell. There are plots all around you, in the papers, the magazines, on the streets, in the conversation of your friends—anywhere, and the trick is merely to train yourself to look for the idea.

Wasn't at Home.

One of the real writers started to write to a title the other day. Then when he got it back he held a private inquest and came to the dual conclusion that it takes more than a title to make a story and that it is no use trying to write of unfamiliar matters.

Both conclusions are sage, but the second is the more important. Up to a certain point a good writer can write about anything, but he writes best of what he knows, whether the knowledge is acquired at first or second hand. If he writes about India he gets books of travel and guide books and railroad maps. He picks off a lot of points that give reality to the story. It is the same no matter what locale he takes, but in this case the author did not know the people, yet he wrote about them, and they were unreal and they sounded unreal and after it came back he realized his mistake and swore off.

Something besides imagination is needed. One of the best propaganda plays ever written was spoiled for the use of the propagandists because one of the minor characters did something so utterly at variance with the teaching of the story that the effect was lost. A little study would have obviated the trouble. Study people, places and things, and then you'll be at home when you write.

Titles.

Harry Hoyt says he saw a script the other day titled "The F is Silent as in Fish." Of course that is a mighty poor title, but it is a certainty that editors at least read the story to see what it was all about. It would have been better had the title been catchy and available, but there was something to it.

On the other hand a drab colored title will hurt a chance of a sale. We saw one the other day that ran "Here and There With a Promoter's Wife." In the first place it was too long and in the second it sounded more like a magazine article by a traveler. We suggested instead "Mamie's Millionaire."

Give a little thought to your titles. Make them catchy and attractive as well as short. And do not make it too revealing. "Saved by an Airship." might look well on the posters, but it detracts from the suspense because now we know beforehand just how the girl is to be saved. Get something to pique curiosity and you'll get the editor and later on the exhibitor will get the patron. Don't figure that any old thing will do and that the company can fix it up. Do it

Comedy Leaders.

All experts agree that the ideal script contains no leaders because it needs none, and that the script with the fewest leaders is apt to be the best. That is true, in the strict sense, but now and then a leader will point up comedy and get a laugh. Somehow an inserted remark seems to point the humor of a scene where the action is not too violent and bring to a focus the smile that has been lurking on the lips.

Few of these laugh leaders should be used, but some can be used with decidedly good effect. Their most useful function is to connect the idea with the action. We see Jack drenched with water from a hose and we laugh. We know that he is on his way to meet a girl, but we do not connect that fact, at the moment, with the wetting. There flashes a cut-in—"I've got to meet Julie in five minutes!" Now the scene is funnier than it was an instant before because the player is not only wet, but in that condition he must present himself before the lady of his love.

Next to the plotting of the action, the intelligent use of leaders, rather than their non-use, is the most certain sign of the experienced play writer.

Takes the Advice.

Here is a letter from a man in Atlantic City. He is tired and is going to take our advice and quit,—but read it for yourself:

> Some time ago you struck a keynote that has stuck. It is to "Curl up and die," and that is what I am about to do, I give in, why write, if you cannot sell? But why this change. The house I usually go to, to see pictures, runs the independent films, so have not seen many of the Lubins, but, tonight I made a change and saw I think your record script of forty-three minutes produced on the screen, the one I saw was "She wanted to know." Of course you were not out to break any records, when writing that, if a record of time was your object, I think twenty-three would have been the thing, don't you? Of course, Mr. Sargent, I don't blame you for writing it, but when the sting comes, you say, why do we ask how to sell? Yes how do you sell? The answer is, work, WORK! Study, plot, rewrite, etc., and what is the answer to the outsider—"not wanted."
>
> This is the first picture of yours that I have seen, to my knowledge, and now to me the question is not how to write, but, how to sell, but so long that there is no satisfactory answer coming, the matter of writing photoplays is dead.

You know what you are doing and it is your own business, but I have submitted good ideas to Lubin, and have been told by one of their editors that they did not care about technique, did not care if it was written on wrapping paper, just so it was an idea, they would buy, well, some of my stuff was good, probably not good enough, but equal to what they produce on the average, and you can sell and I cannot, so what's the use. I was not writing as perfection but writing ideas, and they always came back—your story was good, I understood the general action and construction of it, enjoyed the suspense and it was new and novel—but so easy, and yet so hard—but I have written, along the same lines, and had them rejected, so I give up.

And there you are. Here is an author who tried to sell one company. He could not. He quits. Perhaps it is better so, for the writing game, from any angle, is no place for a quitter. But, on the other hand, if he can write good stories, perhaps Biograph or Kalem or Keystone, or Edison, or Mutual might have liked his stuff, but no, he takes one look at one of our cute little comedies and curls up. Usually the stuff we write does not have so violent an effect.

Perhaps the trouble was that he did write ideas. You cannot have much plot and a lot of action, too, in a half reel, and of the two the action is the more important. But the main point is that, lacking persistence, and easily discouraged, the correspondent has quit after apparently a half hearted effort to land on one company. It takes a better fight than that to win. Lots of persons do sell comedies to Lubin, and if they do not sell them to Lubin they sell them to someone else, the moral being that the way to win is to keep on plugging. That's what every winner has done.

Building Up.

Instead of writing in to tell how remarkably bad the stories you see on the screen have become, why not see what you can do to improve them? Do not take the same idea, but look and find the story that the author might have written, then go and write that. A real writer can take almost any poor story and write a better story from it and one that is absolutely unlike the one supplying the start. It is good training, too, for you will come, in the fullness of time, to improve your own stories the same way. One of the tricks is to be able to keep on improving your plot until you get a really good story instead of one merely passably good. But just remember that building up is one thing and over elaboration is another.

Love Interest.

Having told a writer that her scripts lacked novelty, she promptly came back with the remark that she was trying to get away from the almost universal love interest and do something different. That was not the point at all. We did not object to the stories because they were not love stories, but because the factors were, for the greater part, so old. By all means write a story without love interest if you want to and if you think you can get something equally interesting, but give some touch of newness to your plot whatever you write and remember that love stories are in greater demand than others because all the world loves a lover. A good adventure story is not to be passed over with contempt, but even an adventure story is the better for a love interest, not a mushy, sentimental interest, but a clean cut suggestion of "and so they were married."

For Old Authors.

Not so much on account of the money as because he hates to be licked by any part of the writing game, an old newspaper man regrets that he cannot write photoplays and asks for a diagnosis. It is very simple and the chances are that other old timers are having the same trouble.

Here is a man who can dash off a short story or magazine article and be reasonably certain of a check. He does it more on style than idea. All of his writing life he has been doing the same thing, and he cannot understand why it does not work in photoplay. But style counts for nothing in photoplay. Give Rudyard Kipling and some studio employee the same plot and Kipling might write a story that was a work of art while the hack writer would get a hack story. But given the same plot, the hack man would get as good a story on the screen, even if Kipling knew as much about photoplay construction as the studio man, for style would be lost in the photography.

If you are an old timer and find you cannot sell, see if the trouble does not lie in the fact that you are trying to sell style instead of ideas.

Sane Stuff.

Here are a few remarks from a worker that are worth passing along:

I got $15 from ———, which satisfied me. They said that they would be glad to see more of my work, which also satisfies me. Sufficient is it to say that I sent it to them Feb. 15. I did not hear from it, or did not write until the latter part of June. They said that they were sorry that confusion in their studio delayed them in making me the present offer. However, I got the money, which I might not have done if I had yelled as soon as it ran over time a week or so. I may be curious that way, but you know, I don't want my scenarios back, and if they want to keep it, and see if they can use it a couple of months from now, why let them keep it. I am satisfied if they want to consider it, and if they buy it, O. K.

On the next to the last script I sent to ——— (sold) I signed the agreement, and cashed in the check, and wrote them, and told them that I thought it was more valuable than the price they had paid me. I told them that with twice as much plot, and twice as much action (and newer) I thought it was worth more than another I sent them, of half the number of scenes. And it was too.

They told me to put a price on my scripts, if I thought them more valuable. That was all. But the next scenario I sent them, I noticed that the check was made out for $20. Maybe it did some good after all. That was the effect I hoped for, more than a bonus, which I hardly expected.

I am going to make a big scramble to get in with ———, by sending them some good stuff. I guess that's the best way.

I have a friend who started in last fall to write picture plays. To date he has written 15. He has several held, but has sold none yet; and he has a good head. He'll make good. The other day he said "You know, I'm just beginning to find out how little I know about scenarios."

I remember when he wrote his first one, and showed it to me. It was O. K. but a rather old situation, not made the most of or developed beyond the bare outline, because he didn't know how. I encouraged him, and told him to take a chance, and send it, also telling him how hard they were to sell. Another fellow, looking it over, said "Why did you tell him to send it out. It was no good." Yes," I said, "but he thinks it is." That is, I didn't want him to get discouraged, and quit, as he is original enough, and a hard enough worker, to make good at it. The other fellow wrote several, more clever, perhaps, than the first ones, in some ways, but he didn't sell them; so he quit, and has given it up as "too much work for the money in it." And yet he could write better scenarios than I can, if he got busy at it, as he has a good sense of humor, pure fun, and can get it on paper, and is original. But—you know how it goes. You can't, it seems, in this business, make the big fish float, or keep the dead ones off the top of the water.

He had the right idea on leaving the story with this particular studio. Only the other day the same director remarked "I almost made ——— the other day, but something came up and I put it back in the box." The story had been sent him July 22, 1913. It may be another six months or a year before he does make it, but he handed over slips for six recent stories at the same time and there was no kick coming. In the same way he bought a story from another man because there was half a day when there was nothing else in work and he could use a lot of people. Had the story been queried it would have gone back at once, not because of any affront, but merely because the director knew he might make it some day but did not know when. It is hard to work with such long delays, but with a proper string and some patience it is possible to do a good business and still let some lie. We have some stuff that was turned in in February of last year and has not yet even been reported on.

Bromide Plots.

Yesterday we looked over a lot of plots for a lady. They were not bad plots, but they were not good ones, they were the same sort of plots that ninety eight out of every hundred middle grade writers evolve. There was the hidden will, the fortune in the old chair, the lover who did not know his sweetheart's brother and some more like that. They were good for practise work, but no editor has to buy this stuff. All he has to do is to dig in the back files and do the same thing over again a little better.

If only authors could and would realize that something better is needed, they would save a lot in postage and editors would have an easier time of it. Set out with the determination that you will do something vastly better; that you must, of necessity, do something vastly better, or you'll find your percentage of acceptances small indeed.

Anyone can write the story of how Mary marries Paul against her father's wishes and is disinherited until her little baby wins the old man's heart before he knows it is his own grandchild, but it takes a thinker to get up a story in which the grandfather reconciles the child to its parents. Anyone can write the story of how the workman was fired and came that night to shoot his employer but instead saved his boss from being robbed and got the job back and was taken into partnership. Anyone can write that, and most of us probably have, but there are different endings to the story that the clever man can invent, and a new climax might make a sale.

Anyone can write the story of the man roused to fight burglars, only to find it was the cat, but the clever man will write of the man who goes down stairs to put the cat out of doors to find that it is a burglar instead of the cat.

There is nothing whatever to prevent you from writing the good old plots again and again, but please don't expect to sell them.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Operators' Union Directory, I. A. T. S. E.

NOTICE.—Each union is entitled to have its roster of officers, meeting nights, etc., listed here once per year, free of cost. Preserve this list as it will not be republished. The mail address of the secretary should be included, and the address of regular meeting place, if any.

Local Union No. 307, Philadelphia, Pa.

W. D. Cherry, president; W. Z. Williams, vice-president; E. Abrahams, treasurer; W. Friedman, financial secretary; W. S. James, recording secretary, 1233 Vine street.

Manufacturers' Notice.

It is an established rule of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until such articles have been demonstrated to a member of our staff. In case of apparatus pertaining to projection this means the editor of this department.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending 4 cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy. You may be surprised at the number of questions you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Question No. 47.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Permission to use the contributor's name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used. Theater managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

What is the mill foot standard of resistance? How is it used in measuring the resistance of wire? Using the mill foot standard, what is the resistance of a circuit of No. 6 wire, the total length of both wires being 156 feet? Show us how you obtained the answer.

Roll of Honor.

The Roll of Honor on Question No. 41 consists of Harry T. Dobson, Toronto, Canada; Frank Willard, Jr., Marshalltown, Iowa; L. B. Minges, Lestershire, New York, and Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas.

I have decided to publish both the answers of brothers Minges and Smith. Smith's reply is excellent, but it is, I think, rather too deep for the average operator. However, there are doubtless some who can make use of the valuable data it contains.

Answer to Question No. 41.

By L. B. Minges, Lestershire, N. Y.

The Question:

Supposing the decision as to question 40 to be in the affirmative, and there was available for fuel, gas, natural and artificial, gasoline and kerosene. What would you do to determine which would be best from any and all points of view.

NOTE.—As matters now stand, any operator is likely to be confronted with precisely this proposition at any time. Are you preparing, or are you prepared to "deliver the goods" on such questions as this, or even make an intelligent stagger at it?

The Answer:

In considering the economic excellence of the various fuels which may be used in an internal combustion engine, it would be well to first thoroughly understand the action of these various fuels when compressed and ignited in a cylinder; also their advantages and disadvantages should be thoroughly examined into. It will be found that gasoline is the most widely used fuel for internal combustion engines, and that it is peculiarly adapted for this work on account of its extreme volatility; also because it forms an explosive gas, when mixed with air, through a wide range of temperature. Moreover, the deposit of carbon on the walls of the cylinder is comparatively slight when it is employed for fuel. Gasoline is a fractional distillate of crude petroleum. It has a widely varying density, the variations being as much as from 85° down to 60°. The specific gravity of gasoline is an index of its volatility. The higher the specific gravity the more volatile the gasoline. For this reason a test of specific gravity is important when purchasing the same. It has been my own experience that gasoline from 70° to 72°, Beaum's, is most suitable for internal combustion engines, particularly in cold weather when it is hard to get the engine started. There is but little difference in the amount of heat energy contained in different grades of gasoline, consequently engines which operate at low speed will develop just as much power with a low grade gasoline as with high grade. The objection to the lower grades are found in the difficulty of carbureting the mixture properly at high speeds, but at lower or medium speeds this trouble is not encountered, and the lower grade fuel is the cheapest. This must be qualified, however, through and by the fact that the lower grades cause carbon to deposit on the cylinders more rapidly than the higher grades.

The compression of any gas fuel should be carried as nearly as possible to the ignition temperature of the gas. The temperature at which gas will ignite varies with its calorific value, and, because of this fact, every fuel has a limit to which compression may be carried, the average being about as follows: gasoline, 70 pounds per square inch; kerosene, 60; natural gas, 75, and city gas, 80 pounds. The richer gases require less compression than the leaner ones, and the compression of small kerosene engines would be only about 60 pounds per square inch, though if the same engine used gasoline the compression should be increased to 70 pounds. The rightly designed gasoline engine will consume about one pint of gasoline per brake horse-power per hour, the cooling water should leave the cylinder at about 200° F. When considering kerosene we find that it does not form an explosive mixture when mixed with air at ordinary temperature. When employed as a fuel for an internal combustion engine it must first be vaporized by heating the liquid to about 200° F. before its gas, or vapor, is compressed or ignited. As a result the specific gravity of the charge that is taken into the cylinder is greatly reduced.

Kerosene is a fractional distillate of petroleum, having a specific gravity of approximately 48° Beaum's. When kerosene is used as a fuel its high heating value causes the cylinders of the engine to heat unduly unless a spray of water be injected with the charge. This, and the difficulty of vaporizing, coupled with the rapid carbonizing of the cylinders and rings, make its use as a fuel objectionable as compared with gasoline. The consumption of kerosene per brake horse-power per hour is about the same as that of gasoline. It will be found that in localities where it can be readily obtained natural gas is almost exclusively used as a fuel for gas engines. The fuel consumption in a gas engine running at its rated load when using natural gas is from 13 to 17 cubic feet per brake horse-power per hour. When considering artificial gas such as coal or water gas, we must remember they are only intended for illuminating purposes and are put through refining processes in order to increase its illuminating power, which process adds to the price of the gas, but does not add to its efficiency as a fuel. The consumption of gas of this kind would be about 15 to 19 cubic feet per brake horse-power per hour. As the cost of fuel varies with the localities it would be impossible to say just how much it would cost to run an engine of given horse-power per hour on any of the four mentioned fuels. However, I have given the average consumption of each, which will enable the operator to figure out the approximate cost in his locality.

Reply to Question No. 41.

By Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas.

The manager who intends to purchase an engine is not usually well enough posted in mechanical matters to appreciate the great difference in value as between one engine and another engine, or to determine whether the plans for the installation conform with the best practice or not. Innumerable types of engines will be offered him by manufacturers' agents, each of whom claims to have a better engine than his rival. This naturally tends to confuse the uninformed purchaser who, not knowing which really is best, as a rule ends by buying the cheapest, only to find, as time goes by, that his installation is far from perfect. Some manufacturers' agents, rather than miss a sale, will sell an engine which they well know will not meet the requirements of the work it is supposed to perform. And the unfortunate part is that, as a general proposition, when the engine fails to deliver the goods the engine company will immediately proceed to unload the blame on the operator, which is nothing short of an outrage. I would, therefore, by all means, advise managers who are not thoroughly acquainted with the different makes of gas, gasoline, or oil burning engines to employ an expert consulting engineer to select the engine best suited to the needs of the proposed installation. This engineer would proceed about as follows: first, he would study the installation from a mechanical point of view, and consider local conditions so as to not order an engine too large or too small, or of a type which would not fit handily into the space available. Second, he would examine the precautions taken to avoid, or reduce to a minimum, certain inconveniences which attend the operation of explosive engines; third, he would draw up specifications with the terms of which the engine manufacturers must comply; fourth, he would prepare an estimate of cost, and a contract not couched in terms altogether in the engine manufacturer's favor, providing to the purchaser important guarantees; fifth, he would supervise the technical and actual installation of the plant and engine; sixth, he would make tests after installation, and see to it that the makers have fulfilled their guarantees.

I give the above for the simple reason that gas and oil manufacturers, as a rule, seek to make the utmost possible profit, and this is often done at the expense of the quality of material used, care and construction, etc. Often they will deliver an engine too small in size, but operating at very high speed, or they will select an old type, or carry out certain details with lack of care. The majority of manufacturers, unfortunately seem to prefer to get the orders at any cost.

And now to the question proper. First I would ascertain the minimum cost of gas, gasoline and kerosene. In the case of natural gas I would figure the amount in pounds per h.p. per hour. In what is known as producer gas I would not use gas under 80% colorific energy of carbon, and the same test would be right for blast furnace gas. It is figured thus: (33,000, 1 h.p., 60 seconds ÷ 778) · (1 ÷ 1.283 colorific power × 25 per cent energy) = 7.93 pounds of gas per horse-power of blast furnace gas.

In the case of kerosene I would see that it was about five times as heavy as air (specific gravity), so that one pound of kerosene vapor would occupy 12.387 ÷ 5 = 2.47 cubic feet. Hence the ratio of volume would be 188.4 ÷ 2.47 = 76.2 volumes of air to one of kerosene. This would give you a gas or oil that would give combustion slow enough to allow complete union with the necessary oxygen for combustion under the proper exposure of distilling or gasification. Mostly all kerosene deposits its carbon in the form of a hard cake, and therefore for complete combustion a lamp wick would do much to eliminate the deposit of carbon. (There goes my goat again. A lamp wick where? Ed.).

Gasoline should be 3.05 as heavy as air, hence a pound of vapor will occupy 12.387 ÷ 3.05 = 4.06 cubic feet and requires 189[52] C. F. of air. The ratio of volume would be 189.52 ÷ 4.06 = 4.06. The argument in its favor as against kerosene is its ease of vaporization in starting and running in spite of the difficulties of maintaining proper proportions of the mixture of fuel and air for varying conditions of load and speed. It is very difficult to make a test based on energy on account of the many elements which enter and because very few operators can figure the quality of gas, gasoline and kerosene as to colorific power. All they get is the cubic feet used per horse power.

The kind of engine one buys will depend upon the kind of fuel which will be used. Question 41 has made me rake my brains and then some, but my slight chemical experience has helped me considerably.

Brother Smith also gave some tables, but I think they would be entirely beyond the operator, or the average man who must run such an outfit. In fact, some of the dope he has set forth is too many for me. I have given brother Smith's answer by reason of the fact that those posted in these matters, whom I have asked, say that it is essentially correct. For myself, frankly, I do not know. My own view would be that if an operator be placed in the position as suggested by question 41 the only practical thing for him to do would be to get the lowest prices on the various fuels available, and then submit them to engine manufacturers, together with a statement of the average proposed k.w. load, and require of them figures as to the cost of operation of their engine per hour under the conditions named, informing them at the same time that an iron-clad guarantee would be required that their engine would make good on their figures; a part of the purchase price to be withheld for a period of thirty to sixty days until a thorough test had been made. While the data contained in brothers Minges' and Smith's answers is no doubt of value, still it seems to me that the foregoing would be the practical thing for the operator to do.

From China.

The Arcade Amusement Company, Tientsin, China, writes:

> We are having a serious trouble with our Powers Cameragraph. There is a switch attached to the machine to cut out the light whenever necessary. I do not know whether it is owing to its poor workmanship or some other cause, but whenever I cut the current with this switch there is a flame set up in the switch which keeps burning until I open the switch cover and blow it out. I use 40 amperes from a 480 volt main, reduced by resistance. At the Arcade I use an Urban Silent Knight machine and a 60 millimeter Pathe anastigmat lens. The projection is from behind the screen, which is a Pictoria Transparent screen. On the left of the curtain, looking from the machine room, there is a ghost about three feet from the lower end and three feet from the left side. Any letters or solitary white objects flash out upwards and are distressing to the eye. This trouble has been there for nearly two years but is much more pronounced just now. I shall be greatly obliged if you can tell me how to overcome it.

The trouble lies in the switch, but it is no fault of the Nicholas Power Company. You are using 480 volt current with a 220 volt switch. You should take this switch off and put on a 500 volt quick-break switch. It is possible you can use the present switch by first striking it open quickly; that is, striking the handle a sharp blow, but the quick-break switch would be the proper thing, and it should be a 500 volt switch. True, your resistance reduces the voltage to about 50 when the arc is burning, but when you pull the switch to shut it off the voltage at the switch instantly rises almost to the normal line voltage, and that explains the trouble. I am sending, by mail, a picture of a quick-break switch, such as you need; also a picture of a quick-break attachment, though I am not sure this could be put on the switch you have.

As to the ghost, from what you say it is a travel ghost. Very likely the reason it has become worse of late is that your shutter gears are becoming worn. I am not acquainted with the shutter of the Urban Silent Knight projector. However, the trouble lies either in the fact that the blade of the shutter is too narrow, or else the shutter is not set correctly. Take a piece of cardboard and cut a strip long enough to reach from the inside edge of the shutter blade to its outside edge and, using heavy paste, glue it on the shutter in such a way that it projects over one side of the main shutter blade one-quarter of an inch. Now try the machine and if the ghost is still there, without any change, take the strip off and put it on the same position on the opposite side of the main blade of the shutter. If this does not quite eliminate the ghost, slide it further out until it does. If this does eliminate the ghost, then slide it further in until the ghost appears, and then out until it just disappears. By "in" and "out" I mean slide it further out over the light opening or in on the shutter blade, the idea being to make the main blade of the shutter wider on one side. After you have found where the cardboard will just eliminate the travel ghost cut a piece of metal and rivet it on the blade in place of the cardboard. This may increase the flicker slightly and will cut more light. I would advise you before doing this to try resetting the shutter. Read "The Shutter," pages 219 to 223 inclusive of the Handbook carefully.

Outlook Good.

George C. Knox, secretary of the Garden Theater Company, Johnstown, Pennsylvania, writes:

> Possibly you may recall the writer, as he was a booster for the MOVING PICTURE WORLD from the very first number, and has remained so up to the present time; he hopes to continue so for the future. The cut on our letter-head is almost an exact likeness of the new theater now under construction in this city, which, when completed, will be one of the prettiest in the state. It will represent an expenditure of about $200,000, and will be a four-story building on the best corner in the city. We expect to seat about 900, including first floor and balcony. There will be a roof garden on the fourth floor. We are straining every effort to have our opening the last of September. We expect to have some of our officers down in New York within the next few days, and would like to have your advice concerning what company you would recommend to take the contract for decorating and equipping this house. Do you know of a party by the name of Brady who several years ago was with the Miles Brothers' Film Exchange? I would like to get in touch with him. I have been connected with the picture business for the past fourteen years; was connected with the first house in this city, the Amuse U. Opened the Stadium and the Grand, resigning the management of the latter to join others in organizing the Garden Theater Company. The Garden Theater Company at present owns the Lyric theater in this city, seating about 350. The outlook for business is good. This is a ten-cent town, and I feel that the sooner exhibitors wake up and make it a general ten-cent proposition all over the country, the better it will be for the business as a whole.

The last I heard of Brady he was somewhere in New Jersey—I do not remember where. Should he chance to see this, and communicate with the editor, he will be put in touch with brother Knox. If the theater looks anything like the picture it certainly is a very beautiful one, at least as to its exterior. The letting of contracts for decorating is a little out of the writer's line; he is not in touch with that end of things, but will see what he can do in locating responsible theater decorating firms, and when your people come down we will make every effort to see that they get in touch with the right people.

Book on Operating.

John Condon, St. Louis, Missouri, makes the following inquiry:

> I have seen some literature advertising a book called "Motion Picture Operation, Stage Electrics and Illusions," by Horsmann & Tousley, published by some firm in Chicago. Can you advise me as to whether this book is a desirable purchase from the operator's point of view?

With regard to the book in question, I have not seen a copy, but I have seen the advertising matter put out and it says: "A practical handbook dealing with every feature of motion picture operation and electricity for the theater. A guide for managers of theaters and productions. Full description of all portable and permanent stage equipment; theater wiring; optics and optical illusions," and then right on top of that it announces the fact that the book contains 393 pages.

Brother Condon, it can't be done, and done in anything like a complete manner. Here is a book written by two men, neither one of whom, I am reliably informed, ever actually operated a moving picture machine in a theater, or under theater conditions, in his life. In my humble opinion and judgment no man can write a competent work on motion picture operating unless he himself be a practical operator. Messrs. Horsmann and Tousley are undoubtedly expert electricians, and proficiency in electrics is essential to the writing of a book of this kind, but, after all, this is but one of many things which go to make up the profession of operating.

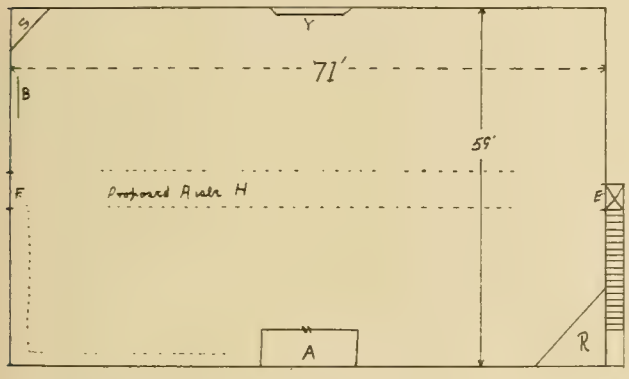
For myself, when I came to write the second edition of my own Handbook I found that if I only covered the field of operating, and covered it completely, it would require at least 800 and probably 1000 pages, with not less than 500 illustrations, yet here is a book which calmly claims to cover motion picture operating, electricity for the theater, a guide for both theater managers and producers, and a full description of portable and permanent stage equipment, theater wiring, and optics, and optical illusions, and all in 393 pages. Well, all I can say is that Messrs. Horsmann and Tousley must be genuine wonders, or else that part of the work which would be of value to operators must be very brief indeed, and therefore something rather more than inadequate.

I do not like to review books of this kind when I am myself the author of one. It lays me open to the accusation of being unfair, but, on the other hand, operators look to this department for advice in matters of this kind, and I would prefer to run the risk of being accused of unfairness than to keep quiet and let the boys get the worst of it. Now, please do not misunderstand this last remark. I am not saying they would get the worst of it in purchasing this book, but I do make the assertion that it is not and cannot be anything like a complete operators' handbook. If it had 393 pages devoted exclusively to moving picture operating, then that would be something else again, but the claims made in the advertising matter are altogether too broad, and cannot possibly be backed up by the facts. Moreover, I repeat, the book is not written by practical operators; therefore its value to practical operators is certainly, to say the least, open to question. If it really is a book of merit it will be heartily welcomed by this department when that fact has been demonstrated to its editor.

Y. M. C. A. Going Wrong.

Frank Willard, Jr., Marshalltown, Iowa, says:

> The Handbook is simply "it." It is a book which will certainly help any man to put better results on the screen. Will you kindly answer the following question: The diagram is of the floor plan of the gymnasium of the new Y. M. C. A. in this city. They have decided to place the lens hole at A and the screen at B; E is the fire-escape and F is a door. They say the people will come in at F and go around as per the dotted line, and in emptying the audience will pass out both at F and E.



> I told them the longer the throw, up to 100 feet, the better the picture; also that the results would be unsatisfactory in other ways. What I wish to know is where would you place the machine, taking into consideration the comfort of the audience, the distortion of the picture, and the number of people to be seated.

Why, brother Willard, the problem presented is reasonably simple. I would either place the operating room at A, with the screen at Y, or else I would place the operating room at R with the screen across corner S. The R-S proposition is the best, viewed purely from the picture point of view, but is objectionable in that it would make an odd looking room, and the aisle proposition would not work out very well. The objection to the A-Y combination is that people sitting at X-X would see the picture in a badly distorted form, due to the extreme width of the room. Far the better proposition would have been to have placed the exit near corner R, with the entrance near corner S, or vice versa, with the operating room where the fire-escape now is, and the screen where the entrance now is. If the operating room is located at A and the screen at B, the screen will have to set somewhat in the position shown by the dotted lines, else there will be very heavy distortion, in fact it would be impossible to have the machine at A, and the screen flat against the wall at B.

Wonderful Invention.

J. C. Brennan, Braddock, Pennsylvania, has evolved a marvelous and ingenious invention of which he sends in quite an elaborate drawing, and, incidentally, the drawing is fairly well done, too, but not quite good enough to reproduce. It is too bad, too, because I am sure the managers of high-class houses would instantly install this particular device for the comfort and convenience of their operators. Friend Brennan describes his apparatus as follows:

> John C. Brennan, operator at the Knickerbocker theater, Braddock, Pa., has evolved the following invention the purpose of which is to save time and enhance the convenience of the operator. The knob is removed from the carbon feed handle of the lamp (the rod which brings the carbons together), and a rod is taken from the stereopticon attachment and fastened thereto, so that it acts as a crank. A string is run from the end of this crank up to a pulley at the ceiling, and out through into another room where it comes down from another pulley to a convenient position beside a chair. Now the operator can, by the means of this device, take his seat outside the operating room, and if he has a motor driven machine, can sit there in comfort, away from the heat of the arc, throughout the whole reel, feeding the carbons when necessary merely by pulling the string.

Friend Brennan then very naively remarks: "If this is fit to publish please notify me as to the week it will appear, so that I may see it, for although we get the MOVING PICTURE WORLD I seldom read it."

I guess friend Brennan seldom "reads it" all right. I have, of course, merely published this "invention" as a rather good piece of comedy. However, I will invite our correspondents to comment on the same, and tell friend Brennan their impression of the device he has evolved. For myself, I would suggest that the operator have a couch and a few novels handy in an adjoining room, with a winuow in front of the couch so that he could glance up occasionally, say at the end of each chapter, and jerk the string if it seems necessary. But, after all, why annoy the operator?

From Dear Old Lunnon.

Jack Titford, 33 Haggerston Road, London, N. E. England, writes:

> Since you think the boys of the Stars and Stripes would like to know how operators are treated on this side of the pond, I will try and convey an idea, in as little space as I can. First, with regard to wages: they are rotten. In the small houses 25 to 30 shillings a week is the rule and £2 10 is about the limit in the best houses. Perhaps £2 a week would be a fair average. (£2 would be little less than $10.—Ed.). You doubtless know, however, that money has a greater purchasing power over here than it has in America. Most of the shows in the large towns open at 2 or 3 o'clock and run until 11 p. m. Others run continuously from 6 to 11 o'clock or twice nightly. The usual duties of the operator consists of running the 'graph (Cinematograph.—Ed.), looking after the motor generator, fans, inside lighting, flame arcs, etc. An assistant is provided to rewind, etc., and if he has had any experience and has been with you for some time he runs the projector on alternate reels. Nearly every house has two projectors, which are run alternately. Motor generators delivering 60 volts are nearly always used for projection current, though small shows sometimes, if the supply is a.c., use a static transformer to reduce the voltage to 60 a.c. Rectifiers are very seldom seen. Gas or petrol engines and dynamos are used when there is no juice, or where it is costly. All cables in the box (Operating room.—Ed.) must be in screwed iron barrel. (Probably meaning B. X.—Ed.). Iron shutters must be fitted to the port holes, which are covered with plate glass, and the box itself must be made of fireproof material, usually brick, and there must be a separate room for rewinding, and another for the generator. The doors must be fireproof, open outward, and be self-closing. A pail of water, one wet blanket, and a pail of sand must be kept inside the box when the projectors are working. The observation port is usually six inches square and we cordially dislike the glass in it; in fact, we take it out whenever we get the chance, as the stray beams of light turn it into a mirror, and you cannot see through unless you put your eyes right up against the glass. Our projectors are nearly all motor driven. Dynamos where used are usually compound wound, with shunt regulator to control the load. Resistance is always placed in the a.c. circuit to cut down amperage when striking up. Fairly high amperage is common, owing to the popularity of the plaster screens. As much as 120 amperes is sometimes used in big shows, and I pity the school taught operator who tries to handle it, because it is some job. Fortunately for us the managers are prejudiced against the school taught experts (?), so they drift out of the trade they want to ruin by offering to work for next to nothing, though I will say that is about what they are worth. Projection is pretty good wherever there is a decent man in the box, and when it is not up to the mark you can guess there is a "muggins" in charge. Another thing: a great many of our operators are very conceited, and fearfully pig-headed. There is only one good picture, and the one he projects is it. He can find plenty of faults in everyone's else work, but none, dear me, no, in his own. In fact, there is only one better operator than himself, and he's dead. Well, I think this is quite enough for once, and I am going to close by wishing yourself and the boys over there the best of luck.

I was somewhat amused when the brother said "fairly high amperage" and then sprung that 120 stunt. Why, brother Titford, if you put our American boys up against 120 amperes they would drop dead with heart failure. Over here we consider 50 amperes d.c. about the limit, and very few go above 60 amperes a.c., though in rare cases I have known of a little more being used. However, Kinemacolor men have pulled as much as 80. Personally, I do not see much logic in using 120 amperes with a condenser 4½ inches in diameter, and, by the way, I understand that many of the English condensers are only 4 inches. You get some additional light, but my experience is that when you go above 50 amperes d.c. your crater becomes so large that a 4½ inch condenser is only able to utilize a very small fraction of the added light. Your letter will be very interesting to our men. Come again when the spirit moves you.

Architect of Projection.

In a recent speech before a gathering of moving picture managers a certain well know individual said he hoped in the near future to see an architect of projection in the field—someone who thoroughly understood the various points involved, and who would take up the work of improving projection, or words to that effect. I wrote this gentleman, rather taking him to task for his remarks, and now have his reply which in part reads as follows:

> I did not make myself quite plain as to what I meant by an "Architect of Projection." I meant there should be someone who had no affiliation with any line of business who would really and truly build up projection. There is no question at all about the great value of your work in that line, and it ought to be even more popular with the exhibitors than with the operators, because, the way I look at it, your work is of great benefit to the exhibitor because he is given a chance of knowing what is what, and knowledge is power. There is no question but that you have done more than any other living person to disseminate knowledge on projection. I believe, however, there are many exhibitors who feel that you are stronger for the operator than you are for the exhibitor. That is the only criticism I ever heard. Of course, it is natural the exhibitor would rather have you fighting his battle, and, personally, I would like to see you do it.

I am not printing this letter to toot my own horn, but because I want to use it as a basis for certain remarks, and it happens to be a mighty good basis for those remarks, too.

The brother says he hopes to see an architect of projection "not affiliated with any line of business." Well, if he expects to find an architect of projection who is not affiliated with the business in any financial way he had better hunt up a list of philanthropists and philosophers, because only there will he find what he seeks. The architect of projection he talks about might not be affiliated directly with any manufacturer or any other line of business, but you can take it from me that, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, he would be literally swamped with sub rosa affiliations. The writer of this department has absolutely no affiliation of any kind whatever, either directly, indirectly, sub rosa, or any other way, except with the Moving Picture World, which publication pays him a liberal salary for conducting the department, and a royalty on the sales of his Handbook. He absolutely defies any man, company or corporation to come forward and point out any instance where he has ever accepted one solitary cent from anybody, directly or indirectly, except in one instance where he allowed a certain manufacturer to pay his expenses to go a considerable distance to look at a certain article and watch its performances. That happened two or three years ago.

On the other hand, take the man who enters the business purely and wholly as an architect of projection: Do you think for a moment that such a man would refuse "commissions" from manufacturers to recommend certain products? Well if you do you have got a lot of faith in human nature, and considerable more, I think, than the facts would warrant. But, anyhow, even supposing he did, this architect would be in the business for the fees he would receive, and not from any philanthropic point of view.

And now as to my being "strong" for the operator, which is the real thing I wanted to talk about anyway. Whether I am strong for the operator or the manager depends entirely upon the point of view. As a matter of fact, according to my perverted ideas, I am not fighting the battles of one any more than I am fighting the battles of the other. I have simply taken the position that projection is one of the very foundation stones of the whole business—not the foundation stone, but one of several, and it is one of the important stones, too, which, if it be of poor material, will very largely weaken the whole structure. I take the position that it is to the very best interest of the manager to have high class projection, in all that that term implies; I take the further position that high class projection, low salaries and rotten operating room conditions do not, can not, never have, and never will sleep in one bed. Therefore my contention is that in demanding better salaries and better operating room conditions I am not only fighting the battle of the operator, but I am at the same time fighting the battle of the manager, and of the business as a whole, even though I am doing it against the will of the aforesaid managers, too many of whom are trying to do the impossible by seeking to add up one and one and secure three as a result, one and one representing low wages and poor operating room conditions, and three excellence in projection.

Let me ask why don't the Vitagraph theater, the Strand theater and other houses of that class employ fifteen-dollar-a-week "operators"? The answer is easy. The fifteen-dollar-a-week man is a cheap man, and a cheap man puts cheap results on the screen, and that doesn't pay. Why is it that out in San Francisco you will find a clear, brilliant screen and high-class projection in any theater you may choose to enter? The answer is again simple. In San Francisco the operators receive from $30 to $40 a week. The manager is paying for high-class results, and when he pays for high-class results you can bet your everlasting old woolen socks he is going to get them or know the reason why. Do you think if the salaries in San Francisco were reduced to $20 the results on the screen would be the same? Not on your daguerreotype! Not in a million years! It is a matter of plain, ordinary, horse sense, gentlemen; it is a matter of one and one makes two, not three.

Of course, you could hire a man for $40 and not get results either, but when a manager does pay $40 he does not accept anything and everything that is shot at the screen; he is paying for good work, and he is going to have it. Also when he pays big money he is going to study a little himself, and find out whether he is getting value received or not, but over and above all else high salaries attract high-class men, and low salaries the reverse. Again, gentlemen, it is a proposition that one and one makes two, and therefore I can say in demanding higher salaries and better operating conditions the editor of this department has for the past five years fought the battle of the manager just as much as he has that of the operator, the difference being, of course, that the operator could see the benefit because it came to him in dollars and cents and better working conditions, whereas the manager could not see the benefit largely by reason of the fact that nine out of ten of him doesn't know the possibilities of projection. They simply regarded Richardson as a crank, and some of them went to the extent of saying a "damned" crank on projection. One exhibitor at the last convention summed the matter up when he shook hands with me and said: "Well, Richardson, since I have visited the Vitagraph and some of the other theaters on Broadway, I see what you are talking about. I thought I had a fine picture, and that you were just talking to hear your mouth rattle, but I am going back home and there is going to be a cloud of dust around my operating room as soon as I get there, and that dust will represent the shaking up that is coming to my operator." I asked him how much he paid the aforesaid operator (his house is in a city of probably 60,000 population) and he said $17. I just looked at him. Of course, $17 in that town is considerably more than $17 in New York City would be, but I told him he had better shake up his pocketbook, too, if he wanted to get the real thing on his screen, and come across with at least $25.00.

"Opportunities Have No Schedule Time—You Must Be at the Station When They Arrive."

Now, Mr. Operator, I want you to put on your strongest pair of specs, use a condensing lens for a magnifying glass, and study the above carefully; I may even say prayerfully. The editor of this department has for lo, these many years, been telling you that the profession of operating was on the up-grade, that there was coming a time when there would be managers who would be willing to pay the price for high-class work. But, Mr. Man, are you preparing yourself, so that when the opportunity arrives you will be ready to grasp it? Are you combining your daily work with study and preparing yourself to be a credit, not only to yourself but to the organization to which you may belong, or are you dallying along, depending chiefly upon the main strength and awkwardness of your organization to increase your salary, instead of helping out by being really worth more money? There was a time when main strength and awkwardness was THE thing, but in this advanced age progressive labor organizations only resort to main strength as a final and last resort, when all things else have been tried and have failed. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which typifies perhaps the highest there is in labor organizations, would no more think of assisting an incompetent engineer to maintain his position than it would to blow up the general manager's office with dynamite. Only the low-class union does that now-a-days, and only the low-class man expects his union to maintain him in his position when he cannot or does not deliver satisfactory service, meaning by satisfactory service the best projection that can be delivered on the screen, under the conditions surrounding the individual case. But, anyhow, laying those matters aside, there are right now plenty of opportunities for high-class operators to secure salaries far above the union scale. Right here in New York City there are a very considerable number of members of Local Union 306 who are being paid from five to fifteen dollars above the union scale, but when the opportunity came they were right there at the station, ready to climb on board; in other words, they had learned how to place high class results on the screen and, moreover, they had the energy to apply their knowledge. They had established a reputation for high-class work, and when the time came that the manager said: "Send me your best man; I am willing to pay thirty, thirty-five or forty dollars for a man who can and will deliver the goods," they were ready at the station. The opportunity pulled in, they climbed on board, and left the idler—the self-satisfied don't-need-to-study fool, stuck on the low-price bench, where he will probably remain until he drops down and out. And so I say, my brothers, study the heading of this little screed. Think it over. Hold a little communion with yourselves, and see if you are preparing to meet the opportunity when it arrives. Are you on the way to the station, or are you sitting in idleness by the road side, dividing your time between swearing at the manager and cursing your "luck?"

Damaged Film.

S. B. Lewis, Winchester, Ky., submits 12 inches of film with the following letter.

> Will you examine the inclosed sample of film which I have just received from my exchange which charges me with damaging a whole reel. Am using a Power's Six A with motor, and am at a loss to know just how this happened, as I have had no trouble either before or since. Have made careful examination of machine and everything seems to be O. K. Could this have happened before I ran the same, and then my running it caused more trouble? I have a boy to rewind, and the picture was perfect at all times while I was using the film. I should, of course, have examined the film before returning it to the exchange.

Yes, but, still more important, my brother, you should have examined it before you ran it. The reel is ruined if it is all like the sample. but it is exceedingly difficult to say what caused the damage. The celluloid bars between the sprocket holes on the right hand side, that is right hand side as it would be in the machine, are cracked all the way along, some of them clear through and some only partly through. There is no evidence of scratching, but there is evidence of a heavy indentation, though the strange part is that the indentation seems to have been made with something sharp, just half way between the sprocket holes. At first I thought it was possible that the fault was an imperfection in the celluloid itself, but examination under a powerful glass shows that something has punched the film just halfway between the sprocket holes; what this could have been is beyond me, because it occurs between every blooming one of those sprocket holes, and it looks just as though you took the point of a lead pencil and punched it into the celluloid just exactly halfway between the holes. I give it up. Anyone who has had a similar experience and has located the trouble will kindly inform us as to what caused the damage.

Three-Wire System.

Brooklyn, New York, writes the following somewhat curious letter:

To whom it may concern: I would like to know a little more about the three wire system. The one principal thing I want to know I have been unable to find, though it is simple. When I have an overload on the negative side of the panel board, which is the left-hand side of the diagram I have made so you could understand it better, I would like to know which is the positive wire of the negative side when I have an overload, and if the dynamo on the negative side runs positive to the 15 ampere overload. I would like to know which of the two wires go to the positive of my two arc lamps the leads for which I have connected directly to the mains. I want to know if there are two positive wires in this case, the one that carries the 15 amperes and the one that runs in series to balance the load. Let me know as soon as you please.

The brother's letter is somewhat amusing, but what he is driving at can be plainly seen, I think. I will again try to explain the action of the three wire system, because there are many licensed operators right here in New York City who do not thoroughly understand it. In the first place, taking the diagram for an example, there is no positive or negative side to the panel board, taken as a whole. The three-wire system is, in effect, two two-wire systems so arranged that they work in series with each other up to the balancing of the load, and separately with regard to anything more than the load balance. I have marked the wires 1, 2, and 3, in circles, for my own convenience in reference. Wire No. 1 is connected, let us assume, to the negative terminal of one dynamo, while wire No. 3 is connected to the positive terminal of the other dynamo, each dynamo being a 110 volt machine. Now if you simply connect the positive brush of the first machine to the negative brush of the second machine you would have a 220-volt straight two-wire system, the same as though it were operated by one 220-volt generator. With the three-wire system that is exactly the connection that is made. The negative of one dynamo is connected to wire No. 1 and the positive of the other dynamo to wire No. 3; then the positive brush of the first dynamo and the negative brush of the second dynamo are connected together and to wire No. 2, called the neutral. The action is, so far as positives and negatives be concerned, that the neutral wire will be positive to the machine which has its negative connected to one of the outside wires; in this case No. 1, therefore the neutral, will be positive to wire No. 1 and negative to wire No. 3.

On one side the operator has 30 amperes flowing to incandescent circuits, and on the other side 20 amperes, but on the 20-ampere side he has 25 amperes going to the projection arc, which makes a total of 45 amperes on one side and 30 on the other, thus throwing an overload of 15 amperes on wires 1 and 2. The action in such a case is as follows: Up to 30 amperes the current works in series at 220 volts, and the neutral wire performs no duty whatsoever between the panel board and the dynamo, but there is a 15-ampere surplus on wires 1 and 2 so that the dynamo connected to wires 1 and 2 will actually be producing 15 amperes more than the other machine, and this 15 amperes will come in on wire No. 2, the neutral, which is the positive of this dynamo, and go back on wire No. 1 which is the negative.

There is no way of telling which wire is positive and which is neutral except by testing the matter, which may be done in a number of ways, as has been described many times in the department. The three-wire system is quite puzzling to a great many, but it is, in fact, a very simple proposition indeed, and one which it seems as though the average man ought to grasp very readily through a study of what is set forth in the Handbook.

Old Law and New Conditions.

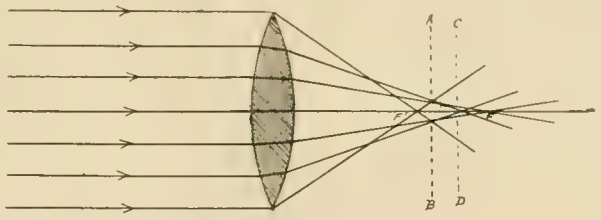
A year or two ago the Legislature of New York, in its wisdom, without consulting anyone in any authoritative way directly connected with practical projection matters, passed a law fixing the minimum floor space of operating rooms. At that time this minimum did not leave any spare space. The minimum size for two machines is 9x8 feet. This was based on the Power's Six, the Edison Model B, and the Motiograph old style machine, and for two of either of these projectors the good Lord knows it was small enough.

Strange as it may seem, however, times change, and, yet more strange, machines also change, but the law in its mighty majesty remains fixed and unalterable. Imagine placing two Baird projectors in one of those operating rooms, or even two Simplex, or two Power's Six A of the latest type. The operator would pretty near have to climb in through the vent hole in the ceiling and sit on top of one of the lamp houses while he operated the machine, and yet it is a cold-blooded fact that moving picture operating rooms are actually being built to contain these projectors, using the minimum fixed by law for old style machines which were by comparison about in the same proposition in size as a Mississippi River steamer is to a modern battleship.

This comment has been called forth by the fact that one of our New York boys came to the office for certain information and mentioned that two Power's Six A are to be put in an 8 x 9 operating room, and that he did not quite know how he was going to get along, or rather get around. I don't, either. My sympathies are with him. But the queer part is that the manager of this house will expect the operator to deliver results, and will probably raise a tremendous howl if he does not. Also to show the further heights of intelligence to which builders of theaters arise, there is, in this particular house, no basement, and no other place in which to locate the motor generator which is going to be used. I suppose the operator will be expected to strap it on his back and carry it around with him, or maybe it will be placed under one of the machines in that "operating room," or perhaps it will be bolted to the ceiling upside down. There is no telling what some of these supposed-to-be intelligent architects of moving picture theaters will do when it comes to the operating room.

Three Lens Condensers.

This department has, on several occasions, called the attention of managers, operators and manufacturers to the desirability of a three-lens condenser combination in projection machines. We have also, particularly of late, insisted on the use of a condenser holder which would eliminate breakage. We have come to the conclusion that such a holder is entirely practicable, and that the Elbert holder very nearly fulfills the conditions, as does also the new Simplex machine holder. We believe that machine manufacturers should, without exception, adopt a holder of this kind. Our reason for this recommendation is, we again repeat, so that we can, in turn, insist upon theater managers supplying their machines with high grade condensers—a condenser system costing, perhaps, as much as $10.00. Why do we want these high grade lenses, you ask?



The above picture represents what is called spherical aberration. The same cut, together with a description of what spherical aberration is, will be found on page 352 of the Handbook. It will be observed that, whereas light rays A and B cross at one point, light rays F cross at another point, C and D at a third, and F at a fourth point. As a matter of fact these rays are numbered by the millions, and they have millions of different crossing points, each at a different distance from the surface of the lens. This is what is called "spherical aberration." Its effect is not only a direct loss of light, but an injury to the definition of the picture on the screen. Spherical aberration is always present where a single lens is used and in an ordinary plano-convex two lens condenser combination, and it is present in an increasing degree as the quality of the lens decreases; also as curvature of the lens increases. The addition, however, of a third lens acts to very largely correct spherical aberration, and with three lenses, each of comparatively high grade, we shall have this trouble very nearly eliminated. But first, as I said before, we have got to stop condenser breakage, and again, as I said before, condenser breakage can be stopped. We used to think it could not, but we used to think a lot of things could not be done which have since been done, and now are so common that we think nothing of them. Yes, condenser breakage can, at least to all intents and purposes, be eliminated; of that I am firmly convinced. It is simply a question of careful experiment and some added cost, but the cost will be more than compensated for by the saving in lenses.

Another effect of the addition of the third lens is to shorten the equivalent focus of the combination, without adding to the lens curvature, which has the effect of bringing the arc up closer to the front combination, and thus utilizing a greater percentage of the light, or rather securing the same amount of light with a less amperage, and if the back lens be made meniscus, this effect is still further enhanced. In the old days the average manager would have objected to the added cost of a high-class three-lens condenser system, and heavy condenser holders, but the manager, or a goodly percentage of him, is now getting to the point where he is willing to pay, if you can show him he gets value received for his money, and, most certainly, in a proposition of this kind he would not only get value received, but value received several times over.

OPERATORS Are you perfectly satisfied with the results you get on the screen?

The new second edition of the

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

420 Pages Illustrated

By F. H. Richardson

$2.50 Each Postage Paid will be the standard textbook on the subject for many years.

Address all orders and remittances to

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

THE JUNGLE SAMARITAN (Selig), August 11.—A very interesting and plausible story is engrafted in this plot, which holds the closest attention. One cannot help but sympathize with the widow's stepson. There is some beautiful scenes in the African wilds and incidents that are very exciting. The shooting of a lion, for instance, and a struggle with a tiger with bare hands. In the finale there is a beautiful scene where the lovers walk away together down the long road to happiness.

THE BURGLAR ALARM (Melies), August 11.—A vamped over burglar story, concerning an automatic burglar alarm, which is installed on account of numerous burglaries in the neighborhood. It "works." A depredator is captured and the women take him in hand. What is left of him is thrown into jail for sixty days. This is a lively offering.

HE WANTED WORK (Lubin), August 11.—There is a whole lot of fun in this offering, if it does bear the brand of inconsistency. A colored man makes up as an Irishman to obtain a job. He gets it and also several other things. On the same reel with "The Cook Next Door."

THE COOK NEXT DOOR (Lubin), August 11.—On the same reel with "He Wanted Work." This is a worthy little comedy. A cook inherits a house in a fashionable part of the city. Her neighbors try to humiliate her, but she wins them over, also the policeman of her choice. E. P. Sargent is the author of both.

OLD MAN HIGGENBOTHAM'S DAUGHTER (Kalem), August 11.—This is a rural pictureplay, the plot of which contains heart interest throughout. An obdurate father is the cause of most of the trouble. It contains many scenes which are worked out in continuity. There is one intense scene where the husband of the girl who has been forbidden to marry almost loses his life. There is a happy ending where they are all brought together by the inevitable little "youngster." It held the interest of the audience. Irene Boyle is featured as the daughter.

STOPPING THE LIMITED (Essanay), August 11.—A story of an elopement which is rather original in its way. The limited train accidentally stops at Bangor, and the daughter of a wealthy manufacturer and her lover jump aboard and elope. The girl's father informs the railroad that the limited took on passengers at Bangor. The father to prove his information true is forced to forgive the young couple and the railroad makes Bangor a regular stop. This is a mild comedy.

A TALE OF OLD TUCSON (Edison), August 11.—This is the old tale of the foreclosure of a mortgage, on a ranch in the west this time. The mortgage is held by a Mexican. Mistrust, treachery and intrigue are the predominating features. There is some beautifully photographed scenes which take in a wide expanse of desert and foothills. The acting is adequate.

THE NEW STENOGRAPHER (Vitagraph), August 12,—A silent comedy by J. Stuart Blackton. It has been reviewed in the Moving Picture World; also enacted at the Vitagraph Theater, Broadway, two hundred and fifty times.

THE FAMILY RECORD (Selig), August 12.—This is a very meritorious pictureplay, with a plot that is interesting and contains humanity. It concerns a sea captain who wins a woman away from his employer, who after their marriage discharges him. He ships as a sailor on a boat bound for the South sea, is wrecked and cast upon a desert island. He is rescued after having found a quantity of valuable peals. Returning he locates his wife from a combination of interesting circumstances in which the old family Bible figures prominently. This release holds the closest interest.

SINEWS OF THE DEAD (Melies), August 12.—A more harrowing conception than the theme of this picture could hardly be dug up. It is illogical, disgusting and not deserving of further comment, except that it is well acted, directed and photographed.

THE FABLE OF THE MANOEUVRES OF JOEL AND FATHER'S SECOND TIME ON EARTH (Essanay), August 12.—This is another one of George Ade's fable pictures and is certainly a corker. A son gets his father to sign over his property to him to relieve him of the worry of taking care of it. As soon as he obtains the deeds he places the old man in a home for the destitute. The father tires of his condition, escapes, gets a lawyer who picks holes in the papers and the father fires the son out and gets married. Moral: "Bring your father up so he won't be ungrateful." A continuous laugh.

ANDY LEARNS TO SWIM (Edison), August 12.—Andy did not care much for water, either internally of externally, but one day when it was swelteringly hot he visited Coney Island, and seeing others disporting themselves in the water, he indulges and learns to swim. He saves a drowning little girl and makes another hero of himself.

THE HORSE-THIEF (Vitagraph), August 13.—This is a western picture which contains a very pretty plot. While some cowboys are enjoying a scrap, an excited foreigner who is in a hurry to obtain a doctor takes one of their horses. He narrowly escapes being lynched, he tries to convince them that he did not intend to steal the horse, but was going for a doctor for his wife. The sheriff's daughter saves him in the nick of time and explains to the boys. They all go for the doctor and hustle him to the foreigner's cabin, where a little baby is born. The boys all chip in and present the baby with the contribution. There is a great deal of human nature in this offering and it is well worth viewing.

A KING BY FORCE (Melies), August 13.—Omar Fatima is forced to become king of a Balkan estate. The salary is so meagre that he cannot support his harem. It gets into such a state that he gives it away, then he strikes for higher wages. A revolution occurs and he puts up a good fight, overwhelmed, with his wife, he leaps into the sea and they swim home. Funny, but foolish.

SLIPPERY SLIM AND HIS TOMBSTONE (Essanay), August 13.—Mostly every body laughs at the adventures and misadventures of Slippery Slim, Mustang Pete and Sophie Clutts. This release compares favorably with those that have gone before. There are many funny scenes. Pete has plans, but Slim knocks them galley-west.

THE MIX-UP AT MURPHY'S (Biograph), August 13.—A laughable farce comedy. Murphy is giving a costume party. A tramp steals a chicken and being pursued mixes in with the mummers. A series of mistaken identity incidents go to make the fun. On the same reel with "Curing Mr. Goodheart."

CURING MR. GOODHEART (Biograph), August 13.—Another farce comedy where a man, like Happy Hooligan attempts to lend a helping hand to everyone in trouble, but which always results in misfortune to himself. It gains some very good laughs.

WHILE THE TIDE WAS RISING (Edison), August 14.—Considerable exciting interest to the spectator pertains in this offering. Ungratefulness is shown by an aviator who is saved from a watery grave by the lover of a girl whom he persuades to elope with him later, in a motorboat. The lover follows, overtakes and thrashes his rival to a finish. The girl has been left in a shack which is engulfed in the rising tide. The lover rescues her in the nick of time. There is lively action in this picture, and beautiful scenes have been well photographed.

POLISHING UP (Vitagraph), August 14.—This is a very funny Vitagraph comedy in which Bunny and Flora Finch "cut all kinds of capers." The complications that occur, involving all the characters, including the doctor, are well handled and cause continuous laughter. At one time it looks like war, but the humor of the whole thing dawns on the belligerents and they conclude to abide by mediation. For a one reel this is chock full of meat.

MELLERDRAMA (Selig), August 14.—This is mellerdramar pure and simple. There is the villainous villain who marries the girl and abuses her cruelly. Her former lover mixes in and attempts to befriend her. There is a side issue which includes a miners' fight and a murder; then the house is set on fire to destroy evidence of the crime. The girl is rescued and all ends happily. If it is a comedy it is funny. It gets laughs anyway. On the same reel with "The Day of the Dog."

THE DAY OF THE DOG (Selig), August 14.—On the same reel with "Mellerdrama." The tale of a poor little pup looking for a home. He finds it through a stick of dynamite. An interesting little comedy that takes greatly with the audience.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR PANTS (Kalem), August 14.—A comedy pictureplay written by Marshall Nielan and featuring Ruth Roland. This is a story of a divided skirt, and a politician who is running for office. He finds the skirt beats trousers all hollow in landing the feminine vote. There is a great deal of good comedy in this picture and it goes finely with the audience.

LATIN BLOOD (Lubin), August 14.—A visualization that is most egregious in its plot. Inconsistencies seem to be the main feature. By a combination of circumstances and a mixing of notes a man who plots to have his rival killed is himself stabbed by mistake. Only a fair offering.

PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 50, August 15.—A good without being an unusual number. There are views of the Czar drinking to the success of his soldiers, some of whom pass in review; auto race in Angers, France; race of the Corinthian Yacht Club of Marblehead, Mass.; the human side of the Kaiser, shown greeting a number of children; French soldiers at St. Quentin, France, and the great tennis match at Forrest Hills, L. I.

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S BURGLAR (Biograph), August 15.—The incidents developed in this plot are essentially human. The leading characters are the district attorney, and his wife. There are several interesting complications which eventually work out satisfactorily. There is suspense in this offering that holds to the end. It is a well directed and photographed picture and the acting is of the first-class brand.

NAN'S VICTORY (Selig), August 15.—The plot of this comedy-drama contains a love story illustrating the old saying, " 'Tis better to have loved and lost, than never to have loved at all." A little fisher maiden risks her life to save her rival. Rather something out of the ordinary and contains heart interest, also some comedy scenes. There are some beautiful scenes of wonderful scope and clear photography shown. It seemed to take well with the audience.

THE PUNCTURE-PROOF SOCK MAN (Lubin), August 15.—On the same reel with "They Bought a Boat." The inventor of puncture-proof socks becomes so wrapped up in them, and getting orders for them, that he forgets everything else. He even forgets to eat he is so worked up over his invention. There is good comedy in this offering.

THEY BOUGHT A BOAT (Lubin), August 15.—Yes, and having bought it they start on a cruise. It is a motorboat and they must have a cabinboy. They engage one, a three hundred pounder, and put out to sea. The boat springs a leak. While they bail the cabinboy pumps water into the boat. An old salt informs them that they are aground in ten inches of water and that they had better wade ashore. On the same reel with "The Puncture-Proof Sock Man."

NEAR DEATH'S DOOR (Kalem), August 15.—The plot of this story is somewhat conventional. It contains a secret marriage, an angry and obdurate father, a combination of circumstances and a striking resemblance, that causes jealousy. There is a sensational scene where the side of a hill is blown out by dynamite, which causes a landslide that buries three persons. This is an original and intensified scene. The photography is beautiful and the acting up to the standard. A good offering.

BRONCH BILLY WINS OUT (Essanay), August 15.—Broncho Billy falls in love and is accepted by the school teacher in his "district." Of course he has a rival in the affections of his fiancee. There is a mock hold-up scene, inaugurated by the rival, wherein Broncho's sweetheart shoots him with a blank cartridge. The rival's duplicity is discovered and he is "shooed" out of the state. Billy marries the school teacher. The interest is rather mild.

SWEEDIE AND THE DOUBLE EXPOSURE (Essanay), August 17.—This is a real funny comedy that causes almost continuous laughter. A kid takes a picture of Sweedie sitting on a bench; he takes one of his father sitting on the same bench, forgetting to turn the film. The double exposure gives the effect of Sweedie sitting on his father's lap. He shows it to his mother; things happen to father. He shows it to the iceman and the milkman who are rivals for Sweedie's affection. Imagine the result.

THE ADVENTURE OF THE PICKPOCKET (Edison), August 17.—This is an "Octavius" comedy. He visits Coney Island to spy out pickpockets. He arrests the leading lady in a motion picture scene, thereby getting into trouble. During lunch he offers his protection to a lady who steals his pocketbook; however he gets credit for her arrest.

TIM, THE TERROR (Biograph), August 17.—While this comedy is illogical it is nevertheless comical and gains many laughs. A desperate outlaw is the hero. He discovers a poor widow who is about to be evicted, being unable to pay off a mortgage held by a Dutch magistrate. The outlaw forces the Dutchman to eat the mortgage and then "jine" him to the widder. On the same reel with "A Game of Freezeout."

A GAME OF FREEZEOUT (Biograph), August 17.—On the same reel with "Tim, the Terror." Two lovers, an admirer and an ice-box are the leading characters that furnish the comedy in this. The ending is considerable of a surprise.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 49 (Selig), August 17.—Many topical scenes are shown in different parts of the world, including military manoeuvers, etc.

PRIVATE DENNIS HOGAN (Vitagraph), August 17.—This is a military drama, the action of which takes place in the far west, and to view it fires one with patriotism. Dennis Hogan is an expert telegrapher, out of a job and broke he joins the army. By his knowledge of telegraphy he saves his detachment, standing between his comrades and death, thereby losing his own life. Darwin Karr and Charles Wellesley play the leading parts. This is a splendid offering and is well produced in every respect.

DAKAR, THE PRINCIPAL PORT OF SENEGAL, FRENCH WEST AFRICA (Pathe), August 17.—Interesting scenes in and about the principal seaport of West Africa. One of the best is a view of native soldiers drilling.

MILITARY TRAINED DOGS, BELGIUM (Pathe), August 17.—On the same reel as the foregoing is this unusually timely picture, showing how the Belgian soldiers have trained their four-footed servants to aid them in making war. The dogs are used as beasts of burden, and most willing ones, in hauling small rapid-fire guns mounted on bicycle-wheeled carriages. The bright animals draw these weapons through places where horses could not go, and are particularly efficient on the skirmish line.

CAIRO, THE CAPITAL OF EGYPT (Pathe), August 18.—There is a panoramic view of the great city and many scenes of the principal points of interest.

URIAGE AND VICINITY (Pathe), August 18.—On the same reel as the foregoing is this marvelously beautiful series of views of Eastern France. The picture is in brilliant and clear colors and well photographed. An unusual release.

Licensed Specials.

DAVID GARRICK (Vitagraph), August 11.—This is a two-part visualization of the old comedy-drama. Several others have been made by different companies. This one is, perhaps, the best that has been released. It features James Young and Clara Kimball Young, with an all-star cast. To the older people in the audience it is very interesting. The acting is admirable.

AT THE END OF THE ROPE (Kalem), August 12. A two-part photoplay story of the west, featuring Princess Mona Darkfeather. It is filled with many exciting scenes, thoroughly melodramatic, some of which are probable and many of them full of shudders. The ending leaves an outlaw in an awful predicament. If he climbs a rope he will be killed, if he lets go of it and drops he will be murdered. It is certainly lurid enough to please the most fastidious.

THE DOWNWARD PATH (Lubin), August 12.—This two-part pictureplay is almost identical in plot with one which was released by another company several months ago, and is of just about the same merit. How either of them passed the censors is to be wondered at. A son shoots his father and attempts to throw the blame on a burglar, who escapes. He then shifts the crime, or attempts to, on the shoulders of his sister's sweetheart. Finally his conscience forces him to confess to the awful crime.

THE BILTMORE DIAMOND (Melies), August 13.—A two-part pictureplay wherein a woman, who is the owner of a valuable diamond, foils two scoundrels who are determined to rob her. The working out of the plot is very interesting. It contains several intense and exciting scenes and also a good punch, wherein an exciting automobile race occurs, ending with the car occupied by the robbers being hurled over a cliff. The photography is well done and several beautiful scenes are shown.

THE HEART REBELLIOUS (Lubin), August 13.—A two-part, mildly melodramatic offering, with a plot that carries with it complications concerning a man who falls in love and marries an adventuress. He takes her to his western ranch where she is rebellious. He attempts to break her spirit by force, but fails. She falls over a cliff, accidentally, and is seriously hurt. He nurses her tenderly, thus winning her love. She prevents her father, who is a crook, from robbing her husband. In the finale there seems to be assurance of future happiness. A well made and acted picture.

THE ONE WHO LOVED HIM BEST (Edison), August 14.—A two-part picture which develops an interesting story concerning a father and his two daughters. The elder, a selfish creature, and the younger directly opposite in nature. The father is induced to make his will in his elder daughter's favor. Shortly afterwards he dies. Mabel Trunnelle, Bigelow Cooper, Marjorie Ellison and Herbert Prior have the leading characters. The scenes are on the southern coast and are beautiful and finely photographed. There is a satisfactory surprise in the ending scene. It is written and produced by Richard Ridgely. It is a very pleasing release.

A GENTLEMAN OF LEISURE (Essanay), August 14.—A two-part pictureplay adapted from a story in Munsey's Magazine. The plot contains complications enough for ten reels. It is somewhat melodramatic in nature and contains a regular villain, who has everything his own way, until the finale when he comes to grief. There is a good mob scene and thrilling incidents, an attempted kidnapping scene, etc. Everything is explained satisfactorily and all is happiness in the end.

THE WHEAT AND THE TARES (Vitagraph), August 15.—This two-part Vitagraph pictureplay lacks much of originality. It introduces the villain with the mortgage on the farm who gives evidence against the farmer's daughter's sweetheart, convicting him of her father's murder. He is foiled by an unexpected confession, is arrested for perjury and his victim and every body concerned rejoice in his downfall. Dorothy Kelly, James Morrison and George Cooper have the principal parts.

THE VOICE OF THE BELLS (Melies), August 15.—In this two-part offering two men are rivals for the affections of the same girl. The story is rather old. The rejected lover is the bell ringer for the church and in pique he refuses to ring the bell at the marriage ceremony of his rival. Years later, the child of the couple dies and again he refuses to pull the bell, but he is forced to make the voice of the bell speak. A pleasing but not very strong offering.

THE OLD ARMY COAT (Kalem), August 17.—A special two-part picture drama. This release has been reviewed at length, and can be found on page 945, Moving Picture World, issue of August 15, 1914.

A SPEC ON THE WALL (Selig), August 17.—A special two-part picture-drama. The plot of this production is not at all wholesome nor is it logical. A husband who is supposed to have committed suicide, and who is found dead with a revolver lying beside his body has possessed an old friend, a detective, who suspects foul play and who investigates and discovers that the man's wife and her lover had killed him by means of an explosive cigar; not very convincing.

DETECTIVE DAN CUPID (Nestor), Aug. 7.—Man sees pretty girl in a San Francisco park and steals a bag from her so that he might find occasion to return it and get acquainted. She puts a detective on the case and sails away. He gets on the ship and is carried to sea. The detective, after a comical chase, is likewise. The whole is carried forward with Nestor sprightliness and makes a likable, light and amusing offering. The photography is, as usual, excellent.

Independent

A COAT'S TALE (Keystone), Aug. 8.—In this low comedy number the Yiddish tailor's assistant exchanges two coats. This leads to a wild chase on the part of the angry owner. The scenes are of a rapid-fire, knockabout order. This would have been funnier with a little more plot to begin with.

THE SAVING FLAME (Majestic), Aug. 11.—Francelia Billington and Robert Harron appear in this number, portraying seacoast scenes. The fisherman's wife becomes infatuated by the city man. He tries to make love to her, the husband returns and there is a knife duel proposed. The wife prevents this by knocking the lamp over and setting fire to the house. This is well pictured and full of action.

THE FACE ON THE BARROOM FLOOR (Keystone), Aug. 10.—A very amusing burlesque on the famous poem that has been recited so many times. The poem itself is altered in places and the action is entirely of the low comedy sort. Chas. Chaplain wins new laurels in the leading part. This is bound to please.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, No. 127, Aug. 12.—Timely picture of King George and Queen Mary visiting the Kaiser, revewing troops, etc. These familiar views have now taken on an additional interest. Pictures of the treasure ship, Tennessee, and drawings by Hy Mayer are also shown.

RECREATION (Keystone), Aug. 13.—A nonsencial half reel in which Chas. Chaplain gives his familiar tramp characterization. These park scenes, in which everybody lands in the lake, will amuse admirers of this company's performances.

THE YOSEMITE (Keystone), Aug. 13.—On same reel with above. A number of views taken in the famous national park, showing the high Sierras, waterfalls and other rugged scenes.

A RURAL ROMANCE (Princess), Aug. 14.—A business man desires his eldest daughter to marry one of his friends, but the girl refuses. Later the friend meets the youngest daughter at a country place and falls in love with her. The story is agreeable in tone but lacks any big moments and is not treated in a very novel way.

CUPID DANCES THE TANGO (Royal), Aug. 15.—The members of the bachelor club are woman haters, but each decides to take lessons from the Hobbs sisters in the tango. All meet on the dance floor. There is an idea in this, but the plot lacks complication and does not rise to the necessary climax. The characterizations were acceptable.

HER "BIG" BROTHER (Thanhouser), Aug. 16.—A little girl does not listen to the domineering advice of her brother and insists on going in bathing with the boys. She wins a swimming race and gets a medal. This is a good little plot but did not seem to be worked up very skilfully. The swimming race was handled in too perfunctory a way, when it should have aroused more suspense.

BILL SAVES THE DAY (Komic), Aug. 16.—This is No. 4 of Bill, the Office Boy series. It demonstrates entertainingly how Bill induces the manager to buy an electric fan. Later he holds the anxious financial callers by leading them to play roulette with the fan. A good comedy plot worked out in a pleasing manner.

HIS WIFE'S FLIRTATION (Sterling), Aug. 17.—This tells the story of a flirtatious young wife. The traveling man loses his clothes and goes through most of the scenes in a bathing suit. Some of the situations are too suggestive and the humor is not strong.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL, No. 31 (Reliance), Aug. 17.—In this number Dunbar is cleared of suspicion of having stolen the jewls by a demonstration of finger prints, conducted by Margaret. The girl also tries on some of the garments made by a well-known sporting house. The next number continues the jewel-hunt. This number is only fairly interesting.

THAT MINSTREL MAN (Keystone), Aug. 17.—The Keystone company appears here in black face. A genuine minstrel show setting is presented and the Fat Boy is dressed as a huge dusky belle. She loans her jewels to the magician on the stage, and this starts a riot. The usual slapstick methods prevail and this will undoubtedly please lovers of that style of humor.

THE INNER CONSCIENCE (Majestic), Aug. 18.—This is the story of a neglected wife who falls in love with her physician. Later the husband proves a hero by saving both from drowning. There are some good effects in this and the cast and photography are pleasing.

THE SILENCE OF JOHN GORDON (Beauty), Aug. 18.—This story of a young minister who knocks down and punishes a married man trying to elope with an innocent girl, proves very pleasing. The garden scenes are attractive, the characterizations good and the photography clear. Harry Pollard and Marguerita Fischer are in the cast.

THEIR WORDLY GOODS (American), Aug. 19.—Vivian Rich, Wm. Garwood and Jack Richardson appear in this number, the latter as a particularly villainous looking thief. The young wife, who took the money from the safe to spend it, succeeds in keeping it away from the marauder. Her husband gives her credit she really does not deserve in consequence. This makes very fair entertainment, though not powerfully handled.

THOSE COUNTRY KIDS (Keystone), Aug. 20.—Mabel and the Fat Boy disport themselves in a lively manner in this reel. There are shooting, brick-throwing, a police raid and numerous other rapid-fire scenes. The fine photography helps out this slapstick comedy.

LOST IN A STUDIO (Sterling), Aug. 20.—Little Billy visits the moving picture studio in this number and gets lost while playing with some kittens. Pictures of Ford Sterling and his director, Robert Thornby, are shown. The plot is not very strong in this and it depends largely upon Billy's popularity for interest.

HIS LONG LOST FRIEND (Royal), Aug. 22.—A tramp drops into a hotel and writes a note to a girl he had once known in early life, telling her he will call. His reception by the family is very chilly. He crawls up the chimney and there is a lot of slapstick comedy. This was not sufficiently strong in plot to prove very entertaining.

A PEARL OF GREAT PRICE (Eclair), Aug. 23.—A story featuring Fred Truesdell and Julia Stewart. The introduction is not overclear, but aided by good acting and a story that develops into a bit of a punch the picture will interest.

THE STRANGE SIGNAL (Frontier), Aug. 23.—The scheming brother plans to hold Joe a captive while he marries the girl and inherits the property. But Joe flashes a signal to the sheriff's office, by means of a bit of looking glass, and thus obtains relief. The rather unique plot is the strongest feature of this production, which has an ordinary Western town setting.

THE HOLE IN THE GARDEN WALL (Rex), Aug. 23.—A pretty story, written by Rupert Julian, who also plays the lover. Elsie Jane Wilson is the girl. The scheming rival brings about a change in the roses, leading to a misunderstanding which it took years to right. Felix Walsh makes a charming little cupid, who finally reunites the lovers. His adoption was shown rather obscurely, but the film as a whole proves attractive.

THERE IS A DESTINY (Victor), Aug. 24.—A seacoast story with Warren Kerrigan and Vera Sisson in the leads. The natural acting and development of this story makes it particularly pleasing. The love scenes are especially attractive. These features, together with good photography and fine scenic effects, make the film a desirable one.

BARRELED (Crystal), Aug. 25.—Charlie DeForrest, pursued by the girl's father, dives into a barrel and then wears this over his head through numerous scenes. Nothing particularly new in this half reel eccentric offering, but it is has amusing moments.

BASHFUL BEN (Crystal), Aug. 25.—This, on same reel with above, shows the efforts of a bashful young man to get up nerve enough to propose. When he does so the girl turns out to be already married. Mildly amusing.

THE LITTLE AUTO-GO-MOBILE (Joker), Aug. 26.—This offering ranges from straight comedy to farce and then drops into plain burlesque. Ernest Shields and Bess Merredyth play the married couple, who quarrel over their automobile. The plot is quite pleasing and the photography good, though the manner of developing the story could have been a little more consistent.

MATTY, THE UNIVERSAL BOY No. 4 (Imp), Aug. 27.—In this new number Matty takes a strong interest in wireless telegraphy. Later he plays detective and saves a white girl from Chinese wireless operators. The photography in this number was not quite up to standard in places. The story itself works up to quite an interesting situation, but is not to be classed as strong.

WELL! WELL! (Joker), Aug. 29.—Max Asher and Hank dig a well to win the hand of their loved one. The scenes are in the country and the comedy is of a low order. It will get some laughs, as some of the action is funny, but it is not a highly sucessful effort.

THE JANITOR'S SON (Frontier), Aug. 30.—A story within a story, in which the janitor tells his son of the fruits of crime. Later the mother restores the wallet and saves her son from arrest. This is developed in an ordinary way and the photography is only fair. Yet the plot has sufficient action and ingenuity to hold the interest. It makes a fair number.

THE BOOB'S NEMESIS (Rex), Aug. 30.—Robert Leonard here appears in his familiar character of the country boob. His chase to the city to rescue his girl from the snare of the city man was full of action and proves very entertaining. Ella Hall and Harry Carter also appear. A good offering.

THE MASHER'S MISHAP (Eclectic).—A Hartigan comedy and a good one. It is farcical in its action, which is a story of the troubles that befell a married man who paid too much attention to a handsome woman just across the airshaft. It is finely staged and photographed.

Independent Specials

A NEW YORK GIRL (Keystone), Aug. 6.—A two-reel farce with many things in it that are comical and sure to waken laughter; but somewhat uneven taken as a whole. It is a good offering; for though it is not up to the richest comics made by Keystone, it has little of the very rough work that some of them have had, and more situation. Nothing in it is wholly new, but much of it is quite fresh. Mack Sennet, himself, has a role.

THE WAGON OF DEATH (Reliance), Aug. 15.—A two-reel story of the California oil fields. This would have been stronger and more compact if told in one reel; as it stands there are many jerky, unnecessary scenes. The photography and general atmosphere of the production are agreeable. The story concerns an attempted theft from a nitro-glycerine wagon, which is exploded by a gunshot from a distance in order to save the girl. The situations toward the close are interesting, but the story as a whole is not strongly handled.

HER MOTHER'S NECKLACE (Majestic), Aug. 16.—A two-reel story of domestic life, featuring Dorothy Gish as a young girl jealous of the woman her widowed father intends to marry. Irene Hunt is the widow and Howard Gay the father. This makes a good study of child temperament and Miss Gish handles cleverly the part of the sensitive daughter. There are no intensely exciting scenes in this, the nearest being where the girl holds up the thief, but the scenes throughout are pleasing and the story develops easily and naturally.

FALSE GODS (American), Aug. 17.—This makes a good story of character development, and it is handled with considerable skill by a cast including John Steppling, Ed Coxen and Winnifred Greenwood. It begins in the West, showing how the young wife grubstakes Bad Penny Tom, who strikes gold and makes them all very rich. Then John, the husband, gets into high society, when the wife fails. This point seemed a little improbable, but is of small consequence to the story. The husband's later career in politics was convincingly shown; he falls into the clutches of a widow lobbyist, who deserts him after his financial failure. Tom then reunites the family. This is well constructed and entertaining throughout.

THE LURE OF THE GEISHA (Bison), Aug. 22.—A two-reel number, made in Japan, with William Clifford and company in the cast. The Japanese scenes are very attractive, though some of them have an effect of having been thrust in without regard to the plot. The later developments are tragic and hold the attention strongly. The lover of one of the Geisha girls becomes jealous of Clifford, through the machinations of the villainous Bainbridge. The girl is killed in the struggle. A good offering of its type.

McCARN PLAYS FATE (Thanhouser), Aug. 8.—A two-reel detective photoplay from a story written by Henry Oyen. F. A. Kelsey, Irene

Hunt and Thos. O'Brien are in the cast. The photography is very good throughout. This deals with a gang of political gun-men and winds up with a fatal brawl in a saloon. The detective in the case, learning that the gun-men are laying for a certain officer, frames up things so they shoot each other by mistake. The fighting is dramatic and well staged. The production as a whole deals with rough city life, but will hold the attention of the average observer.

THE WINNING OF DENISE (Kay-Bee), August 21.—A two-part feature play written by Thomas H. Ince and Richard V. Spencer. Walter Edwards is the director. This is a story of the Northern Canadian country. It contains some good scenes of the north woods. A trapper is sent to the city for some money for the fur company. On the way he is mistaken for a deer and shot by a trapper's daughter. She takes him to the cabin of her father, who is very angry. During the action of the picture the father's life is saved by the young trapper. The young people fall in love and the father, through gratitude, forms a partnership with the younger man. This is a strong release.

THE CHARACTER WOMAN (Eclair), Aug. 24.—This two-reel offering gives Julia Stuart her big opportunity, and she makes the part of the "character" actress a strong and convincing one. The manner in which she saves the young actress from her former husband's clutches makes a story of strong appeal. This is a stage drama which gets away from commonplace incidents and depends more upon good acting than ordinarily happens. It catches the interest and holds it throughout the entire production.

JIM WEBB, SENATOR (Imp), Aug. 24.—A strong three-reel political number, with King Baggot and Leah Baird in the leads. Mr. Baggot makes an interesting figure as the upright young country politician just entering the senate in Washington. The gang of corrupt politicians pick him for a victim, but fail. Then they employ a bewitching female lobbyist to ensnare him. Jim falls in love with her, but she never betrays him, as her heart is won by a visit to his old home. Mrs. Allan Walker appears as the mother. This is a well-rounded story, convincingly acted and well photographed throughout. The scenes toward the close get up good suspense. A strong offering.

THE DEAD RECKONING (Gold Seal, Series No. 4), Aug. 25.—This new installment of the Trey O' Hearts series finds Rosa a prisoner on the schooner. Alan and Barcus sight the vessel from the desert shore and go to it after capturing a boat in a very neat manner. The sudden appearance of Judith and her friends on the schooner precipitates a very active series of events, so active in fact as to almost obscure the motive in places. But Rose and her friends finally escape another time, and the second reel closes with them rowing out into the darkness in a small boat. This holds the interest well.

THE SHERIFF'S SISTER (Broncho), Aug. 26.—A story of rough Western life, in which the young lover is accused of a murder committed by another. Later he escapes from prison, saves the girl and the gold and is cleared by the confession of the villain. The situations are none of them very new but are put on with such fine action and suspense that the story is followed closely by the observer. The hold-up of the stage and Jack's defense in the cabin were done with spirit. Throughout the scenic effects and general atmosphere are commendable.

MADEMOISELLE ANDREA (Rex), Aug. 27.—Quite out of the beaten rout, this two-part offering by James Dayton and put on by Joseph De Grasse is especially well acted. The story, after stating a situation which normal human emotions make deeply interesting, takes the heroine's desire for vengeance as its theme and shows what comes of it, to the happy ending. The theme is made plausible; yet the general spectator has much less personal interest in it. To make up for this lesser humanity (a thing that only a Shakespeare can do in some Hamlet) it is made sensational and startling. The most convincing acting is done by Agnes Vernon as the very pretty sister of the clearly drawn story's hero (Rupert Julian). The vengeful Andrea is played well by Elsie Jean Wilson. On the whole an offering stronger than most and one that will probably be quite acceptable to patrons.

THE VILLAGE 'NEATH THE SEA (Domino), Aug. 27.—A two-part offering in which the cleverly contrived conceit of showing an Indian village as though seen through clear waters is the most commendable thing. The story seems made to set this one thing out and lacks the convincing liveliness that makes a picture really interesting. The love story in which all the characters are redmen is rather trite in outline and depends for suspense on its incidents. We never get deeply interested in the lovers or the villain; but to see frail canoes amid the breakers of the ocean is, in itself, something of an experience. The photography is clear.

THE LAW OF THE LUMBERJACK (Bison), Aug. 29.—This story of the Redwood lumber camps is alive with interest and action. Val Paul does some effective work as the lumber camp bully. The story itself is of secondary importance compared to numerous scenes in the big forest. A giant redwood is shown crashing to earth, carrying smaller trees before it. Huge logs are lifted and rolled on their way to the mill. The ride down the flume with the injured man is one of the best features of the kind we have ever seen. An out-of-doors yarn that will meet with wide appreciation. Clifford, Bainbridge and Marie Walcamp are also in the cast.

THE MAN FROM NOWHERE (Victor), Aug. 31.—There is a touch of genuine romance in this two-reel Western offering. Warren Kerrigan appears as the mysterious stranger who comes riding up out of the desert. He flirts with the barmaid and later defends the heroine. The saloon is shot up in traditional fashion and the stranger then bears away the young girl as his bride. The rough Mexican setting is good and the story proves absorbing. Vera Sisson is appealing as the girl, and George Periolat gives a fine piece of character work as the Mexican bartender. A good number.

DELIVERED BY DEATH (Warner's Features).—A three-reel picture that will astonish most spectators. It is a good picture of such bad morals that the astonishment will amount to a sense of pleasure almost. It is not at all suggestive and the crimes committed in it are the usual melodramatic crimes; but in this case they are convincing. The characters are aristocratic Europeans and the place is Stamboul. They are sweet characters; the only decent people in the picture are the Turks. Quite new in what it shows and fresh in the way it is handled, it is a wholly entertaining offering. Sunday schools better leave it off the program; but for almost any public show anywhere it is fine. The act is of the best.

THE PUPPET'S DOWRY (Warner's Features).—A three-reel offering from the Milano studio and a very interesting and likable though not strongly convincing picture. There are two points of great interest in it, a little girl lost after a fire and her mother, who is too poor to support her in the early scene, and who marries a count. The child is adopted by a puppet showman and grows up to have her own pretty love story. It stands on its prettiness and on the pleasantly colored thread of romance that runs through it. The acting and photography is commendable.

NICK WINTER AND THE LOST PRINCE (Eclectic).—This elaborate three-reel production will please and entertain. It is one of the series of stories in which Nick, the detective, figures so conspicuously. In this case, as the man for whom he is searching is a prince, there are scenes of courts and courtiers. The action is heightened by many scenes taking place in a hotel made over from a castle. There are blind elevators and mechanical contrivances facilitating unexpected appearances and disappearances. There are good dramatic situations, several of them thrilling.

BON RAY TAKES LARGE CONTRACT.

What is perhaps the largest industrial film undertaking yet assumed by any company is the combination of contracts recently made by the Bon Ray Film Company of Woodside, L. I., with practically all of the Southern States. The Bon Ray Film Company has agreed to have something like 250,000 feet of film descriptive of the industries, scenery and advantages of the Southern States completed by November first. These films will be exhibited in the respective State buildings of the Southern States at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. The contracts were negotiated by F. E. Holliday, president of the Bon Ray Film Company, within the past two weeks, while on a trip over the South. The business details of the work are being handled by S. I. Connor, G. W. Brennan and Albert Blum, and the camera work by Otto Gilmore, Wm. J. Kraft and William Colfax. These men are now all at work in the South.

$58,000 PICTURE THEATER IN ONEIDA, N. Y.

The Oneida Amusement Co., Inc., has leased the Madison, a $58,000 house in Oneida, N. Y. The officers are F. A. Scanlan, president; C. H. Skinner, vice-president; J. B. Coughlin, treasurer, and Frederic Hathaway, secretary and general manager. Mr. Hathaway has been identified with the motion picture industry for twelve years and is an enthusiast in raising the standard of photoplays.

The policy of the theater will be the exploiting of the best in motion pictures, with an occasional high-class legitimate attraction, the spacious stage 52 x 35 feet being adapted for A1 productions. For picture presentations the stage will be dressed with an elaborate setting while the operating booth will be equipped with two Power's 6A machines. The house will open the season about August 25 with a seating capacity of 1,200.

ROLAND BLAISDELL TAKING A REST.

Roland Blaisdell, treasurer of the Centaur Film Company, is spending two weeks at Hulette's, Lake George, N. Y.

Marie Dressler in Her 120 hp. Motor Car, Featured in a Side-Splitting Keystone Comedy.

De Mille "Talks Shop"

Tells of the Great Advantage Pictures Afford in Producing Dramatic Effects.

THE broad chasm between the production seen upon the screen and the same piece on the legitimate stage perhaps best tells why producers and directors of note are daily deserting the theater for the studio.

One of the first legitimate directors to abandon the theater for the motion picture was Cecil B. De Mille who, one year ago, after fifteen years of activity in the spoken drama, became director general for the Lasky Feature Play Company, and who stands today one of the foremost. To wit, his excellent work in "The Call of the North," which he directed himself, after writing the scenario and selecting the entire cast.

When asked why he had deserted the spoken for the silent, Mr. De Mille talked at length on the subject and compared theatrical productions with motographic—and in the comparison, the spoken drama suffers not a little, and Mr. De Mille, the youngest of a brilliant theatrical family, long identified with the better things of the stage, knows whereof he speaks.

"The scope of the photoplay," said Mr. De Mille, "is so much wider than that of the legitimate. We do things instead of acting them. When a big effect is necessary, such as the burning of a ship, blowing up a mine shaft, wrecking a train, destroying a block of houses, we do not have to resort to trickery. We actually do it. If it is necessary to burn a house, or raze a bridge, to gain atmosphere, we do not employ the time honored lycopodium torches. We buy the house, or bridge, and burn it.

"We do not resort to the illy costumed stage fireman. We hire the fire department. Secure a battalion of police—and if the action of the piece demands, we call out the militia.

Cowboys Scooping Out a River, Solving a Problem.

"If we have a great physical struggle on stage in the legitimate we would have to so arrange the 'business' that the actors participating would not in any way be injured, for the struggle would have to be gone through at least ten times a week. In the screen struggle, where the scene is enacted but once, the combat is real, and, aside from the ultimate victor being known in advance, the struggle rings true. Many times the actors are incapacitated for several hours, but the wonderful effects on the screen act as balm to his bruised being. Each scene is set, each artist engaged, with a view to fidelity to type or race characterized. Every characteristic of a race must be shown. The flaxen hair of the Teuton, the high cheek bones of the Indian, the sturdy physique of the Scotchman, the airy, nonchalant, breezy manner of the Frenchman—all stand out as lasting details. In the case of 'The Call of the North' eighteen Tiger Tribe Indians were used. Permission was obtained from the Dominion Government. Several canoes from the museum at Montreal were loaned us. No stone was left unturned to make the picture absolutely true to the life it portrayed.

"In the photoplay, in contrast with the stage production, ofttimes expensive sets are required which entail the outlay of large sums of money, days of time and attention, yet which appear on the screen but an instant. Yet the same attention to detail in the set must be given as to the one which is before the eye throughout the entire picture.

"Dramatic expression can better be brought out on the screen than on the boards. This is due to the long explanation to which the dramatist is frequently required to resort. In the photoplay there is no long story. The explanation is pictured and shown.

"In 'The Virginian' we needed a deep water hole in a certain river, which, upon investigation, proved too shallow. It was intended to have a stage coach, driven by a supposedly drunken driver, wander from the road and become submerged to the very top, as though caught in the mire. At our wits' end, eighty miles from the nearest railroad and forty miles from our studios, we were about to abandon the scene, when lo—the cowboys solved the problem. Stripping to the waist, making harness of their lariats, taking the bowl of the camp stove, they used their bronchos as dray horses and within two hours had scooped out a hole deep enough for our purpose."

Other interesting examples of the work of the picture maker were mentioned by Mr. De Mille, all tending to the conclusion that the motion picture was superior to the speaking stage in telling a dramatic story.

Concerning "Little Mary"

President Laemmle, of the Universal Film Company, Denies That He Is Guilty of Misleading Statements in His Advertising.

RECENTLY the Moving Picture World and other trade publications have been carrying advertisements ordered by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company announcing that re-issues of pictures made by the old Imp Company in which Mary Pickford was featured would form part of the Universal program. So far as we have been able to ascertain there have been no statements made in the World that could be twisted into inferring, even remotely, that "Little Mary" had left the Famous Players and had joined the producing forces of the Universal. It would not be surprising if such inferences had been drawn, for have we not received many inquiries as to the date of the death of Maurice Costello or of the marriage of John Bunny and Flora Finch.

Under the circumstances we do not wonder that the Famous Players have felt that it was necessary to deny in strenuous terms that "Little Mary" had left their employ, for they have undoubtedly been required to answer many inquiries to that effect.

Believing that his company is the only one advertising the re-issue of "Little Mary" pictures it is not unreasonable that Mr. Laemmle should protest against the charge that he was guilty of unfair advertising methods. He does so in a letter to the Moving Picture World in which he goes into the subject at length, but the substance of his protest is summed up in this printed paragraph:

"Instead of trying to mislead exhibitors I took pains to impress upon them that those releases are re-issues, first because I have always maintained that exhibitors are entitled to know the truth about everything the Universal does; second, because exhibitors who were in business four years ago were well acquainted with the Imp's work and were familiar with the fact that these old releases of Miss Pickford were of excellent quality."

It is a fact, as stated by Mr. Laemmle, that the Imp Company was the first to give "Little Mary" the publicity her ability deserved and, through that ability, Imp pictures in which she appeared were the mainstay of the independent movement at that time. Others have since profited by the popularity of "Little Mary" created partly by the Imp Company; there is no gainsaying that fact. Nevertheless, those who now enjoy her services are extremely jealous of their rights.

The situation presented is interesting. There is no parallel in the theatrical business, for there the dramatic star can appear in but one place at a time. But the motion picture star appears in hundreds of theaters and under the auspices of as many different companies as she has previously worked for.

In the case of the re-issue of "Little Mary" pictures made by the Imp Company there can be no question of the right of that company to issue those pictures at this or any other time. The pictures are its property and all rights are owned by it. So long as it does not advertise them in such a way as to lead the public to believe that it controls not only the pictures but "Little Mary" as well no fault can be found. In this case President Laemmle disclaims having so offended.

It is not uncommon for a situation of this kind to arise in the book publishing business, where the appearance of an exceedingly popular book by some prolific author gives occasion for publishers of books by the same author to profit by his vogue.

We have never heard that any complaint was made of that practice; rather has the publisher of the latest book profited by the extra advertising of his competitors. We believe that the Famous Players and its affiliated companies or distributors will enjoy the same advantage from the Universal campaign.

Irish History on the Screen

Walter Macnamara, Back from the Old Sod, Talks Interestingly of the Making of His Latest Picture.

By George Blaisdell.

TO be arrested in Dublin on one day on a charge of importing arms into Ireland and then on the following day to be entertained in the Mansion House by the Lord Mayor and the high municipal functionaries is a unique experience. As Walter Macnamara puts it "Such a thing could happen to no man on earth but an Irishman, and in no land on earth but Ireland. It was all most characteristically Irish."

Over there the natives alluded to Mr. Macnamara as a "Yankee." Here in New York, where he has lived since coming to America less than three years ago, every man who knows him speaks of him as a "sure-enough Irishman." The dwellers in the Emerald Isle have justification for the appellation they bestowed on their fellow-countryman, if by the term "Yankee" be meant a man of force, quick wit, keeness of perception and rapid speech. Mr. Macnamara has more than these—and this to film followers is of immediate interest—he has imagination and the constructive, creative ability to erect into tangible, physical being the ideas that crowd his busy brain.

Mr. Macnamara has recently returned to New York from Ireland, where for the better part of five months he directed the exteriors and necessary interiors of an elaborate review of the history of Old Erin from 1798 to 1914. The remaining indoor scenes have been completed and next week will see "Ireland a Nation" ready for the screen. The picture will be 7,000 feet in length. It introduces many famous Irish characters, including John Philpott Curran, Robert Emmet, Michael Dwyer, Father Tom Murphy, Castlereagh, Lord Norbury, Sarah Curran, Ann Devlin, Daniel O'Connell, Smith O'Brien, John Mitchel (the grandfather of the present Mayor of New York City), Thomas Davis and Charles Gavin Duffy.

Walter Macnamara.

There will be scenes of the famine, of the emigration to America, the "land of hope"; the sentencing to death in the Manchester police court of Allan Larkin O'Brien, the release from prison of Michael Davitt, the formation of the new Irish party in 1880, with Charles Stewart Parnell as the leader; the imprisonment of the Irish members, and the famous Kilmainham treaty of the eighties; leading through many vicissitudes to the year of hope, 1914—home rule for Ireland enacted into English law—and the carving by Mother Erin of an epitaph upon the tombstone of Robert Emmet, in accordance with the terms of the injunction he laid upon his fellow-patriots just before his death.

Mr. Macnamara was unable to find a studio in Ireland suitable for picture making, so he erected many of his interiors in a greenhouse, which he found very satisfactory. This obviated bringing back to America many of his players. In the photographing of the scenes of the trial of Robert Emmet, of the sittings of the Irish Parliament, of the interior of Emmet's house and also the home of the Currans the producer faithfully followed old prints for his settings. Among those taking part in the discussions of the Irish Parliament were ten Irish M. P.'s. Mr. Macnamara's work received an unusual amount of attention from such papers as the London Times, Daily Mail, Evening News, Westminster Gazette and Pall Mall Gazette.

Mr. Macnamara in the course of his trip had many interesting experiences, not the least of which were the initial episodes of the arrest for importing arms and the immediately subsequent events. The producer stirred officialdom in Dublin when he insisted upon his unconditional release and a restoration of his property. "And 'props' they were all right," he said the other day. "Every gun was over a century old and you couldn't get a shot through any one of them on a bet. It made no difference, however. While my release followed the reading of a stiff cable dispatch I had prepared, they still have the guns and the costumes; I never could get them back. It was at the height of the Ulster agitation, and I was told there was a condition of revolution."

Mr. Macnamara got a quiet revenge for his loss, however. He entered heartily into the political campaign. He made speeches for the Nationalist cause and on one Sunday enrolled 680 men as Irish Volunteers. On Clapham Commons, in London, he addressed audiences of from three to five thousand persons. Of course, it was the natural thing for an Irishman with oratorical powers—all true sons of Erin possess these, to be sure—to take sides on this great question.

"Did I have any difficulties in finding locations?" replied Mr. Macnamara in response to a question. "Yes, in one instance, certainly, when I tried to find a mud hut and failed. Parnell wiped those out. I did, though, get some wonderful backgrounds, as I think you will agree when you see the picture." Taking up some stills, the producer continued: "Here is a fort built by Oliver Cromwell. To this day no real son of the old sod passes it without spitting—that's the only way he can adequately express his feelings for the builder. In this photograph here, of Glendalough, you see the ruin of a structure destroyed by the Danes nearly a thousand years ago—no one knows when it was built. I have tried to get absolute accuracy in my backgrounds—authentic locations—and I think I have succeeded.

Dwyer's Men at Glendalough.

"Were any obstacles placed in my path in the making of 'Ireland a Nation'? Yes, indeed, by the soldiers. Sometimes we would start to take a scene with not a soul in sight. It seemed sometimes that in two minutes soldiers would come from everywhere and demand to see a permit. Think of having a permit to take the side of a mountain! Of course, the picture was revolutionary in character, and the military tried in every way to handicap us. That's why we were five months over there. The people? They couldn't do enough for us. The Nationalist party gave us unofficial sanction."

Mr. Macnamara has been in the picture business but eighteen months, but he has done things. The first twelve of this period he was with the Universal Company, at one time being associated with George Tucker, now producing for the London Film Company; later Mr. Macnamara had an Imp company of his own. It was during the alliance with Mr. Tucker that Mr. Macnamara wrote and Mr. Tucker produced "Traffic in Souls," the melodrama that is reported to have yielded a profit to the Universal alone of a quarter of a million dollars in the first three months. It was the first picture not taken from a novel or a play to receive a Broadway booking—and it had a long run. So, too, it is the first picture play ever used as the basis of a novel. "Traffic in Souls" has been showing for four months in Free Trade Hall, Manchester, England. Mr. Macnamara wrote many Imp successes.

"In the picture business the story is the thing," said Mr. Macnamara. "It is the factor that will win right along the line. I look upon the screen as the instrument for solving in the near future many social problems, of bringing classes nearer each other so that the one may see the other's viewpoint. A big story ought to carry a big message; and it must feed the eye as well as the heart. Properly to make a big picture requires the expenditure of money, and especially of time. One of the secrets of Griffith's success is that he takes time and does his work properly. As to the future? I am going to confine my attention to big stuff—psychological, yes; I am going to try to contribute to the forces that make for the broadening out of humanity. I doubt if there is a villain in the world, if there is a hero in the world. We are all to a great extent creatures of circumstances."

European Film Star Joins Centaur

Baroness Von Dewitz Resumes Professional Career Under David Horsley—Has Approval in Big Production.

MLLE. VALKYRIEN, one of the most celebrated motion picture actresses of Europe, has been engaged by David Horsley for the Centaur Film Company of Bayonne, N. J. During the last year, Mlle. Valkyrien appeared in the productions of the leading motion picture concerns of Denmark and Germany, including the Great Northern and the Danish Biograph, and achieved considerable popularity.

While at the height of her fame Mlle. Valkyrien, who is but twenty years old, gave up her professional career to become the wife of the Baron Hrolf von De Witz, a lieutenant in the Royal Danish Navy. She accompanied her husband to New York last June, believing at that time that she had quit the stage forever. Like many another person of rank both in and out of the profession, the Baroness' plans were changed entirely by the present great war in Europe.

Mlle. Valkyrien.

Immediately after the outbreak of hostilities between France and Germany, the Baron von De Witz, who during his active military service was aviation expert of the Danish Government and inventor of the devices by which projectiles are dropped from aeroplanes, became "War Editor" of one of the big New York daily papers. His work in this connection has become so exacting as to keep him at his desk from twelve to eighteen hours a day. In consequence the Baroness has been left without the companionship of her husband the greater part of the time. She finds herself to be very much "alone in a strange land." In order to occupy her time and stall off a threatening attack of homesickness, the young star resolved to return to active work in the studio and under the circumstances there was nothing for the Baron to do but consent.

David Horsley heard of Mlle. Valkyrien's great reputation during his visit to Denmark last summer and was much impressed with her work before the camera. When he saw the newspaper stories concerning the arrival in this country of the Baron and Baroness, he immediately sent the Baroness an offer to appear as the star in a big feature he then had in contemplation.

This offer was refused, but fortunately the letter was retained, and when the decision to "come back" was reached, Mr. Horsley was the first producer to be considered, and received an offer from the Baroness on Saturday of last week. Mr. Horsley snapped it up like a flash and on Monday of this week the Baroness was rehearsing for her first Centaur picture, under the direction of Milton Fahrney.

It is Mr. Horsley's intention to create a special brand of refined comedy, featuring Mlle. Valkyrien, to be known as the "Baroness films." This brand will be included in the recently announced program of seven comedies a week to be made at the Centaur studios.

Previous to her entrance into the silent drama, Mlle. Valkyrien was a member of the regular company of the Royal Theatre in Copenhagen. This was an appointment by the crown, and is considered the highest honor in the realm next to a lady-in-waiting to the Queen, that can be achieved by a Danish woman, not of royal blood.

It was while appearing in the Royal Theatre that Mlle. Valkyrien was chosen by the King as Valkyrie of Denmark. Contestants for this great honor are chosen by representatives of the Crown in every city in Denmark, and are called to appear for selection at a special function at the Royal Theatre, the object being to find the woman who most thoroughly typifies the beauty and racial characteristics of the legendary Danes. Mlle. Valkyrien had created a Valkyrien dance especially for the occasion. The King was impressed with her talent as well as her beauty, and conferred upon her the title of "Valkyrien, year of 1914, A. D." From that time until her departure for America, she was the toast of every cafe, club and home in Copenhagen.

Catholic Film Association

New Educational Organization Headed by Dr. Condé B. Pallen—Has Ample Capital.

A NEW organization has entered the educational side of the moving picture field with a view to the entertainment, edification and education of every Catholic parish in the United States if possible. It is called the Catholic Film Association and is headed by Dr. Condé B. Pallen, managing editor of the Catholic Encyclopedia, who is also known to hundreds of thousands of Catholics as a lecturer and writer of note.

Dr. Condé B. Pallen.

Dr. Pallen has associated with him in the venture the following didectors: Dr. James J. Walsh, Joseph Frey, Condé Nast, Frank W. Smith, Bird S. Coler and Blair Frazer. The offices of the organization are to be found on the fourth floor of No. 18 East 41st street, New York City.

The head of the movement talked of his plans at that address this week with the enthusiasm of one who is entering new fields in which he feels that he will find the most congenial of employment.

"I have been watching the motion pictures for some years," he said, "and I have been struck with the tremendous influence for good or evil which the motion picture may have on modern civilization. For one thing, its facility for reaching the general public even to the most remote hamlet has caused me to sit back in astonishment. Its enormous growth has been another source of wonderment to me. And it reaches every class of humanity.

"In some places, Catholic pastors have established moving picture exhibitions for their parishes and their parish schools. Wherever this has been done, it has met with remarkable success. In the way of this success, however, there has been the great difficulty of getting films suitable for exhibition in Catholic churches.

"The Catholic Film Association has entered the field with ample capital and a thoroughly equipped organization to furnish an entire moving picture outfit to every parish, school, society and institution in the country. Every film furnished by the Catholic Film Association is strictly censored from the Catholic standpoint.

"Moreover, the company will manufacture specifically Catholic films. It will furnish the entire equipment on the installment plan, so that no financial burden will be laid even upon the poorest parish. Not only will no money outlay be required and the plan more than pay for itself, but it can make a profit from the very start.

"Besides religious themes in our moving pictures, we shall furnish secular subjects of a good character and dramatic interest. We realize that the people of a Catholic parish must be entertained as well as instructed. Wholesome entertainment is natural to human nature, and we propose to supply in this line pictures, under our censorship, which will be attractive to our people. Our field is immense; in fact, we suffer from an embarrassment of riches in subjects, historical, devotional, legendary and religious.

"With a business organization such as ours, with ample capital at our disposal, we can give a service unequaled by any in the world. We have relation with a number of other companies, that puts all their resources at our immediate command."

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

TRYING TO AMALGAMATE IN NEW YORK.

New York Association Executive Committee Holds Meeting and Adopts Resolutions.

THERE was a meeting of the executive committee of the New York State Exhibitors' Association at the Marlboro Hotel last week at which were present these members of the committee: S. H. Trigger, president; W. A. Douque, secretary; W. H. Linton, treasurer; B. E. Cornell, John F. Miller, L. G. Smith, Max Samuels and H. W. Rosenthal. Others present were A. Baurenfreund, A. A. Corn, Grant W. Anson, William Hilkemeier and S. P. Weissman of the New York Association, and T. A. Keppler, M. L. Fleischman, James L. Deegan, Louis Harris and Mr. Feinblatt of the Cinema Club, representing the New York Local No. 1, of the New York State League No. 11, M. P. E. L. of A.

A discussion of the best method of getting was had and Mr. Douque moved that a resolution be drawn on the question. This was adopted, whereupon Mr. Smith offered this resolution:

WHEREAS, The resolution passed at the Dayton Convention evinced the desire of all motion picture exhibitors in the United States of having only one National organization, now

THEREFOR, to consummate that purpose the state organization of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of New York herewith tender the resignation of all their officers to become effective only after there is but one state organization. The members of the state organization of the International Association are willing to attend a special meeting of the state organization of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, the program of which shall only be as follows:

The meeting to be opened by the state chairman; a committee to be appointed, two from the Exhibitors' League and two from the Motion Picture Association, this committee to pass upon the qualifications of the representatives permitted to participate in the meeting. The representation to be upon the basis of the Ohio state constitution of the M. P. E. L. of A. After the qualification of the delegates have been passed upon the following resolution is to be offered:

WHEREAS, It is the intention of all exhibitors in the State of New York to have but one State organization, now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the members of such State organization shall consist of the members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and the members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of the State of New York. That the resignations of all officers of both the league and the association shall then be tendered and accepted and a new election held.

Seconded by Mr. Linton and carried unanimously.

From the report of the meeting it is gathered that the above proposition was communicated to President Wolff of the State League at Rochester, N. Y., and was rejected by him as not in conformity with the Dayton Resolution, whereupon the Executive Committee of the New York Association reported the substance of their proceedings to President Pearce of the National League and adjourned.

ROSENTHAL URGES UNIFICATION.

Says I. M. P. A. Members Should Prove Their Sincerity by Joining League at Once.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18, 1914.

William A. Douque, secretary Utica Local Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association.

Dear Sir: Having always deplored the existence of two separate and distinct organizations of motion picture exhibitors—although at one time it was practically unavoidable—I rejoice with the rest of the exhibitors of the country, in the action taken in July last at Dayton, Ohio, which has cleared the road for a solid unification of all exhibitors of America into one grand, solid, effective organization.

I feel personally that every exhibitor who was identified or allied with the International Motion Picture Association is in duty and honor bound to abide by the action of the committee on unification which was elected at our convention in New York, with full power to act.

Whether any of us feel that the action of this committee at Dayton was not in full accord with our own individual sentiment and ideas, yet no other course is open to us, if we be really sincere in our oft repeated protestations favoring a single organization of exhibitors, but to accept the action of the committee as final, and govern ourselves accordingly.

From the very inception of the I. M. P. A. our contention was that if the M. P. E. L. of A. would elect a new president and abandon its censorship propaganda, we would come back to the fold. There is no denying this; and now that these ends have been accomplished, by the splendid action of the late president of the league in refusing to be a candidate for re-election, there is nothing left for us to do but prove that we were sincere, and act according to the resolutions adopted by the joint committees at Dayton. These resolutions provided distinctly, by word and implication, that we members of the I. M. P. A. were to affiliate ourselves with the league in our respective states and locals without the payment of any initiation fees.

Now is not the time for quibbling over words or terms or dignity. Now is the time for action.

In New York State and city our course is a simple one. It is to follow out in its fullest sense the Dayton resolutions. In New York City we should apply for membership and join the existing local of the league; and in the state our various locals can secure local charters from the existing state branch of the league; and as the state convention will be held in the near future, we will be eligible to vote for officers, and if we be in the majority, will be able to make the state branch our own. So why quibble about "amalgamation," "surrender" and similar foolish terms, if we really mean to get together.

Although not myself a member of it, I wish to show my faith in the committee elected by the association, of which I had the honor of being national secretary, and have already become a member of New York Local No. 1, of the M. P. E. L. of America, in accordance with the Dayton resolutions of the joint committees, and shall henceforth, as in the past, do all in my humble power to advance the interests of the exhibitors everywhere, and to promote the welfare of the one great exhibitors' organization, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

Kindly bring this matter to the attention of your local at the earliest possible moment, so that we may all be united in New York state by the time of the forthcoming state convention. With best wishes, I remain fraternally yours,

HAROLD W. ROSENTHAL, 630 Fox St.

OHIO CONVENTION CALLED.

Official Notice to the Members of the Ohio State Branch No. 1 of the M. P. E. L. of A.

A meeting in honor of the fourth anniversary of the Ohio State League will be held in Columbus, O., at the Southern Hotel, the place of the birth of our league. Every member is not only invited to attend the fourth anniversary meeting but is urged to attend, that you may see the growth and hear and realize the many benefits the exhibitors of the State of Ohio have derived through the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of our state. We also cordially invite the film manufacturers, the newspapers, film exchanges and non-members to attend, assuring them in advance that we will do our best to make their visit pleasant and profitable.

The fourth anniversary of our league is to be a grand, old-fashioned love feast, a hearty welcome to our friends and an evidence of our strength and thorough organization. The meeting will be convened at 2 o'clock p. m., Tuesday, September 15, and will adjourn at 5 o'clock p. m. A big free get-together banquet will begin at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening. Speakers of national reputation will be present and address the gathering. The convention will reconvene at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, September 16, and will adjourn in ample time to give each member an opportunity to catch his train for home. There will be big doings, business and social. Make your calculations now, so you can be there.

Every question of interest to the Ohio State League will be discussed and every member will be given an opportunity to express his views. If you are for or against censorship, be there. Let us hear what you have to offer as a solution to the problem. If you are for or against a short program, use of motors, Sunday opening, city license, or any other question pertaining to the good and welfare of our business, we will be glad to hear you express them at the meeting. Do not stay at home and then after the meeting is over kick on the action of the meeting.

Remember, we elect all state officers and a legislature this fall, who will make and enforce the laws for two years. We should know our friends and legislative matters will come up at our meeting and, if you are not present, it's your own fault and we will expect you to stand by the decision of the meeting. The original eleven charter members will be present with the exception of our lamented brother, Mr. W. O. Yard; however, Mrs. Virginia Yard, his widow, will be at meeting as the eleventh representative of the original number that organized our league.

(Signed) M. A. NEFF, President.
JOHN H. BROOMHALL, Secretary,
Ohio State Branch No. 1 of the
M. P. E. L. of A.

CALIFORNIA STATE CONVENTION.

The annual state convention of the California Exhibitors' League will be held at Sacramento, Cal., early in October, 1914. Preparations for a large meeting are being made.

"The Film Detective"

Picture Playhouse Film Company Releases an Interesting and Well-Made Four-Part Drama.

THE Picture Playhouse Company will release on August 26 a four-part drama that is well produced. Competent players fill the cast. Among them are Gustav Serena, Maria Jacobini and Luigi Mele. The photography is exceptional; well worth while, too, are the settings. The story interests; the closing scenes are strongly dramatic. There is a lion in this picture, but he is not particularly fierce. He is not one of the features of the plot; he is merely an incident. The picture holds on account of its straight value.

The story is of Jack Daingerfield, a young man in financial difficulties who considers a suggestion from one of his creditors that he marry Mary Delmar, a young woman of means; when Jack meets Mary he falls in love with her. Unknown to him, the two are placed in a compromising position after they have mutually pledged their love—and it is sincere on the part of Jack. Mary learns of the conspiracy and breaks the engagement. Jack turns over to his creditors his life insurance and goes lion hunting for a film company. Lytton, a former rival, and his creditor get together to do harm to Jack while away. One stands to get Mary and the other the money if harm come to Jack.

Scene from "The Film Detective" (Playhouse).

The hunter is shot while in the act of shooting at a lion. In the range of the camera are the would-be assassins. Returned to civilization, Lytton wins Mary's consent while Jack is convalescing. Jack gets back to the studio as his employer is reading an invitation to a reception given for the purpose of announcing the engagement of Lytton and Mary. Jack shows him the film revealing the attempted murder. On the night of the reception the picture is shown on the wall of the ballroom. Jack enters the room at the psychological moment, to the discomfiture of the conspirators, and of course there is a reconciliation between the former lovers.

The picture combines views of ocean and desert. The natural arch under the cliff through which the lovers pass on the way to the island on which they are left overnight is an unusual spot. The interiors, especially those of the home of the Delmars, are luxurious as well as elaborate. The concluding scenes of the reception and reunion make a most happy as well as a stirring finish.

FRED R. SEATON DEAD.

Frederick R. Seaton, well known as a motion picture actor, was instantly killed at his home at Bogota, N. J., on Thursday, August 13. Subsequently the Coroner's jury, upon holding an inquest over the remains, gave as its verdict that Mr. Seaton came to his death by pistol shot wounds inflicted by a person or persons unknown. Testimony of some of the witnesses called cast suspicion upon the wife of the deceased and she has been held upon a homicide charge. Mrs. Seaton is reported to have said that her husband shot himself.

Fred Seaton was especially good in his portrayal of Indian character and was seen in many early Kalem pictures in Indian roles.

"Sins of the Parents"

Ivan Film Productions Co., Inc., Have a Dramatic Story the Strength of Which Overshadows the Unquestioned Ability of Mme. Sarah Adler, the Star.

Reviewed by Randall M. White.

AT first blush, the most impressive thing about "Sins of the Parents," the Ivan Film Productions Co., Inc., five-part feature photoplay, now ready for release, would seem to be the fact that the featured player is Mme. Sarah Adler, the well known emotionalist whose art has charmed thousands of patrons of the Yiddish drama throughout the country. When one sees the picture, however, one is constrained to say that the success of the production will depend upon its remarkably human and virile story, rather than upon such ability as Mme. Adler is permitted to display. Certainly the story is the thing and it is unfortunate, indeed, that there are not greater opportunities for the star of whose abilities as an actress there can be but little doubt.

The story is that of a young girl who is wronged by an ardent lover, in whom she reposed her trust only to be thrown upon the world to support herself and little daughter as best she could. The girl (Mme. Adler) marries a clergyman without having told him of her previous unfortunate experience, and the tangle which results when the daughter of the early love, the clergyman's daughter and the son of the lover who had wronged the girl cross each other's life paths in later years.

Scene from "Sins of the Parents" (Ivan).

In comment it may be said that, despite the fact that there are crowded into the five parts of the picture more harrowing and distressing incidents than one would like to imagine could occur in the combined lives of a score of people, there are few, if any, faults in the logical construction of the plot. Everything that is pictured as happening could very easily happen in real life—indeed, the dramatic climaxes presented are ones to be expected after the foundation of the story has once been laid.

Technically the feature is very well made. The photography is first class and there are only one or two lapses in the staging—a notable one being the representation of a general delivery window in a New York postoffice, the scene suggesting all that New Yorkers like to imply when they speak of Tottenville or Hoboken.

Mme. Adler does very well in view of her limited opportunities. The supporting cast has been well chosen, the exception being in the casting of the juvenile lead, who is not convincing as the son of a New York banker.

"Sins of the Parents" has a just claim to the consideration of photoplay patrons who admire producers who take their work seriously.

KELLETTE GIVES CREDIT TO WILLIAMSONS.

John William Kellette writes to the World that credit for the direction of the submarine pictures at the Museum of Natural History on August 12 should have been given to the Williamsons, the inventors of the apparatus, and to Carl Louis Gregory, of the Thanhouser Company, who photographed the scenes in the Bahamas.

DRAMATIC MIRROR REMOVES OFFICES.

The publication and editorial offices of the New York Dramatic Mirror have been removed to Suite 209 of the Putnam Building, 1493-1505 Broadway.

Answers Call to Colors

Claude Patin, General Secretary of the Eclair, Going Back to Fight for France.

CLAUDE PATIN, general secretary of the Eclair Film Company, who has been located in New York City for a number of years, has engaged passage on the steamship France, of the French line, sailing from New York Tuesday, August 25, in response to a call to the French colors which he has received. Upon his arrival in Paris he will report to the Minister of War, and within a few weeks will actively be engaged in defense of his native land as a participant of the gigantic struggle which has thrown Europe and the entire world into an uproar.

Claude Patin.

Mr. Patin's departure from the United States and his giving up of the more or less peaceful pursuits of the film business to engage in actual fighting provides one concrete example of the effect the European war is having upon the production and handling of photoplays throughout the country. Just as Mr. Patin, high in the business counsels of the Eclair company in his position of secretary of the executive force controlling the concern's business throughout the world, has felt it necessary to pass pictures up completely for the time being, so have actors, mechanicians and business men by the hundreds engaged in the picture business abroad, turned their attention to fighting. It is said that every French and German studio has been closed for some time and that not a single new production has been made in either France or Germany for a number of weeks. None of the American firms depending upon European shipments has received a foot of film from its foreign correspondents for a long time, and few of them have been able to secure cable advices as to when their service is likely to be renewed.

Mr. Patin's direct call to return to France is the result of his honorable association with the Ecole Coloniale, an institution of learning which, in some respects at least, corresponds to the American military and naval schools at West Point and Annapolis. The Ecole Coloniale is the institution of learning in which France trains her young men for service in the administration of her colonial affairs. At the expiration of the two years' rigorous course which is provided each graduate is appointed an administrator at one of the French colonies. Mr. Patin attended the college after he had pursued his studies at several other schools in France and, upon his graduation, was given a commission as administrator of the French colony at Madagascar. During the year which intervened between his appointment and the time it became effective, he came to the United States and took a commercial position in Buffalo, N. Y. When the time came for him to set out for Madagascar, by way of Paris, the lure of life in America had so enmeshed him that he tendered his resignation from the service.

Following the film business in the employ of Gaumont and Eclair, Mr. Patin has been back to France three or four times. His loyalty to his native land and his close association with it, even while in America, has kept him from becoming an American citizen, although he says that he likes America and American institutions very much. As a French subject and a graduate of the Ecole Coloniale, Mr. Patin will be assigned to service in the present war in some position of considerable authority. "I am going back to do whatever is required of me," is the way he expresses the purpose of his return to France. That England and France are allied in the present struggle, with English troops helping to protect the French frontier, makes Mr. Patin believe that he is likely to be sent to the front immediately upon his arrival in Paris to serve as an officer with the English troops where his knowledge of both the French and English languages would be of value.

Mr. Patin is married and his wife and six-year-old daughter are living in their native land about sixty miles from the frontier along which battles have already been waged. They are with Mr. Patin's people and well protected. The trouble in Europe has interfered greatly with their plans for the future, inasmuch as Mr. Patin had planned to bring them to America within the next month for the purpose of establishing a permanent residence in this country.

The Eclair executive is not greatly concerned with the dangers which he expects to encounter and is already planning bigger things in the picture business for the future upon his return to America.

Love Feast at House Opening

Good Feeling Among Exhibitors, Manufacturers and Photoplayers Shown at M. Needles' "Party."

MEN prominent in the affairs of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of New York, photoplayers connected with the Vitagraph Company of America, and others well known in the film industry, were present at the formal opening of M. Needles' remodeled photoplay theater at Twenty-third street and Seventh avenue, New York City, Tuesday evening, August 18, and participated in an informal program of ceremonies which sent the new enterprise off on its road to success with a grand hurrah.

Mr. Needles has been an active exhibitor in New York City for a number of years and is one of the stanchest members of the association. The conduct of his house, it is pointed out, has always been in strict conformity with the ideas which have been advanced by the association as most helpful to the business in general. The theater he opened August 18 is called the Lyric, but was originally known as the Auditorium and was one of the Marcus Loew possessions in the days before Mr. Loew advanced to his present position of affluence. As the Lyric, after having been remodeled at a cost of $7,500, the house seats 600 people and is particularly attractive, both inside and out. The policy adopted calls for the use of only General Film Co. features, the program to average four reels.

The picture chosen for the opening night was "Shadows of the Past," the Vitagraph special feature originally shown at the Vitagraph theater, New York City, and as a special treat for his patrons, Mr. Needles had been able to arrange for the attendance of a number of the principal Vitagraph photoplayers. Sam Spedon, publicity promoter for the Vitagraph people, convoyed the party which was brought to the theater in autos provided by Mr. Needles. Mr. Spedon introduced the players, who were received with that wild and enthusiastic applause which is characteristic of audiences in the habit of assembling in Mr. Needles' locality. "Bill" (Kalem) Wright, vice-president of the Kalem company, who has been a close friend of Mr. Needles for a number of years, was also introduced and enthusiastically received.

Following the opening ceremonies at the theater the guests of the evening repaired to Cavanaugh's cafe on West Twenty-third street, where they were tendered a banquet by Mr. Needles. There were the best and most tasteful of foods to eat and everything one wanted to drink, from democratic beer to plutocratic champagne.

The Vitagraph folks in attendance were: Miss Flora Finch, Miss Leah Baird, Miss Edith Storey and her mother, Mrs. M. Storey; Miss Norma Talmadge and her mother, Mrs. Margaret Talmadge; Miss Julia Swayne Gordon, Hughie Mack, Wallie Van, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ince, Miss Kate Price, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Morey, and Mr. Spedon. Others in attendance were Samuel Trigger, Grant W. Anson, W. A. Rogers and A. Coleman, respectively president, treasurer, counselor and member of the Board of Directors of the Exhibitors' Association; Jack Harvey, of the Thanhouser Company; George Wiley, late secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America; R. L. MacNabb, late vice-president of the League; "Bill" Wright, of the Kalem company; Miss Annie Owens, and Mr. and Mrs. M. Coleman.

Mr. Spedon officiated as toastmaster upon the conclusion of the banquet and there were short speeches by Mr. Trigger, Mr. Wright, Mr. Needles, Miss Storey, Mr. Moray, Miss Gordon, Miss Price, Miss Finch, Miss Baird, Miss Talmadge, Mr. MacNabb, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Anson. Hughie Mack told a couple of funny stories and Wallie Van obliged with a Scotch song which made a decided hit.

Throughout the affair was a splendid example of that spirit of friendliness and co-operation which is being built up among manufacturers, exhibitors and photoplayers to the great benefit of the industry.

"Northern Lights"

Life Photo Film Corporation Presents a Five-Part Adaptation of This "Psychological" Western Drama.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

FREQUENT applause marked the initial showing of the Life Photo Film Corporation's five-part adaptation of "Northern Lights." It was a gathering composed in part of friends of the players appearing on the screen. The story is produced by Edgar Lewis. Mr. Lewis makes much use of big fields, of large numbers of men; he has selected many charming spots, scenes of grass-banked stream and brush-dotted plain, of hill and valley; such as in themselves sharpen the interest and enhance the dramatic side of the subject. He has also effectively used the camera in fading in and out. Mr. Lewis has not been so happy in the radical changes he injected into the script.

Iva Shepard finely portrays the role of Florence Sherwood, the adopted daughter of Colonel Gray, who has married the forceful foreign bacteriologist who displays so much fondness for his own drugs. William H. Tooker is strong as Scene from "The Northern Lights" (Life Photo).

Dr. Sherwood. Harry Spingler, as the cowardly son, does well in a hard part. David Wall, as the roughly garbed scout in love with the deserted wife of Dr. Sherwood, adds interest to one of the subsidiary actions. Harry Knowles is a convincing army officer and gives a fine performance. Catherine La Salle is superb as Helen Dare, the deserted wife of Dr. Sherwood.

There are good situations in this story of several sides. "Northern Lights" will have wide appeal by reason of its double amusement value—on the dramatic side and on the spectacular. There are battles between soldiers and Indians; there is a desperate defense by the few soldiers of the post from the besieging Indians; and there is a long ride by the just-released prisoner in his effort to rehabilitate himself by taking a message through an Indian-infested country, the latter none too convincing.

UNIVERSAL CITY MOVES.

Big Undertaking Conducted Rapidly by Large Force of Employees—Many Improvements in Big Plant.

THE work of removing Universal City from its temporary location a few miles outside of Hollywood, California, to its permanent site on the new ranch, purchased by the company for that purpose is going forward with a rush. Under the direction of Wallace Kerrigan, buildings that have long seen service in the production of the famous Universal dramas and western comedies, are being razed to the ground, loaded upon big auto trucks and flat-topped wagons and hauled over two miles of mountain roads to the new ranch.

The first part of the original city to be moved to the new site was the Zoo, and the day of its removal was one of intense excitement to everyone about the ranch, particularly to Mr. Kerrigan and to James Barnes, the head animal trainer for the Universal Company. Lions and tigers, leopards and coyotes, bears and wolves, together with the hundred odd animals that go to make up the menagerie were loaded cages and all, upon the trucks and driven growling and roaring along the canyon road to the New City. The roads are rough and rutted and for the most part built "on end," and a dozen times as the wagons lurched and twisted this way and that, the danger of overturning the wagons or of tipping off the cages was imminent.

As for the construction of the New City, itself, only by actual observation can any time be gained as to the speed with which it is going up. Already the new cages and pens for the animals have been built and most of them are occupied. Box stalls have been partitioned off for the thoroughbred English saddle-stock, corrals strung for the heavier draft animals and hay barns stand finished and partly filled with bales. The foundations for fully one-half of the buildings have been started and the frameworks for the greater part of these are already being raised, while several of the buildings stand completed and ready for occupancy. William Horsley has charge of this work.

Among these is the quarters for the Universal crack cavalry troop. It consists of a long, well-lighted living room and equally large, light bunk room, concrete floored baths and lavatories and everything that Manager Bernstein of the Hollywood Studios, could think of to add to their comfort. Electricity is used for lighting, and running water has been piped in from a clear, cold spring in a neighboring canyon. Needless to say the boys are overjoyed and are waiting anxiously for the orders to move in.

A quarter of a mile of concrete side walks has been laid and many times that amount soon will be in. A temporary cook house has been erected to serve until the permanent dining room has been completed.

The old original Universal City will soon be a thing of the past, but, like the Phoenix of old, up from the ashes is arising the head of a newer and better Universal city, destined to be the western home of the leader of film manufacturing companies.

C. O. BAUMANN TO ISSUE PROGRAM.

President of the Popular Photo Plays Corporation Announces the Coming Production of Twenty-eight Reels Weekly.

AN announcement of importance in the film world is made this week by Charles O. Baumann, president of the recently-organized Popular Photo Plays Corporation, who for six years has been so prominent a figure in the motion picture industry. It is the issuing of a program of twenty-eight reels weekly, of one, two and three reels in length, which, he says, will be "all features." The new and extensive Willat Studios at Fort Lee will be the home of the new companies. It is Mr. Baumann's intention to reproduce on the screen old plays and recent plays, too—that is, those adaptable to portrayal by the camera. One of the features of the new program will be the method of its distribution. Franchises will be given for stated territories, which will be controlled absolutely by the concessionaires. Contracts with these exchanges will be for a period of ten years, with renewal privileges. More than half of these territories have been already arranged for. Associated with Mr. Baumann will be W. C. Toomey, formerly vice-president and general manager of the Mutual Film Corporation and also president and general manager of the Continental Feature Film Corporation.

Fourteen brands will be included in the releases of the Popular Photo Plays Corporation. These will be produced by the best and most experienced men and women Mr. Baumann can secure. Mr. Baumann lays stress on quality—in scenario, direction, cast, photography and distribution. On the dramatic side there will be brands known as CeeOBee, Willat, Niagara, Palisade, Longacre, Canyon and Continental. In the comedy division there will be the Jester, Luna, Owl, Frolic, Gayety, O. K., and Pastime.

KENNETH CASEY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Word from Johannesburg, South Africa, states that Master Kenneth Casey, the erstwhile "Vitagraph Boy," is scoring a tremendous hit as a vaudeville entertainer. Here is the letter:

Empire Theater, Johannesburg, South Africa, July 12, 1914.
Editor Moving Picture World, New York City.

Dear Sir: It may be of interest to the readers of your good paper to know that Kenneth Casey, a New York boy, has "made good" on the vaudeville stage in Great Britain and in South Africa. No doubt most of his moving picture admirers—not to state his large personal acquaintance made through both his moving picture and vaudeville introductions—would be pleased to learn of his doings. Well, he has been a headliner in the halls in London, Birmingham, Leeds, Liverpool, Glasgow, Manchester, Southampton, Preston Hanley and Newport, and now in Cape Town and Johannesburg.

His journey to South Africa has taken 17 days from England and from Cape Town to Johannesburg 1½ days—the voyage consisting of a stop at Madeira.

As to his success you can gather same better from the reports which are sent under separate cover. Any other available news which I can procure I shall be pleased to send same to you.

Yours respectfully,

M. A. CASEY.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"UNDER ROYAL PATRONAGE" (Essanay).

A story of Germany, involving royal intrigue and romance, although it has absolutely no connection with the present war, is told in the new two-act Essanay photoplay "Under Royal Patronage," which is to be released Friday, September 4.

With Francis X. Bushman in the leading role of an adventurous American who gets into numerous difficulties and finally ends by falling in love with a beautiful Princess, the play has not a dull moment from start to finish.

Beverley Bayne as the Princess, and E. H. Calvert, Bryant Washburn, Thomas Commerford and Charles Hitchcock, show to unusual advantage in this wonderful drama. The settings probably are the most elaborate ever used in a two-act photoplay.

The story is of Francis, reigning Prince of Hofgarten, who wishes to unite his kingdom with the adjoining principality, Strelitzburg. To do this it is necessary for his nephew, Philip, to marry Stella, sister of the neighboring Scene from "Under Royal Patronage" (Essanay).

Prince. She has been away to a convent for years and her brother has no idea as to her appearance. Philip, who has also been in Paris at school for fourteen years, receives a letter from Francis, telling him that should he refuse to marry Stella before he is of age his allowance will be cut off.

Frederick is anxious for his sister to marry Philip, as Francis has promised to redeem the state jewels, which he has pawned, if the marriage is brought about. Philip, upon receiving the letter, is very disconsolate, as he has learned to love another girl, but never disclosed to her that he is of royal birth. He strikes upon a plan. He will send Richard Savage, an adventurous American, to pose as himself. His uncle has not seen him in years and will never doubt the American's identity.

Savage agrees to carry out the scheme, but upon seeing Stella really falls in love with her. Much to his disappointment she spurns his affections, telling him their marriage would be one of convenience, not one of love. Meanwhile, Philip, in Paris, has declared his love for the girl of humble birth, and when he tells her of his royal family, matters are completely changed. They decide to journey to Strelitzburg, as he has only eighteen hours before he becomes of age.

Philip and his fiancee enter the throne room just as Savage and the supposed Princess are to take the solemn vows. Then comes the unexpected—Philip's fiancee is the real Princess and to save herself from a marriage of convenience, substituted her friend, Helen Churchill, of Philadelphia. Both Prince and Princess have sent Americans as substitutes for themselves, and after this is explained the Bishop performs a double ceremony and all ends happily.

"TEMPEST AND SUNSHINE" (Imp).

"Tempest and Sunshine," the novel by Mary J. Holmes, has been read by countless thousands in this country and England. Standing in the same class with such books as "East Lynne" and "Jane Eyre," it has remained as a popular masterpiece of emotional fiction. Realizing its splendid qualities and broad appeal the Universal, first of any, has adapted and produced it upon the screen. That its success will be immediate and big is not to be doubted, for not only has the dainty and picturesque atmosphere of years gone by been retained with fidelity, but the characters have been interpreted by a cast of artists of the finest type, most important among whom are Alexander Gaden, Dorothy Phillips and Howard Crampton, Imp favorites.

"Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned" is an old saying that has somewhat passed out of use. But does it carry the truth today that it was supposed to carry when coined? Are women, as the famous English author and poet, Rudyard Kipling, says, "the deadlier of the two"? One thing is certain, the average woman's love is a jealous one —and there are cases on record where she has resorted to methods to achieve her love that the average man would hesitate at. Tempest, the villainess of this story, was not essentially bad or criminal in her tastes, but love prompted her to acts of a horrifying nature. Yet, was she to be censured? Was "all's fair in love and war" to be applied in her case? In the end she repented and attempted reparation, and while the man she loved and sacrificed for her lay in cold death, still compassion must be felt for her, for she was, in all, a woman with the possibilities of gentle wifehood and motherhood, though the cards of fate had been stacked aginst her.

Scene from "Tempest and Sunshine" (Imp).

While "Tempest and Sunshine" was written years ago with its locale in the New England states during the seventies, it bears a moral which can be applied in this day with absolute surety. The action has suspense, but its main appeal is to the emotions. The play, in two parts, was directed by Frank Crane. It will be released September 7.

VITAGRAPH RESUMES EUROPEAN BUSINESS.

Three weeks ago the European ports were closed to all communications between them and the moving picture interests of this country. The Vitagraph Company's factory at Paris was shut down on account of the employees being drafted in the French army, and all moving picture business was practically suspended. The business, however, has been resumed this week. The marine service between this country and the Old World has been resumed. The Vitagraph Company was the first to take advantage of this resumption between its home and foreign trade.

"THE AGGRESSOR" (Lubin).

This story depicts all the vigor, atmosphere and circumstance of the Golden West in the seventies. Mazie, the dancing girl and adventurer, is a picturesque type of the Siren of the period and locality, and the men are true characters of the reckless and daring gold seekers—men who were admitted to be all equal by the law of the colt revolver. The mounted constabulary of the great northwest take considerable part in the story and add a picturesque atmosphere. The story is written by Mildred Mason and has been staged by Edgar Jones, who in picture plays has well earned the title of the Lubin Dare Devil. Louise Huff and several other of the Lubin famous players have contributed to an excellent cast.

Scene from "The Aggressor" (Lubin).

"NICK WINTER AND THE LOST PRINCE" (Eclectic).

The great detective and the puzzling mysteries he solves furnish amusement to thousands with whom he is a prime favorite. In this offering Prince Alexis of Granovia, is traveling incognito as an ordinary citizen, and meets Cecile Dubois, with whom he falls desperately in love. Just at the time when she feels sure that he is about to propose to her, he is summoned back to his own country because of the state of his father's health. Writing to the girl, he tells her who he really is, and that he is going away, never to return. Cecile does not propose to lose the opportunity of making a match so advantageous and plots with her sister, Helene, to force the prince to marry her. Helene owns a hotel in the mountains, built over an old castle which is a labyrinth of secret passageways and dungeons. The prince is invited to the hotel for a last interview, is lured to an old dungeon and locked up, being told that he will be kept there until he signs a paper agreeing to marry Cecile.

The mysterious disappearance of the prince causes consternation in Granovia and Nick Winter is put upon the case. He finds a clue which throws his suspicions upon the sisters and at once goes to the hotel.

Scene from "Nick Winter and the Lost Prince" (Eclectic).

"THE VOICE OF INNOCENCE" (Kleine).

From the offices of George Kleine comes the announcement that his unusually interesting two-part subject, "The Voice of Innocence," will be released through the General Film Company Tuesday, September 1. "The Voice of Innocence" is a modern dramatic photoplay which deals in novel fashion with the tense situation produced by the rivalry of a daughter and a young stepmother for the father's love. A series of powerful scenes are splendidly portrayed by the Kleine players.

Scene from "The Voice of Innocence" (Kleine).

The story is gripping from start to finish. A novelist marries his stenographer while his young daughter is away at school. When the girl comes home she and her stepmother find that they strongly dislike each other at first sight. Things go from bad to worse until the daughter discovers that the older woman is using her practiced powers of fascination upon her own lover. Angered when the girl accuses her of unfaithfulness to her husband the stepmother seizes a revolver and fires just as the father enters the room. He receives the bullet intended for his daughter.

How the guilty woman makes it appear that the girl is the one who fired the shot, how after his sweetheart is imprisoned the young lover unearths the truth and how justice is finally done, makes a story of absorbing interest and many thrills.

PLUCKY FIGHT SAVES KERRIGAN FROM SHARK.

While acting before the camera in the breakers on the coast of Southern California at a point midway between San Pedro and Redondo, on August 7, J. Warren Kerrigan, who is featured by the Universal in Victor brand dramas, was attacked by a man-eating shark and suffered severe lacerations of his left leg and right shoulder. That he was not drawn under the water and drowned or more severely bitten was due to the fact that he wore a small wrist watch. When the shark first attacked him, it tore a seven-inch gash below the knee, in his left leg. Mr. Kerrigan was drawn under the water for an instant and the teeth of the big fish tore into his shoulder. He grappled with his enemy but the fish was too slippery for him. At this instant, however, the watch caught and clung fast to the fish's head. Mr. Kerrigan thinks that the stem of the timepiece caught in the shark's eye, as, had it caught in its mouth, he would probably have lost his hand.

Its attack checked for an instant, Mr. Kerrigan fought his way to the surface and swam shoreward. He was hurried to an emergency hospital at San Pedro, and when it was ascertained that none but flesh wounds had been inflicted, he was removed to a Los Angeles hospital, where he was cared for by the Universal physician.

HYMAN WINIK SENDING OVER WAR PICTURE.

Hyman Winik, European representative of the Apex Film Company, sends a cable dispatch to the home office that he has just bought a three-reel production, entitled "Called to the Front; or, Europe at War," which, in his words, is "positively the most wonderful kinematograph picture ever seen—actual scenes." He adds that he is sending a sample copy on the Adriatic, which will be followed by a goodly number of prints.

ECLECTIC HAS FINE NEW YORK CITY EXCHANGE.

Jules Burnstein, manager of Eclectic's New York City exchange, "points with pride" these days to his company's new local quarters. Well he may. They are ideal in every respect. Situated at 115 East Twenty-third street, near Fourth avenue, the company has the entire fifth floor of a large new structure. Mr. Burnstein is comfortably fixed in a spacious office near the entrance, where the glad hand is always out for his customer friends and non-customer friends—he has a host of each sort. The poster room fronts on Twenty-third street; it is noticeable that provision has been made for ample expansion. The booking room is large and occupies the east center of the floor. At the rear is the examining room, where the films are inspected in a flood of north light.

The projection room is one of the best in New York. It is wide and deep, and furnished with a carpet and comfortable chairs. Best of all, however, is the projection, which is of a quality ranking with that of the best theaters. A ventilating fan helps things, too. The projection booth is of steel and concrete, likewise ventilated, and contains two new machines, with plenty of space for the operator. The films are stored in a safe with a capacity for holding 200,000 feet.

"THE CHARACTER WOMAN" (Eclair).

One of the strongest dramas yet released by the Eclair Film Company, Inc., is "The Character Woman," listed for Wednesday, August 26. This two-reel story of the stage brings forward as a star Julia Stuart. She is ably supported by Belle Adair, the Eclair leading lady, and these two sterling artists furnish many a tremor and thrill in the unfolding of the plot. The story deals with the sacrifice of the old character woman to save the young star from the fate such as she has suffered. The theatrical atmosphere is perfect and the film affords the onlooker a peep behind the mysterious scenes.

Scene from "The Character Woman" (Eclair).

PICTURES OF THE LATE MRS. WILSON.

A moving picture of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who died at the White House, about ten days ago, has been presented to President Wilson by the Gaumont Company. The picture shows Mrs. Wilson and her youngest daughter, Miss Jessie—now Mrs. Frances B. Sayre—on vacation in New England last summer and is the same picture which was shown in the Mutual Weekly No. 85, issued shortly after Mrs. Wilson's death.

In the belief that the President might care to have such a picture showing his wife at one of her happiest moments, the Gaumont Company requested its Washington Representative to get in touch with Secretary Tumulty and through him offer the picture to the President. This was shortly after Mrs. Wilson's funeral. Secretary Tumulty conveyed the offer and the President was so gratified that he asked if he might have two pictures. His request was granted. The picture showed Mrs. Wilson and Miss Jessie arriving at the railroad station at Concord, N. H., on their way to their summer retreat in the mountains.

"AT THE OLD CROSS ROADS" (Select).

A play of the old south always brings to our minds memories of feuds, bloodshed, love and chivalry. All these play a prominent part in The Select Photo-Play Producing Co.'s production of Arthur C. Aiston's greatest success, entitled "At the Old Cross Roads." This play has been on the road for a period extending over 14 years and Miss Estha Williams, who has been featured in it for eight of the fourteen years, will be seen on the screen for the first time in her original role of Parepa. Miss Williams is ably supported by an all-star cast, including the well-known Mrs. Stuart Robson as the old colored mammy, Miss Rae Ford, Arthur Morrison and Master Martin.

Scene from "At the Old Cross Roads" (Select).

FILM STOLEN—$10 REWARD FOR RECOVERY.

A motion picture company at Room 1012, Candler Building, New York, advertised in the newspapers last week for a "hustler" to do exchange work. Beginning at 6:30 o'clock on Tuesday morning the self-confessed "hustlers" began to gather. They overflowed the hallways on the tenth floor and formed in battle array on the sidewalk in front of the building.

One lad, acting alone, probably inasmuch as he would not be likely to know his competitors, looked around for something to occupy his time—and his hands. The door opposite to Room 1012 was partly open. Conveniently, temptingly near was a small pile of tin boxes, containings prints of "Master of the World," the three-reel feature subject of the Film Releases of America. A girl in this office was at the far corner of the room. Hearing a slight noise, she turned to see an arm disappear through the door, a can of film going with it. Running to an outer office she told an employee, who rushed out. The corridor was empty. Both elevators were guarded, but the film was not recovered.

Detectives are working on the case. The Film Releases of America offer a reward of $10 and no questions asked for the recovery of the film, which being only a part of a feature, could have no value to the thief or to any one to whom he might sell it.

LIGHTNING KILLS CAMERAMAN.

On Tuesday, August 11th, Chad Fisher, a Vitagraph cameraman, while taking pictures near Grassy Spring Reservoir at Yonkers, N. Y., was instantly killed by lightning. Captain Lambart, the director, had taken a company of Vitagraph players to this locality and were in the midst of their work when a terrific storm burst upon them and they were obliged to flee for shelter. They ran to the French House on the Sawmill River Road when a bolt of lightning struck the front of the building, killing Mr. Fisher and severely burning and stunning Captain Lambart and Miss Lillian Herbert, one of the Vitagraph players. The other men of the company were so dazed they could scarcely realize what had happened.

Chad Fisher, who had only a few months ago come to the Vitagraph from the Imp, was one of the best liked men at both studios. He was a young man of splendid physique and refined manners. He was an only child and the blow fell upon his parents so heavily they were completely prostrated. They are people of very comfortable circumstances, his father being a retired business man, and Chad had every personal advantage in his favor, which showed in his whole bearing towards others and among his associates.

Notes of the Trade

LIEUTENANT GUSTAVE EHRHARDT of the 24th Infantry, Le Havre, France, has received a call to join his regiment immediately. Lieutenant Ehrhardt for some time has been a member of the Essanay motion picture stock company in Chicago and has shown much ability as an actor for the movies. No one at the Essanay studio knew of Lieutenant Ehrhardt's connection with the French army until a telegram calling him back to his regiment arrived. He will go direct to New York, where he will attempt to get passage on a French boat.

* * *

A new phase on the old bribery plot is graphically told in "Every Man Has His Price," a western drama, produced by (Sheriff) Arthur Mackley at the Reliance and Majestic Mutual studios. The sheriff accepts a "bribe" of $10,000 from his prisoner, who has been involved in a crooked deal, to release him. The officer in accepting the bribe also forces his prisoner to sign a document in which the property, which he has secured through fraud, reverts to the original owner. Aside from directing the production, Mackley also plays the lead. The scenario was written by W. M. Ritchey.

* * *

Henry McRae, director of the 101 Bison (Universal) Company, writes from Hume, Cal., the center of a big forest district, that he is filming some of the most remarkable logging scenes, in connection with his story, "The Law of the Lumberjack," ever caught in a camera. The dangerous scenes in a logging flume, the water in which travels at the rate of a mile a minute, were completed without mishap of any description. In exchange for the numerous favors accorded him and his company, members of the motion picture troupe gave over one night to the entertainment of the lumbermen.

* * *

"Sierra Jim's Reformation" is the title of a stirring drama of western life, being produced by Jack O'Brien at the Reliance and Majestic Hollywood Studios. How an outlaw reforms and leads a better life, through the influence of the sister of the pony express rider, is told in this picture. R. A. Walsh, Wallace Reid, Gertrude McLynn, Eagle Eye, Dark Cloud and Fred Burns appear in the cast.

* * *

With Herbert Brenon directing the Imp Company headed by William Shay, Violet Merseregau, William Welch, Hobart Henley (assistant director), Mrs. Walker and little Katherine Lee are in New Preston, Conn., busily producing several rural and mountain plays. A two reel feature just completed is "Redemption," and it is the story of the transition of a reckless highwayman through love of a little child, into a decent man.

* * *

Leading Players Film Corporation have sold the United States rights for the Savoia Masterpiece, "Germania," to the World Film Corporation. This production is a picturization of the famous libretto by Leeiga Illica. Every scene in this gorgeous spectacle is a reproduction of a famous painting, recognizable by everyone interested in works of art.

* * *

"The Mascot," a rollicking farce comedy by Russell E. Smith, featuring Fay Tincher, is being produced by Eddie Dillon at the Reliance and Majestic Mutual studios. A Hindu image is responsible for a stern father giving his consent to his daughter's marriage to the man of her choice. Max Davidson and Tod Browning also take prominent parts in the cast.

* * *

During the week of August 31st, "Richelieu," a four-part "Special," will be released by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. According to report, however, "Richelieu" will exceed the expectations of exhibitors. Staged at the Universal's Pacific Coast Studios, the company has spent a small fortune on this one production.

* * *

Allen F. F. Corporation, of Providence, have purchased the rights for New England on Leading Players Corporation features, "Gap of Death," Mlle. Polaire in "The Sparrow," and a Features Ideal production, entitled "By Power of Attorney."

* * *

Francelia Billington is being featured in "Turned Back," a one-reel Reliance drama, being produced by Jack Adolfi. The scenario was written by Russell E. Smith. A burglar in attempting to rob a house, makes a prisoner of a physician who had just been called to treat the burglar's sick infant. Sam DeGrasse and Eugene Pallette also appear in the cast.

* * *

Sol Lesser, of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, has purchased the rights for his famous eleven western states on Leading Players feature, "The Lunatics," and has also signed a year's contract with Agnes Egan Cobb for two Scientia subjects each week.

* * *

Dorothy Gish is being featured in "Granny," a heart interest drama produced by the Majestic. The sacrifices of a poverty-stricken young girl to secure a home for her aged grandmother, and how she succeeds is graphically told in "Granny." W. C. Cabanne is directing the production. W. A. Lawrence, A. T. Sears and Ida Wilkinson also appear in the cast.

* * *

The Belfry of Grandpre, depicted in "The War of Wars," the latest photoplay of Ramo Films, Inc., was modeled in miniature on the Belfry of Bruges, made famous by Longfellow's poem. Soon after the company's photographer filmed it, a shell destroyed it. He returned to Grandpre to find it in ruins. The priest, stone dead, still knelt before his altar.

* * *

Tammany Young is being featured as the office boy in the fifth of the well-known "Bill" series, written by Paul West. In this picture Bill organizes the office boys into a union and then leads a strike for higher salaries. Fay Tincher and Tod Browning also appear in the cast.

* * *

While filming a country adventure for a forthcoming release the notable "Universal Boy" series, at Greenwood Village, N. J., little Matty Roubert (Universal Boy) narrowly escaped death. The accident occurred in an old mill, when a rickety old staircase gave way under the combined weight of Matty and one "Raffles." The pair plunged headlong down through the decayed flooring, and into the mill-stream below. The god of chance stood by them, and they emerged from under the building spluttering and wet, but unhurt.

* * *

It has remained for the Imp company to produce on the screen the well-known and once widely read emotional novel by Mary J. Holmes, "Tempest and Sunshine." After the order of "East Lynne" and "Jane Eyre," the story abounds in telling emotional situations and vivid melodrama, disclosing the length to which some women will go to attain the fulfillment of their love for a man. The leads are Alexander Gaden, Dorothy Phillips and Howard Crampton. It has been produced under the direction of Frank Crane.

* * *

A miniature portrait in a watch plays an important part in "A Saved Illusion," a gripping one reel Majestic drama, by Russell E. Smith, produced by W. C. Cabanne, at the Reliance and Majestic Mutual studios. Robert Harron and W. A. Lawrence take prominent parts in the picture.

* * *

Miss Vivian Rich is playing a dual part in "A Modern Rip Van Winkle," now being produced at the American Flying-A Studios under direction of Sydney Ayres. Miss Rich was the only woman who accompanied the rest of the players to Los Angeles, where a number of the principal scenes were taken. In putting on one of the scenes in the police station a bit of "real" realism was injected when what was intended to be imitation call proved to be a rush call in a murder case.

* * *

The Edwards-Zetler Feature Film Company of Dayton, Ohio, has purchased the rights for Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky on the Leading Players feature entitled "Mlle. Polaire in the Sparrow."

* * *

The Liberty Motion Picture Company, Inc., in which a number of wealthy Philadelphians are interested, have signed contracts with the A. H. Sawyer Company of New York whereby the Sawyer Company will market the forthcoming Liberty feature photoplays.

** *

The laboratory of the Commercial Motion Pictures Co., Ltd., at Grantwood, N. J., is now working on double shifts of eight hours each, in order to catch up to the large amount of orders on hand from motion picture manufacturers.

* * *

In producing "For the Last Edition," a newspaper story, director Fred A. Kelsey and his Reliance company became impromptu fire fighters while dynamiting a railroad box car in San Bernardino. After dynamiting the car, the adjoining car caught fire and for several hours all members of the company were kept busily engaged in extinguishing the blaze. Irene Hunt, who is being featured as the sob sister in the production, had her hands severely burned in putting out the fire

* * *

Henry Otto, of the Flying-A Studios, is producing a seashore and mountain story. The leading role will be taken by Charlotte Burton, who will play the little fisher-maid, while Ed Coxen will play the shepherd lad. Both parts call for strong dramatic action. George Field will take the part of an Italian music master who discovers wonderful talent in the little fisher-maid.

* * *

Agnes Egan Cobb is doing herself proud these days, and reports she is having lots of fun booking Scientia films in and around New York. Mrs. Cobb claims that the demand for the educational product is growing so strong that the customers are signing up yearly rental contracts with her for the Scientia films for which she thanks the Censorship Board.

* * *

George Fitzmaurice of Pathe, who this spring stepped from the ranks of scenario editors to become a director, announces the completion of his first picture, "The Brahmin Diamond." Mr. Fitzmaurice spent nine years in India and he has drawn upon his knowledge of the unchanging East in this picture the scenario of which he wrote himself.

* * *

"The Bank Burglar's Fate" is the title of a stirring two reel Reliance drama being produced by Jack Adolfi at the Reliance and Majestic, Hollywood, Cal., studios. The scenario was written by C. D Brown, manager of the Protective Department of the Minnesota Bankers' Association. Sam De Grasse and Eugene Pallette are featured.

* * *

"The Aftermath," a two-part Flying-A subject, based on a labor strike and giving a vivid interpretation of one of many sidelights that never become visible to the public. William Garwood as leading man plays his part exceptionally well and is ably supported by Vivian Rich, Jack Richardson, Louise Lester and Harry Von Meter, with about 200 extra people. The subject is produced by Sydney Ayres and is well handled. It will be released Monday, August 31st.

Leon Wagner of the Sterling Camera and Film Company, producers of "The Land of the Lost," is busy on a new multiple production now in preparation. Mr. Wagner is working on a novelty effect scene in which a flash of lightning is to be introduced with startling effects. Just how Mr. Wagner is to accomplish this is not now known but leave it to Wagner; he will "show you."

* * *

There seems to be no limit to which the worthy motion picture producer of today will go in his search for realism and correct atmosphere while staging a photodrama. Herbert Blache of Blache Features, Inc., has recently announced a four reel picture entitled "The War Extra," which is an excellent illustration of the lengths to which the really ambitious producer will go to present a story in the best possible manner.

* * *

A young boy who has become a typical coward, through the efforts of his coddling mother, visits a picture theater, where he sees the splendid courage displayed by the hero in the picture. Remembering the picture, the youth gathers sufficient courage to capture a desperate character. All this is told in "The Milkfed Boy," a comedy drama, written by Frank E. Woods, and produced by Donald Crisp, at the Reliance and Majestic Mutual studios.

* * *

Miss Winifred Greenwood received a warm and hearty welcome when she reported for duty. Miss Greenwood is taking the leading role of "Lola," a two-reel subject now being produced by the American Film Mfg. Co., under the direction of Henry Otto. This is Miss Greenwood's first appearance in pictures for nearly a month, having been severely injured in a motorcycle accident.

* * *

Mr. James Vincent of the Sterling Camera and Film Co. has returned from Florida, where he has been the past ten days seeking locations for a new multiple production now in preparation by the Sterling Camera and Film Co.

* * *

Bringing with them an international reputation for the production of screaming riots of comedy films, the Pathe Lehrman Company, with Billie Ritchie working in the lead roles, has recently come into the Universal fold at their Hollywood studios. Although the company has been located at Hollywood but a few days, Manager Bernstein, with his customary promptness, has already had erected a special stage 100 feet square, built exclusively for the new company.

* * *

"So Shines a Good Deed" is the title of a heart interest convict drama being produced by (Sheriff) Arthur Mackley at the Reliance and Majestic, Hollywood, Cal., studios.

* * *

In the Beauty release of August 25th, under title of "Susie's New Shoes," Miss Margarita Fischer displays her versatility under numerous conditions. Her remarkable ability and sweetly seasoned rendition has endeared her to the moving picture fans.

* * *

George Kleine announces that there will be no interruption to business or any inconvenience to exhibitors in obtaining the Kleine output as a result of the war. Mr. Kleine is well fortified to withstand protracted hostilities in Europe.

* * *

H. B. Reynolds, well known among the film men in connection with the launching of sensational successes, announces that he has procured motion picture films showing actual scenes from the theater of the great world war now raging on the other side. The pictures, which in length approximate 2,000 feet, were taken with the full consent and permission of the governments of the respective countries in which the camera men work. The films will be ready for release on August 15th. Offices 110 West 40th street, New York, room 704.

* * *

The majestic is producing "Frenchy," a thrilling drama of western ranch life from the pen of George Pattullo, the well known writer of western stories, at the Hollywood studios. Donald Crisp is directing the production. Francelia Billington is featured, assisted by Lester Pegg and Fred Burns.

* * *

Mayor James Rolph and Mrs. Rolph make their first appearance in the movies in the Flying-A studios. The production is entitled "A Modern Rip Van Winkle" and the popular western city official and his wife appear in a roof garden scene to splendid advantage.

* * *

Despite repeated published notices that George Kleine is not in the market for scenarios, manuscripts continue to arrive at the Chicago and New York offices of that concern in large quantities. George Kleine is an importer of motion pictures and does not manufacture on this side of the Atlantic, in so far as regular scenarios are concerned. All Kleine offices have been returning to writers a considerable quantity of such mail.

* * *

The two reel comedy drama, "Caroline," written by Ruth Ann Baldwin and produced by the Turner Special Feature Company, gives promise of being one of the most successful of recent Universal films. With Otis Turner, known to the moving picture world as "the dean of directors," directing the production, and with Anna Little in the title role and Herbert Rawlinson playing opposite her as the Prince of Balzovia, little more need be said.

* * *

Francelia Billington and Billie West are being featured in "Through the Dark," a two-reel Majestic feature, directed by Jack Adolfi at the Reliance and Majestic studios. An interesting love story is interwoven in the picture. Sam De Grasse and Eugene Pallette also appear in the cast.

* *

Ethel Lloyd won the silver cup offered as a prize to the best dancer of the Vitagraph Company by the Hotel Shelburne management on August 6th last, the occasion being known as Vitagraph Night, given in honor of the Vitagraph players. The affair attracted many nearby society people as well as some four score of the Vitagraph Players.

* * *

Attendance at the "Cabiria" shows in New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Salt Lake City and San Francisco has been stimulated by the war, according to the reports received from the company managers. The mind of the public is now especially open to martial subjects such as "Cabiria" and interest is aroused in this magnificent spectacle which visualizes the glories of ancient Rome and Carthage and the colossal struggle of the Punic wars.

* * *

Eclectic will release early in the fall a five-reel picture, "A Pawn of Fortune," produced by the Whartons that has all the ear marks of a real winner. The plot is most unusual, the interest is kept up to the very end and the picture is noteworthy for artistic finish and clever workmanship that is a joy to behold. The South American scenes will make a lasting impression on all who see the film.

* * *

Thomas M. Mackey, secretary and treasurer of the Electric City Amusement Co., now operating the Alcazar Theater in Little Falls, Mont., was a caller at this office. From reports, business with the Alcazar, a 470 seat house, projecting a general film program through two Powers 6A machines, is very good, and plans are under way for the erection of a new 1,000 seat house some time in the early fall.

* * *

E. E. Campbell, Dallas, Texas, is looking for B. M. Wise. If any exhibitor knows anything about him or where he is, I wish he would notify me. I would esteem it a very great favor if he would wire me, care of the Wigwam Theater, El Paso, Texas. I have the state's rights for Arkansas and Texas for "Smashing the Vice Trust."

* * *

That moving picture cowboys and girls are not merely artificial fixtures adorned with chaps, spurs and gaudy bandanas to make western productions more realistic, was clearly demonstrated when members of the western Essanay Company entered a rodeo at Livermore, Cal., and won almost every event.

* * *

At 11 o'clock Tuesday morning, August 18th, at the Midgar projection rooms, the Weinberg Feature Film Co., of New York City, gave a special exhibition of "The Land of the Lost," of which they control the Greater New York rights. It was an invitation affair intended for the benefit of Mr. Weinberg's booking patrons, but the responses to the invitations were so great the projection room facilities at the Midgar was uncomfortably crowded.

* * *

The contracts of William H. Tooker, heavy lead, and Harry Spingler, juvenile lead, of the Life Photo Film Corporation, were renewed by that company with both men for a further period of one year at a substantial increase of salary.

Your Lobby Will Attract

the eye of the PASSERBY, if it is decorated with our large hand-colored pictures of the stars. This display will make NEW BUSINESS for any house. If you want to keep them coming, give 'em a PHOTO PLAYERS POST CARD.

28 Big Hand Colored Lobby Pictures of the Stars 28

Semi-Photo Post Cards, $3.00 per thousand; formerly sold for $4.00. Over 400 different players.

Hand Colored Post Cards

For the better class of Souvenirs, 60 of the most popular players, all factions, $10.00 per thousand.

Photo Post Cards

For hand coloring. NOTE: The Public buy cards from stationers and color them. It's a new fad—60 Popular Players $5.00 per thousand.

PHOTOGRAPHS, SIZE 8 x 10, of all the prominent players, Association and Independent, 400 different names, 20 cents each.
LARGE PICTURE, semi-photo, glazed finish, size 11 x 14, $1 per doz.; 43 prominent players.
LARGE PICTURES, HAND COLORED, size 11 x 14. Prominent players, $2.00 per set of 12.
Photographs for lobby display of the two and three reel features of all of the Mutual multiple reels—set of 6, $1.00. Always ready 10 days ahead of release.

Special 22x28 Hand Colored Pictures of 28 Favorites
75 Cents Each. Framed $2.50 Each

KRAUS MFG. CO., 14 East 17th St., N. Y.

Middle West Office—Lyric Theatre Bldg., Dayton, O.
Send for Catalogue of over 400 players and samples free. Write us giving details of your dull nights, and we will send you a remedy.

Exhibitors News

Interesting Information Concerning Moving Picture Men Gathered By Moving Picture World Correspondents Everywhere.

DETROIT.

THE Broadway, after being closed for a number of weeks, reopened August 9 with "The Spoilers." The engagement may be extended if the attraction proves a good drawing card. The Broadway will go to melodramatic stock the latter part of August. The theater is leased by B. C. Whitney, owner of the Detroit Opera House. Bert St. John is the house manager.

Moving pictures of the annual summer outing of the Society Automobile Engineers held this year at Cape May were shown at the meeting of the Detroit section, S. A. E., at the Stevens building on August 6.

W. D. Ward, formerly Detroit manager for the Mutual Film Corporation, and A. W. Blankmeyer, proprietor of the Grand Circus Theater and also formerly in the film exchange business, have joined hands under the style of the Progressive Film & Equipment company, and will handle feature films for Michigan, buy and sell moving picture theaters and carry a full line of motion picture supplies, machinery, parts, etc. Offices temporarily have been established at 97 Woodward avenue, room 51. H. B. Schantz, a local attorney, is treasurer of the company. It is planned later on to open an office in the city of Indianapolis, which will take care of business in Indiana. To start off with the Progressive will represent the Sawyer Film company in Michigan. Plans are under way for the further extension of the business.

Another moving picture house is announced for Detroit that promises to be among the best in the city. It will be erected on Jefferson avenue, at the Belle Isle Bridge approach. Frederick Ingersoll and Francis O. Gaukler, comprising the Ingersoll-Gaukler Company, have formed a company with a capital stock of $100,000 to build a modern theater and an amusement palace. The buildings will occupy a lot having a frontage of 145 feet and depth of about 125 feet on the north side of Jefferson avenue, just east of the boulevard. The plans call for a theater seating 750 on the lower floor and 385 in the balcony. It will be of fireproof construction, having cork flooring on concrete, opera chairs and all the latest ideas in modern theater building. The theater proper will cost $70,000 and the amusement building $30,000. Makepeace & Makepeace, architects with offices in Chicago and Toronto, are now drawing the plans for this enterprise. Building operations are to start in the fall and the structure will be ready for occupancy early in the spring.

The Grand Boulevard Theater Company, who as announced last week will build a motion picture theater on the east Grand Boulevard, has been incorporated for $100,000, the principal stockholders being Fuller Claflin, E. Henry Griffin and Daniel H. Kerney. Mr. Claflin, by the way, is a contractor who specializes in theater building and has offices in the Temple Theater building.

Will Levington Comfort, Clarence B. Kelland and Frank H. Pipp, novel and short story writers, all of Detroit, will supply the literary material for the productions to be placed on the market by the Esperanto Film Manufacturing Company, articles of incorporation for which were recently filed in this city. The capital stock is $75,000, with $50,000 paid in. The firm will produce all kinds of motion picture films. Mr. Pipp has already signed over 21 scenarios, while Mr. Comfort is under contract to write scenarios for 25 reels the first year. Mr. Kelland has contracted to provide material for 20 reels.

There seebs to be an idea in Detroit that since Mr. Lester Potter was taken off as official police censor for motion pictures that censorship is "off" entirely. Such, however, is by no means the case. Mr. Potter is still censoring films and will continue to do so. The police department will keep an eye on the moving pictures as it always has, but will not censor each film individually before being shown. Just last week Officer Potter seized the film "Lieutenant Petrosino" which was being shown at a small house catering to the foreign element. It was condemned on the grounds of being educational to crime and detrimental to public morals, as well as being offensive to Italians. The picture was seized while being shown to an audience. It was returned to the film exchange people, who were told that if an attempt was made to show it again the whole film would be destroyed and the persons responsible for its exhibition taken into court. "We will continue to keep an eye on 'wild cat' stuff and anything that tends to incite the 'Black Hand,' and if necessary will bring the responsible parties into court and prosecute them," said Mr. Potter. "Undesirable films will be eliminated as they have been in the past."

The Addison Theater, at Woodward and Watson streets, was formally opened Sunday, August 9, with high-class motion pictures. The theater is owned by Charles Pudrith, formerly a carpenter-contractor. The architectural style is of the Adams period in every detail and was planned by C. Howard Crane, of this city. Mr. Pudrith has been unsparing in his efforts to have every innovation in modern theater construction incorporated in The Addison. The theater has a seating capacity of 600. There are three shows daily, one in the afternoon starting at 2:30 and two at night, the first starting at 7:30. Music will be furnished by an orchestra.

August 1 was the day for the issuance of new licenses for the ensuing year. The fee for motion picture houses is $50 per annum.

At a recent meeting of the Detroit Motion Picture Exhibitors' League it was unanimously decided to charge five cents for three reels and 10 cents for five reels. In this connection the film exchanges are co-operating with the association. Several firms who operate two motion picture theaters will also discontinue the "coupon" system—that of charging ten cents at one and giving a coupon which with an additional five cents would admit the bearer into the other theater. "We are gradually wiping out all irregularities in the business," said President Jeup. "Members are slowly, but surely, coming to realize that we can all make more money and uplift the business by getting together and co-operating instead of trying to run our theaters without the aid of an association."

The New Medbury Theater on Hastings street, near Medbury Theater, was completed earlier than expected and was formally opened July 27. T. Gardner is manager. The theater seats 400.

Arthur Shore has brought suit in the circuit court against Sigmund Hirsch in connection with the moving picture theater at 742 Franklin street. Shore alleges that Hirsch bought $3 worth of tickets in order to swell the receipts and make believe the theater was a better paying proposition than actually was the case. He seeks to have Hirsch return part payment on the theater and promissory notes he gave. Shore says when he bought the theater Hirsch declared the profits were between $35 and $50 weekly, but that instead there is a weekly deficit of $100. A former cashier testified that the biggest days' receipts were $8 and that just before Hirsch sold it he bought $3 worth of tickets himself.

"Dan," a stirring tale of the civil war by Hal Reid with the famous minstrel, Lew Dockstader, did a very nice business at the Liberty the week of August 3.

While the whole city is discussing the European war, it has in no way affected the attendance at the moving picture houses. Business continues to hold up satisfactorily.

After September 1 the Casino Feature Film Company will occupy all of the upper floors of the building at 34 Farmer street, the main floor being occupied by the Royal Theater. The second floor will contain the shipping department and the inspection department. The third floor will contain the general stock room for posters and all kinds of supplies. The floors are 30 by 150 feet each.

The only five cent moving pictures in the downtown district of Detroit are the Bijou, Park, Garland, Casino, Princess and Monroe. None of them show features. The Empress on Woodward avenue, which up until recently was a five cent house, is now proving very successful with features, most of which are shown after being exhibited for a week at the Liberty.

The Casino Feature Film Company have purchased a second copy of "Tess of the Storm Country." It is booked solid until the end of September. The Casino Company is making preparations for the Paramount service which starts September 1.

The Progressive Film & Equipment Co., 97 Woodward avenue, Detroit, will open an office in Indianapolis around September 5 or 10. Mr. Blankmeyer, who has a financial interest in the new concern, will not be active but will continue to devote his time to Grand Circus theater, of which he is proprietor.

The World Film Corporation has moved to the fourth floor of 97 Woodward avenue. Manager Douglas Dickerson reports that he has arranged for the following features, which will be received here about the latter part of August, "The Lure," "The Chimes," "The Dollar Mark," "Mother," "The Man of the Hour," "The Gentleman from Mississippi" and "The Pit."

It is reported that Louis A. Grosslight has a lease on the quarters now occupied by the Casino theater on Monroe avenue, which adjoins his pawn shop, and that as soon as he takes possession (said to be the first of January, 1915) will remodel the structure to 600 seats, by taking in a portion of the space now occupied with his pawn shop.

The Circle Theater Company, operating the Circle Theater on Hastings street, is now a $60,000 corporation, the principal stockholders being Nathan Norman, Nathan Schreiber, Jacob M. Marshall, Jacob Oppenheim, Herman M. Wartell, David Rosenthal and David King. Mr. King is the general manager of the National Theater, and is also one of the principal stockholders in the Calvert Theater.

The Rosebud on Gratiot avenue, near Brush street, opened its doors as a picture house on August 8. It is under the same management as the Woodward Theater.

The New Empire on Woodward avenue, under the management of Mr. Starr, is now running a big feature every Monday and Friday; on the other days of the week four reels of General Film Company pictures are shown, with a change daily. On August 3 Mr. Starr showed the Giants-White Sox tour of the world pictures, and invited as his guests newspapermen, visiting sport writers and members of the Detroit and New York baseball teams who happened to be in the city that day. Sam Crawford, who was on the tour, was an interested spectator, as well as Cyrus Raymond Cobb, the world's greatest hitter. The new Empire did a big business with "The Stain" on August 10. Mr. Starr is running Biograph pictures of Mary Pickford twice a week, the first one being shown on August 11. This is done on account of the great popularity which Miss Pickford enjoys in this city. The New Empire has a six-piece orchestra, as well as a pipe organ, and gives special attention to its musical program.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Palace theater is to be held in the near future for the purpose of determining whether the house will continue vaudeville or change over to feature photoplays, the latter being favored by a great many of the stockholders.

One of the most enthusiastic readers of the Moving Picture World is Howard O. Pierce, manager of the Liberty theater. The writer dropped in on Mr. Pierce last week when he had just finished "scissoring" at least a dozen news items from the Moving Picture World. "I do this every week," said Mr. Pierce. "There is not an issue that I do not find many things of interest, and I always cut them out and save them for future use. Many are reproduced in our weekly house organ, which we distribute to our patrons. How any successful moving picture manager or proprietor can get along without the Moving Picture World is more than I can understand. And I mean it."

Political candidates in Detroit and throughout Michigan who had contemplated having their "faces" reproduced on the screens of moving picture theaters are disappointed. Attorney-General Fellows has ruled it is a violation of primary law which limits the size of campaign cuts for advertising purposes. Many of the small picture houses were throwing slides of candidates, but when the Attorney-General announced his ruling they were immediately discontinued.

Fuller Claflin, architect for the new Grand Boulevard theater, to be erected on the Boulevard, east of Woodward avenue, announces that the new playhouse will be built as a "duplex." It will afford those who arrive after a long photoplay has started an opportunity of viewing several short pictures until the long one starts again. As it is now, they have to wait until they see the picture from the start, which means that they see the last part often before they do the first part. Not only do those seeing the last part of a long play first, fail to understand its story, but the first part is spoiled for them by reason of their knowing how it will end. The duplex idea consists of a first and second auditorium. If a long picture is on the screen before the first auditorium, the visitor seats himself in the second auditorium in which is a screen on which he can see short productions. When the long picture is through on one screen it immediately shifts to the other screen and the short films are then shown on the opposite screen. In this way, no matter when the patron arrives, he can be entertained with pictures that will be understood from the very beginning. The auditoriums will be separated as to sound but not as to a view of each from the other. In effect, they constitute what might be termed a single auditorium transversely divided near the middle of a proscenium arch faced by seats on each side. Drawings are now being prepared which, with more complete details, will appear in a later issue of the Moving Picture World.

SMITH.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

"WE ARE not faddists or prudes, but, for one, I am seeking only that which will prove of general public benefit," said Mayor Albee of Portland, Ore., speaking of a movement for a stricter censorship of moving pictures in that city. "The people who patronize the movies must of course be the final arbiters in the matter; no ordinance or regulation would stand unless backed by public sentiment. Some say that the people are satisfied; that they want certain types of 'thrillers', but this I do not believe, as I feel the people of Portland want the highest grade photoplays and that they will patronize them liberally if given the opportunity. I specially request that the people examine from time to time the kind of films that are shown to them in this city and judge whether they are the proper ones to be shown to children." The mayor declares himself a champion of the motion picture and asserts that it has just started as an agency for good. All he seeks, he says, is to put aside the blood and thunder type of film and those depicting crime. The voluntary board of censors now working in Portland has been able to make little headway in keeping the screens clear of this class of pictures. Mayor Albee proposed an ordinance giving power to a board of seven members. He expressed his regret that the exhibitors already had begun to fight because there was no appeal from the decision of the proposed board to a jury in the municipal court. The mayor also announced that as soon as he had a draft of the ordinance exchange men and exhibitors would be asked to give their opinions upon it.

A. A. Ashley has been remodeling his building on Main street in Crosby, N. D., for use as a moving picture theater.

Thursdays will be Mary Pickford days at the Curran theater in Boulder, Colo.

J. R. Good & Co. have been remodeling the Pastime theater at Colfax, Wash. The building has been lengthened in order to increase the seating capacity.

The Berghuis building at Clara City, Minn., is being remodeled for use as a theater.

Protest against the moving picture is reported from Brigham City, Utah, where a meeting was called by the parents' class of the Third Ward Sunday school to make plans for an active campaign. It was also said that lines had been laid in the other three wards of the city for meetings at which the moving picture evil was to be discussed. The depiction of crime and the general bad influence of the photoplays upon the minds of the young are the reasons given for the attitude of the church workers who are taking the initiative in the matter.

The Whitney Building on Front street in Beach, N. D., has been leased by C. S. Dickinson, who will operate a moving picture show.

The Rex theater of Duluth, Minn., Thomas W. Furniss, manager, has ordered from Cassavant Brothers of South Haven, Mich., a large organ to be used in accompanying the pictures.

Candy matinees for the children are Saturday stunts at the Deadwood theater in Deadwood, S. D.

At a meeting of the South Dakota Panama-Pacific Exposition Commission held in Aberdeen, it was decided that the state should join the many others in conducting moving picture shows at the San Francisco fair. Details of the plan and the contracts for the films will come up later.

Starland theater in St. Paul, Minn., has returned to a program of first run licensed service.

D. C. McClelland, formerly operator of several moving picture theaters at Pekin, Ill., and later manager of a house at Decatur, Ill., is now traveling for the General Film Company out of Minneapolis, Minn.

The Empire theater has moved to a new location at Kalispell, Mont.

Manager Bauer of the Orpheum theater at Bismarck, N. D., has found it impossible to maintain a standard of vaudeville during the summer that will satisfy his patrons and therefore has adopted a strictly moving picture policy and changed his admission price to five and ten cents.

Photoplay patrons of Duluth, Minn., are reveling in the delightful new Zelda theater, which has been opened at Third avenue west and Superior street by W. M. Abrahamson, pioneer theatrical man of Duluth. The house, which cost $50,000 has a handsome terra cotta front of Doric architecture, the ornaments of which harmonize with the general color scheme of cream and green. The mezzanine room is equipped in quarter-sawed oak with cane panels and finished with a forest green touch. For the music a Kimball pipe organ and a Knabe Grand piano have been installed. The automatic ticket seller is the first in the city.

Grant & Swanson, who leased the new theater in Lake City, Minn., from its owner, D. C. McKenzie, christened it the New Grand after the old show operated by Grant for several years and later sold to Swanson. For the formal opening of the new picture house the mayor of Lake City delivered the address and congratulated both the proprietors and the city upon securing such an attractive and safe theater. Only 540 seats were placed but room is left for expansion. The new house will run "The Million Dollar Mystery" as its first serial. Vaudeville may be run later.

A. McGavan has opened a moving picture theater in the F. A. Stewart building at Puyallup, Wash. The place has a seating capacity of 190.

Demand for the Selig film, "The Spoilers," was so heavy that Manager Pangle of the new Heilig, Broadway and Taylor streets, Portland, Ore., booked it for a return engagement of another week. The film, "Creation," has been running at the old Heilig.

Local moving pictures were a profitable venture for the Savoy theater at Eugene, Ore.

Charles E. Bell, representing Raths & Seavolt, moving picture manufacturers, was a member of the party of St. Paul, Minn., boosters which went on a special train to the larger cities of the Northwest.

Manager Charles Herald of the Tacoma theater at Tacoma, Wash., booked Cabiria for the last week in August.

After a prospective patron has just about decided that a program at the Dime or Arcade theaters in Walla Walla, Wash., is too attractive to miss the advertising man strikes right at the sense of luxury with: "Plus the comfort of a good theater—10 cents," or "All this great program in a comfortable theater—10 cents."

H. O. Frochbach, in an address before the Commercial Club at Ashland, Ore., urged that the city be advertised by means of moving pictures or slides.

All the important things that happened while the camera man was trailing the Elks at their convention in Denver, Colo., were shown to patrons of the Curran theater at Boulder, Colo., which got the films ahead of Pueblo, Colorado Springs and other eager large cities.

G. S. Hoffman and C. T. Smithers of Aberdeen, S. D., have been taking moving pictures about the state capitol at Pierre and at the Soldiers' Home at Hot Springs. These pictures will be exhibited in order to raise a fund for the erection of a memorial arch for civil war veterans on the capitol grounds.

James H. Hill has sold his moving picture theater at Redfield, S. D.

Knecht & Holbrook have sold the Lux theater at Colome, S. D., to J. W. Meloy and W. E. Dean

The Pastime theater at Mankato, Minn., has reduced its admission five cents except for the dates of big attractions.

The moving picture show at the Oaks Park at Portland, Ore., made quite a feature of its film made on the Fourth of July, showing the merry-makers. "A Day at the Oaks" proved an attraction for some time after the festivities.

The opera house management at Canon City, Colo., is giving music with effects in connection with the pictures.

The opera house at Willmar, Minn., is being remodeled.

Val F. Kordus has sold the Majestic theater at Eureka, Mont., to J. C. Parker.

A new opera house, costing $15,000, is contemplated at Elk River, Minn., by Mr. Prescott of Princeton.

Hunn & Lakie is the name of the firm now operating the Bijou theater at Barnesville, Minn., M. I. Lakie having purchased the half interest of A. F. Peterson.

Woods & Snidow have sold the Broadway theater at Billings, Mont., to E. C. O'Keefe, manager of the Luna theater in Billings, and V. D. Caldwell of the American Bank and Trust Company of that city. Formal opening under the new management was fixed for the last of August, many changes to be made in the house in the interval. After the reopening the theater will be known as the Regent and the policy will be the ultra-features at prices slightly higher than the average admission in Billings has been. O'Keefe will continue to manage the Luna.

The Laemmle Film Service at Minneapolis secured a contract from the New England, a local furniture store, to furnish films for five weeks of free moving picture shows at Eighth street and Second avenue south. A sample program included a dramatic, three reels of comedy and a local scenic.

"It is not so much the name or make of photoplays but the artistic manner in which they are presented that makes the Empress photoplays unexcelled."—The Empress theater, Fort Collins, Colo.

Erection of a business block, which will contain an opera house and a moving picture theater, has been started at Cascade, Mont., by Henry W. Menth, until recently a grocer of Helena, Mont. The photoplay house will be conducted by Mr. Menth.

Nothing longer than two parts—this is the announcement made by the Class A theater at Seattle, Wash. This house has switched over to licensed films.

Frank M. Malcolm has opened a moving picture theater in the Sullivan building on Main street in Genesee, Idaho.

W. J. Sternberger and W. M. Smith cameramen for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, recently were near Cripple Creek, Colo., filming the scenery.

The Savoy theater at Eugene, Ore., which has been featuring the Famous Players pictures, especially those starring Mary Pickford, has announced that no rehash or rebirths will be shown and is directing some of its advertising at competitors who are featuring pictures already shown in Eugene.

The multitudes of employes of the Puget Sound Traction, Light & Power Company and their friends who were filmed at the big picnic thronged to the Clemmer theater at Seattle, Wash., to see themselves as the moving picture camera saw them.

Enthused because 30,000 persons who attended the Elks' convention at Denver, Colo., were interested in the motion pictures showing the advantages of Colorado, the Denver Chamber of Commerce plans to begin a film advertising campaign for the state. It is proposed to take pictures of the mining, commercial, agricultural and economical resources of the state and conduct a continuous picture show at some point where it would prove inviting to tourists. The commercial clubs of other Colorado cities favor the plan because many tourists go to Denver and leave without knowing that there are many other attractive cities in the state.

Some of the most attractive newspaper advertising in the Northwest is being done by the Colonial theater at Seattle, Wash. Twenty-five words tell the story of each film in a way that makes the reader want to go and plank down his (Always) 10 cents and the printers seem to have devoted a little time to the makeup or have had some very definite orders from the theater's advertising man.

Boys and girls of Denver, Colo., were the guests of the Denver Times and the Rocky Mountain News at a North Pole party given at the Broadway theater when the Kleinschmidt arctic pictures were shown.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

ILLINOIS.

ONE or two big first class theatrical attractions a week and the rest of the time devoted to only the highest class motion pictures is the announcement of policy made by General Manager Louis M. Rubens for the new Lincoln theater (formerly the Joliet) at the Joliet, which opens for 1,000 patrons August 27. The Federal Amusement Company of Joliet has been incorporated to operate the Lincoln. It is authorized to have capital stock of $10,000. Max Goldberg has been elected president, Louis Rubens, general manager and Mrs. Louis Rubens secretary.

Local pictures had a good run at the Evanston theater in Evanston, especially as some new views of Northwestern University were included. A free matinee was held one afternoon so that some of the 1,300 school children caught by the camera could see themselves.

"The Romance of Geraldine," the first of Bodkin & Keane's productions, was a winner when shown for three dates at the Star theater in Evanston. It was a comedy produced under the direction of J. E. Byrnes, featuring an all-Evanston cast. Milton Hosking is now playing the piano at the Star.

Construction of the Hoyburn building at 615-17 Davis street in Evanston, which includes a new moving picture theater, has begun.

Frank A. Barr of Lacon has been fitting up a room in the new Knights of Pythias block in that city for use as a thoroughly modern moving picture theater.

Work has begun of remodeling the Elliott building on Illinois street in Chicago Heights into a moving picture theater to be operated by Contos, Sarros & Gregory.

The Orpheum in Collinsville gave a benefit performance for Peter Bagahin, a local miner, who lost his sight in a mine accident.

A. R. Thickson has closed the Woodman moving picture show at Philo because of the hot weather. Announcement was made that the house will be reopened early in September. David Godfrey is still operating his airdome at Philo.

The moving picture theater at Malden has been closed because extremely hot weather has practically killed business.

In one of his heart-to-heart talks with the people of Pittsfield, Burr Swan, manager of the Knights of Pythias opera house, tells them: "Another thing—when you slip your little old ten cent piece through the window to Little Eva, let it sink in that seven pennies out of the ten stay right here in Pittsfield. Yes, only three of the pennies get out of town; seven of them stay right in Pittsfield to pay the janitor, the operator, the drummer, the piano player, the ticket seller, the coal man, the light man, the printer, the butcher, the baker and the candle stick maker. Ask any other business man how much money HE has to send out of town." This is an effective silencer for the ultra-thrifty who decry the large amount of money exported by the picture shows. Swan has certainly done a great educational work in Pittsfield with pictures. And he has done less talking about it than most men would. The following summary is certainly impressive, showing that when there is any sort of a gathering in Pittsfield the people in charge of the program call on the local moving picture man.

"Old Salem Chautauqua, the biggest in the state, advertises the Kalem picture, "From the Manger to the Cross," as a star attraction for their 1914 meet. Pittsfield more than a year ago got it as a gift. It costs a quarter at Petersburg. The National Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis wages its war against the Great White Plague with motion picture films—and Pittsfield has seen them all in the daily picture programs. County Superintendent Hollis asks the local picture house management for a special series of educational programs during the week of the teachers' institute in August—and the management will get them. Survivors of the Ninty-Ninth Illinois Volunteers, who hold their reunion in Pittsfield August 22, want to see some of the scenes of 1861-to-65 and the local picture man will get Shenandoah, showing little Phil Sheridan's ride and the rally of the Union troops. Members of the Pittsfield Women's Club want help in their campaign for better health, better sanitation and better living—and the local picture management will get just what they want. Anti-liquor people want a powerful sermon on the iniquities of alcoholic drink—and Pittsfield's picture house will show 'John Barleycorn.' The liquor interests offered $25,000 to suppress it. It will be shown in Pittsfield. Yes, pictures are cutting some ice these days and Pittsfield is getting the best there is."

"It is easy to see why Swan's patrons understand when he says: "Moving pictures are not a luxury, they are an education, a recreation, a home institution."

Moving picture attractions, including Cabiria and most of the releases of the Famous Players are about as prominent in the 1914-15 bookings of the Empire Hippodrome at Quincy as the other shows. The Empire is one of the Middle West houses which hopes for a revival of business for theatrical attractions this winter, but will not surfeit their patrons with these shows, and instead are safeguarding the treasury by the dependable process of running high-class feature pictures.

Scott's Airdome at Jacksonville recently celebrated its anniversary bargain week, giving six reels of pictures and a play by a stock company for ten cents. "Les Miserables" was shown at the Airdome for fifteen and twenty-five cents and the proceeds shared with the Jacksonville Cleanup Committee.

The Orpheum theater, which has been operated in the Marks, Weber & Co. building at Edwardsville by W. A. Edwards, has been closed until October 1, because the affairs of the Wildey theater, just taken in charge by Mr. Edwards, will occupy most of his time. Under the new management the Wildey has been redecorated and otherwise improved. Six reels of pictures, including one feature, will be shown for ten cents each Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday night. The other nights vaudeville will be added and twenty cents admission charged for the first floor.

The Central theater at Danville gives away an electric iron at its Monday and Thursday matinees—a proceeding popular with its women patrons.

Recommendations for a church-owned moving picture show to be operated in Bloomington were made by Rev. F. A. Havighorst, pastor of a Methodist church in that city, after a visit to the East. He advocates a plan whereby a union of several local religious organizations could be effected and the members of the congregations given regular moving picture programs. Although he wants Biblical and religious films to predominate, the inclusion of many educational, comic and dramatic reels probably will be encouraged. The tentative plans have been circulated among churchworkers in Bloomington and have been favorably received. If there is a surplus after operating expenses have been paid, local charities or some other worthy causes will be aided.

Little folk of Keithsburg are great boosters for the Gem theater at present as the house is giving away a cute little Shetland pony rig in a voting contest.

Harry Lewis will again be manager for the Gaiety theater at Ottawa. Vaudeville and road shows will be the principal attractions this season.

Manager C. A. Conley of the Majestic theater in La Salle had cameramen taking pictures at the clock factory where the "Big Ben" is made, the films to be featured at the Majestic.

Miss Mina Straley of Canton has gone to Valley City, N. D., where she became the manager of the Grand theater, owned by George Repole of Minot, N. D. Miss Straley assumes a half interest in the house.

One criticism, by patrons of Dellwood Park, at Joliet, was that the Kinemacolor pictures did not always seem to be correctly focused. Slips were passed among the passengers on the street cars, runing to and from the park in an effort to find out their photoplay tastes.

P. W. Gebhart has opened his moving picture theater in Turner Hall at Decatur.

C. D. Caster has installed a new Motiograph in his new moving picture theater, which he opened in the W. H. Ryan building at Minonk.

Capacity business marked the opening of the new Gem theater at Stonington.

Plans for a practically new motion picture theater have been dropped by Manager Joe Quinn of the Majestic on Eighteenth street in Moline. The project may be carried out next summer. The house, however, was closed for two weeks for redecorating and rearrangement of the box office and lobby.

The Owbridge Amusement Company of Pekin is said to have been negotiating for a five-year lease on the Winn Building in Sycamore with a view to remodeling it into a high class moving picture theater. If the house is opened it will be at five cents admission.

Albert Schultz of Spring Grove has been operating at Schlaegerville the moving picture outfit recently purchased of Mrs. Frances D. Hastings.

Free moving picture shows are being given every Wednesday evening on the streets of Rossville by the management of the Idle Hour theater at that place.

John Egan and Thomas Burrell of Cuba have purchased a camera and will take pictures to be shown in Central Illinois moving picture houses.

Joliet photoplay lovers had their first glimpse of a real live moving picture star when Francis X. Bushman, at the Princess theater, told them all about the production of "Dear Old Girl." Reporters avowed that Bushman's feminine admirers were so numerous at the station that night that he was barely able to wade through and catch the last step of the last coach.

Dreamland theater at Kewanee gave a two days' benefit for William Boyd, former high school football star, now in an afflicted condition.

Canoeists are about as numerous along the Rock River at Rockford as at any place in the Middle West. The Commercial Arts Shop of Rockford made up an interesting scenic reel including the activities of these clubs.

Moving picture lovers of Leland can again attend their favorite shows, the epidemic of smallpox which resulted in their closing having abated.

The Princess theater at Joliet will make a regular feature of the Biograph re-issues of the Mary Pickford pictures, seting aside each Friday for the exhibition of these films.

Mrs. Herman Coons has returned from Chicago to resume her position as pianist at the Cort theater in Monmouth.

A baby show, using slides of the youngsters instead of exhibiting them in the flesh, is being conducted by the Palm theater at Mound City.

Delmar Lee has been conducting a free moving picture show on the streets of Chicago Heights, securing advertising from the merchants to defray the expense of the film service.

After their trip to California the films of the Fulton county picnic in California were returned to the Princess theater in Canton, where they drew another large crowd. This picture has been shown three times in Canton and arrangements were made for a return date in most of the towns in Fulton County. It was made for the Canton Register at a picnic of former residents of the county who are now living in California.

The Commercial Filmers of Chicago have been incorporated with capital stock of $2,500 to manufacture, produce, sell and rent motion picture films, slides, machines, etc. The incorporators are H. C. Porter, W. F. Porter and Charles N. David.

The musical part of the production of the film, "The Christian," at the Capitol theater in Pekin, was well handled. The special score was arranged and rendered by E. A. Stein, who played the original attraction at the Grand Opera house in Peoria several years ago.

Moving pictures of Rock Falls, including the scenes at the corn carnival, were made for exhibition at the Grand theater.

The Egyptian Amusement Company of Harrisburg has been incorporated with capital stock of $20,000 to consult places of amusement of all kinds and to lease or hire films for moving picture and other performances. The incorporators are J. M. Pruett, O. L. Turner, J. H. Woolcott, J. V. Capel and W. T. Turner.

The Savoy theater at Delavan had a local attraction of interest when Frank Hatton, a resident of the city, who had been at work on the Panama Canal, gave an illustrated lecture.

"Family Week" at the Cort theater in Monmouth meant that the house had a well-mixed program and for five days conducted a bargain sale of twelve tickets for a dollar. The tickets were honored at any show during the week.

The remodeled Nickellete theater in La Salle will be opened for the fall moving picture season some time in September. A new front is one of the changes made.

Manager Berman of the Fox theater at Aurora has been doing some educational work. He had a free day for all children under fourteen years of age. One of the pictures shown was the House and Garden Clubs, formed under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture. The film tells how youngsters are kept out of mischief and raise produce to sell. Professor Benson expects to show these pictures in a great many houses in Illinois as a part of his missionary campaign.

A film showing 1,000 feet of Rockford beautiful was part of the 5,000 feet of film shown to the patrons of the Grand opera house in Rockford for five cents. This film was notably free from the advertising scenes which generally mark these local pictures.

The Drexel theater at Joliet put into effect July 27 a hot weather policy of showing daily five pictures for five cents. Thursdays and Sundays, however, were left for state right features at five and ten cents. Miss Maud Baxter, a local soprano of ability, has been singing at the Drexel.

Hot weather caused such a curtailment of patronage in Sterling that Manager Wilson McKim of the Lyric theater decided to keep his house open only four days a week. Until cooler weather he will give no shows on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

St. Paul's Emmanuel Lutheran Church at Aurora has a cement outdoor pavilion which is used for showing travel moving pictures. Rev. A. M. Loth, who has traveled extensively, explains the films. Band concerts are given in connection with the picture shows.

Where advertising efforts are not confined strictly to the photoplay program and the merits of the house, the stunt adopted by Scott's Airdome at Jacksonville might prove popular. A flashlight was taken one night of the crowd in attendance. Later it was shown on the screen.

Manager Sansone of the new moving picture show at Nauvoo is giving exhibitions Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Saturday matinees have been resumed by the Yales theater at Carbondale.

The beautiful little Fischer theater in Danville has gone over to moving pictures. The Allardt Theatrical Company, now operating the Fischer as a vaudeville house, has taken a lease on the Lyric theater, which is running pictures. About the first of September the vaudeville will be switched to the Lyric and the Fischer will become the photoplay medium. A new $10,000 pipe organ and an electric fountain sign are contemplated among other improvements for the Fischer.

F. C. Fielding could not decide upon a name for his new moving picture theater at Third and Market streets in Alton and offered a season ticket and another prize to the lady suggesting the most suitable name.

Manager Al Yaeger of the Princess theater at Mount Carroll secured Brein & Saltain, cameramen of Morrison, to make some pictures of scenes in and around Mount Carroll to be shown on the screen at that house. Yaeger recently introduced an old folks night at which all persons over fifty years of age were admitted free.

Stephen T. King of Chenoa has traded the Knights of Pythias opera house at Pittsfield to Ab Houchins. This will not affect the lease on the house held by Burr Swan, who operates a moving picture show.

C. N. Jacobs, the new manager of the Gem theater at Clinton, has had the house remodeled and renovated. In the future it will be known as "Dreamland." It was expected to reopen the middle of August with a photoplay policy in which serials played a large part.

The Masonic opera house at Albion, idle for the last year, will be reopened under the same management as that of the Majestic moving picture theater. It will be used on special show nights, for theatrical attractions and it is likely that motion picture equipment will be installed and picture shows given at both houses during the week ends.

While the feature, "The War Bonnet Round Up," was on at the Apollo theater in Princeton the house published coupons which with one ten cent paid admision admitted free two children under twelve years of age.

Films made in Alton, along the Mississippi River and at Piasa chautauqua were a good box office attraction at the Princess theater in Alton.

Moving pictures of the National Elimination Race of Balloonists starting from Portland, Ore., showed the Illinois Society of Oregon paying a tribute to Roy Donaldson who piloted the balloon "Springfield." Donaldson, who is a local man, lectured this film when it was shown at the Princess theater here.

The Lyric, Vaudette, Vogue and Amuse-U theaters of Springfield are getting quite a little free advertising in connection with a series of feature articles which Beverly Bayne of the Essanay Company is running in the Illinois State Journal.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

TENNESSEE.

A BRIGHT future is ahead of the motion picture business in Chattanooga, and a spirit of optimism prevails among all of the exhibitors. A total of sixteen theaters are running at this time, none of which cater exclusively to white patrons, while five theaters in the colored district are being well patronized by colored people. Feature films are proving very popular, and it is the opinion of one of the exhibitors, who has made a careful study of the situation, that the future of the business will hinge on real features.

The contract for remodeling the Old Sprague Dairy lunch of Chattanooga, at 719 Market street for a modern motion picture theater was recently awarded to Ernest J. Henderson, by the Lyric Company, incorporated. This theater will probably be completed by September 1, according to tentative plans of the Lyric Company. Selection of a name for the theater will be deferred until just before the opening, when a contest will be conducted to decide on a name for the new house. The building, occupied until two months ago by the Sprague restaurant, has been partially demolished and only the side walls and roof timbers are being used in the new building. New floors and interior walls are being constructed. The Griffith-Graham Shoe Company's store is to make use of the rear of the old restaurant building. Planned along the general design of the Majestic theater in Chattanooga, the new home for the Lyric company will have an entrance lobby fronting on Market street, with waiting rooms for women immediately in front of the main theater hall. The seating capacity will be 750, which will make it the largest theater in the city. Unique among the special features of the new theater is to be its ventilation system. Air from the Broad street end of the building will be drawn in by two large suction pipes, cooled by being forced through a refrigerator system and filtered through silk cloth. Four outlet pipes will be arranged on the roof of the building to suck out the stale air. A steady current will pass through the theater all the time by this arrangement. The designers claim that all of the air in the house can be changed in 1½ minutes and that the summer temperature can be held at 65 to 75 degrees. Steam will be used for heating the theater in the winter. No vaudeville and only the better class of motion pictures will be shown in the new theater, according to a statement of the controlling company. The film service now in use at the Lyric theater will be transferred to the new house. Among recent productions shown at the Lyric theater were "The Only Son," "The Eagle's Mate," "When the World Was Silent," "Lucile Love," "Fleur De-Lis," "The Sob Sister" and a number of the Ford Sterling comedies.

H. J. Palmer, of Knoxville, is reported to be planning a plant to manufacture moving picture screens. Nothing definite has been settled upon so far.

The Lyric Theater, of Oakdale, was recently opened under the management of W. H. Lainge, formerly of Baltimore, Md. The theater was packed and the three hundred seats were not nearly adequate to accommodate the crowd. The building has been so constructed that 200 more seats can be added, and Mr. Lainge has announced that these seats will shortly be put in. The new enterprise represents an investment of $8,000. The structure is of wood and brick, 32x74 feet, in size and the stage is 10x32 feet. It is the intention of the company to put on some vaudeville in connection with the pictures.

Tony Sudekum has renewed his lease on the Dixie Theater, at Columbia for five years, which gives him a total lease on the building of six and one-half years. As a result of securing the new lease, the building will be remodeled and thoroughly renovated. Arrangements are being made to tear out completely the present entrance, remove the steps and lower the front of the house to a level with the sidewalk. This will necessitate lowering the back of the house also, so that the floors will still be inclined. The entrance will have a spacious and handsome lobby, and the tiling used in its construction will be of very handsome design. The box office will be larger than the present one and far more ornate. The interior of the house will be improved considerably and large mirror panels will be fitted along both sides. A considerable amount will be spent in remodeling the house.

Memphis will have one of the finest motion Picture theaters in the South when the new Majestic Amusement Company's house is erected on Main street just south of the Hotel Gayoso, which, in turn, is one of the finest hotels in the South. The new building will be called the Majestic Theater, and will be built at a cost of about $65,000. The exterior of the theater will be of concrete, brick and ornamental terra cotta, with an ornamental iron and glass marquise extending over the sidewalk. A myriad of electric lights will flash from the front of the theater and in the lobby. Special stress has been laid upon the fireproof phases of the building, but in order to provide additional safeguards from fire danger, a device will be installed which will automatically open every window and exit in the building. Ventilation and heating devices also will be installed, and a cooling system to force cold air into the theatre in summer time. The theater will be equipped to seat 1,200 persons, and boxes will be provided at the sides and will extend around the face of the balcony. The contract for the work was awarded by Hanker & Cairns, local architects, to the James Alexander Construction Company. The theater will be erected by J. B. Snowden and leased for a period of ten years to the Majestic Amusement Company, which operates a string of theaters in Memphis. Hanker & Cairns will act as supervising architects for Steigmeyer & Kennsley, of St. Louis, who make a specialty of theater construction.

The Bellevue Theater, Memphis, which is now in course of construction, is to be a new departure in the motion picture world. This house, which will be 150x25 feet, will be built as a summer and winter theater combined. A waterproof, sliding roof will be operated by a large motor, so that it may be left open in good weather or closed in a few seconds by the movement of a lever. The theater, which was planned by G. M. Shaw, will be built by J. D. Nathan at a cost of $7,000. The patent on the sliding roof was recently obtained and the roof will be used for the first time on this theater, which will be erected at Bellevue Boulevard and Linden avenue. Many theater men in this section of the country are very much interested in the new idea, and more houses of the same kind may be erected.

The Gay Theater, at Knoxville, is being completely overhauled, remodeled and refurnished at an expenditure of about $10,000. The work was started about thirty days ago, and will be completed in about thirty more. In the meantime the equipment was moved to the Grand theater, and the Gay programs are going right ahead at the latter theater. In remodeling the Gay theater the walls will be re-decorated with paintings, a modern ventilating system will be installed, a modern sprinkler system and modern seats will be put in. GEORGE.

SAN FRANCISCO.

ALTHOUGH the California State Legislature will not be in session until the first of the year, plans are being made in certain quarters for legislation of paramount importance to the moving picture trade. A measure is to be introduced prohibiting the attendance of children under sixteen years of age at moving picture entertainments, even when accompanied by parents. Attempts will also be made to pass a strict censorship bill and doubtless there will be other legislation of importance considered. Theater owners realize that their State League is the only effective medium they have through which to wage a fight against pernicious regulations, and a campaign is under way to make the League as strong as possible before the meeting of the Legislature. The annual convention that will be held at Sacramento in October will be the most important meeting ever held by the League, and will doubtless be well attended. Exhibitors are being urged to co-operate so that there will be no mistaking the attitude they take on proposed legislation affecting their interests.

The Larkin theater, opened a few weeks ago on Larkin street, near O'Farrell, by Joy B. Rothschild, has been sold to N. H. Hewson, who took possession this week.

The Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., recently furnished a machine, operator and program for a private showing of moving pictures at the beautiful home of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst at Pleasanton, this being the second entertainment of this kind furnished this hostess during the past month.

The Washington Square theater, Powell street and Columbus avenue, has been rented for a short time, but the regular moving picture program will shortly be resumed.

The Pageant Film Company, recently incorporated here, is having moving pictures taken for a large production. The work is being done by the California Motion Picture Corporation.

Hunter Bennett, assistant to the general manager of the World Film Corporation, is here on a tour of inspection of all of the branches of this concern. The announcement is made that E. H. Duffy, who has spent most of his time on the Coast since this firm established branches here, is no longer connected with the World Film Corporation.

The Moving Picture Operators of San Francisco had motion pictures taken of themselves this week in front of their headquarters. The films will be shown in connection with the ball to be given on August 29.

The Eclectic Film Company, 67 Turk street, has opened its operating room and is making regular showings of the features it releases. The idea has met with instant favor on the part of exhibitors who have made frequent complaints in the past in regard to the lack of such facilities in San Francisco. The operating booth conforms with the local building requirements and is fitted with the latest in equipment.

Ralph L. Marks and W. A. Cory, secretaries respectively of the San Francisco and the State Exhibitors' League, enjoyed a vacation trip by automobile to Monterey and Venice recently.

S. C. Martenstein has been granted a permit by the Board of Police Commissioners to conduct kinetoscope exhibitions at 271 Devisadero street.

The Acme Amusement Company has been incorporated here with a capital stock of $10,000 by W. Rock, J. R. Kelly and W. G. Weiss.

The Excelsion theater, at Mission street and Onondaga avenue, has been disposed of by O. Englund to a Mr. Yost.

Word has been received from Herbert Payne, president of the California Motion Picture Corporation, to the effect that he and his bride are at Paris and that they have given up the plans for a trip to Carlsbad, owing to the war conditions.

A rather serious fire occurred at the San Rafael studio of the California Motion Picture Corporation on July 28, the property and scenery rooms being destroyed. A slight delay was necessitated on some of the work on hand but the taking of pictures is in full swing again.

The Government representatives of Australia and New Zealand to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition are here in connection with work on the pavilions that have been planned and were the guests this week at a meeting of the Australian Society at the Palace Hotel, where a moving picture exhibition was given of the ground breaking exercises and of general exposition activities, all of which have been pictured.

The Macograph Company, which conducts a studio here and maintains a school of acting on the fifteenth floor of the Claus Spreckles Building, is preparing to move to larger quarters.

"The Little Gray Lady" is enjoying a splendid run at Grauman's Imperial, following "The Man on the Box." "Neptune's Daughter," which scored a hit a few months ago at the Columbia theater, will be shown in the future.

The Cort theater is being given over this week to moving pictures, the attraction being the new series Paul J. Rainey's African Hunt Pictures. The matinee prices are 15 cents and 25 cents, with the evening prices ranging from 15 cents to 50 cents.

W. W. Hodkinson, of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, is in San Francisco, making his headquarters with the Progressive Motion Picture Company, Pacific Building.

The Macdonough theater, Oakland, Cal., reopened its doors on August 1, after having been closed for several weeks. The first attraction booked is "Neptune's Daughter," and this will be followed by the great Selig production, "The Spoilers," which will be shown for two weeks.

M. C. Armstrong, who conducts the Bell theater at Sanger, Cal., has purchased the interests of Art. Leino in the Grand theater and Airdome at Reedley, Cal.

The L-Ko Motion Picture Co. has been incorporated at Los Angeles with a capital stock of $10,000, the directors being H. M. Lehrmann, L. Bernstein, A. Stern, S. Behrendt and A. P. Hamberg.

The Case Film Manufacturing Company is also a corporation formed at Los Angeles. The capital stock is placed at $500,000 and the directors are R. M. McAlevy, W. B. Perkins and J. A. Wallis.

J. Simmonds of the Apex Film Company, arrived at San Francisco this week direct from New York to inspect the branch recently established here in the Pantages Building. As a result of his visit the entire space now occupied jointly by the Apex Film Company and the Globe Film Exchange has been taken over by the concern he represents, with Marion H. Kohn as manager. This concern has met with great success here since opening for business, some of the largest theaters in the territory booking its features. Mr. Simmonds is well known on the Coast, having been in business here for years, and having been one of the first to handle feature films. Following a two weeks' stay here, he will go to Los Angeles and then journey home by the southern route.

B. Cuneo of Bakersfield, Cal., is having a business building at that place remodeled and when the work is completed will open a moving picture house.

Plans are being made for the erection of a new theater at Dinuba, Cal. A stock company is being formed to erect the building, and C. H. Douglass, manager of the Elite theater, is taking charge of the preliminary arrangements. A theater seating 1,000 persons and costing about $26,000 is planned.

Mabel Normand, of Keystone fame, who is owner of a Stutz racing car that is to be entered in the races at the Fresno district fair late in September, plans to be present at the Raisin City during the celebration, and it is understood that a comedy will be staged there at that time.

J. B. Travelle, who conducts a moving picture house at Placerville, Cal., recently took moving pictures of the Eagles' parade at Jackson and showed them at his theater with excellent results.

(Continued on page 1264.)

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Current Releases

MONDAY, AUGUST 24, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Man from the Past (Drama)
EDISON—Nearly a Widow (Comedy)
ESSANAY—Sweedie Springs a Surprise (Comedy)
KALEM—The Primitive Instinct (Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News, No. 53, 1914 (News)
—Edible Fishes of the English Channel (Ocean)
—Picturesque Normandy, France (Travel)
SELIG—The White Mouse (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 51 (News)
VITAGRAPH—Ward's Claim (Western-Drama)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1914.

CINES—To Forgive, Divine (Special—Two parts—Drama).
EDISON—The Mystery of the Octagonal Room (Tenth of "The Chronicles of Cleek" Series (Drama)
ESSANAY—Two Men Who Waited (Drama)
KALEM—The Counterfeiter's Plot (Drama)
LUBIN—The Widow and the Twins (Comedy)
—The Lucky Rube (Comedy)
MELIES—Circumstantial Evidence (Comedy)
PATHE—Rapids and Falls at Trondjen (Travel)
—Picturesque France, Lower Brittany (Travel)
—From Havre to Buc by Hydro-Aeroplane (Color-Travel)
SELIG—The Sealed Oasis (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Rainy the Lion Killer (Special—Two parts—Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1914.

EDISON—The South African Mines (Industrial)
—Buster and His Goat (Comedy)
ESSANAY—Fable of "the Difference Between I earning and Learning How" (Comedy)
KALEM—The Cave of Death (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—The Attorney's Decision (Special—Two parts—Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 54, 1914 (News)
SELIG—The Decision of Jim O'Farrel (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Josie's Declaration of Independence (Com.)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Terrible Lesson (Drama)
ESSANAY—Slippery Slim and the Fortune Teller (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Aggressor (Special—Two parts—Drama)
MELIES—The Elopement of Eliza (Comedy)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 52 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The Mysterious Lodger (Drama)

FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1914.

EDISON—The Birth of the Star Spangled Banner (Special—Two parts—Historical Drama)
ESSANAY—Seven Sealed Orders (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
KALEM—When Men Wear Skirts (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Better Man (Drama)
SELIG—A Low Financier (Comedy)
—Breaking Into Jail (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—Such a Hunter (Comedy)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 29, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—Spending It Quick (Comedy)
—Baseball, a Grand Old Game (Comedy)
EDISON—Treasure Trove (Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Indian Romance (Western-Drama)
KALEM—The Car of Death (Drama)
LUBIN—The Kids' Nap (Comedy)
MELIES—The Man Who Smiled (Special—Two parts—Comedy)
SELIG—The Harbor of Love (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Josie's Coney Island Nightmare (Special—Two parts—Comedy)

Advance Releases

MONDAY, AUGUST 31, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Counterfeiter's Daughter (Drama)
EDISON—The Buxom Country Lass (Ninth of the Wood B. Wedd Series) (Comedy)
ESSANAY—Love and Soda (Comedy)
KALEM—The Brand (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 55 (News)
—(Title not reported)
SELIG—Who Killed George Graves (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 53 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The Wrong Flat (Comedy)

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1914.

CINES—The Voice of Innocence (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
EDISON—The New York Police Department Carnival (Descriptive)
ESSANAY—No. 28 Diplomat (Drama)
KALEM—The Hand of Fate (Drama)
LUBIN—Never Too Old (Comedy)
—The Green Alarm (Comedy)
MELIES—Flee, You Are Discovered (Comedy)
PATHE—(Title not reported)
SELIG—Life's Crucible (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—The Hidden Letters (Special—Two Parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1914.

EDISON—A Village Scandal (Comedy)
ESSANAY—Fable of the Regular Beanery and the Peachy Newcomer (Comedy)
KALEM—The Oil Well Conspiracy (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
LUBIN—By Whose Hand (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 56 (News)
SELIG—To Be Called For (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Lost Cord (Comedy)

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Chief's Love Affair (Comedy)
—Love and Hash (Comedy)
ESSANAY—When Macbeth Came to Snakeville (Comedy).
LUBIN—The Face in the Crowd (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
MELIES—A Case of Imagination (Comedy)
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 54 (News)
VITAGRAPH—The Upper Hand (Drama)

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1914.

EDISON—The Viking Queen (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—Under Royal Patronage (Special—Two Parts—Drama)
KALEM—The Winking Zulu (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Shell of Life (Drama)
SELIG—The House That Went Crazy (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—The Barrel Organ (Comedy)

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—For the Cause (Drama)
EDISON—Hearts of the Forest (Drama)
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy, the Vagabond (Drama)
KALEM—The Gambler's Reformation (Drama)
LUBIN—A Fool There Was (Comedy)
SELIG—Pawn Ticket "913" (Drama)
VITAGRAPH—Too Much Uncle (Special—Two Parts—Comedy)

NOW IS THE TIME TO PUT ON SONG SLIDE SERVICE. Might as well put on the best. Write for prices.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER COMPANY, First National Bank Bldg., Chicago
Best Song Slide Service in America

Calendar of Quality Releases

A PROGRAM OF QUALITY

For Your

PROGRAM HEADLINERS

BIOGRAPH -- KLAW & ERLANGER

Three Reel Productions

For Each Tuesday

THE TWO REEL BIOGRAPH

For Each

Monday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday

A ONE REEL BIOGRAPH

BIOGRAPH QUALITY

Calendar of Independent Releases

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, AUGUST 23, 1914.

KOMIC—A Physical Culture Romance (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Second Mrs. Roebuck (Two parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—A Dog's Good Deed (Drama)

MONDAY, AUGUST 24, 1914.

AMERICAN—This Is th' Life (Two parts—Comedy)
KEYSTONE—Fatty's Gift (Comedy)
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 32 (Topical)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1914.

BEAUTY—Susie's New Shoes (Comedy-Drama)
MAJESTIC—Granny (Drama)
THANHOUSER—Conscience (Two parts—Drama)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1914.

AMERICAN—Lodging for the Night (Drama)
BRONCHO—The Sheriff's Sister (Two parts—Drama)
RELIANCE—The Stolen Ore (Drama)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1914.

DOMINO—The Village 'Neath the Sea (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title not yet announced)
MUTUAL WEEKLY—Number 87 (News)

FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Song of the Sea Shell (Drama)
KAY-BEE—The Old Love's Best (Two parts—Drama)
PRINCESS—The Keeper of the Light (Drama)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 29, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title not yet announced)
RELIANCE—Through the Dark (Two parts—Drama)
ROYAL—A Run for His Money (Comedy)

SUNDAY, AUGUST 30, 1914.

KOMIC—Bill No. 5—Bill Organizes a Union (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—Frenchy (Two parts—Drama)
THANHOUSER—Arty the Artist (Comedy)

MONDAY, AUGUST 31, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Aftermath (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title not reported)
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl No. 33 (Topical)

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1914.

BEAUTY—A Modern Othello (Comedy)
MAJESTIC—The Milk-Fed Boy (Comedy-Drama)
THANHOUSER—A Mother's Choice (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Wrong Birds (Comedy)
BRONCHO—When America Was Young (Two parts—Drama)
RELIANCE—The Miner's Baby (Drama)

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1914.

DOMINO—The Silver Bell (Two parts—Drama)
KEYSTONE—(Title not reported)
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 88 (News)

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1914.

KAY BEE—Stacked Cards (Two parts—Drama)
PRINCESS—His Winning Way (Comedy)
RELIANCE—Turned Back (Drama)

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title not reported)
RELIANCE—In the Nick of Time (Two parts—Drama)
ROYAL—Flanagan's Luck (Comedy)

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 23, 1914.

ECLAIR—The Miracle (Drama)
FRONTIER—The Strange Signal (Drama)
REX—The Hole in the Garden Wall (Drama)

MONDAY, AUGUST 24, 1914.

IMP—Jim Webb, Senator (Three parts—Drama)
STERLING—A Rural Affair (Juvenile—Comedy)
VICTOR—There Is a Destiny (Drama)

TUESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1914.

CRYSTAL—Barreled (Comedy)
—Bashful Ben (Comedy)
GOLD SEAL—The Trey o' Hearts, Series No. 4 (Dead Reckoning) (Two parts—Drama)
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike at the Dance of Little L. O. (Comedy)
—Turtle Traits (Zoology)

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1914.

UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly—No. 129 (News)
ECLAIR—The Character Woman (Two parts—Drama)
JOKER—The Little Automogobile (Comedy)
NESTOR—A Miner's Romance (Western—Drama)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1914.

IMP—Universal Boy in the Chinese Mystery (Juvenile—Drama)
REX—For the Secret Service (Two parts—Drama)
STERLING—Snookee's Disguise (Comedy)

FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1914.

NESTOR—For Love or Money (Comedy)
POWERS—This Is the Life (Comedy)
VICTOR—Counterfeiters (Two parts—Drama)

SATURDAY, AUGUST 29, 1914.

"101" BISON—Law of the Lumberjack (Two parts—Drama)
JOKER—Well! Well! (Comedy)

SUNDAY, AUGUST 30, 1914.

ECLAIR—Mosquito Pete's Fortune (Drama)
FRONTIER—The Janitor's Son (Drama)
REX—Out of the Depths (Drama)

MONDAY, AUGUST 31, 1914.

IMP—Mr. Burglar, M. D. (Drama—Mary Pickford Reissue).
STERLING—The Man From Nowhere (Two parts—Drama)
VICTOR—The Tale of a Hat

.. TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1914.

CRYSTAL—A Seaside Flirt (Comedy)
GOLD SEAL—The Trey O' Hearts No. 5—The Sunset Tide (Drama)
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike, Jr., Almost Gets Married (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1914.

ECLAIR—The Jackpot Club (Two parts—Drama)
JOKER—Father's Bride (Comedy)
NESTOR—The Foreman's Treachery (Drama)

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1914.

UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly No. 130 (News)
IMP—Tempest and Sunshine (Two parts—Drama)
REX—Daisies (Drama)
STERLING—A Bogus Baron (Comedy)

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1914.

NESTOR—A Baby Did It (Comedy)
POWERS—The Storm Bird (Drama)
—Beautiful Corsica (Scenic)
VICTOR—The Derelict and the Man (Two parts—Drama).

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1914.

BISON—The Return of the Twin's Double (Three parts—Drama)
JOKER—Oh! What's the Use (Comedy)

When Perfect Projection is Essential Simplex Projectors Are Always Selected

720 SCHILLER BLDG.

FRANK COOK, Mgr.
PHIL H. SOLOMON,
SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

F. O. NIELSEN
EXCLUSIVE STATE RIGHT OWNER
SELIG'S NINE REEL MASTERPIECE
"THE SPOILERS"
BY REX BEACH.

BOOKING
OHIO
INDIANA
MICHIGAN
WISCONSIN
ILLINOIS
(EXCEPT COOK CO.)

CHICAGO. July 23, 1914.

The Precision Machine Co., Inc.,
317 E. 34th Street,
New York, N.Y.

Gentlemen:-

I wish to congratulate you on your "1914" model of the Simplex M.P. machine, having used two of your latest motor driven machines in the Victoria Opera House, Dayton, Ohio, in presenting "THE SPOILERS" to the Exhibitors as well as the public during Convention week - July 6th. The projection was excellent.

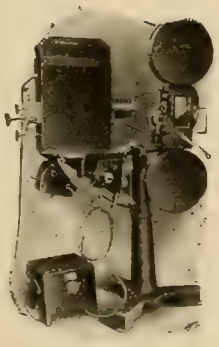
In May, 1912 I bought two Simplex hand-driven machines of the Bell & Howell Co. for my Parkway theater in Chicago, the same machines have been running daily and in all that time I have had only $1.50 repairs; the projection at all times being A#1. The machines apparently seem as good as new today.

I have also used two of your machines at the Stevens theatre for the past 18 months. As yet no repairs, the machines still being in perfect condition.

Inasmuch as I consider this an exceptional showing, considering the length of time and the hard tests the machines have been put to, I would heartily recommend the Simplex machine to anyone, and you may use this letter in anyway you see fit.

Wishing you continued success, I am

Very truly yours, F. O. Nielsen.



Catalog "A" explains why it is.

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th St. New York

(Continued from page 1259.)

Harry Harvey, a moving picture director of note, has arrived at Chico, Cal., to direct the production of a series of photoplays for the United States Feature Film Co. The first feature will be a six-reel production entitled "Evans and Sontag, in the Folly of a Life of Crime." Mrs. Jack Sutcliffe of Chico will play the part of Birdie Wilson, sweetheart of John Sontag. Chris Evans, the former bandit, who is now out of prison on parole, is attempting to prevent the production of the pictures.

The Picture Screen Advertising Company has been incorporated at Los Angeles with a capital of $25,000, the interested parties being J. M. Busby, F. G. Tyrrell, J. Shipman, G. Harper and A. L. Abrahams.

The Rolin Film Company has filed articles of incorporation at Los Angeles, the directors being D. A. Linthieum, H. E. Roach and L. H. Bance. The capital stock is placed at $10,000.

Mary Lillian Butler is making a bid for the distinction of being one of the youngest moving picture actresses in California. She took part recently in a series of pictures made by the California Motion Picture Corporation at Visalia, playing several rather difficult parts.

J. C. White is preparing to build a $100,000 theater, known as the White theater, at Fresno, Cal. Plans are being drawn by Boller & Foulkes, Kansas City.

Daniel Sullivan, Durham, Cal., has awarded contracts for the erection of a motion picture house on his property on Devisadero street, near Page, San Francisco. The building will contain stores, as well as the theater and will cost about $9,000. The house will seat 399 persons.

Work is to be started within ninety days by the Marcus Loew Corporation on a motion picture house on Market street to cost in the neighborhood of $400,000. The theater is to be of fireproof construction and will seat more than 3,000 persons. Plans will be prepared by William Beasley, 127 Montgomery street.

Sol Siebenhauer, auditor of the Orpheum Theater, is among the San Franciscoans who are detained in Europe by the war. He left here several weeks ago on a vacation, with the intention of visiting Germany, but had hardly arrived when the war sprang up.

An interesting feature of the Home Exposition that is to be held during September at the Auditorium is to be a series of moving pictures showing the processes through which raw material passes into the finished product. C. R. Thorburn, secretary of the Home Industry League, states that without doubt the series of pictures secured is one of the most important ever gathered together. The canning of fruits and vegetables will be shown in detail, also the making of flour. The grape industry will be exploited, views of vineyards being followed by harvest scenes and the processes employed in making wine.

The Indoor Yacht Club of San Francisco held a "movie" night on the evening of August 6 at its quarters at 4 Eddy street, moving pictures of a recent Beach Day celebration being shown by Miles Bros. The club has arranged for an outing on Lake Tahoe during August, and Winfield Blake has written a scenario for a moving picture that will be enacted by members making the trip to this wonderland.

Edward H. Kemp is preparing to leave shortly for San Diego and from there will travel northward, visiting the moving picture trade in the interests of his supply business.

Two Motiograph machines of the latest type have been installed in the Gaiety Theater, which is just ending a four weeks' run on "Cabiria."

Robert McNeill, who recently sold the Panama Theater on the Mission road, has again associated himself with this house by purchasing a one-half interest in it.

The Essanay production, "One Wonderful Night," was shown recently to crowded houses at the Tivoli, and from the remarks made it was clear that many had been drawn to see the picture through reading the story in serial form.

Ten thousand feet of film received from the whaler Herman, now in the Arctic, have been developed by Edward H. Kemp and his associates, the most important features being pictures showing the rescue of members of the Stefannson expedition.

The Auditorium, Page and Fillmore streets, is being improved by Frank Walcott in preparation for the Movie Ball on August 29. A complete stage is being put in and a novel electrical display arranged.

The new theater being erected on Cortland avenue is rapidly assuming shape and the opening date will be announced shortly. A Powers 6A Cameragraph will be installed.

The Regent Theater, one of the leading houses in the Fillmore street district, has been sold by S. Levin to Ryburg Bros. This house is located on one of the direct routes to the Exposition grounds and in the center of an established amusement district.

M. B. Dudley, general manager of the Panama-Aero Film Co., is making a business trip to Los Angeles, and following his return will start East.

P. G. Lynch, formerly manager of the San Francisco branch of the Pacific Mutual Film Corporation, and now manager of the Santa Barbara studio of the American Film Manufacturing Company, was here this week on a business trip.

D. J. Grauman, who conducts Grauman's Imperial Theater, one of the leading photo-play houses of the Coast, has made arrangements to take over the Savoy Theater on McAllister street, near Leavenworth, and will open this on August 16, with Jack London's "Martin Eden." This theater is a well-built house and was recently decorated and improved at a heavy expense. The location has been considered by many to be out of the way, but it is less than a block from Market street and Grauman's Imperial. When the latter house was opened two years ago the opinion was freely expressed that it was much too far out from Market street, but the success that has been met with since that time is unparalleled and there is no reason why it cannot be duplicated. Mr. Grauman has secured the exhibiting rights in this territory for the Paramount productions and these will be divided between the two houses. Plans are also under consideration for opening houses in at least two other large cities in California. The same policy that has been so successful at the Imperial will be followed out at the Savoy. The same prices of 10, 20 and 30 cents will prevail, an orchestra will be installed and the pictures will be of the same high grade.

Merideth Nightingale, formerly shipping clerk for Davis Bros., is now with the General Film Company, having charge of the special feature poster department.

Work is progressing rapidly on the beautiful new moving picture theater being erected at Berkeley, Cal., for Turner & Dahnken, and the opening date is being arranged for about the middle of October, with "The Spoilers" as the attraction. When this new house is opened two programs a week will be offered, the prices to be 10 cents and 20 cents. Music will be furnished by a six-piece orchestra. The theater will closely resemble the Tivoli of San Francisco, and will be one of the largest on the Coast devoted exclusively to moving pictures.

Two Motiograph machines have been purchased for the Beatty moving picture house at San Jose, Cal., now approaching completion.

The Broadway Theater, Chico, Cal., a moving picture house owned by J. J. Woods, is being remodeled at a large expense.

Mrs. Cornelia Gray is preparing to erect a one-story brick theater at Martinez, Cal., at a cost of $8,000, the house having been leased in advance to J. A. Kelly and Frank M. Cunningham, who conduct the Novelty theater at that place.

The Pacific Improvement Company is planning to erect an open air moving picture theater at either Del Monte or Pacific Grove, Cal.

The Photoplay theater at Bakersfield, Cal., has been sold to J. Carana and A. J. Merjanis.

C. E. Laval, official photographer for the San Joaquin Valley Counties' Association, has orders to turn out 15,000 feet of film before the opening of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, and four prints will be made of all work for exhibition purposes. Harry Birch is doing the studio work at 2535 White avenue, Fresno, Cal.

H. E. Knowland has opened a moving picture house at Mokelumne Hill, Cal., and will also show at Dry Town and Amador City.

The Photoplay at Livermore, Cal., will be reopened at the close of the warm season.

E. H. Emmick, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc., was in San Francisco this week conferring with general manager Sol Lesser and arranging his program for the next few months.

The great Selig production, "The Spoilers," is still creating a furore in the San Francisco territory, and many advance bookings are being made by the Golden Gate Film Exchange, Inc. It is to be shown again by popular request at the Portola theater, and is also booked for the All Star theater on Sutter street; the Victory, at San Jose; the Pastime, Eureka; the Photoplay, Burlingame; the Republic, Vallejo, and the new Schmidt house at Palo Alto.

Jack London's "Valley of the Moon" was shown last week to capacity houses at the Berkeley theater, conducted at Berkeley, Cal., by Turner & Dahnken. Most of the pictures were taken within a few miles of this city, and were familiar to many. Jack London was at one time a student at the University of California, which is located here, and has a wide following among the University cult.

The McDonough theater at Oakland, Cal., was recently equipped with two new Simplex machines.

The Orpheum at Stockton, Cal., has been making a number of improvements of late and two new Powers 6a cameragraphs have been installed in the projection room.

The Majestic theater at Porterville, Cal., is being renovated and improved by Eckles Bros. and will be opened as soon as the warm spell is over.

The Fruit Growers' Association, which has large interests at Hilt, Cal., has purchased a Powers 6a cameragraph, and will give moving picture exhibitions.

The Globe theater at Petaluma, Cal., was taken over by the Petaluma Tribe of Red Men during the first week of August and the proceeds given to the orphan fund of this organization.

The new Durant School at Oakland, Cal., which will be completed by the first of October, is to have a large assembly hall with motion picture apparatus for lectures and entertainments.

Moving pictures were taken at Fresno, Cal., recently of the largest shipment of raisins ever made at one time, the shipment consisting of three million packages, comprising one train of sixty cars.

Work has been commenced at Watsonville, Cal., on the erection of a large moving picture theater to be occupied when completed by Turner & Dahnken.

CHURCH.

WISCONSIN.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN of the Essany Company was at the Alhambra theater in Milwaukee at the time the film, "One Wonderful Night," which attracted so much attention in the Ladies World, was shown. The combination of the strong story and the popular player in the flesh proved irresistible to the feminine photoplaygoers of Milwaukee.

The Electric theater at Merrill is now changing its program every day. The house also has installed new projecting and ventilating apparatus.

G. F. Harrington has sold the Unique theater at Sparta to F. M. Rehfus of La Crosse.

Activities of the members of the Wisconsin National Guard at the Wisconsin Military Reservation have been filmed. The pictures, about 3,000 feet, will be used in various Wisconsin houses and also for recruiting work.

"We are in no sense entering into competition with the commercial motion picture houses in any way," said Prof. Leon D. Peaslee in telling of the plans of the educational department of the Public Museum in Milwaukee. When the American Association of Museums held its convention in Milwaukee, a month or two ago, the representatives of the various institutions decided that the work of the museums could be made more efficient with moving pictures. Milwaukee will be the first to try the plan. Projection apparatus will be installed in the main lecture hall. Children, from the fifth to eighth grades, are compelled to attend the bi-yearly lectures at the museum and the use of films it is believed will increase the interest in these talks.

Two big features and six other pictures are advertised by the Monroe theater at Monroe for one of its Monday bargain nights, when only five cents is asked.

Part of a new building to be erected at Ladysmith by Joseph Kubliska will be used as an opera house.

The Unique theater at Waukesha has been rented to the I. B. S. A. for a run of the "Creation" pictures.

A number of the moving picture houses in Madison honor coupons which are published in the Wisconsin State Journal. Among the theaters co-operating in this advertising plan are the Fuller, Grand, Majestic, Gem and Olympic.

The lease of the American Amusement Company on the Opera House at Port Washington, which has been operated for several years as a moving picture theater, is nearing expiration and the company is contemplating the erection of a modern photoplay house. A Milwaukee architect is said to be drawing plans. Fred Luling is manager.

Harry Strand has sold the Palace theater at Oconomowoc to E. C. Main and John A. Cook and with Mrs. Strand has gone to Columbus, where he has purchased a theater.

Manager Sherwood of the Grand theater in Madison is complimented by the Wisconsin State Journal for the "numerous educational exhibits he has given with no remuneration to himself. Free exhibits have been produced by Mr. Sherwood in the state capitol, before both houses of the Legislature in the public library, illustrating certain books, and in many of our school buildings, particularly the University of Wisconsin. In fact, Monday has been University day for the students, and films of an educational and industrial character are usually shown. Just recently Mr. Sherwood entertained 125 visiting ministers at a private exhibition of films of the day."

The New Gem theater at Amery has been sold to P. C. Amundson, J. G. Burman and A. O. Dalberg.

The Electric theater at Wausau has decided to change only on Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights, announcing that it is hard to get a good service and change every day.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

KANSAS.

THE proprietors of moving picture houses in Wichita had filed a petition with the city commissioners, asking that the ordinance requiring them to pay licenses of $25 for six months be repealed. They assert that they get no privileges or benefits from the license, and that its imposition is a hardship. The petition was signed by the following: C. A. Ledgerwood, C. R. V. Otto, M. R. Coste, Don Powell, James E. Croft, John G. Holland and C. C. McCollister.

The new picture theater of Frank F. Davis and Robert McGaugh in Concordia was opened last week with "A Million Bid." Despite a heavy rain and threatening weather in the evening, the opening at 8 o'clock found all seats filled, and by 9:15 there were 500 more waiting for the second performance.

The Electric theater at Sixth and Minnesota, Kansas City, Kan., is completing a $30,000 remodeling job. Grubel Bros. are the owners of the structure; Boller, architect, Kansas City.

Otto Feese is remodeling a theater at Parsons, Kan., to cost about $15,000. This is also a combination playhouse; Boller, architect, Kansas City.

Barney Rielly of St. Joseph, Mo., has opened a fine new house at Atchison, Kan.

The Crawford's Majestic theater, in Topeka, has been largely improved this summer, and has also received a new name—it will be called "The Hip," which is short for "hippodrome." It will be opened September 7 with a high class picture bill.

Charles Smith, E. E. Frazier and W. H. Daly, proprietors of moving picture houses in Pittsburgh, who were charged with having violated the Sunday labor ordinances of the city, last week formally appealed to the district court. They signed each others' bonds of $100. The cases probably will be heard in September.

The Gem theater in Olathe is being given a renovation and a new set of decorations by painters.

Jack Bane, who opened the Iris theater at Norton, Kan., two years ago, has sold it to A. I. Long.

Wichita, Kan. is to be the scene early in October of the International Soil Products and Dry Farming Congress, one of the most interesting and valuable features of which will be moving picture exhibitions of the manufacturing processes for the benefit of the people who buy the products. This congress is one of the biggest farmers' gatherings in the country, and attracts business men especially who have rather speculative farming interests, investments in districts where unusual work is necessary to bring big returns. And because the conditions are unusual, the means to meet those conditions also must be unusual and unfamiliar—and right there comes in the moving picture machine, to show not only the actual conditions in the district where the investment is, but the methods of meeting those conditions with the machinery of the exhibiting manufacturers. A special theater for the display of these educative pictures will be erected at the Dry Farming Congress.

After several trials and many arrests had failed to cause the theatrical men in Pittsburg to shut up shop on Sundays, the lower courts having refused to convict, or owners filing appeal bonds, the district court was appealed to, and the judge issued an injunction against the picture show houses. All were closed the past Sunday, including even the smallest suburban and the largest downtown ones. The injunction is temporary, until this Fall, when a hearing can be had as to whether the theaters were actually violating any law. The Anti-Sunday-Laborites are active in Pittsburg, and all industries are included in the closing movement.

M. B. Fardley of the Fardley Motion Picture Show company, with Frank A. Davis, secretary of the Old Trails Association, is touring Kansas and the West taking pictures of the old Santa Fe Trail, which is the subject of a great deal of interest to automobilists and good roads enthusiasts. They recently obtained fine films in McPherson.

Major Thomas J. Dickson, chaplain of the Sixth Field Artillery of the army, has returned to Junction City after securing films of army life along the Mexican border. These films are part of a series which is to excite interest in the army, and show the hospital corp at work, the explosion of mines, and the manning of entrenchments after an alarm by sentries.

Film exchange agents report that Kansas has gone on one of her periodical slumps as to the moving picture business. Kansas is occasionally one of the best states in the union for shows, when crops are good; but when a period of poor crops comes, the picture shows suffer. Kansas has reaped wonderful crops this year, and when the money for them flows in, the picture business probably will pick up again, and there is all likelihood that Kansas will have plenty of money this fall and winter, and next year, regardless of what other parts of the country suffer because of the war.

Iola is to have the pleasure and honor within a few days of seeing moving pictures of the races held at Riverside Park, in July. During the races the whole town was aware that pictures were being taken, but the rumor got about afterwards that the films had been destroyed. It is reported now that more than 500 feet of the film was developed, which is being shown in Fort Scott now, and will get to Iola soon.

"The Holland," J. G. Holland, proprietor, is a new moving picture house in Wichita, that has had big attendance and prospects of good success. The theater was opened formally last week, though for more than a week previously it had been doing a good business. The theater is well ventilated, lighted by the indirect system, and cooled by electric fans.

The district court at Iola protected William Readicker recently in the possession of his moving picture machine, which a bank was trying to get hold of. The bank had obtained judgment for $1,339 against Mr. Readicker last February and the machine was attached soon afterward. He has resisted efforts of the officials and the bank to take possession, but the sheriff evidently was being pressed by the creditor to take summary action. Mr. Readicker represented to the district court that the moving picture machine and the picture show was his means of making a living, and therefore was immune to attachment, and asked a restraining order against the sheriff to prevent him from seizing and selling the machine. The court granted the order, and Mr. Readicker will not be molested in the operating of his picture show until after the hearing this fall.

Way out in Kansas, where it might be supposed that ragtime would be popular, and where cowboys and six-shooters are supposed to be conspicuous and frequent, tastes are evidently changing. At Arkansas City last week the A-Muz-U theater was showing a Wild West picture, and to make the evening all the more colorful, a cowboy pianist was supplying the music. But the announcement of the "cowboy pianist" seems to have fallen flat, for after two days a new announcement went forth, to the effect that this pianist hated ragtime, and played only classical music! Thereafter the people who wanted to see Wild West pictures—and these are popular even in the "Wild West" didn't fear to have their musical tastes violated.

BROWN.

IOWA.

BELIEVING that the day of the five-cent theater is passing and that the days of quantity are things of the past the management of the A-Muse-U Theater at Clinton has announced that the house will charge ten cents for its picture programs, changed daily.

The Palace Theater at Cedar Rapids is using special music by an eight-piece orchestra during the showing of "The Million Dollar Mystery." The Palace has installed its new $7,000 pipe organ.

The Battersby Auditorium moving picture theater has been opened at Lewis.

Middleton & Gephart have decided to call their new moving picture theater at Iowa Falls, which they expected to open about August 15, the Rex. It will seat 350 and is equipped tastily, cozily and scientifically.

B. J. Moore and George E. Taylor, who purchased the Hupp Theater at Dunlap, rechristened it the Idle Hour. Zeta Taylor will be pianist.

All Lubin films featuring Raymond McKee get their share of advertising by the Orpheum at Fort Dodge, as McKee is claimed as a native son of Fort Dodge.

Theatrical bookings for the Windsor Theater at Hampton have been announced by Manager Fletcher Russell, but his patrons were informed that he had a genuine surprise in the way of moving pictures for them, but details of his plan were withheld. The house has been limiting its picture shows to three nights a week during the hot weather.

J. Peters has sold the moving picture show which has been operated in the opera house at Dumont to John Ferris and Jacob Pfaltzgraff of that place. The new owners have remodeled the theater.

The old school house at Kirkman has been sold to J. H. Schmid, who is remodeling it for use as an opera house.

The Empire Amusement Company of Webb City, Mo., which has taken over the lease on the World Theater at Storm Lake, has changed the name of the house to the Empire Photo Play. Keller Moreland, who has spent thirty-five years in the show business, will be resident manager. Several changes in the arrangement of the house and in the film service were contemplated by the new management.

Charles S. Armstrong, formerly of Irvington, has advised Iowa friends that he has purchased the Lyric moving picture theater at Santa Monica, Cal.

C. C. McDonald has moved from Cincinnati to Exline, where he has opened the Star, a new moving picture theater. The Star is housed in a modern building 24x70, seats 250 and has its own electric light and power plant. Shows are given at present Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Frank Gant of Des Moines is operator.

Brand new equipment and fixtures are going into the Lichty Building in Toledo, which is being remodeled for the Bijou Theater by A. E. Erickson and Bert Morgan. A new machine, new screen and 250 new chairs will be in place early in September.

Kerwin & Dvorsky have purchased the Gem Theater at Tipton and assumed charge. The first named member of the firm has been connected with the Princess Theater at Iowa City for the last year and the last named comes from California.

Kinemacolor moving pictures were a feature this year at the chautauqua at Storm Lake.

John A. Meadows has sold his moving picture show at Sioux Rapids to William Fraser.

A moving picture show has been opened at Magnolia by a Mr. Jensen.

Pictures and five acts of vaudeville will be given this season at the Orpheum Theater, Harry Soudini, manager, Clinton.

M. J. Barthell is said to be contemplating the erection of an opera house at Waukon.

E. Ehlers has purchased a moving picture theater in Paulina.

The Lorenzen Building at Holstein, a portion of which will be occupied by the Scenic Theater, is near completion.

F. S. Hall, J. L. Coverdale and J. B. Camerer are interested in the $5,000 corporation projected at Oto for the purpose of building an opera house.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made of the coming marriage of Mr. A. Dresner, manager of the local branch of the Washington Film Exchange, to Miss Rose Mogol, a very attractive young lady of Baltimore. The ceremony is to take place in the latter city August 30.

Along with this announcement comes the rumor that when Mr. Dresner and his bride leave Washington for New York on their honeymoon it will mean that they will no longer be residents of this city, for Mr. Dresner, it is said, is about to sever his present connection and join other force in a Pennylvanian city. This news has been confirmed in part by him.

Mr. Dresner has taken a most active part in the affairs of the Screen Club of Washington, he being its president and one of its hardest workers for the uplift of the moving picture business. He is in this game heart and soul and to him considerable credit is due for the smooth manner in which the several blow-outs of that organization were conducted. His going will leave a void in the local ranks and the boys are sorry to part company with him.

Warner's Features, Inc., are about to greatly enlarge their field of action in this locality and sub-branches are to be located in Baltimore, under the supervision of Mr. Dave Warner, and at Charlotte, N. C., under M. C. O. Moss. The Baltimore sub-branch will be located in Room 300, of the Carroll Building; the quarters for the other have not as yet been selected. At both of these places a weekly program of four reels will be furnishd independent of the main office in this city. This is to be done to facilitate shipping and to give increased advantages in the way of service to the concern's patrons. The whole will be under the management of Mr. Sidney B. Lust, formerly with the Gordon & North Amusement Company, who has been whooping things up a bit in this locality. Associated with him as an assistant is Mr. Victor L. Abbey, late of the New York office, and at one time located in Boston, and Mr. Leo Garner, as booker.

J. P. McKellor and Ellis M. McClees are now operating a moving picture show Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings at Mount Rainier, Md., using Mutual service.

Billy Airey, of the Alhambra theater, reports having accepted the Washington agency for the Isadore Wenig Film Co., of Baltimore, Md.

With a view to coaxing its patrons to read the moving picture advertisements printed within its columns, the Washington Times offers each Sunday a strip of twenty tickets to one of the theaters to each of three lucky contestants who first inform them which three of the advertisements contain words from which a single letter is omitted. Those participating in this contest from the standpoint of advertisers in Sunday's issue were the Leader, Empres, Princes, Virginia, Olympic, Crandall's, Central Park and the Lyric theaters, and an enormous amount of additional mail found its way to the desk of the Movie Contest Editor of the Times

Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan and Mrs. Bryan were recently the host and hostess to some five hundred enthusiasts at a lawn party during which was shown the Biblical play, "Joseph and His Coat of Many Colors." The audience consisted mainly of ministers and members of the four hundred, and they were very much pleased with the exhibition, which went forward with but one hitch—when a blow-out delayed the performance for a little more than ten minutes. Secretary Bryan, however, was equal to the occasion, for he entertained his guests with a number of very amusing anecdotes.

C. L. LINZ.

SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST.

IN Topeka, Kan., the citizens are somewhat surprised that not all of the exhibitors are anxious to have the picture houses operated seven days a week. Mrs. Maude Gandy, proprietor of the Aurora Theater, came out openly against it. She said Topeka was a recognized church city and the exhibitors should uphold that reputation in the conduct of their business. A meeting of the picture show owners was held, she said, and no vote was taken on the matter of Sunday opening nor on the matter of making a test case. L. M. and Roy Crawford, she added, recounted their experiences and advised against Sunday opening. The Topeka Capital cannot see the consistency of the argument that the "tired workingman" needs the Sunday night theater. This plea holds good on games and athletics which must be played by daylight, but "if the photoplay theater is restful why cannot the workingman go on the week nights when he is tired?" queries the editor. Manager Fred Smith, of the Best Theater, had 8,000 signatures to a petition for Sunday opening and planned to secure 15,000. He also contemplated running his house one Sunday in order to secure a test of the law.

The city officials in Vinita, Okla., however, view the proposition very differently. They have just placed the seal of approval on the Sunday picture show but bar Sunday baseball and tent shows.

The mystery with which the petitions for Sunday shows and other concessions were filed with the city commission of Wichita, Kan., was increased when all the moving picture exhibitors of the city appeared and disclaimed all connection with the sheets. They declared the petitions were ones which had been secured about a year ago by Ford Wright, who is now operating a moving picture show at Anthony, Kan. There were a number of provisions in the ordinance asked in the mysterious petitions which do not meet the approval of the theater owners. New shows would be required to pay $100 a week for the first ninety days, private moving picture shows would be prevented and the city censorship would be removed. City Attorney Earl Blake said the signatures to the petitions were neither verified nor authenticated as required by law and not sufficient to warrant an expenditure to check them up nor to submit the ordinance to an election.

"Our only rival the ice plant," advertises the Yale Theater at Bartlesville, Okla.

Herbert Thompson, of McCracken, Kan., has purchased moving picture equipment and will operate a show.

The Grand Theater at Carson City, Nev., gives an appeal to its Sunday afternoon shows by calling them "Special Family Matinees."

The city council at Houston Heights, Tex., has created an ordinance making it necessary for all motion picture theaters to procure licenses before doing business within the city limits. The ordinance was passed because citizens had complained of a recently opened photoplay house at Yale street and Eleventh avenue.

A. E. Ford has reopened the Pastime Theater as a five-cent moving picture house at Kissimmee, Fla.

A number of the southwestern exhibitors—the Orpheum Theater at Durant, Okla., for example—are featuring the photoplays written by Shannon Fife, of Dallas, Tex.

Nate Block, owner of the new Orpheum Theater, in course of construction at Atchison, Kan., expects to have his house opened the middle of September. He has announced that he will have the prettiest moving picture theater in Kansas.

L. S. Brown, of Clarendon, who leased the Grand Opera House at Amarillo, Tex., will operate a moving picture show. He opened his theater August 4 with the serial, "The Trey o' Hearts." It will be operated as a five-cent house.

W. P. Cothran, of Mobile, Ala., has leased the Majestic Theater at Meridian, Miss., and after renovating it, planned to open it the middle of August as a vaudeville, moving picture and road show house. He will operate it in connection with the Dreamland Theater, of Mobile, and other houses in Pensacola, Fla., and Selma, Ala. He will locate in Meridjan and be the resident manager for the Majestic.

The Lyric Theater is now occupying the Alexander Building at Carmen, Okla.

J. G. Boyd has sold the Gem Theater at Frederick, Okla., to F. L. Cauby.

The Electric Theater at Sabetha, Kan., made quite a hit by surprising its patrons with snapshot slides of well-known Sabetha people.

George DeVillibiss has purchased a moving picture outfit and will conduct a show in the city hall at Everest, Kan.

The run of moving pictures at Riverside Park, Hutchinson, Kan., has been ended. Photoplays are replaced by stock.

Films have been loaned by the National Playground Association to the City Playground Department in Birmingham, Ala., and will be shown for a week at each of ten parks in that city selected by the commission. The pictures show the advantages of well-maintained playgrounds.

The Ye Liberty Theater, at Honolulu, Hawaii, has children's matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays. This house has been featuring the Famous Players pictures.

Fred Hogrefe has purchased the moving picture outfit which has been operated at Bennington, Kan., for the last year.

The Colonial Amusement Company, of Dallas, Tex., has been incorporated with capital stock of $2,500. The incorporators are O. P. Whittle, E. F. Walker and Phil H. Pierce.

Mrs. J. C. Perkins has purchased a site in DeLand, Fla., for the erection of a moving picture theater.

The Colonial Theater in Wichita, Kan., is capitalizing the local interest in a set of pictures being made for the International Dry Farming Congress by showing them as soon as they are taken. The different pictures will be assembled into five reels which will be used throughout the southwest for advertising purposes. The Kansas Motion Picture Company, of Wichita, which has the contract for making these pictures has engaged E. H. Wilson, an experienced director of New York City, to devote his time to producing these reels. The state rights for the exhibition of the films in Texas and Oklahoma have been sold to the Feature Film Company, of Alva, Okla.

The moving pictures showing the manufacture of automobiles at the Ford factory in Detroit, Mich., were shown in connection with the regular program at the Queen Theater in Houston, Tex.

Distinctive operating features are numerous around the Holland Theater, the new moving picture house opened at 118 East Douglas avenue, in Wichita, Kan., by J. G. Holland, formerly of DeLand, Fla. The stucco front is of Spanish design, after the fashion of the old southwest and Southern California. But one light will be shown in the entire lobby, but it will be 1,000-candlepower, so as to give the best effect for the classic bas-reliefs which are the principal decorations. The general effect of the lobby is plain but classic and refined. A four-reel General Film Company program at a price of five cents is announced, with the exception that ten cents will be secured for all feature programs. The weekly put out by the Kansas Motion Picture Company, of Wichita, featuring Kansas happenings under the name of "Jayhawker Events" will be given prominence by the Holland. Special attention will be devoted to securing the lunch hour patronage of business men. From 11 a. m. to 3 p. m. the balcony will be thrown open to them, and here they can sit and smoke and watch the shows.

Part of each week at the new opera house in Austin, Tex., will be given over to moving pictures, it is announced. The contract has been let for a structure, seating 1,800 persons, and costing $200,000, by Mrs. Sallie J. Nalle, owner of a site on Congress avenue. She will lease it for fifteen years to a company composed of O. H. Millican, E. H. Perry, John F. Butler, Wilbur P. Allen and Eugene Tips. The plans include a $5,000 pipe organ. When not in use for pictures, vaudeville and theatrical attractions will be booked.

"There is not a city, big or little, in the southwest that has put as much character and quality into the houses and the pictures as Bartlesville," says the Examiner, of Bartlesville, Okla. "The people of this city owe the managers a vote of thanks for providing such a pleasant and inexpensive means of entertainment."

Exhibitors in Wichita, Kan., are more than willing to co-operate in the matter of obeying the moving picture censorship ordinance, according to W. H. Reeves, humane officer, whose department has been given the power to regulate the pictures.

"We have the best pianist in the state," is the modest claim of the Gem Theater at Kansas City, Kan. Might as well have given his name.

"We are trying to keep away from the blood and thunder variety of pictures," proclaims the Kozy Theater, at Chickasha, Okla., which is doing all it can to make the educational releases find favor with the patrons. "Look for the word 'Kozy.' It spells Good Show," is a motto.

Two weeks' notice of intention to strike in sympathy was given by the members of the Topeka, Kan., Musicians' Union to the Nathanson moving picture houses, the Orpheum, Cozy and Best. The stage hands at the Nathanson theaters went out because one of their members who had been expelled for non-payment of dues was hired. The reciprocal arrangement between the musicians and stage hands union was invoked in the hope of reaching a settlement.

N. W. Redmond, manager of the Imperial Theater, at Jacksonville, Fla., is using newspaper advertising to give this advice: "To the Public: Don't buy amusement company stock of any get-rich-quick concern. Keep your money in the bank and let it draw 4 per cent. interest and your principal will be safe."

The moving pictures of the life of Al Jennings, former bandit and candidate for governor of Oklahoma, produced by the Thanhouser Company, are attracting the predicted attention in the southwest. They were given a premier at the Liberty Theater in McAlester, Okla. Tom H. Boland, of the Empress Theater, in Oklahoma City, Okla., leased the Folly for the production of "Beating Back" there. W. R. Crusoe and Garland Hale, officers of the Al Jennings Film Company, secured a temporary injunction in the United States District Court preventing the Powell-Croak Amusement Company, which was presenting the pictures at the Folly, from paying any of the royalties. Crusoe and Hale, in previous court actions against Jennings, declared they formed a partnership with Jennings to film the story of his life but that later he made a deal with the Thanhouser Company. They claim they are entitled to share in the profits of the production.

The Majestic, a new moving picture theater, has been opened at Fort Meade, Fla.

The county school board of Tampa, Fla., has purchased a moving picture machine and each Saturday afternoon will show travelogues, educational films and comics at the Tampa Bay Casino for the school children.

A $60,000 Orpheum Theater is to be built by the Acme Amusement Company at Lincoln, Neb. This is a combination house, featuring vaudeville and pictures. It has the Orpheum Circuit three days in the week and pictures and light vaudeville are shown during the remainder of the week; Boller, architect.

Barney Rielly, of St. Joseph, Mo., is figuring on opening a picture theater in Omaha, Neb.

Barkely Morgan intends to construct a $25,000 theater at Henrietta, Okla. This theater is a vaudeville house, but runs moving pictures on dark nights; Boller, architect, Kansas City.

The Dubinsky Bros. are preparing to construct a $20,000 combination theater at Nowata to run vaudeville and moving pictures; Boller, architect, Kansas City.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

ST. LOUIS.

THE Princess theater, Grand and Olive streets, one of the houses formerly owned by the Associated Theaters Company, which has heretofore maintained a vaudeville and moving picture program, wil open shortly playing all road shows of the extravaganza type. The Princess was sold recently to the owners of the Standard theater, a well known burlesque house.

The City Park Department has made a reel of moving pictures that shows swimmers and bathers in the Fairground Pool, and the work of the lifeguards rescuing bathers who get out of their depth in the water. The reel will also show athletic games held in the parks, including the recent baseball, handball and basketball contests, and scenes at the Zoo. The reel will become part of the free moving pictures that are projected at the various parks and playgrounds during the summer months.

H. W. Talbot, of the Universal Film Exchange at Twenty-first and Locust streets, has been put in charge of the Cairo end of the Universal's business, as manager of the exchange there.

Manager Wittman, of the Paris Airdome, Morganford road and Juniata street, had moving pictures taken of the big stag party and get-together meeting held by the Republicans at Ellerbeck's Grove on Sunday, August 2, and gave participants in the affair a chance to see themselves in action by running the reel at the Paris the following night.

Wm. B. Davis, manager of the Home theater, East St. Louis, has had a carnival company in competition with his theater, but he says he has held his own in spite of it.

R. G. Taylor has been put in charge of the supply department of the Universal Exchange, at Twenty-first and Locust streets.

Talbot's Hippodrome will open August 15.

The Grand theater, on Sixth and Market streets, is being refurnished and brightened up, and will open with a program of vaudeville, circus acts and moving pictures within a week or ten days.

Twelve thousand persons witnessed the free moving pictures that are being shown by the Park Department on a Sunday night recently in Lafayette Park. Mayor Henry W. Kiel was among the spectators, and he expressed much satisfaction with the pictures as a feature of public playground work. One of the most popular reels shown is one which shows the dangers of children playing on the streets.

The World's Feature Corporation have moved from the third floor to the fifth floor of the Navarre Building. Fred J. Murphie has resigned as manager of the office, and his place has been taken by Wm. P. Cuff, formerly with Warner's Features. Mr. Cuff says the move is made for threefold purposes, the new suite of offices have a better location in the building, they are lighter, and what is more important, they are larger and more in keeping with the growing volume of business that the company is handling.

GIEBLER.

TIME TO GET TOGETHER

As I have said in my letter, sent to every Independent Film manufacturer and exchangeman and every exhibitor in the United States,

IF INDEPENDENTS DO NOT ORGANIZE NOW

The opportunity to do so may never occur again. Not one of you can afford to let this one pass without definite action.

SEND YOUR ACCEPTANCES AT ONCE

Attend the convention which will be held in the Green Room of the Hotel McAlpin, 34th Street and Broadway, New York, August 29th, to organize a Board of Trade through which all Independents can work together to resist drastic and unfair conditions at present imposed by certain powerful combinations.

I HAVE FOUGHT SUCCESSFULLY.

Much greater victories can be won if all Independents work as a unit for actual business freedom, and not an independence which exists in name only.

Reservations will be made at the Hotel McAlpin if you will inform me of your requirements.

WILLIAM FOX,
President Greater New York Film Rental Co.,
126 West 46th Street, New York.

WAR
is the theme of Gaumont's
next Feature release
A Woman's Bravery
an episode of the Balkan War
GAUMONT COMPANY
110 West 40th St. NEW YORK.

LICENSED FILM STORIES

ESSANAY.

LOVE AND SODA (August 31).—The plumber, a powerful fellow, decides to give up his trade and become a soda fountain clerk in order that he may compete with the small, well-dressed clerk his rival, for the hand of little Miss Moffett. He eats more than he sells, but the proprietor is afraid of him and dares not discharge him. It happens that the stylish little clerk brings little Miss Moffett in the ice-cream parlor for refreshment, and when the plumber serves him with a castor-oil sundae he becomes peeved. An egg throwing contest then ensues in which the plumber proves to be the best marksman.

NO. 28 DIPLOMAT (September 1).—John Dawson and Helen Davis are sweethearts. They quarrel and John accepts an offer to go to Africa. Before leaving he takes Helen's picture to be framed. On the back is written, "To my Darling." Clerk No. 28 waits on him and, suspecting a lover's quarrel, tells him to call next day at 10 a. m. Helen enters shortly after to have John's picture framed, and is told by No. 28 to come at 10 a. m. next day also. Tom Malone, John's chauffeur, is in love with Molly Dolan, known during the day as No. 28. Tom is to lose his position when John leaves. Molly, unaware of the connection between Dawson and her sweetheart, brings about a reconcilation between John and Helen when they meet at 10 a. m. John decides not to go, so Tom keeps his position and is given a raise which enables him to marry Molly.

THE FABLE OF THE REGULAR BEANERY AND THE PEACHY NEWCOMER (September 2).—The occupants of Mrs. Pruyne's boarding house were very congenial, and everything sailed smoothly until one day Mrs. Fuller Speed blew in. She got the goat of every male in the flock. They went daffy over her, and the women went mad with jealousy. It was rich to see the old boys fight to sit next to her at the table, and at night sing sweet ditties to her until she threw flowers to them from her window. One day her hubby blew in the "Hash Repository" and upset all the dope. She had been "foxing" the whole gang. They forgot to ask her if she had a better half. Moral: The article you admire is usually marked "Sold."

WHEN MACBETH CAME TO SNAKEVILLE (September 3).—Snakeville is all in a whirl, the world's greatest tragedian is to appear in Macbeth at the "Opry House." The "Tank Town" troupe arrives and stops at Slim's boarding house. Slim discovers his wife, Sophie, paying great attention to the leading man, and that evening at the performance she goes into hysterics at the marvelous acting of her ideal. That night she walks in her sleep, and imagining herself to be Lady Macbeth, gets a butcher knife and enters the room of the "Would-be Macbeth." The actor is frightened nearly to death. Sophie finally awakens, but it is not in her power to persuade the actor to remain in town another day, so he leaves, much to the satisfaction of Slim.

UNDER ROYAL PATRONAGE (Two Parts—September 4).—Francis, reigning Prince of Hofgarten, wishes to unite his kingdom with the adjoining principality, Sterlitzburg. To do this it is necessary for his nephew, Philip, to marry Stella, sister of the neighboring Prince. She has been away to a convent for years, and her brother has no idea as to her appearance. Philip, who has also been in Paris at school for fourteen years, receives a letter from Francis, telling him that if he should refuse to marry Stella before he is of age his allowance will be cut off.

Frederick is anxious for his sister to marry Philip, as Francis has promised to redeem the state jewels, which he has pawned, if the marriage is brought about. Philip, upon receiving the letter, is very disconsolate, as he has learned to love another girl, but never disclosed to her that he is of royal birth. He strikes upon a plan. He will send Richard Savage, an adventurous American, to pose as himself. His uncle has not seen him in years and will never doubt the American's identity. Savage agrees to carry out the scheme, but upon seeing Stella really falls in love with her. Much to his disappointment she spurns his affections, telling him that their marriage would be one of convenience, not one of love.

Meanwhile Philip, in Paris, has declared his love for a girl of humble birth, and when he tells her of his royal family, matters are completely changed. They decide to journey to Strelitzburg, as he has only eighteen hours before he becomes of age. Philip and his fiancee enter the throne room just as Savage and the supposed Princess are to take the solemn vows. Then comes the unexpected—Philip's fiancee is the real Princess, and to save herself from a marriage of convenience, substituted her friend, Helen Churchill of Philadelphia. Both Prince and Princess have sent Americans as substitutes for themselves, and after this is explained, the Bishop performs a double ceremony, and all ends happily.

BRONCHO BILLY, THE VAGABOND (September 5).—Broncho, the vagabond, is thrown out of the gambler's place because he has no money. He is light-hearted, nevertheless, and while strolling through the woods, runs upon a little girl trying to chop some wood. His heart is touched and he helps her. She leads him to the shack she calls home and Broncho is filled with pity when he sees her father sick, and her mother trying to save the family from starvation. Broncho hastens back to the gambler's place, and when they refuse to give him money he steals it and escapes on a patron's horse. He is overtaken by a posse and is about to be hanged when the little girl appears on the scene and returns the money which Broncho stole. The posse, seeing that he stole to help a starving family, release him and a collection is taken up and given to the needy family.

LUBIN.

NEVER TOO OLD (September 1).—Bill Bowser and Jim Levison are old cronies (with the accent on the old), but though Bill has been cheating the undertaker for the last ten years he still feels young enough to fall in love, and the sight of a couple of lovers turns his thoughts to matrimony. He replies to an advertisement in which a dashing young widow offers to become the bride of a wealthy old man. Bill has three hundred dollars and a half interest in an old shack, but in his letter he becomes a millionaire with a handsome country seat. He is invited to come to town and visit the lady. She insists on a diamond engagement ring and takes Bill's money from him to purchase it with, which is the signal for her husband to enter and scare Bill half to death with his threats. Bill goes home a sadder and wiser man. It doesn't even help much when the supposed dashing widow gets conscience stricken and sends back the money, suggesting that he buy a nice tombstone with it, but it does enable him to get back at Jim when the latter comes to crow over him.

THE GREEN ALARM (September 1).—Annoyed by Polly's screeching, Old Man Hokus hangs her out of the window and goes to bed. Mike and Jake, two chicken fanciers, escape from jail by rubbing the bars with a liquid preparation which softens the steel and makes it easy to bend. Out of jail the two crooks proceed to rob old man Hokus' chicken coop. They are discovered by the parrot and she sets up a terrific screeching, which awakens the old man. Grabbing his gun he dashes down stairs and locates Mike and Jake throwing brickbats at the parrot. Hokus fires his gun and fills the crooks with bird shot. They lock themselves in the chicken coop. Hokus then phones for the police. At the police headquarters the chicken fanciers have just been missed, when Hokus phones. The chief sends out a detail of cops. Hokus camps outside of the chicken coop door, occasionally sending a load of shot through, just to let them know he is there. The police arrive and surround the coop, but Mike and Jake succeed in breaking out and dashing to an old shack, climb on the roof and hide behind the chimney. They are soon located and then a merry battle starts to oust them. While the cops shoot up at them the two crooks pull bricks from the chimney and start to annihilate the whole force. In throwing a brick from the chimney Mike loses his balance and falls through the roof, dragging Jake with him. They land right in the midst of the cops, put up a terrible battle and break away, dive through the door, but outside they are caught by old man Hokus, who had been standing guard with his gun. Hokus gets back his chickens, Mike and Jake are taken back to jail. The old man takes the polly and fowls and decides that the best place for them is in bed with him.

BY WHOSE HAND? (Two Reels—September 2).—Roger Van Allen, last of an old aristocratic family, finds himself in his old age poverty stricken with a son, both of whom are zealously looked after by Thompson, an old retainer. The son, Kempton, has had his fling and his father's troubles and his love for Mildred Hastings, daughter of a beef baron, sobers him and he defies the tradition of the family by proposing to go to work, and the two young people get married. Kempton refuses to be aided financially by Mildred and instead takes advantage of the offer of aid from the old retainer, who gives him liberally of his savings. Meanwhile, Halstead, a gambler, has secured notes given by Kempton for some poker debts and he uses them to blackmail Van Allen, whom he still believes to be rich. This act causes Van Allen in his rage to threaten Halstead's life. Halstead threatens the young couple with exposure and Kempton, in great anger, tells Halstead he will kill him if he meddles in his affairs. The sheriff overhears that both father and son have threatened Halstead's life. He cautions Kempton, but the latter laughs. As his father is greatly wrought up over the affair, he has Mildred go home and come back that evening, when they will face it out. Halstead gets to the old man first, thinking his new weapon will force Van Allen's hand. Thompson keeps peace in the house by preventing Kempton from injuring Halstead, and Van Allen surprises them all by telling Halstead that he is in perfect harmony with his son in the matter of his marriage. Halstead tells them he will be back later, and that if they haven't decided upon immediate payment he will besmirch the Van Allen escutcheon. Thompson in great anger sees the blackmailer to the door. That night Mildred coming over to the Van Allen home finds the dead body of Halstead on the grounds with an old weapon taken from the walls of the Van Allen living room. Her scream is overheard in the home, and the already taught nerves of father and son strain near to breaking. The sheriff and two men have also heard the scream and find Mildred with the dead man trying to hide the knife. She, fearing the son committed the deed, tries to defend him by taking the blame herself, but the sheriff realizes she is trying to shield someone else. The sheriff does not notice, however, that the father thinks the son did it and the son thinks the father the criminal. Later that night, disguised as the dead man, the sheriff enters the living room. Both father and son face the apparition and turn to see the other break down and confess. Instead of that the butler is the one to beg for mercy. Death, however, spares the state from taking a life for a life.

THE FACE IN THE CROWD (Two Reels—September 3).—As McKenzie steps out of a restaurant, King, a gun-man, is seen to take careful aim from behind a telegraph pole, and McKenzie drops. A crowd quickly gathers. Frank Corridon, the detective, is passing near by and is attracted. He elbows his way into the crowd and, for a moment, comes face to face with "the face in the crowd," the leering countenance of Blackton, the vice king, as he later discovers. News of the murder is taken to headquarters, where alarm is felt because the vice ring have been threatening McKenzie and he has applied for protection for himself and his children. The police inspector is persuaded to call Corridon in on the case. Corridon leaves for police headquarters and meets little Dorothy McKenzie on the street, when she clings to him, a stranger, to shrink away from King, who passes. At police headquarters Corridon asks if there are any of the gun-men that have been seen in town, and he is shown the photo of King from the rogues' gallery, recognizing him as the man that scared the child. When he discovers that the child is a daughter of McKenzie, he persuades her to tell of King, and learns that King had been threatening the murdered McKenzie. King is arrested, released at the request of Corridon, and followed by Corridon to a rendezvous with Blackton, whom he recognizes as the man whose face he saw in the crowd. Corridon is captured, but escapes and plans to block their further moves. McKenzie is out of the way, but the ring must obtain a written statement left which involves them. This is in the state's attorney's office, and failing to get it otherwise, the office in blown up to destroy the paper together with Corridon and the state attorney. But Corridon and the state's attorney have been unexpectedly called out and they are at the entrance of the building and apprehend the ring leaders as they seek to leave after the explosion.

THE SHELL OF LIFE (September 4).—The scenes of this story are laid on the western plains, and portray the chain of circumstances that led to the aiding to escape, by Grace, a girl of the plains, of Dan, who is wanted by the sheriff, and how her act was rewarded. After committing a robbery, Dan makes his escape to the hills, successfully eluding the sheriff and posse. A loose shoe on his horse forces him to seek help at a cross-road blacksmith shop, where Joe, the blacksmith, but a few moments before Dan's arrival, has so severely burned his arm that he is unable to work. Dan is helped out of his predicament, however, by Grace, the daughter of the blacksmith, who sets the shoes for him. Dan is invited to remain for the night, and his visit extends to several days, as a friendship springs up between these simple country people and Dan; on one side for their simple hospitality and the other from Dan's ready efforts to help them in their time of trouble. Dan learns of a mortgage that is about to be foreclosed on their little farm, and unbeknown to Joe and Grace, pays it off, expecting to leave before they find it has been settled. Joe's trip to town to have his arm dressed delays Dan's departure, with almost fatal results to him, as the sheriff has again taken up the trail and follows it to Joe's shop. Dan is successful in again eluding the sheriff, but Grace, discovering his identity, holds him a prisoner, as the sheriff, discovering Dan from a distant ridge, rides back to capture him. Grace's struggle is a hard one, as she realizes what his capture means to both of them—freedom from debt, their home safe—the imprisonment of a man who has proven himself a friend, and who, even with the prison opening before him, still shows himself to be a man—ready to take his just deserts. Obeying the dictates of her heart, she gives him his freedom, but Dan, when he realizes his escape means their separation, as in spite of their growing love for each other she refuses to allow him to return with the stain upon his name, delivers himself up to the sheriff, preferring to atone for his crime, and comforted in knowing that Grace is waiting for him, and with her he can start a new life.

A FOOL THERE WAS (September 5).—George has a craving to wed. He comes to the assistance of a young lady in the park and they become very good friends, then sweethearts. He calls to see her every night. Sitting on the front porch becomes monotonous and she craves for an automobile. George, afraid he will lose her, mortgages all he owns and with the money buys a second hand car. The first trip it runs away from him, knocks down a policeman and causes all kinds of trouble. She, angered, gets out of the auto and takes a street car home. Poor George is arrested. He then hires a chauffeur. The chauffeur gets very chummy with the girl and George must sit in the back, while she learns to drive the car. The car stops and the chauffeur refuses to get out and try to locate the trouble, for he doesn't want to soil his gloves. George attempts to locate it and while he is looking in the hood, the chauffeur stops a passing auto and takes the girl home. George is compelled to hire a farm wagon to pull his car to town, where he learns that the car stopped because the gasoline gave out. A week later he forgets all these annoyances and starts to see the girl. He arrives at the house and finds that she has just married the chauffeur.

BIOGRAPH.

THE MAN FROM THE PAST (August 24).—The woman, now a faithful wife confronted with a shadow from the past—a menace to her present and future happiness, is in a terrible dilemma. Then comes another enemy to her peace of mind. When the twin dangers clash, the husband returns, but circumstances develop which happily hide the truth.

THE TERRIBLE LESSON (August 27).—The cracksman's wife knows the danger that threatens her husband—the hand of the law—and begs him to abandon the crime life. When intuitively she feels retribution at hand, she plans to forestall it, but a hand other than hers intervenes and happily shapes their destiny.

BASEBALL, A GRAND OLD GAME (August 29).—Simp has a craze for baseball, but his wife and boss do not share his enthusiasm. By telling the boss that his mother-in-law was killed in a train wreck and wiring his wife that the boss has sent him out of town on the afternoon train, he gets to the game but at the finish he gets into trouble.

SPENDING IT QUICK (August 29).—Gilhooly inherits $500 from his uncle's estate and immediately proceeds to buy an automobile. He and his wife have the ride of their lives which winds up by plunging them over a cliff and almost killing them both, and when they emerge from the wrecked car, they solemnly pledge "never again."

VITAGRAPH.

THE HIDDEN LETTERS (Special—Two Parts—September 1).—The strain of business duties proving too heavy, John Reynolds, a banker, breaks down and is ordered by his physician to take a vacation. At a mountain camp "roughing it," Reynolds meets Madge, a pretty wholesome, outdoor girl, who, not knowing he is married, falls in love with him. Meanwhile, in the city, Ida, his wife, who is a frivolous social butterfly, is carrying on a flirtation with Jacques Albert, an artist engaged in painting her portrait. She hides his love letters in her completed portrait. While auto riding with him a terrible accident occurs and she is killed. Reynolds is at once called home. Madge, heartbroken, to learn that Reynolds is married, becomes ill and her father takes her to the city for a change. Jacques, nearly frantic with fear that Reynolds will find his letters, visits Madge, whose father is his uncle. He confesses all, and begs her to secure the letters for him. Madge fights a heroic battle with herself, realizing if she tells Reynolds of his wife's indiscretions, it will destroy his faith in her memory, enhancing her own chances of finding happiness as his wife. She finally decides to spare him. She fails to find the letters in the portrait and is confronted by Reynolds. He surmises the reason for her presence and quietly shows her the letters, which he has already found. Comprehending Madge's sacrifice for his sake, he is overwhelmed by her nobleness and, taking the girl in his arms, asks her to become his wife.

THE LOST CORD (September 2).—Two business friends, Jones, a little fellow, and Watkins, a stout man, leave for a day at Coney Island. They meet Mabel, a friend of Jones, and the three journey on together. Watkins and Jones become jealous of each other, but Lillian smiles on both without discrimination, and serious trouble is averted. The swings make Watkins sick and when Jones rides in the carousel, he becomes ill; so each in turn accompanies Lillian. After an exciting time in a shooting gallery, Jones suggests they all go in bathing. Watkins and Lillian get in the water first and both are soon happy as ducks, splashing and frolicking in the water. Jones arrives, turns purple with jealousy, surreptitiously unties and pulls off the cord holding Watkins' bathing trunks. Obliged to hold up the garment with one hand, Watkins' strange and awkward actions in floundering around, cause Lillian some anxiety and she fetches a life-saver. The latter offers to pull Watkins into the boat, but Mr. Watkins prefers to stay where he is. He then whispers in the life-guard's ear, who chuckles and gives him a rope from hes boat. Meantime, a crowd of onlookers have assembled on the beach and Watkins, on coming ashore, is greeted with roars of laughted. He is wild with rage, and, finding Jones' bathhouse unlocked, steals the little fellow's clothes and buried them in the sand. Jones, in Watkins' absence, retaliates in kind. The upshot of the whole affair is, Lillian goes home alone, Jones goes home in Watkins' enormous suit of clothes, while the fat man, unable to get into Jones' clothes, is left in the bathhouse cogitating over how he is to get out of the scrape respectably.

THE UPPER HAND (September 3).—Steve Carson, a mine foreman, is a gambler, given to drinking to excess and brutal to his wife, a woman of superior quality, who lives in constant fear and dread of him. The miners all hate him. One day, Blake, a young prospector from the East, arrives at Rex Gulch, and is invited up to Carson's home with some of the other men, to play poker. There Blake notes Carson's ugly treatment of his wife and feels sorry for the woman, but says nothing. Carson wins repeatedly at poker, and Blake goes "broke." He saunters outside and finds Mrs. Carson weeping bitterly over her hard lot. He talks soothingly to her and Carson, coming out, finds him telling her of life in the East, while she listenes interestedly. He orders his wife into the house, after bidding Blake a curt good night. Later, Blake catches Carson cheating at cards, takes him aside and threatens to

"Hallberg"

TALK NO. 40

"Another Quality Equipment"

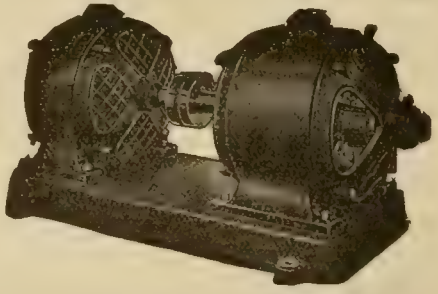
The new "BANNER" Theatre, a handsome Photoplay house on Longwood Avenue, New York City, has placed order with "HALLBERG," the "HOUSE OF QUALITY," for two Power's 6-A projectors, with "HALLBERG" A.C. to D.C. Economizer, screen and complete supply equipment. My object in mentioning some of these better installations is to prove to you the value of "HALLBERG QUALITY SERVICE." It includes not only the latest and best in the machinery line, but the advice which I give is worth many dollars to anyone who deals with me. I have on hand a lot of second-hand Power's No. 5; Edison exhibition and model B machines; as well as one Motiograph No. 1-A 1911 type machine, and one Motiograph No. 1-A with double dissolving stereopticon attachment all in first class operative condition, at low prices, which would be good for those who wish an emergency machine or who are starting a show where the capital is limited. Write about these machines if you are interested.

I take old machines in trade as part payment for new ones, and I also make liberal allowance on your old rheostats, A. C. Economizers, A. C. to D. C. Converters and Rectifiers in trade for the celebrated "HALLBERG" A. C. to D.C. Economizers, which give the BEST LIGHT with the LEAST CURRENT.

Distributor of the Celebrated Mirror Glass Screen and "Mirrorside" Curtain

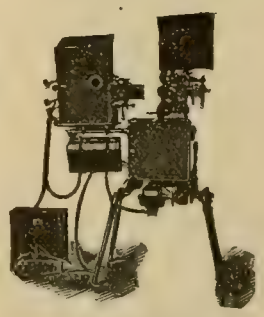
SIMPLEX

Distributor Simplex Machines



HALLBERG A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR ONE OR TWO LAMPS

Distributor Power's 6-A Machines



POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINES and FLAME ARC CARBONS

I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circulars on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

FLA. GA. ALA. MISS. LA.
APEX
FEATURE SERVICE
315 RHODES BUILDING
ATLANTA, GA.
TENN. N. C. S. C. VA.

expose him to the rest of the players unless he swears to treat his wife right. Carson humbly promises, but claims she is not his wife. Blake is horrified. Carson's crooked card playing is discovered by some of his victims and he is shot dead by Hungarian Joe. In Carson's coat Blake finds his marriage certificate to Mrs. Carson, and hands it to her with a light heart. Later, he leaves for the East and says, "Mrs. Carson, when I return, I am going to ask you to become my wife. May I hope?" The radiancy of her face implies the certainty of her response.

THE BARREL ORGAN (September 4).—Attracted by the sound of a barrel organ and the cries of children watching the monkey's antics, Bunions, a hobo, saunters across the street to listen. Suddenly the music stops and Bunions sees the young Italian woman who has been turning the handle of the organ, is about to faint. He awkwardly offer his assistance and learns she is a widow. Unable to make a living, she is on the point of starvation. Having no resources of his own, Bunions takes the organ and monkey and trudges off into the finer residential districts. After grinding out several "tunes" in front of a house where a celebrated violinist is giving a recital, he is bribed to go away. In front of the Northrop home, when the monk climbs up to little Helen's window and the youngster breaks open her penny bank to get money for the animal. Bunions then starts back to Maria, feeling rather chesty over the goodly sum he has accumulated. On a steep hill the organ gets away from him and coasts down to the bottom. There it is struck by a speeding auto and demolished. The only thing saved from the wreck is the monkey, and poor Bunions is crestfallen and discouraged. Passing the Northrup house he sees it is on fire, quickly sends the monk up the side of the building with a rope and effects the rescue of Mr. Northrup and Helen, imprisoned in an upper room. For this he is handsomely rewarded and, jubilantly happy, Bunions returns to Maria. When he tells her of his good fortune she is overjoyed and throws her arms around his neck. Bunions She is furious and starts at once for Henry's apartment. She arrives in the midst of what she supposes to be a happy family party, and creates considerable excitement. Henry desperately tries to explain matters, but she flounces out, returning shortly with her father. Papa has a gun and things look pretty bad for all concerned. Henry, seeing he is getting in too deep, quells the small riot by explaining everything and confessing the deception practiced upon Uncle Joe. That gentleman is inclined to renounce his nephew forever, but is won over by the girl Henry has picked out to be his life partner, and all ends happily.

EDISON.

THE BUXOM COUNTRY LASS (Wood B Wedd Series No. 9—August 31).—When Wood B. Wedd, almost at his wit's end to find a suitable wife, met Fanny Merrick, he fondly imagined that he had at last found the desired paragon of excellence to grace his hearth and home. What made it better was that Fanny listened with favorable ears to Wood B.'s suit. Her only condition seemed ridiculously easy. He must prove that he was capable of doing a good hard day's work on the farm.

To make assurance doubly sure, Wood B. enlisted the aid of Darby Jenks in the fulfillment of his inamorata's desire. He did not let Fanny know anything about Darby. He merely brought that obliging young man out to the farm secretly, and allowed him to help him with the work.

Neither Darby nor Wood B. were particularly well versed in farm affairs and consequently their path was not entirely one of roses. In one short day they discovered more about horses, cows, and bees than some people ever learn in a lifetime. Yet, in spite of the terrible experiences incident to his attempts to milking, gathering eggs, haying, chasing pigs and the like, Wood B. felt very hopeful toward the end of the day. Darby was almost exhausted, but then, of course, Darby didn't thief who might hope to escape these fleet-footed veterans. The hobble skirt race is filled with laughter-provoking incidents although it is a little hard to see the exact benefit the contestants hope to derive therefrom unless they are preparing to march in the annual suffragette parade.

Of the "thrills" with which this picture abounds, the most interesting are the race of motorcycle policemen, the charge of a squadron of mounted police, the novelty race between an automobile policeman, a motorcycle policeman, a mounted policeman, a bicycle policeman and a policeman on foot, and finally the rescue scene in which a mounted policeman saves a woman on a runaway horse, and two mounted policemen stop a runaway carriage.

The exhibition by police recruits will surprise many who do not realize with what thoroughness aspirants for the force are trained. The fire-escape climbing and the handling of desperate prisoners are both scenes of great interest. Among the other noteworthy features of this reel may be mentioned the drills of the Honor Legion and of the mounted squadron, the close views of the celebrities attending the carnival, and the exhibition by police dogs. In all, six kinds of policemen are shown: Mounted, on foot, motorcycle, automobile, bicycle, and finally latest of all restraints on criminal activity, the aero-policeman.

A VILLAGE SCANDAL (September 2).—Wiggles was very fond of Shrimp until the boarders came up from the city to old man Haskins' farm. Then she discovered that Shrimp's life-long residence among the trees and flowers had bequeathed him little of that polish, and little of that fine bay rum and hair oil odor which seemed to her so delightful a perquisite of the young men from the city. Shrimp was highly indignant with Wiggles for her heartless flippancy. To revenge himself, he paid marked attention to the girls from the city who were boarding at the Haskins' farm.

CALIFORNIA
802 SO. OLIVE STREET
LOS ANGELES
APEX
FEATURE SERVICE
PANTAGES THEATRE BLDG
SAN FRANCISCO

tells her, "I'm sick of the single life. Let's get married." He receives his desired answer, while both see a vision of themselves as the proud possessors of a brand new horse-drawn organ, with Cupid busily turning the crank to the tune of the wedding march.

TOO MUCH UNCLE (Special—Two Parts—September 5).—Uncle Joe insists that Henry his nephew, shall marry and settle down. The young man is already engaged to a charming young lady, and to secure a realization of Uncle's financial promise, tells the latter that he has been married some time. Henry and his fiancee agree to elope that evening, as her father forbids an immediate marriage. Uncle Joe unexpectedly arrives on a visit and Henry has to have a wife in a hurry. He accordingly gets his friend Billy and his wife to help him out by passing her off as his (Henry's) wife. Trouble then commences immediately. Uncle is introduced and to make sure the newlyweds really love each other, insists they kiss before Uncle gives Henry a check for the promised sum. This action enrages Billy, who is acting in capacity of butler, and his deliberate awkwardness makes it exceedingly uncomfortable for Uncle, as well as causing several narrow escapes from exposure. Then, Henry's fiancee, becoming impatient, calls up on the phone. Uncle Joe answers, and tells her that Henry is already married; therefore, how could she be his fiancee?

count. The last task Fanny assigned to Wood B. was the chopping of a large pile of wood. Wood B. drove the tired Darby to the task, smiling to think of the effect his tremendous day's work would have on Fanny. Just as they were finishing up their job, however, Fanny came out and saw Darby. After she had finished telling Wood B. under just what further conditions she would accept him, there was nothing left for that unfortunate man but to call his faithful helper and slink home.

NEW YORK POLICE DEPARTMENT CARNIVAL (September 1).—This carnival, held at Brighton Beach Race Track, June 26 and 27, 1914, gave rise to considerable comment. The public was made to realize in the most graphic fashion possible that the police force was composed of something else than a lot of uniformed martinets whose sole mission was to make things uncomfortable for everybody in general.

From a purely athletic standpoint, the New York Police Department could probably make things distinctly interesting for any athletic organization in the world. Included in its ranks are several world's champions in their respective events on track and field. Several interesting pictures of these men in action are shown. A 100-yard dash for men who have been 25 years or more in the service fills us with the assurance that he must be a nimble Wiggles' rage over her former admirer's unexpected perfidy was forgotten in the light of subsequent events.

Old Jim, the village drunkard, had a little daughter, who, on account of her father's irresponsible habits, was shamefully neglected. Wiggles saw the child one day and begged her foster parents to adopt it. When they refused, she resolved on drastic measures. So she went to the drunkard's home while Old Jim was absent, and carried the child to the Haskins' barn. A day or so later the village discovered that the drunkard's child was missing. Instantly suspecting that Jim had done away with the little girl, the sheriff arrested him. Feeling in the village ran very high, and there was talk of a lynching, when Margaret, one of the Haskins' boarders in whom Wiggles had confided under pledge of strict secrecy, saved the situation by revealing the whereabouts of the little girl.

Then, matters were settled to the complete satisfaction of everybody concerned. One of the boarders offered to take care of the little girl, and Old Jim gladly relinquished his slight claims of ownership. Wiggles suddenly found herself a heroine. When Shrimp awkwardy asked her if she had forgotten all about him, she giggled and blushed and coyly replied that she guessed she kind of liked him after all.

TEXAS EXHIBITORS
APEX
FEATURE SERVICE
DALLAS
TEX. OKLA. ARK. LA.

Charles O.

Announces

POPULAR

A NEW HIGH

28 Reels Weekly 1-2-3 Reels

Everything New

Willat Studios and Laboratories just completed at Fort Lee, N. J., will be the home of Popular Photo Plays Corporation. $500,000 has been spent in constructing the most modern and best appointed Studios and Laboratories in the world. Every modern appliance known to the motion picture industry has been installed in order that the most perfect pictures may be produced. Studios and Laboratories will be under the personal direction and management of C. A. ("Doc") Willat.

Fourteen Brands

Jester,	Comedy	Cee-O-Bee,	Photoplay
Owl,	"	Willat,	"
Gaiety,	"	Longacre,	"
Luna,	"	Niagara,	"
Frolic,	"	Palisade,	"
"O. K.,"	"	Canyon,	"
Pastime,	"	Continental,	"

Special "Popular" Features

High-class Plays now running as Broadway successes with original all-star casts will be released in conjunction with the "POPULAR PROGRAM" as well as recent plays of well-known authors.

Directors—Authors—Actors

Only the best and most efficient Directors and Authors, whose ability has been established by past record, are employed—and only actors of recognized ability will form the cast for each brand. Among the actors already engaged are a number of leading men and women who are well known as Broadway Favorites and have starred throughout the country in high-class drama—also the funniest and best known Comedians, who have an international reputation as laugh producers.

Scenery, Costumes, etc.

No expense will be spared in elaborating on scenery sets, furnishings, costumes, etc. Detail will be our "watchword."

Charles O. Baumann, President of the POPULAR PHOTO PLAYS CORPORATION, is well-known in the industry, and his past record and reputation are an assurance that the POPULAR PHOTO PLAYS CORPORATION will conduct its dealings in a business-like manner, and every release in the PROGRAM can be depended upon as a high-grade production.

All productions will be under the personal supervision of Charles O. Baumann, in conjunction with C. A. ("Doc") Willat.

Associated with Mr. Baumann in this enterprise, is Mr. W. C. Toomey, who was formerly Vice President and General Manager of the Mutual Film Corporation and also President and General Manager of the Continental Feature Film Corporation.

Popular Photo

Studios and Factory: Fort Lee, N. J.

Baumann

PROGRAM

CLASS SERVICE

All Features Comedy, Drama, etc.

EXCHANGE BOOKING-OFFICES

Each Exchange will be under the control and ownership of men who will have full power to arrange with Exhibitors for service direct in their respective territories. The integrity and honesty of all men conducting the booking of the "POPULAR" PROGRAM and SPECIAL "POPULAR" FEATURES have been thoroughly scrutinized and investigated in order that they may be relied upon in making any representations and fulfilling all contracts for service with Exhibitors.

The following is a list of the cities in which Exhibitors can arrange for service:

New York	New Orleans	Milwaukee	San Francisco	Buffalo
Boston	Dallas	Pittsburgh	Minneapolis	Indianapolis
Philadelphia	St. Louis	Cincinnati	Los Angeles	Seattle
Washington	Kansas City	Cleveland	Omaha	Salt Lake City
Atlanta	Chicago	Detroit	Denver	Oklahoma City

More than 60% of the men who will own and manage the various Exchange-Booking Offices have been decided upon and Exhibitors may feel assured that only men of dependable character and high-class business ability have been able to secure an Exchange-Booking Office franchise.

While some of the territory is still open we contemplate deciding within a few days on applications which have been made for open territory referred to.

All contracts with EXCHANGE-BOOKING OFFICES are made for a period of 10 years, with a privilege of renewal of 10 additional years, thus assuring the Exhibitor an opportunity to deal with an individual in his territory who is the owner of the EXCHANGE-BOOKING OFFICE and absolutely independent of dictation from an Exchange Combination.

Plays Corporation

Executive Offices: Longacre Bldg., N. Y.

POPULAR PHOTO PLAYS

THE VIKING QUEEN (Special—Two Parts—September 4).—In the days before Olaf Tryggreson had welded the kingdoms of Norway into one, Helga, called The Glorious, was queen of Drontheim. Under her sway, Drontheim flourished, and took its place among the nations of the earth. It happened once, while Helga was away, leading her armies to conquest against the Skrellings, that Ragnarr, jarl of Binskarr, swore by all the trolls in Midgar, that he would no longer submit to a woman's rule. So, with his barons and house karls, he entered into all manner of evil doing, ravaging and destroying throughout the land, and openly defying the queen's government.

When Queen Helga returned, there came many to her crying out against Ragnarr and his wickedness. The Queen summoned a council before her and tried Ragnarr for his crimes. Finding him guilty, she commanded that his lands be declared forfeit to the state, and that he leave Drontheim forever. But even as the queen's guards were leading him forth to exile, friends of Jarl Ragnarr fell upon them and rescued him. Then, in the blackness of his evil heart, Ragnarr devised a plot against the queen's majesty. With bribes he won over Olaf, captain of Helga's guard, and that night Helga was seized, bound, and carried over seas to a lonely island.

Ragnarr seized the throne, and ruled in her stead, and the courtiers, after their first shock of surprise at the queen's disappearance, submitted to his bloodthirsty reign. It happened a little later that the traitorous Olaf quarreled with Ragnarr because Ragnarr had not given him the money he had promised. In revenge Olaf proclaimed to the entire court that Ragnarr was the abductor of Queen Helga. Wild with rage, the people rose, and killed Ragnarr. Then, they sent a ship over seas to Queen Helga. They found her lying on the shore, with her face turned toward Drontheim and her eyes closed. With great wailing and mourning they bore her to her native land. But while the funeral cortage was passing through the streets of her capital Queen Helga started from her death-like trance, and like Balder, lived again to bring joy and happiness to her people.

HEARTS OF THE FOREST (September 5).—Jim Carey was as devoted as any husband could have been, yet despite his unbounded kindness and love, Nellie, his wife, was dissatisfied. Jim was not a rich man, and Nellie, from the depths of her artificial soul, craved the pleasures which were denied her. Because Dick Lawson could give her the luxuries her heart desired, she ran away with him. Jim Carey, left alone with his little girl, was overcome by a grief greater than anything his life had experienced before; a sorrow so lasting and deep that no ordinary means might hope to assuage it. So he took his motherless child and plunged into the great forest in the hope that in the shadow of the everlasting trees he might find oblivion and peace.

Rose Graham, a widow who had lately lost her own little daughter, lived with her brother near the spot in which Jim settled. Her mother-heart went out to little Bess, and she encouraged the child's visits to her home. One day Bess went out into the woods alone and was bitten by a snake. Jack Wilbur, the widow's brother, found the unconscious child, and carried her to his sister. When Jim discovered that Bess was missing, he hurried to the widow's in the hope that she might be there. Arriving at the widow's he learned that her shrewd presence of mind had probably saved the little girl's life. His unbounded gratitude grew in the weeks when Rose nursed the child back to health, to something stronger and more beautiful. The courts had granted him a decree of divorce. His way was clear. And so it happened that after a while, he told the widow of his feeling for her, and they were married.

Meanwhile, Nellie had found, to her bitter cost, what many another had found about the primrose way of pleasure. Lawson, tiring of her, cast her off. Friendless and alone, she crept back to her old home only to learn that her husband had gone many miles away. When she followed him into the woods and arrived at his house, she looked through the window and saw Jim and Rose sitting together at the fireplace, with little Bess. Then the terrible realization fell on Nellie's heart that no earthly power could ever draw a veil across the past, and with gray, haggard face and lagging feet, she turned away.

KALEM.

THE BRAND (Two Parts—August 31).—Mary's lot, always hard, becomes doubly so upon her father's death. Desiring to re-marry, the girl's stepmother conspires to get her out of the way. Aided by Downs, the man she intends to wed, Mrs. Halleck succeeds in having Mary sent to the reformatory.

Rose Hayden, a girl of the slums, dominates the inmates of the institution. Angered by punishment, Rose sets fire to the building. Due to Mary's heroism, not a life is lost. The girl informs the authorities of Rose's crime. Rose is seized, but vows revenge.

FILL THOSE OPEN DATES WITH REAL FEAT-URES!

Write For Our List

CELEBRATED PLAYERS
FILM COMPANY

LEADERS IN FILMDOM'S PROGRESS

64 West Randolph Street,
CHICAGO

Mary's heroic work results in her release. The girl later secures a position as governess to Helen, granddaughter of wealthy Mrs. Clark. Burton, Mrs. Clark's young brother, falls in love with Mary. Because of her past, the girl refuses to marry him.

Several months later Rose escapes from the institution. The girl learns of Mary's whereabouts and blackmails her under threat of revealing her past to Mrs. Clark. When her victim's money is gone, Rose treacherously informs Mrs. Clark that she is harboring a girl who has served time. Incidentally Rose manages to steal a letter addressed to Mary, while conversing with Mrs. Clark.

Horrified, Mrs. Clark orders Mary to leave the house. Burton enters and hears Rose's story. So great is his love that the boy declares he will marry Mary in spite of her past. He contemptuously odrers Rose from the house. In departing, the girl drops the letter she has stolen. It proves to be Mrs. Halleck's dying statement, and shows Mary to have been innocent of wrong.

A commotion outside attracts the attention of Mary, her sweetheart and Mrs. Clark. They see Rose in the grasp of two detectives who have been searching for her. Thus the girl of the slums passes out of Mary's life forever.

MELIES.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE (August 25).—Abner Beer prepares to deliver a temperance lecture. Having trouble with a new pair of shoes, he trades them for an old pair belonging to a tramp. Feeling better, he proceeds on his way, but unfortunately gets stuck on some fresh tar. Everybody that goes to his aid suffers likewise. The tramp then comes along and rescues them by unlacing their shoes.

ELOPEMENT OF ELIZA (August 27).—Eliza loves a low-down nigger named Ephrim, but her father, Mo, favors another. The young couple elope but are pursued by Mo. During the excitement, the latter is arrested but on giving his consent to the marriage of the young couple, he is released through the influence of Ephrim.

THE MAN WHO SMILED (Special—Two Parts—August 29).—James Perkins, nicknamed Smiley because he is always smiling secures the position of Superintendent of Police. After hiring the rooms of his predecessor, he visits the various officials. On returning to his rooms he receives several callers. Complications occur, in the midst of which he loses his job. He returns home and finds there a message stating that his successor has been dismissed and that his job is again open for him.

SELIG.

WHO KILLED GEORGE GRAVES? (Special Two Reels—August 31.)—Olga North, beautiful, engaging and possessing dramatic talent, but without money, meets and marries George Graves, a handsome, weak, young fellow, whose convivial habits lead him into the companionship of dissolute fellows. Step by step, he loses his hold upon the decent things of life until he degenerates into lodging-house habitue, constantly filled with liquor. Thrown upon her own resources, Olga secures work at a theater, and develops such an unusual talent that she is soon on the way to fame and fortune as a leading actress. Her husband has disappeared into the vortex of unfortunate humanity in the slums. She does not know his whereabouts, and is relieved that he does not bother her, although she has keen apprehensions of the consequences should be attempt to claim her as his wife.

John Borne, handsome, rich, and accepted by his fellowmen as a man of stability and worth, falls in love with Olga, and she opens her heart to the messages of love which come from his own. He urges her to marry him, but she declines, finally explaining in response to his insistent demands, that she is already married and does not know the whereabouts of her husband. George Graves, the besotted husband, learns accidentally that the celebrated actress is his wife, and he determines to exact from her an income which will permit him to live among his idle and dissolute companions like a lord. He visits her in her apartments and she is easily frightened into giving him money. An agreement is entered into between them, that he shall be paid a certain sum in cash if he will sign a paper forever releasing her from any claims, and that he will not contest her application for a divorce. An appointment is made for him to get his money and sign the paper. He keeps the appointment and Olga gives him $500 in currency. He signs the agreement, but before the arrangement can be completed, John Borne knocks at the door, and in the little hurry of excitement which follows, George Graves seizes the agreement which he has just signed and places it in the same pocket with the roll of bills. Then Olga thrusts her husband into an adjoining room and closes the door upon him. He does not see the evil face of Bill Sykes peering at him through the window, watching

NOW

A name as well known as Santa Claus

Lew Dockstader

in a Five-Act Play of the Civil War

"DAN"

By HAL REID

DISCRIMINATING ATTRACTIONS

CHARACTER Motion Pictures which select their own audiences, and build, in the picture play showman, a confidence which spells continued patronage and success.

Names which attract not only the mass of motion picture enthusiasts but the army of "willing-to-be-shown" theatre goers and the curious.

Plays, the characters of which are known to and approved of by particular households and the popularity of which is attested to by their years of tremendous success.

Plus merit in production.

COMING

The Incomparable

Ethel Barrymore

In an Original 5 Act Motion Picture "The Nightingale" By Augustus Thomas

DISTINCTIVE EXPLOITATION

THOSE distibuting offices which control the bookings of these master motion picture productions have been determined upon with a most painstaking care as to complete representation.

They are backed up with a wealth of wondrous advertising material becoming to these quality productions.

We will advise you of the distributor in your territory.

All-Star Feature Corporation

220 West Forty-second Street
New York City

HARRY R. RAVER, President
AUGUSTUS THOMAS, Director General

IN PREPARATION

The International Star

William Faversham

In a Five-Act Motion Picture Adaptation of the Great Theatrical Success with greedy eyes as Graves counts over his newly-found fortune with trembling fingers.

"THE WORLD"

John Borne's intuition told him that something was wrong. He questioned Olga, who finally admitted that her graceless husband was in the adjoining room. Borne's anger arose at the thought of this dissolute fellow holding the beautiful Olga by a legal compact. In the meantime, things had transpired in the room where George Graves was counting his money, so that when John Borne threw open the door, while Olga had stepped into her boudoir a moment, he saw the lifeless body of Graves upon the floor with the pocket which had contained the money and signed agreement turned out empty. In a dazed state of mind he takes from the floor the knife with which the fatal blow had evidently been dealt. At this moment, Olga runs in and finds Borne bending over the body, knife in hand. She believes him to be the murderer, while he thinks that Olga has slain her husband to get rid of him. Each stares, horrified, into the face of the other. An alarm has been given and the police enter.

John Borne is arrested and placed in jail on the charge of killing George Graves. Olga clings to him and her distress is terrible. She believes that he killed her worthless husband to free her. John Borne, on the other hand, prepares to make no defense because his love for Olga causes him to assume the attitude that he would prefer to suffer punishment as the guilty man rather than have her tender form submitted to the discomforts and vicissitudes of a term in prison, or to suffer the ignominy of death in the electric chair. He thinks she is a murderess, yet he loves her. He continues to suffer in silence, and rejects offers of his wealthy friends to organize a defense for him.

In the meantime, Bill Sykes, of the evil face, has become prosperous. He has money to spend for expensive drinks and cigars, and he dines at a regular restaurant.

Weeks pass on. The date of the trial of John Borne for the murder of George Graves is set and the work of selecting a jury is begun. Fate so decrees that Bill Sykes shall be the recipient of a notification from the jury commissioners that he has been selected to appear on the venire and examination for jury service. Bill obeys the command of the law, and is selected as the twelfth juror. The trial proceeds, and the jury files out of the court-room to decide upon a verdict. Bill Sykes argues for a verdict of guilty. The others are not so sure, but are influenced by the arguments of Sykes, until a verdict of "guilty" is decided upon. Into the court-room files the jury with stern faces and firm lips. Borne must pay the penalty. They have decided that it was he who killed George Graves. Bill Sykes is exultant over the result of his ruse. He surreptitiously rubs his hands in glee to think that the mystery, which might at any time have involved him as the guilty man, has been so readily disposed of by the conviction of an innocent man, who has been made the sport of fortune. But justice will not be denied. The puerile brain of Sykes succumbs to the mental excitement. He falls from his chair in a spasm. His fellow jurors gather around him. Officials search for identification. In his pocket is found the agreement signed by George Graves, the agreement that was in the same pocket with the money. He opens his eyes and says: "It was I who killed George Graves." Then death exacts the penalty of his crime.

PATHE.

PICTURESQUE FRANCE (Lower Brittany)—(August 25).—The scene is laid in Normandy, that delightfully quaint corner of Europe, famous in poetry, song, and prose the wide world over for its many beauties, architecture, costumes, natural scenery and old world atmosphere. Best of all it is the fairyland Normandy that every one has heard of and that every one wants to see. It is the springtime in Normandy, the "Apple Blossom time in Normandy." Every hedgerow, farmyard, dooryard and even the broad hills and narrow little valleys are filled to overflowing with apple blossoms. For good reasons did the poet link the apple blossom with this charming country for nowhere in the world are there so many apple blossoms, or are they seen to such advantage as in Normandy.

RAPIDS AND FALLS OF TRONDHJEM—(August 25).—Sweden always interesting for its very ruggedness and severity, for its magnificent forested hills and its deep narrow rocky valleys, has some of the most beautiful rivers in the world. Swedish streams are beautiful because they are different. Clear, cold water, foaming and churning in the narrow gorges, splashing wildly over hundreds of precipices, and down countless series of rocky steps, the Rapids and falls of the Trondhjem are typical of the great rivers of Sweden. No languid, quiet flowing mud saturated stream is the Trondhjem, but bright and flashing, crystal here, rainbow there, it is up and doing the work of a million men in supplying power and lighting for hundreds of mills and factories and towns throughout its entire length. While its cataracts are wonderful, it is the greater falls of the Trondhjem that rival the greater waterfalls of the world.

ARAB TROOPS (French Algiers)—(August 31).—Swift of foot, like lightning on his wonderful horse the Arab soldier has long been the subject of art, poetry, and prose. Oven burning sands and in desert places where the ordinary man may not pass, the Arab is at home and happy. The farther his horizon of desolateness stretches away from civilization, the better he likes it. Greatly feared and respected as a warrior down through the centuries from the days of the ancient Carthaginians, the Arab soldier today forms a most serviceable branch of the great French army. Unlike the other European armies, however, but better suited to his particular desert needs he has an added branch or fight force—the camel—cavalry which is one of the most efficient of the military departments. Due to his adaptability to desert marches the camed fast of foot and almost tireless can take the Arab soldier where man or horse could not go. As a fighting machine the camel seems to recognize his worth and seems to delight in the drills and long rangy canters over the desert plains and uplands. All the pictures here shown of the Arab troops were taken during the recent inspection of Monsieur Noulens, the French Minister of War in Algeria.

FREE!

52 Weeks Topical Weekly

Our Company affiliated with $10,000,000 organization

WAR NEWS

Smashing Events From Entire World

Rip Roaring Cartoons

Fashion Series

Very Latest from Paris—London

Camera Men All Over the World

To receive immediate reply you must state name of theatre, whether owner, lessee or manager; how many theatres in your town, the population; capacity of your theatre.

Address, Secretary,

TOPICAL NEWS CO.

INC.

18 East 41st Street
NEW YORK CITY

GEORGE KLEINE.

THE FORBIDDEN TRAIL (Special—Two Parts—August 11).—Surfeited with society and blinded by the glamor of his reputation, Frances marries Captain Meade, a grizzled Arctic explorer of middle age. It is not long, however, until her love of young companions awakens her husband's jealousy. His continual spying and frequent outbursts of jealous rage quickly destroy the last vestiges of love and put an end to the young wife's happiness.

Fred Palmer, a friend and business associate of the captain, is a frequent caller at his mansion. The call of youth proves too strong for both young people. The inevitable occurs. One day the captain receives a letter calling him out of town on business. He hands it to Frances, watching her as she reads. A gleam of satisfaction in her eyes, a poorly hidden smile, and the husband's jealousy is suddenly fanned into flame. Craftily he plans to catch her walking in the forbidden trail.

He pretends to start upon his journey, but doubles back and unexpectedly returns. Finding Palmer waiting at the usual rendezvous, he gives him one of two pistols which he carries bidding him defend himself. A few moments later Frances arrives and finds that a tragedy has been enacted.

INCORPORATIONS.

HARRISBURG, Ill.—Egyptian Amusement Company, Harrisburg; capital, $20,000; has been incorporated to conduct places of amusement of all kinds and to lease for hire films for moving picture machines and for the manufacture of supplies for moving picture and other patents, etc.; incorporators, J. M. Pruett, O. L. Turner, J. H. Woolcott, J. V. Capel, W. T. Turner.

HARTFORD, Wis.—Ellwood T. Brown, manager of the Orpheum theater, N. H., Mertes and others of Hartford, are incorporating a company with a capital of $25,000, to enter into the moving picture field. Their main object is the purchase of several theaters in this vicinity, making a circuit of them.

CHICAGO, Ill.—Commercial Filmers, Chicago; capital, $2,500; manufacturing, producing, selling and renting of motion picture films, slides, machines, etc.; incorporators, H. C. Porter, W. F. Porter, Charles N. David.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Russelton Amusement Company, Pittsburgh, capitol $5,000; incorporators, S. W. Charles, Allison Park; C. W. Davis, Henry E. Keil, Walter Haley, Large.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Crawford Amusement Company, Cleveland; motion pictures and vaudeville; capitol, $7,000; E. R. Moses, J. P. Liechti, K. C. Smith, W. C. Crimmel and F. S. Fish.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Drugged Company, N. Y. C., Theatrical and motion pictures. Capital, $5,000. Albert H. Kohn, Martin Herman, and Ralph I. Kohn, 206 West Forty-second street, New York City.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Select Photo Play Producing Company, $10,000. H. L. Geller, B. C. McKenna, N. M. Kaplan, 149 Broadway, New York City.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Adlong Films, $10,000. P. A. Proal, W. Adelson, E. G. Blongman, 29 Eighth avenue, Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Dyckman Photoplay Corp., New York, motion picture and theatrical; capital, $75,000. A. J. Norton, 95 Rockland Avenue, Park Hill, Yonkers and others of Brooklyn.

BOSTON Mass.—The Grand Theaters Company of Massachusetts; Albert J. Adams, Amadeo Beauregard, William S. Rieser, F. Ardell Rowell, of Marlboro; $7,500.

SOLD FOR THE ENTIRE COUNTRY!

THE LATEST PRODUCTION OF THE

HEPWORTH MANUFACTURING CO., LONDON

"THE CHIMES"

EXCLUSIVE RIGHTS FOR THE UNITED STATES WERE SOLD IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE INITIAL SHOWING OF THIS PRODUCTION. AN ANNOUNCEMENT WILL BE MADE LATER AS TO WHERE YOU MAY BOOK THIS PICTURE

THIS MERELY DEMONSTRATES THE DEMAND FOR HEPWORTH'S PRODUCTIONS

A THREE REEL HEPWORTH DRAMA

"CREATURES OF CLAY"

A STORY OF SELF-SACRIFICE BY A YOUNG MAN TO SAVE THE HONOR OF A WOMAN HE LOVES

STATE RIGHTS FOR SALE

Hepworth American Film Corporation

WORLD'S TOWER BUILDING, 110-112 WEST 40TH ST.

Telephone 3095 Bryant NEW YORK CITY

ANIMA FILM RENTAL COMPANY

"SINGLE AND MULTIPLE REELS—COMEDY AND DRAMA"

A TRIAL WILL CONVINCE YOU THAT OUR FEATURES ARE EXTRAORDINARILY EXCELLENT. WE HANDLE ONLY THE BEST PRODUCTIONS OF MANUFACTURERS NOTED FOR THEIR QUALITY

EVERY PICTURE MAY BE SEEN IN OUR EXHIBITION ROOM BEFORE YOU BOOK IT

TRY US AND BECOME AGREEABLY SURPRISED

SEND FOR DESCRIPTIVE BOOKLET

ADDRESS

WORLD'S TOWER BUILDING

110-112 WEST 40TH ST., NEW YORK CITY

TELEPHONE 3095 BRYANT

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

101 BISON.

THE RETURN OF THE TWINS' DOUBLE (Three Reels September 5).—In the last picture of this series the cunning girl crook had been outwitted by the detective, Kelley, and sent to the penitentiary to serve a five-year sentence for robbery. At the opening of the present picture Lady Raffles is being conducted to the penitentiary, handcuffed to a guard of the prison; and as the train races along the girl, who has defeated justice so many times considers herself beaten.

The play leads off with My Lady Raffles giving herself over to melancholy contemplation. Two railroad employees became frenzied in a nearby switch tower, and the train is wrecked. In the midst of the burning field of destruction and death a man and a woman, chained together by their wrists, both unconscious, are rescued from the flames. The man dies and the woman is unchained from the body. She is laid upon a grassy bank and there My Lady Raffles regains consciousness, realizes that chance has been her friend, and escapes. She returns to her old haunts and after a short rest is again ready to pursue her nefarious trade.

One idea predominates her. She must even up accounts with Phil Kelley, whom she admires as deeply as she hates. Then follows a brilliant combat of wits. A girl, Kelley's financee, is accused and placed on trial for murdering her own father. The Lady Raffles, Kelley knows, is the only one who can save the girl by her testimony.

The girl Raffles writes the detective, after her escape, to the effect that she intends to steal the family jewels of the Grahame family. This letter she plans to have posted after the crime is done. The Grahame family is made up of a father and twin sisters, Jo and Nell. Kelley is in love with Nell.

The woman burglar enters the Grahame residence and steals the jewels. While she is exploring the house, however, she makes a gruesome discovery. She finds Mr. Grahame, the father, dead in a chair, an ugly wound in his temple. She hastily escapes with the jewels. One of her confederates is captured by the police.

Kelley and Jones, another detective, are detailed on the case. Jones suspects that one of the twins has murdered the old man. Kelley is certain that the old man committed suicide or met death accidentally, also he knows that if she chooses, Lady Raffles can save the twins.

A three-corner battle of wits follows. Jones is bent upon capturing Lady Raffles. Kelley protects her because he knows if she is arrested she will not aid the twins. On two occasions when the capture of Lady Raffles is certain Kelley saves her. He gives her to understand that one good turn deserves another and that she can save the twins if she will only speak. She promises to save the twins.

The day of the trial arrives. At the critical moment Lady Raffles appears and testifies that it was she who stole the jewels and that Mr. Grahame's death was an accident. The twins are acquitted. As she has turned state's evidence, Lady Raffles is pardoned.

Kelley assures the female crook that if she is sincere in her desire for reformation she may call on him for help.

CRYSTAL.

THE SEASIDE FLIRT (September 1).—Vivian goes to the seaside for an outing. She meets Heinie and Ike, two would-be charmers who have sneaked away from their wives. Vivian accepts their attention, but soon tires of their company and goes to her hotel. While Heinie and Ike are flirting their wives are worrying. They frantically search the beach. Heinie and Ike see them and hide. After their wives have passed they go in search of Vivian. When they find her she flees to her friend, the life guard, for protection. The wives catch sight of their husbands and give chase. Heinie and Ike are caught and beaten. They escape by dumping their wives in the ocean. They go to meet Vivian. Her friend threatens to whip them. When matters have about reached a climax they all discover they are members of the same lodge.

ECLAIR.

NO SHOW FOR THE CHAUFFEUR (September 6).—Jack Warren is advised by his wealthy aunt that he will either marry her god-daughter, whom he has never seen, or be cut off in her will. Fearing that the young lady in question would not suit his fancy, Warren arranges with his chauffeur to change places with him. Jack, arrayed in cap and goggles, drives his chauffeur to his aunt's house, where pseudo servitor proceeds to act natural and thereby astonish the family.

The pretty god-daughter accidentally finds Jack's picture and becoming "wise" continues the comedy. Ordering him to the kitchen he is made to shell peas, wash dishes and eat with the cook, while the chauffeur has the time of his young life. Jack has become wildly smitten with his aunt's god-daughter, and seizing an opportunity when Jim, the chauffeur, has been dining too well and attempts to kiss the girl, Jack knocks him down. After confessions, Jack decides that the god-child of his aunt shall be his wife.

THE JACKPOT CLUB (Two Parts—September 2).—In a thriving western town, the Jackpot club meets every Saturday night. The proceeds of the game are donated by the winners to charity of their own choosing.

In this town, James Bryant, a young inventor, takes a patent out for a self-starting automobile device. Three years later, with factory built and wealth within reach, Bryant is sued for an infringement on another person's patent. Anticipating trouble the local bank closes his factory. Bryant loses his suit and things go from bad to worse. While working as a machinist his arm is torn off. His wife signs his right to damages away for $200.

Meanwhile the Jackpot Club continues to send the Saturday night money to worthy charity, and the source of these gifts remains unknown. On the point of self-destruction, Bryant is dissuaded by his good wife. Things becoming more desperate, he again resolves to end it all. Leaving his insurance policy with a note pinned to it he goes away. At the club Johnson, having won a pot, sends the porter out to bring in a worthy recipient of the money. The porter comes upon a policeman, who has just arrested Bryant for attempted suicide. After explaining the situation, Bryant, the unfortunate man, is allowed to be taken to the club. Bryant tells his story. At the recital of the lost arm, Johnson, who is president of the company in which the accident happened, gives Bryant a check and promises to see that he is taken care of. When Bryant tells of his patent, another member, taking up a paper, reads the decision which has reversed the verdict in the starving man's favor. The president of the bank, a member of the Jackpot Club, promises the inventor that his factory will immediately be reopened.

Finding her husband gone and the note, Mrs. Bryant searches for him. Meeting the policeman he tells her what has happened. She enters the club just as Bryant is receiving a check for $2,500 from the factory owner. As they depart, husband and wife are tendered the receipts of the evening's jackpot and Bryant, restored to his own, later becomes a member of the Jackplot Club.

MESQUITE PETE'S FORTUNE (August 30).—An "iron-faced" spinster advertises for a husband. Mesquite Pete reads the ad and, feeling lonesome, writes her to come on. The ranch boys becoming "wise" forcibly throw down Mesquite Pete and shave, wash and comb him within an inch of his life.

Nelly, the beautiful waitress, who has looked with favor upon Pete, hears the news of his perfidy. She receives a letter stating that her Aunt has died and left her $35,000. Joe, a handsome cowboy, pleads for her hand. She accepts. On the way back she drops the letter.

Meanwhile, Pete has seen the ad writer and in order to escape, plans a fake hold-up. After the hired bandits have carried Maria off he finds the note and thinks the spinster has dropped it. He rushes off to recapture her. They enter the lunch-room where Nellie works. Pete flashes the letter. It is seized by the beautiful waitress and he discovers all too late his sad mistake.

FRONTIER.

UNDER ARIZONA SKIES (September 6).—The sheriff is instructed by the mayor to make every effort to capture the bandit that has been at work in the vicinity. But when the sheriff goes on the hunt, his gun and those belonging to his men are secretly removed by the bandit.

Dolly, the mayor's daughter, and her friend, Eloise, go for a horseback ride. Far from the town they sight a band of Indians that have broken from the reservation. When the Indians give chase the girls seek refuge in an old shack, the habitat of Joe, the bandit. Slipping the guns he has stolen into the girls' hands, he aids them in fighting off the redmen.

Word is received by the mayor of the Indian uprising and of his daughter's danger. When the white men, led by the sheriff, arrive the Indians have succeeded in breaking in the shack, firing it and wounding Joe. They are on the point of making off with the girls. In the fight that follows the Indians are beaten back; the sheriff brings Joe from the flaming shack and later tells him that after all he was glad Joe stole the guns.

THE JANITOR'S FORTUNE (August 30).—The cattle broker leaves his office. Outside, Joe, a crook, observes the broker's wallet laying on the floor and comes in to get it. Willis, the janitor, enters and discovers the crook's presence. In an attempt to save the pocketbook, he tells Joe what crime has cost him.

Years ago he found himself financially crippled and this when he had been married but a short time. Resolving to take a chance he entered a poker game. At first luck favored him, then he was cleaned out. Desperate, he shot out the lights and in the darkness succeeded in getting the gambler's roll. He never dared to return to that part of the country. Joe pretends to believe the old man's story, but when his back is turned he takes the wallet and escapes. The broker misses it. Returning he finds the janitor in his office, accuses him and leads him to the sheriff's office.

Joe is seen by a deputy with the wallet and is arrested on suspicion. At the sheriff's office the Janitor, Joe and his mother meet. In the mother the janitor recognizes his wife. The mother slips the pocketbook back into the broker's pocket. When he finds it there, although he knows that someone had returned it, he refuses to prosecute.

IMP.

TEMPEST AND SUNSHINE (Two Parts—September 3).—Tempest and Sunchine are the daughters of Mr. Middleton, a wealthy Southern farmer. Tempest's real name is Julia. Tempest was applied to her on account of her fiery nature. Fanny is Sunshine's name. She is called Sunshine because of her sweet nature. At the opening of the play Tempest is engaged to Mr. Wilmott, a school teacher, and in a way loves him. Wilmott is held in high esteem by the father, who started him in business. The girls leave home to attend school in another town. Wilmott meets the girls and is treated rather coldly by Tempest.

Here we are introduced to Dr. Lacy, a wealthy doctor from New Orleans, who is visiting his friend Wilmott. Tempest, on meeting him, becomes infatuated and wishes to break her engagement with Wilmott; when she observes her sister, Sunshine, making an impression on Lacy her heart fills with jealousy.

As an incident in the play, disclosing the different natures of the girls, we have a few scenes showing the father visiting the girls. Tempest is ashamed of her father for his ill-manners. Sunshine, loving her daddy, overlooks his rough ways. He decides to take his girls home for a holiday. Lacy proposes and is accepted by Sunshine before they leave. Tempest, secretly determined that it shall not be, wishes her sister every happiness. Once home Tempest bribes Dunn, the postmaster, to turn the letters passing between her sister and Lacy to her.

Later, word is received that Wilmott is ill and that he calls for Tempest. Tempest refuses to go to him and writes him telling him that her love was a mistake. The shock causes his death. Sunshine and her father are beside him at the time. Wilmott, blind through sickness, believes that Tempest is beside him and he asks the girl to kiss him as he dies.

Time passes. Lacy receives a letter from Sunshine telling him that she has ceased to care for him—that he could find a better woman in her sister. Sunshine receives a similar letter from Lacy. These letters have been forged by Tempest. Tempest then visits New Orleans with her mother and through a clever ruse, gets Lacy to propose to her. The marriage is arranged to take place at her father's home.

When the day of the marriage arrives, Sunshine, heartbroken, keeps to her room. Dunn, who has kept the letters back, is ill, and believing that he is going to die, he confesses to his mother. She forces him to go and tell the truth to the parties he has injured. He arrives just as the marriage is about to take place. Tempest, in her rage and embarrassment, falls to the floor unconscious.

Sunshine is sent for and told the truth. The father insists that the wedding take place with Sunshine taking the place of Tempest. This is done to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Tempest is ill for some time. When she recovers she is penitent and seeks forgiveness, and as the father grows older he finds in her the comfort she had long held back.

FATHER'S BRIDE (September 2).—Hubby has married against father's wishes and hence the household is thrown into consternation when a telegram arrives stating that father will arrive that very evening. Hubby fears he will lose the money his father has promised him if it becomes known that he has a wife. He and wife's brother, who lives across the hall, concoct a plot.

It is decided that wife shall temporarily remove to brother's quarters. Then brother is to get Hubby out with him, leaving father in the apartment alone. Wife is to rush into her own apartment yelling "burglar" and getting father to enter her brother's apartment. Brother is to come in posing as the irate parent of his sister and demand that, owing to the disgrace of his child, father must marry her. Hubby will

NORTHERN LIGHTS

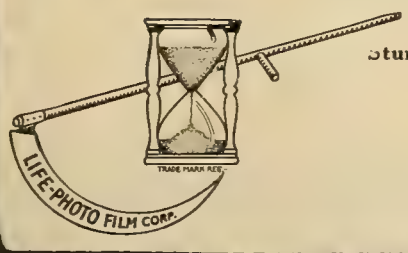
A high-tension, Western psychological drama, visualizing strife, love, hate and intrigue, interwoven with a delightful vein of humor.

An adaptation from the stage success. In five parts.

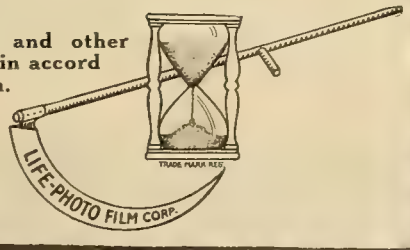
A superior class A feature. Perfect acting by an all-star cast and incomparable photography—the product of our own laboratories.

State Right Buyers—Wire or write us, naming your territory, and we will forward our terms.

New York and New Jersey Exhibitors, communicate direct with us for bookings.



Stunning lithographs, heralds and other advertising matter that are in accord with this production.



Life Photo Film Corp.- Executive Office 220 W. 42 St. N.Y.C.

Studio & Laboratory - Grantwood N. J.

then appear and acting the hero, will offer to marry the girl himself.

All would have been well but for a tipsy bachelor, who, by mistake, gets into the newlyweds' apartment. Nothing daunted, they try again. This time the plan works better and father is on the point of being fully deceived when in pops the tipsy bachelor to get his coat and cane, which he has left behind in his hurried departure. He gives the scheme away. But father is forgiving and all ends well.

REX.

DAISIES (September 3).—Rupert, a city man, goes to the country for his vacation. There he meets Elsie in a field of daisies. He proposes to her and they are married. A few years later they drift apart. Rupert becomes enamored of a woman. With unctuous courtesy, each day at the florist's he orders his wife an expensive bouquet. Joe, a poor fellow, goes to the florist's to get his girl a cheap bouquet of daisies. By mistake the roses are delivered to the poor girl.

The wife, discouraged and about decided to leave John, writes a note to that effect. The flowers arrive—daisies—she recalls the old love and dresses in her old dress, pinning the daisies on her breast.

Rupert is ruined by a panic in Wall Street. When the woman, Clarice, calls on him at his office in the afternoon he tells her. She scorned him. Maddened he goes home and finds the note. He is in despair. His wife enters, finds him with revolver, and rushes to him. He tells her, they again enact the scene of their betrothal, with the simple bunch of daisies as the silent witness.

THE BOOB'S NEMESIS (September 6).—The Boob is in love with the farmer's daughter. However, the girl places her affections with Al, another of the hired hands. The arrival of a traveling salesman in town causes the girl to switch her affections from her more commonplace admirers to the dashing stranger. The stranger makes the farmhouse his headquarters.

The Boob finds a letter addressed to the salesman which discloses the fact that he is married. About this time there is great excitement, owing to the sudden disappearance of the farmer's daughter. A note is found stating that she has eloped with the salesman. The Boob shows the father the letter from the salesman's wife. Then he steps into the breach and offers to bring the girl back, hoping in this way to win her heart. Accordingly he sets out. The salesman experiences some little difficulty in eluding his wife, to keep his appointment and meet the country girl. The train carrying the Boob pulls in just in time for him to see the girl and the salesman drive away in an auto. He secures another car and pursues, following them to a cafe. Entering the place he endeavors to wrest the girl from the salesman's clutches. They escape him and depart in their machine. The Boob follows and after an exciting race, catches up. After a terrific struggle he dumps the salesman out. Flushed with success he takes the girl back to the farm to the great joy of her old father. A moment later he is astounded to see her in the arms of his rival, Al. He collapses.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS (August 30).—Among those rescued from a wreck on the shore of a little fishing village is one Antoine, who has clung to his violin through the terrors. Joe's sweetheart, Jane, and her father, offers Antoine temporary shelter in their hut. Joe, continuing his search for survivors, finds Guilo, and rescues him. Before lapsing into a stupor Guilo tells Joe that his mission across the sea was one of vengeance; his sister's betrayer, its object.

In the course of time Antoine plays his violin for Jane and succeeds, through his music, to enchant her. Joe, realizing the power that is taking his girl from him, goes to the city to learn to play the violin himself. During his absence, Antoine plans to make Jane his wife. But he is haunted by his past misdeeds; by the face of the girl whom he wronged. Antoine believes the girl's brother drowned.

Joe returns from the city; as he enters his hut Guilo observes the instrument which restores his memory. Later, Joe retires to a quiet spot on the beach to practice before telling Jane of his secret. Jane, who has been grieving over Joe's unexplained absence has gone to the sea for consolation. She meets Antoine and, with his music, he draws her to him. Guilo, on the rocks above, looks down and recognizes his enemy. As Antoine, as he is about to kiss the girl, hears the strains of music. Guilo pursues Antoine into the sea where the water closes over them. Joe comes out, explanations follow and the two stand on the rocks looking out over the ocean, ignorant of the tragic end of Antoine and Guilo.

VICTOR.

THE MAN FROM NOWHERE (Two Parts—August 31).—At dawn in the Sierra Madre Mountains a lone horseman appears upon the brow of the hill. Spurring his horse, he rides down the hill and out of sight.

It is morning in Adobe George's Cantina. While Lolita cleans the glasses behind the bar, George and his cronies discuss the latest topic of the day, the coming of the Gringo. Lolita, watching for her lover, Manuel, through the large window in front, sees the stranger dismount at the hitching rack and enter the saloon. As the stranger is fair to look upon, Lolita smiles as she serves him. With the rattle of American gold upon the bar, Adobe George and his cronies also become interesting spectators.

Farther down the street the Gringo is just awakening from a night of debauch at Adobe George's. Finding no money with which to purchase a morning stimulant, he sends his daughter for it, knowing that the submitting of a kiss from George is all the price she needs. The girl protests, but brute force predominates; she is forced to go.

The stranger is still at the bar when the girl enters and asks for the liquor. Lolita hands it to her and demands the price. Adobe George steps forward and, taking the girl in his arms, says that she doesn't need any money. The girl tries to draw away. George holds her—and the next instant Adobe is lying on the floor and a handful of gold from the stranger's pocket is lying on the bar.

The girl takes the bottle and leaves after a gratifying look at the stranger. Following her to her home the stranger watches her through the window as she gives the liquor to her father. Then deciding that life is not worth living, she takes his gun from the wall and starts for the door. Walking up the street the stranger sees her start for the desert and arrives just in time to prevent her from committing suicide. He tells her to return to her father, that all will turn out right. There is a mutual attraction between the two and she does as he tells her to.

In the meantime, George, Lolita and the others are planning to get the stranger's gold. Lolita leaves to see her lover, Manuel, as the man reenters the Cantina. The roulette wheel is going. The stranger wins most every time. The Mexicans watch his steadily increasing bank roll.

Lolita meets Manuel and plans the robbery, then returns to the saloon. She engages the stranger in conversation. They go to one of the tables in the rear to drink and talk. Night falls. The Gringo starts for the Cantina to spend the evening, the girl following to take care of him.

Manuel arrives at the bar. He sees the man and Lolita apparently engaged in a flirtation. Manuel, snarling, reaches for his gun. The Gringo appears in the doorway. The man sees Manuel in the glass behind the bar. Quickly drawing his gun he shoots out the light. Dark-

No. 8

Brass Frames and Railings

For material, workmanship and design we offer the best.

Get our catalogue and quotation before placing your order.

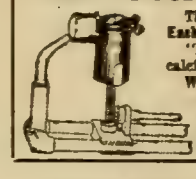
THE THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. COMPANY
1232 East 3d St., Cleveland, Ohio

THE CATALOGUE OF
BRUSH ELECTRIC LIGHTING SETS
contains much that is valuable about electric lighting in general, and moving picture work in particular. Send for it.
THE CHAS. A. STRELINGER CO.
Box MP-2, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc., 111½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

FOR SALE
"Through the Clouds"
Four reels. Perfect condition. This feature has positively never been exhibited outside St. Louis. Missouri and Kansas rights. Bargain. J. R. VIEHL, 7127 Minnesota Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing
WHY DON'T YOU SEND IT TO US?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
WE BUY SECOND-HAND MACHINES.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
176 N. State St. (bet. Lake and Randolph) Chicago, Ill

Gas Users — Attention!


The "Gull Pastil" doubles your light. Each (large size), $1.25; 6 for $6.75. "Tulco" adapter makes Pastil fit any calcium burner, $1.00 each.
We carry most complete line in stock of picture machines and supplies in America. E. E. FULTON, 152 W. Lake St., Chicago, Sole American distributors for "Gull Pastil."

WE EQUIP YOUR THEATRE COMPLETE
Edison, Power's Simplex, Motiograph and Edengraph Machines and Genuine Parts.
Photo and Poster Frames, Indirect Lighting Fixtures, Curtains and Screens, Rebuilt Machines, etc. Cash or Time. Send for catalog today.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
160A No. Fifth Ave. - - - - Chicago

DEVELOPING and PRINTING carefully done for professionals and amateurs
The largest factory in the world devoted exclusively to Manufacturing Commercial Moving Pictures
Prices and factory description sent at your request
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO.
Watterson R. Rothacker, Gen. Mgr.
223-233 West Erie Street, Chicago

FEATURES OF QUALITY
Our Percentage Basis Plan Requires only a Small Cash Investment by State Rights and Exchange Men, but it Means Big Earnings to Them.
AMERICAN & EUROPEAN FILM CO., 43 CEDAR STREET, NEW YORK CITY
FEATURES PURCHASED - SOLD - LEASED - RENTED - IMPORTED

NEW DETECTIVE PLAY

IN FOUR PARTS

The Film Detective

TO BE RELEASED AUGUST 26th

Splendid detective story told in a new way; a picture within a picture, showing the wonders of modern photography. A wonderful African lion hunt, full of thrills and dangers, with one of the party actually mangled through accident by the King of Beasts and all caught on the film.

OVER 200 EXCITING SCENES. EXCEPTIONAL COLORED PHOTOGRAPHS; 1, 3, AND 6 SHEET POSTERS AND TWO COLORED HERALDS.

Western and Southern States For Sale

Also Some Territory on the

MEXICAN MINE FRAUD	5 Parts
LUPIN	3 Parts
THE CHIMNEY-SWEEPS	5 Parts
THE SILENT BELL	3 Parts
THE OATH OF A VIKING	3 Parts
THE NEXT IN COMMAND	4 Parts

Now showing with wonderful success

SOME OF OUR BOOKING OFFICES

PHILADELPHIA, 1123 Vine Street
MONTREAL, 204 St. Catherine St. W.
TORONTO
SYRACUSE, 214 Fayette Street
NEW YORK, 110 W. 40th Street
CHICAGO

For Releas Sept. 5th "THE MYSTERY OF THE POISON POOL" In 5 Parts

"PLAY PICTURE PLAYHOUSE PHOTOPLAYS"

ness—the only light being from the flashes of the guns. Then there is silence. George, confident that the stranger has been killed, lights the lamp. Instead of lying dead upon the floor, he is standing with his back to the wall, his gun in his hands, master of the situation. Manuel lies wounded across a table. In the doorway lies the Gringo dead—with his daughter weeping over him.

The man, covering everyone with his gun, goes to the girl. There is a moment's conversation, and then she leaves with him. The stranger takes her up behind him on his horse—they ride off into the night. At the old Mission they dismount. A knock on the door brings the old Father. Beneath the light of the candles on the altar they are married—and dawn sees them riding slowly down the hill to "Nowhere."

THE DERELICT AND THE MAN (Two Parts—September 4).—Dr. Warren, sailing for England to receive a legacy, meets his double in Dow, a derelict working on the steamer. There is a wreck; all are reported lost. But Dow and Warren are landed upon neighboring beach. Dow finds the doctor supposedly dead on the beach and formulates a plan to impersonate him. Later, some fishermen find the doctor unconscious on the beach and revive him only to find that his mind is a blank. Seaching his pockets they find a card evidently belonging to a London lawyer, the executor of his will. The fishermen notify the lawyer, who immediately comes to the village. Under the doctor's care Warren regains his memory and prepares to return home.

In the meantime, Warren's wife, who has been left in care of Dr. Mason, has received word of the wrecked steamer. She is prostrated. Dr. Mason, highly elated, continues his unwelcome attentions to her. The derelict, now impersonating Warren, arrives in New York and is met by two former pals whom he refuses to recognize. His suspicions aroused, one of them follows Dow to the doctor's home, observes the joyous greeting between Dow and the wife, who mistakes Dow for her husband, and thus discovers the deception. Later the crooks attempt to blackmail their old friend Dow. Dow turns against them; he is attacked while in the woods and thrown over a cliff.

Dow is found at the foot of the cliff badly injured. Doctor Mason is amazed at the supposed return of Warren. Once in the house Dow recovers consciousness and, fearing death is upon him, confesses his duplicity to Mrs. Warren. Unaware of this confession Mason determines to poison Dow to make sure of his death.

At this time Warren himself returns to surprise and gladden the heart of his wife. She tells him of the stranger upstairs who has been impersonating him. Warren rushes up—and enters in time to discover his false friend, Mason, administering poison to Dow. Warren realizes that the poison is really intended for him—a furious desire for revenge takes possession of Warren. Horrified, Mason grabs up a small table to strike the husband—the derelict steps in between and receives the blow on the head. It is his death. Then follows a terrific death fight between Mason and Warren. They crash through the door, down the stairs, over the balcony and into the room below where the wife is. She telephones for the police, but before they arrive the men have succeeded in nearly wrecking the house in their fierce struggle.

Mason is captured and led away. Warren takes his wife in his arms, contented.

JOKER.

OH, WHAT'S THE USE? (September 5).—Mandy promises to marry Bob, if Shultz, her father, will consent. Shultz dislikes Bob, so the young couple are upset—that is, until the real boss of the house, Shultz's wife, has her say. The matter then becomes one of violent contention. The Shultz household is brought close to rupture.

PRINTING and DEVELOPING FILM TITLES
Give us a trial. All work guaranteed. Prompt service. Prices right. If there is any event that you want photographed, we can furnish expert camera men.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
Phone, Central 2853, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

Eye Comfort Lighting System
For Moving Picture Theatres
Write for prices and illustrations.
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.
Chicago, 229 W. Jackson Blvd.
New York, 6 E. 39th St.

BARR & BRUNSWIG That Classy Duo
Spotlight Singers of the Better Kind

Singing Popular, Semi-Classic, Yodle and Novelty Songs in Harmony.
Mr. Barr, recently with "Neil O'Brien's Minstrels." Mr. Brunswig, formerly with "The Heidelberg Quartette."
Open for engagements starting Sept. 28th.
139 W. 49th Street New York City

FILM MAKING OUTFITS
for Professional Film Work, for the Manufacturer, Traveler, Explorer, Scientist and Private. The well-known fool-proof Junior Camera, 200 feet capacity; Tripods, Tilts, Printers, Developing Outfits, Projectors, Lenses, Polishers, Measurers, Menders, Winders. Special Film Work. Quick, reliable repair.
Establ. 20 years. Largest Inst. in U. S.
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
219 Second Ave. New York

Shultz had planned to spend a few weeks hunting with a couple of boon companions, all unbeknown to wife. She discovers his scheme and promptly locks him up. This is too much for Shultz—it is the culmination of many woes. He decides to die. But the old horse pistol is cartridgeless—the poison bottle empty—and his leap of despair from the second story window is softly broken. Nothing remains but a watery grave. But even now he is rescued by his boon companions. When his desire to die is forgotten and he departs with his hunting companions—for a wayside inn. His farewell cruel world note is found by Bob and Mandy. They break the news to Shultz's wife. When Shultz returns he finds himself occupying the statue of a "dead one." The only way he can escape his position and have his reality acknowledged is to consent to the marriage of Bab and Mandy. This he is mighty glad to do.

NESTOR.

A BABY DID IT (September 4).—A bachelor and a widow with a baby are living in the same hotel. The bachelor is engaged to a girl in the same town and he is preparing to visit her, when the widow's stay at the hotel is about to terminate. The bachelor's auto is in front of the hotel and the widow's is just ahead of it. The widow sends her maid to the auto with the baby. The maid remembers she has lost one of the baby's shoes, so she carefully lays the baby in the bachelor's auto and returns to find the shoe. The bachelor is late for his appointment, rushes out and jumps into the front seat of his machine with the driver, without noticing the baby in the rear. The widow comes out and finds the auto gone. Thinking someone has stolen her baby, she calls the police.

In the meantime the bachelor reaches his fiancee's home. As she steps into the car she notices the baby, accuses him of a double life, and breaks the engagement. The bachelor returns to the hotel and sneaks to his room with the baby. The maid enters, observes the child and accuses him of stealing it. He bribes her to bring it a bottle. The widow and police return to the hotel and the maid hearing their conversation, informs them that a man has a baby upstairs. They all go up, and through the keyhole discover the bachelor in the act of feeding the baby. The widow and police rush in. He tells them of finding the baby in his auto. Then the maid explains her mistake. The picture fades with the bachelor admiring the baby and also the widow.

POWERS.

THE STORM BIRD (September 4).—Young Jack Brant, mate of the Storm Bird, defends "Spuds," the cabin boy, from the brutality of Captain Bully Ryan. The Storm Bird, in seeking anchorage, fouls the fishing nets of Ben Marston. The incident leads to a row between Old Ben and Bully Ryan. The mate, taking sides with the fisherman, who is father of Sarah, his sweetheart, gives Ryan a beating.

Love's young dream unfolds itself among the rocky shores of the sea coast when Jack and Sarah plight their love. Later the rum drinking captain forces his attention upon the girl. A struggle ensues, during which her father, attempting to protect the child, is struck down. Jack arriving, the captain seeks safety in flight. He is pursued. Nearing the Storm Bird, Ryan shoots his pursuer, and believing that he has killed him, hides the body in the hold of the ship. Spuds, the cabin boy, sneaks ashore for help. Meeting Sarah, the boy and she put off for the Storm Bird. In the interim, Jack, reviving, seeks an exit from the hold. Sarah and the boy remove the hatch and Jack emerges. Captain Ryan attempts to shoot his enmy, but is frustrated by Spuds, who trips the drunken skipper through the open hatch.

Jack, Sarah and Spuds put off for the ship and when in the open discover that the Storm Bird is afire. Jack heroically rescues Ryan from the burning ship, and landing him on the yawl the repentant man kneels for forgiveness to the man and woman.

COMING—"A Great Mistake" Featuring Madam K. Lipzin
Renowned Players Feature Company, 220 WEST 42nd STREET NEW YORK

THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET.
L.C.SMITH CO. SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
PAT. PENDING PAT. PENDING

NO SATURATOR • NO ETHER • NO OXONE
NO EXPENSIVE CHEMICALS
EXHIBITORS BEST FRIEND
NEVER FAILS
OZO-CARBI BRIGHTEST MOVING PICTURE LIGHT
⅓ Brighter than Calcium at Half the Cost Patented GREATEST LIGHT OF THE AGE. A SCIENTIFIC FACT.
OLD LIGHTS IN EXCHANGE.
MOORE-HUBBELL & CO., 714 MASONIC TEMPLE, CHICAGO.

SELECT

"At The Old Cross Roads"

A RIOT

A RIOT

Featuring MISS ESTHA WILLIAMS in her Original Role of Parepa, and an All Star Cast

ARTHUR C. AISTON'S GREATEST ATTRACTION

FOR STATE RIGHTS OF THIS REMARKABLE FIVE-REEL PHOTOPLAY

and full information and reasons why you should own the franchise for this picture in your territory, write us at once. Hundreds of inquiries already received from every section of the country.

Select Photoplay Producing Co.

71 West Twenty-third St., New York City

Phone Gramercy 2110

UNIVERSAL IKE.

UNIVERSAL IKE, JR., ALMOST GETS MARRIED (September 1).—Ike is caught in the act of making love to Susie, the ranchman's daughter. He is kicked from the house with instructions to remain in the cowboy's quarters. Later Ike receives a letter from his mother informing him that his father has died and left her fifty thousand dollars in debt. After reading the letter Ike tears it in half and drops half of it accidentally on the ground.

Part of the letter is found by Susie's father. Thinking that Ike is rich the old man decides to have Susie and Ike get married. They arrange to live in the house, and Ike is more than surprised when the old man tells him that he is going to take him to town and buy him a new suit. While the pair are gone, an old lady, looking for another ranch, arrives and is mistaken for Ike's mother.

When Ike returns from town and goes to his room he finds some woman's clothes. Susie, by mistake, has placed the clothes of Ike's supposed mother there. As a joke Ike puts on the night cap and gown and plunges into bed just as Susie comes in. Susie imagines the old lady is sick and proceeds to administer castor oil. Many amusing incidents follow, ending up when Ike is discovered and captured after a chase and made to confess that he is fifty thousand dollars in debt instead of being rich. The old man pulls the night cap over Ike's head and holds him under the pump while the old lady pumps a stream of water on his head.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY NO. 128—(August 19).

BATTLESHIP CAUGHT AT SEA.—British warship "Essex" reported off coast in wait for German ships, is caught and photographed by cameraman of Animated Weekly after hours of search off Sandy Hook.

MODERN METHOD OF HANDLING OF FREIGHT.—United States and Canadian railroad officials inspect new transfer of Lehigh Valley Railroad where electric trucks do week's work in one day.—Manchester, New York.

CAISSON FOR PANAMA CANAL.—Largest caisson constructed, 2,500 tons, to be used in closing mouth of Gatun locks, makes launching dangerous as enormous weight is distributed in the short length of 113 feet.—San Francisco, Cal.

IN AND AROUND NEW YORK HARBOR.—Great merchant fleet of German steamships having upward of 7,000 employees, causes loss of $200,000 per day through being held up on account of European War.—Hoboken, N. J. Sub Title: Battleship "Florida," inspects cargoes of all vessels leaving New York.

LOGAN'S DAY CELEBRATION.—Governor Dunn and prominent citizens assist in placing marking stone on site of birthplace of the famous Civil War Hero, General John A. Logan.—Murphysboro, Ill.

LONDON.—Great crowds gather around war bulletins anxiously awaiting latest news from the front.

TO DEFEND THE COLORS.—President Poincare and his war minister review French troops at Longchamps, France.

KAISER'S TRAINING SHIP.—New recruits of the Imperial navy are instructed in naval tactics on board "Warspite."—Swinemunde, Germany.

FROM COAST TO COAST ON HORSEBACK.—Two cowboys from Universal studios are given rousing send-off upon their departure on cross-country trip to New York.—Los Angeles, Cal.

PROTECTING THE PUBLIC.—Largest consignment of fraudulent weights and measures confiscated from dishonest merchants and cast into sea.—New York City.

GLIMPSES OF THE KAISER.—The Czar of Russia upon a recent visit to Germany is greeted by Kaiser Wilhelm on board his flagship "Friedrich der Grosse."—Kiel, Germany.

AUSTRALIA WINS INTERNATIONAL TENNIS MATCH.—Surrounded by vast throng of enthusiastic players America falls before the terrific play of Norman E. Brookes and Anthony Wilding, champion players of the world.—Forest Hills, L. I., N. Y. Sub-Title: From left to right, Brookes of Australia, McLoughlin of United States.

Cartoons by the World Famous Caricaturist, Hy. Mayer of Puck.

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

AMERICAN.

THE AFTERMATH (Two Parts—August 31).—Newspapers attribute several recent cases of housebreaking to the work of hungry and desperate unemployed. Mrs. Morrison, invalid mother of labor delegate, Morrison, demands protection for her home and her son consents to furnish her with a revolver. His sympathies aroused, manufacturer Gage sends his son, Franklin, to negotiate for arbitration. Delegate Morrison and Franklin closet themselves for secret conference at the former's home, where the discussion lasts until the small hours. Mrs. Morrison investigates the noise, sees the stranger leaving at the front door, and in a moment of thoughtlessness, fires.

Morning dawns with the mother prostrated and the boy a fugitive from justice, his sister alone cognizant of his innocence and self-sacrifice. She is listening to her father, who is a detective, setting stoically out in pursuit of his own, his innocent son.

Powerless to reveal the real status of affairs, the girl but can curb her emotion, and watch and wait. The son hearing of his mother's illness, jeopardizes his safety to see her, and the father, entering shortly afterward, finds him there. The father knows full well what penalty would be exacted for his son's offense, but finds himself placed in such a position that to let him go would mean the sacrifice of his own principles, honor, perhaps even liberty; the son refuses to clear himself at his mother's expense; the sister finds that to clear one would mean to expose the other; and as for the poor mother, shall she rescue her innocent son from the death penalty at the expense of her own life?

When mortals stand aghast and paralyzed, it is a Higher Power that adjusts human affairs, and solves the riddle, although the toll of life for life cannot be gainsaid.

(Vague endings such as this should be elucidated for this department by the manufacturer for the guidance of the exhibitor.—Ed.)

THE WRONG BIRDS (September 2).—Dorothy Dean, daughter of Senator Dean, becomes the bride of Dick Wayne. They escape their friends through a basement exit and start on their honeymoon trip in an automobile, believing their troubles over. Meanwhile at a county fair in a neighboring town, Jim Thomas and his companion, Nell Jackson, are conducting a pick-pocket game. Scarcely do they escape with their loot in an automobile when the victims of the trickery discover their loss, lay the case before a deputy officer, who notifies the surrounding towns by telephone to arrest the couple. Squire Hopper, representative of the law in Jonesville, misses the chance of his life to get into the public light in his efforts to play the part. The culprits pass his very door while he searches for his badge of authority. He returns to the business center where the bridal couple, innocently passing through the town in their automobile, fall the victims of his wrath and are held awaiting the arrival of the sheriff. Their pleadings of innocence fall on deaf ears until the arrival of the sheriff and complainants, who positively deny the guilt of the pair in custody, and who are then allowed to go on their way.

BEAUTY.

SUSIE'S NEW SHOES (August 25).—Mrs. Van Dusen has a will of her own and rules poor Van Dusen with a hand of iron. One day she demands some money, and when Van Dusen gives her a bill she insists upon having more. He mildly protests at her extravagance, but before he is through, Susanna indignantly seizes the purse from his hand. This gets his "dander" up, and while Susanna is dressing, Van Dusen steathily removes the purse from her handbag. Thinking she still has it, Susanna hastens away to purchase some shoes. While she is trying them on, Mrs. Riley, poor but honest, leaves the store, taking Susanna's handbag by mistake. She soon discovers her error, however, and rushing back returns Susanna's bag and recovers her own. When she is gone, Susanna looks in the bag and discovers that her purse is gone. Thinking Mrs. Riley had stolen it, Susanna does a marathon up the street and overtaking Mrs. Riley has her arrested. In the meantime, the clerk at the store gives pursuit, as Mrs. Van Dusen has left wearing the new but unpaid for shoes. Both women are taken off to jail and Mrs. Van Dusen is permitted to call her husband by telephone and explain her troubles. Van Dusen is now in a predicament. He must either explain matters to Susanna and suffer the consequences or poor, innocent Mrs. Riley will go to jail. While Susanna is arguing her case, Van Dusen replaces the purse in his wife's bag. When in her argument to the court she opens her bag, she is nonplused at finding her purse inside. Believing she has made a terrible mistake and that the purse has been in her bag all along, she makes such amends as she can and is given a scathing rebuke by the judge for her carelessness. Thereupon she pays for the shoes and generously presents Mrs. Riley with the entire contents of the purse to appease her. A blind beggar follows the pair home and suceeds in mulcting Van Dusen under pain of exposure. Mr. Van Dusen concludes that fooling his wife is expensive business.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 86.

MUTUAL WEEKLY NO. 86. THE EUROPEAN WAR ILLUSTRATED.—The French fleet seeks the German enemy in the North Sea; aeroplane scouts reconnoiter and give warning of the enemy's approach. With decks cleared and a full head of steam, they go into battle formation; first decisive battle between superdreadnoughts is fought in the North Sea.

"EUROPEAN WAR PICTURES"

BIG BUSINESS BOOSTER—Released every Wednesday, 14 colored slides and large poster, only $2.75—made from actual photographs—NOT NEWSPAPER CUTS. Our Mr. Hubbell is in Europe and arrangements have been made whereby we receive weekly the latest and best war photographs. Slides are French color-tone process—title of each picture shows on the screen—also separate descriptive lecture. Large 3-color poster, 5c. each. OUR MOTTO: HIGH QUALITY—LOW PRICES—LARGE SALES.

MOORE, HUBBELL & CO., 714 Masonic Temple, Chicago

The B. & H. Film Reel

A FILM SAVER
ALL STEEL.
INDESTRUCTIBLE.
11" dia. 5" core. Cap. 1000'

At your Exchange, or Write

THE BELL & HOWELL COMPANY,
1803 Larchmont Avenue Chicago, Ill.

EUROPEAN WAR POSTERS

ONE, THREE, SIX SHEETS

TEN FOOT BANNER

Hennegan & Company, Cincinnati, Ohio

DON'T BE FOOLISH

And pay big prices for slides. This advertisement and 15c. will bring you sample of Announcement Player and Feature Announcement Slides. We furnish dandy slides at $2.00 per dozen.

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY, LOCKPORT, N. Y.

Your negative developed, printed and titled complete
5c. per foot
Delivered within 12 hours
Titles 6c. per foot
GUNBY BROS., Inc., 145 West 45th St., N. Y. City.

THE ATSCO ANSWER

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS are the standard that the others try to copy. The fibre golds, the golden mirrors, the gold cloths, the mirror fibres, and the rest of them are the nearest approach to the name of the original success, RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN, that the imitators in the industry dare to make. Protected by the trade mark copyright laws of the United States, Atsco will protect the exhibitor from inferior products. Let the buyers beware. You cannot get the genuine, the screen that's used in all parts of the world, except from Atsco, Inc., 218 West 42d Street, New York.

Make the salesman show his credentials. You want the only original and genuine screen de luxe.

THE RADIUM GOLD FIBRE

Scientifically prepared upon cloth woven in one piece for this purpose expressly—the screen used in the greatest of all theatres:

The Strand, New York
The Casino, New York
The Lyric, New York
The New Gallery, Kinema, London
Elphinstone Palace, Calcutta
Grand Opera House, Paris
Tivoli Theatres, Australia
B. F. Keith's Theatres in the United States and Canada
Proctor's Theatres
The Mark Brock Houses, United States and Canada
Josiah Pearce's Theatres in the Southern States
Barton & Oleson's Theatres in Indiana
Switow's Theatres in the Middle West
Casino Film Exchange Theatres in Detroit
William Fox Theatres
Poli's Theatres
George L. Baker's Theatres, Portland, Oregon
G. P. Finnegan's Hippodromes in the Southwest
Hulsey's Queen Theatres in Oklahoma and Texas
Bernstein's Theatres in Illinois
W. J. West's Kewannee Theatres in the Middle West
Nathan Offer's Theatres in Wyoming
E. G. Sourbier's Theatres in Indiana
Judge Kinney's Princess Amusement Company in Kentucky
G. M. Lutrell's Houses in Illinois
The Gus Sun-O. G. Murray Circuit in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana
Flynn's Theatres in Missouri
Wigwam Theatres in Oklahoma
Chase's Theatres in Washington, D. C.
Senator Swanson's Theatres in Washington
Crandall's Theatres in Washington
Slepack Amusement Company's Theatres in New England
Baxter's Isis Theatres in Colorado
Frank Wilcox Theatres in New England
Webster Circuit Theatres in North and South Dakota
B. M. Taylor's Theatres in Massachusetts
De Walthoff's Theatres in Connecticut
Herman Wobber's Theatres in California
George H. Wiley's Theatres in Kansas City
McDonald's Circuit of Theatres in Utah
J. M. Ensor's Theatres in Arkansas, and 5,896 others.

Write today; tell us the dimensions of your theatre, the length of your throw, and the current you use. Don't try to fool your audiences. Get the genuine.

ATSCO, INC., 218 West 42d Street, New York

WITH THE ENGLISH FLEET.—Speedy torpedo boats protect the slow-going battleships.

ARTILLERY ALONG THE FRENCH BORDER.

KING VICTOR EMANUEL OF ITALY, WHO HAS DECLARED NEUTRALITY, INSPECTS HIS FLEET AT GENOA.

THE HORRORS OF WAR.—Bringing in the wounded for treatment in field hospitals. Bullets extracted without pain.

THE SPOILS OF WAR.—Captured guns and ammunition.

THE FRENCH ARMY LEAVING FOR THE FRONT.

KING CHRISTIAN OF DENMARK AND KING GUSTAV OF SWEDEN MEET AT MALMO TO DISCUSS NEUTRALITY AGREEMENTS.

CHAMPION SWIMMERS COMPETE AT STRASSBURG, ALSACE-LORRAINE, NOW THE SCENE OF HARD FIGHTING.

SIR EDWARD CARSON AND HIS PARTISANS CELEBRATE THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF BOYNE, AT BELFAST.

A VARNISH FACTORY AT COSWIG, GERMANY, MAKES SPECTACULAR CONFLAGRATION.

ALL PERSONS GOING INTO MEXICO ARE CAREFULLY SEARCHED FOR SMUGGLED AMMUNITION BY U. S. SOLDIERS.

BRITISH CRUISER, STRIPPED FOR ACTION, AWAITS GERMAN PRIZES JUST OUTSIDE N. Y. HARBOR.

PRINCESS.

THE BELLE OF THE SCHOOL (August 21).—Mrs. Elting's school for young ladies is known throughout the country for its scholarship and high character. The principal's son, Ralph Elting, a young civil engineer, pays his mother a visit and a strong attachment soon develops between him and Ruth Graham, the daughter of wealthy parents, and known as "The Belle of the School."

Anna Price, a brilliant scholar, but poor, and who is furnished free tuition and board by the kind-hearted Mrs. Elting, envies the pretty clothes worn by Ruth and the other girls, and the coming of Ralph intensifies the feeling. Money disappears from the girls' rooms, and suspicion is directed towards Anna. Finally Ruth discovers that Anna is really the culprit, but the girl's graphic discription of poverty's hardships wins Ruth's sympathy and taking the money she goes to the principal's room and restores it. As she is placing the money in Mrs. Elting's desk, the principal enters, and Ruth is accused of the thefts. To give the other girl her chance, Ruth remains silent, and is expelled from school.

The only people who believe in Ruth's innocence are Anna and Ralph Elting—Anna, because she is the real culprit, and Ralph because, as he tells Ruth, "You couldn't do it, because you are YOU." Finally, unable to hear the girl's sneers at their former favorite, Anna confesses and wins forgiveness from Mrs. Elting. But, strange to say, when Ruth is told that her innocence has been established it makes very little difference, for she has learned that the ONE man believes in her, so nothing else matters.

DOMINO.

THE DEFAULTER (Two Parts—August 20).—Jim Latimer, a typical rounder, juggles his books and absconds with his employer's money. A tramp who has stolen Latimer's coat is found dead, and the papers in the coat lead the detectives to believe that it is Latimer who has been killed. Mary, Latimer's wife, marries later, but keeps her former unfortunate marriage a secret from her husband. Late one night she is aroused from sleep by her child crying; going to the nursery to quiet her, she hears a noise downstairs. She gets a revolver and goes down to find out the trouble and sees her former husband, Jim, in the act of stealing the silver from her dining room. She kills him in self defense and her secret is never known to her husband.

THE VILLAGE 'NEATH THE SEA (Two Parts—August 27).—Red Elk of a California coast village, marries Little Fawn of the Sioux. Big Bear, fired with jealousy, tells Red Elk that even though he is married to Little Fawn, he will not keep her long. Red Elk brings Little Fawn to his village on the California coast. One night when they are sleeping Big Bear slips in and carries Little Fawn away. Red Elk follows them and after an all-night chase comes up with Big Bear just as he reaches the sea. Red Elk, realizing that Little Fawn is dead, loses his mind. According to an old Indian legend there is a village "'neath the sea." An old crone tells Red Elk this and also that Little Fawn awaits him there. Red Elk, impressed by the legend, slips out of his tepee at night, and, believing he sees Little Fawn awaiting him, throws himself into the sea.

KAY BEE.

FIRST LOVE'S BEST—(Two Parts—August 28).—John North, a prominent young attorney, forgets his rural sweetheart and succumbs to the charms of Vera Morris of the Gayety chorus. After his marriage, John returns home from a business trip earlier than he is expected and leaves for the theater to surprise his wife, but instead is surprised himself to find that she has gone out with a party to a road house. He follows the machine of joy riders and is badly hurt in an accident. He is carried to his father's home in the country, where his former sweetheart is a neighbor. Being suspicious of his wife, he employs a detective to watch her actions while he is convalescing. Johnson, the detective, finds that she is leading a gay life and reports it to her husband. North and the detective decide upon a plan to get evidence of Vera's actions. They attend a mask ball where Vera is with one of her admirers and find her in the conservatory on his lap. John is granted a divorce and is reconciled to his former sweetheart.

BRONCHO.

WHEN AMERICA WAS YOUNG (Two Parts—Sept. 2).—Don Martin, an early American pioneer trapper, living with his wife and daughter, Nan, attempts to keep Nan occupied with her books instead of too close attention and companionship with little Jim Dorne, a neighbor boy. Martin is away attending to his traps when Mrs. Martin is called to a sick neighbor. She cautions Nan to lock the dooor after her and keep perfectly quiet should anyone come to the door.

Jim Dorne, who is fishing on the bank of a stream, sees Indians attack John Martin and fearing for Nan, rushes back to the cabin. They hide in a well and when the Indians attack the house they find nothing but the rag doll that Mrs. Martin has given Nan for her birthday. Martin sees the neighbor bringing back Mrs. Martin and realizing that the Indians may attack them at any moment, resorts to stratagem, giving the Indians the impression that several men are attacking them, and they retreat across the country. Martin finds the body of an Indian who has picked up the rag doll and he fears the worst. They rush back to the cabin to find Nan and Jim safe.

RELIANCE.

THE MINER'S BABY (Sept. 2).—Jim Mann, a miner, is indifferent to the new baby and looks upon it merely as an added burden. Lucy, his wife, is taking care of the child, is unable to help much with the work and oftentimes Jim's dinner is late on account of her tending to the baby. He grows to dislike the child and refuses to hold it or caress it.

Dawson, another miner, and his wife and small baby occupy the cabin on the adjoining claim. Dawson is very fond of his baby and when he becomes acquainted with Jim he learns of his aversion for babies and tries secretly to assist Lucy in making Jim care. The Dawsons' call at their neighbors' cabin and Jim becomes jealous at seeing Dawson holding and admiring the baby. Finally Jim gets to feeling a secret regard for the child but is ashamed to let Lucy know. Dawson's baby falls sick and dies and his wife, grieving for the child becomes very ill. A couple of tramps stop at Jim's cabin demanding food, but on account of the supplies being low their request is refused and they are offered a meal instead. They refuse this and threaten trouble but are driven off by Jim. Lucy, starting for the stage line to send an order for provisions to the settlement, leaves the baby under a tree near where Jim is at work for him to care for while she is gone. In passing the Dawson cabin she learns from the doctor that the crisis of Mrs. Dawson's illness is at hand. She enters the cabin and finds the woman delirious, calling for her baby. Running back to the tree Lucy takes the baby without telling Jim and hurries back to the cabin, where she places it in the bed beside the sick woman, who thinking the child is her own becomes better. The tramps loot the house of supplies and in passing the trees find the baby's blanket and take it. Jim coming to see about the baby, finds it gone and sees the tramps running away. He gives chase and they hide the supplies in a shed and give battle to him. Jim wounded, and believing the baby in the shed, makes his way back to the house to secure his gun and rescue the child, for whom his love has now awakened. Lucy returns to the claim with the baby but unable to find Jim goes on to the house. As Jim is preparing to leave she enters. For the first time Jim takes the baby in his arms.

TURNED BACK (September 4).—George Cantor and Tom Johnson, two young men, love the same girl; one wins the girl from the other and the loser goes away swearing revenge against his successful rival. Some years later, both are married; George is a successful physician. Tom is an out of work roustabout, with a wife and baby, the latter ill, and little food in the house.

The roustabout, out of work and half crazed by the lack of money with which to pay for attendance and proper food for his child, accidentally runs into the physician whom he sees prosperous while he is up against it. He seeks his residence to rob it.

While he is absent, his baby grows worse and the wife calls for the same physician, but before he can come, Tom has the physician tied and gagged, etc., and gets away—refusing to allow him to attend to cases. When he gets home and finds out who the baby was, he phones him and the doctor does a run to the rescue and the baby is saved in time. He allows Tom to keep the money he stole from him and promises him work, etc.

IN THE NICK OF TIME (Two Parts—September 5).—After John Nicholson, engineer of the fast express, is killed in a wreck after he remained at his post, saving a score of lives by his bravery, he leaves a widow, who is pensioned, and one son, Jack. The son becomes telegraph operator and agent at Tropico. S. F. Hooker, superintendent of the road, who has a charming daughter, was an old friend of Nicholson's and is interested in the latter's son, John.

Time elapses and because of his services in saving a large sum of money from theft, he later becomes train despatcher. Here he makes a record and becomes friendly with the superintendent's daughter. Young Nicholson, because of the mental strain from his duties, takes to drink. He becomes lax in his duties, makes several mistakes, and although the superintendent shuts his eyes to young Nicholson's shortcomings as long as possible, the latter is finally discharged.

Young Nicholson becomes sick, and upon his recovery goes West to visit an old friend of his father's, who owns a ranch. He recovers rapidly. The rancher, who knows of young Nicholson's fondness for drink, sends him out quite a distance from the ranch, away from all temptation. The railroad passes this point and it is here that young Nicholson finds an old discarded railway station. A telegraph instrument is located inside. The fondness for his former life comes upon him and he listens to the telegraph messages flashed back and forth. Above the station is a switch. Young Nicholson hears a message that a heavily loaded passenger train and a string of box cars, which has broken loose, will reach the switch at the same time. The message reads that a big wreck is bound to occur.

Young Nicholson rushes to the switch, side tracks the runaway cars and the passenger train passes in safety. Young Nicholson then wires the despatcher, who is expecting to hear of the wreck, that the runaway cars were checked at the switch. At the dispatcher's side is young Hooker, who has risen to be general superintend-Hooker, who ras risen to be general superintendent of a big system of railroads. Hooker calls on young Nicholson, sees that the latter has been cured of his drink habit, and the two start back to young Nicholson's home where Hooker has left his daughter with young Nicholson's mother.

KOMIC.

THE MASCOT (September 6).—The suitor for Fay's hand runs up against her father, who refuses his attentions to his daughter because he is lacking in this world's goods, and the suitor goes away discouraged.

Soon after, a traveler comes to town with a Hindu image he has stolen in India, a Mascot of the Gods, and trailed by two Hindu priests who have sworn to kill the person they find with it in their possession. Closely pursued by the Hindus, the traveler in passing Fay's home, hastily throws it in the open window, hitting the father, who thinks his daughter gave it to him in that unceremonious manner. Being a nut collector of antiques and things, the old man is delighted with it. Later, however, he reads in a paper that the Hindus have threatened death to the possessor of the Mascot of their Gods and the father is scared stiff. The police have been offered a large reward for the return by the Hindus, who have left town, but when the collector offers the Mascot they refuse to have anything to do with it, scared of their lives. The collector then has all sorts of hard luck trying to get rid of the Mascot, but with no luck at all. The suitor finally reads of the death threat and with a pal, and in the confidence of Fay, he dresses up as a Hindu and with his pal call on the father and offer to return the Mascot for a consideration, a sum of money and Fay's hand, and father is obliged to consent. The real Hindus return and the suitor runs into them and is forced to disgorge the Mascot and the money, but as he has the girl he is content.

MAJESTIC.

THE MILKFED BOY (September 1).—The Widow Brown has raised her young son to be a coward, by making him afraid of every stranger. She is being courted by Mr. Jones but refuses him because he tells her she is spoiling her boy and because he takes her boy to a picture show where he gets boy knowledge. A tramp comes to the house and seeing how fright-

Crystal Comedies

FEATURING

VIVIAN PRESCOTT

Released On That Universal Program

The technical excellence of our printing and developing is a recognized fact. We have doubled the capacity of our plant and are now in a position to handle your work. Prompt deliveries.

Get in touch with us and be assured of perfect results from your negatives.

THE CRYSTAL FILM COMPANY

JOSEPH A. GOLDEN, President and Treasurer

430 CLAREMONT PARKWAY, : : : : NEW YORK CITY

THE ALBUQUERQUE FILM CO., Inc.

FEATURING

MISS DOT FARLEY

Direction of G. P. HAMILTON
RELEASING THROUGH

Warner's Features, Inc.

Two most sensational master productions

"THE LUST OF THE RED MAN"

the best Western story ever produced

"THE PRICE OF CRIME"

a beautiful story of pathos combining sensationalism and bigness that will make splendid photoplay history.

COMING PRODUCTIONS:
"RESERVED SHOT" and "WHEN WOMEN LOVE"
MAMMOTH PRODUCTIONS

Western Studio, 406 Court St., Los Angeles, Cal.

ened she and the boy are at his appearance, takes advantage of their fright and starts robbing them. The Brown boy remembers the picture show and takes courage and holds up the tramp with a monkey wrench, locks him in a closet and runs for Mr. Jones. The tramp breaks out, discovers Mrs. Brown, where she has hidden herself and forces her to reveal where she keeps her jewels, when the boy returns with Jones and captures the tramp, after which Mrs. Brown concludes Jones was right and accepts his offer of marriage.

FOR THOSE UNBORN (Two Parts—September 6).—Mae, an Eastern girl, engaged to Ned, is told she has consumption and not long to live. She breaks her engagement with him, telling him the reason and against his protestations that he will marry her anyway goes West to live on advice of her doctor.

There she meets Jim, who falls in love with her and asks her to marry him. She refuses, telling him about her precarious health and also that she has broken one engagement on account of it.

Jim is miserable about it and goes away. Later Mae suddenly discovers that she has not consumption at all and goes back to Ned, only to find that he has been married for some time. She returns to the mountains and finds happiness with Jim.

FEATURE FILM STORIES

WARNER'S FEATURES.

THE KIDNAPPED HEIRESS (Three Parts—August 10).—The wealthy Monsiur Dabreuil had just breathed his last. He was the richest man in all of France; and now Jeanette, his granddaughter, and only heir, was the sole possessor of his vast fortune. Jeanette had just passed her seventh birthday. Her mother and father had died when she was a baby. Under the care of an old governess, Jane Delcot, the child had grown and thrived. And now Mlle. Delcot was the only person in the whole world who loved Jeannette, not for her money, but for herself alone.

The life of the heiress was one of great joy and her aged governess would have been perfectly happy too if her ne'er do well brother had not appeared upon the scene. Henri Delcot had begun his life of crime at an early age, and had just completed serving a long term in prison for wrong doing. Learning of the changed condition of his sister he went to her to demand money. She refused and orders him to leave the mansion. Stung to the quick he determined to force her by desperate measures to accede to his demands.

That night under cover of the darkness aided by a band of the most notorious criminals in Paris he returned to the mansion, and stole the child, intending to hold her for ransom. The old governess was prostrated by worry lest serious harm befall the child. She was positive that her brother was implicated in the outrage, but the memory of their childhood days reminded her that even though he was a hardened culprit, he was still her brother. She shrank from denouncing him, and sending him to end his days behind prison walls.

Torn by her conflicting loves she remained silent. This strange silence caused Jeannette's legal guardian to suspect Mlle. Delcot. He immediately hired the great detective, Dashwood, to unravel the mysterious disappearance of the kidnapped heiress.

The great detective arrived at the mansion. With few words he examined the servants, including the governess. Then he turned his whole energy to discovering the whereabouts of Jeanette. In the meantime Jeanette had had exciting experiences with her abductors.

With Dashwood and his men close at their heels they fled to the Montmartre quarries to seek refuge in the net work of dark underground passages. Dashwood with his fleet of autos filled with picked men of the Paris Detective Bureau, arrived at the quarries. At the bottom of the excavation a thousand feet deep were seen the kidnappers, and nearby the missing heiress. Dashwood with his usual almost foolhardy courage decided to let himself down the steep sides of the quarry, and single handed rescue the child. Landing at the bottom he crawled under cover of the rough hewn blocks of granite to within speaking distance of the child. Leading Jeanette the detective retraced his steps to the rope. Tying it about her he signalled for his men to pull up.

The kidnappers opened fire, but the detective's forces soon silenced them.

Dashwood climbed the steep quarry sides clutching the bushes and projections and had reached a large apron of rock half way up when the outlaws by a secret path reached another apron just above him. Here they planted a charge of dynamite, ignited it, and fled, leaving the detective to be crushed to death under the falling boulders. But Dashwood, by a daring leap jumped to an overhanging crag.

A deafening explosion split the air, and tons of granite were hurled down to the very bottom of the quarry. When the dust and smoke cleared away the detective saw the heiress dangling helpless in mid air and one of the outlaws cutting the rope to send the innocent child to her death.

Seizing his automatic revolver, Dashwood sent the full number of bullets in the magazine with unerring aim into the outlaw. The knife fell from the wretch's hand and he plunged to the depths below.

The detective with torn and bleeding hands, struggled up the side of the chasm, arriving there just as the haggled rope was about to part. Leaning far out over the precipice he grasped the little hand and rescued the girl from her perilous position.

At another signal his men fully armed clambered down into the huge quarry pit. A battle ensued. The kidnappers, after a fierce resistance, were overpowered and captured.

Jeanette, none the worse for her adventures, was restored to the arms of her weeping governess.

APEX.

THE SUICIDE CLUB (Four Parts—August).—Prince Florizel, disillusioned with life, is ready for any mad freak in order to vary the monotony of existence. He makes the acquaintance of a young man, who introduces him and his friend, Colonel Geraldine, to the "Suicide Club," an organization which meets in a secret underground apartment. Here the members are discovered seated around a table while the president deals the cards to determine who is to die. The one who has the ace of spades is to be killed by the hand of the one who has the ace of clubs. The prince and his companion think at first that it is a joke, but when they read of the first tragedy in the papers they know the business is serious.

At the next meeting of the club the prince himself is doomed, but is rescued at the last moment by his friend Geraldine. He sends a message to the president to say he will not betray his secret but insists that he shall accompany the colonel's son to Paris and that one of them must die. In Paris the president has an accomplice, a beautiful woman, who lures the young Geraldine to his doom. He is shot in the bedroom of an American visitor, who, with the aid of Dr. Noel, a friend of Florizel's, brings the body back to the prince in a trunk.

Horrified at the outcome of his scheme, the prince decides now to give the president no quarter. Once more he is at the club—this time to see who is to have the honor of killing its nefarious head. The prince himself draws the ace of clubs, and the last scene of all shows a duel. At a critical moment the president's accomplice turns out the lights, but it is her man who receives the fatal lunge in the end, and the prince bows himself out of the apartment.

ECLECTIC.

THE LAST VOLUNTEER (Five Parts—September).—Prince Ludwig of Saxe-Tholberg, a young man who is tired of the pomp and show of the court, decides to get away from it all for a while. He leaves the palace dressed as a hunter and goes to a far corner of the Principality. There he meets Katrina, the daughter of an innkeeper. Katrina is so winning and wholesome, just the kind of girl that the Prince has not been used to, that he asks if he can secure a room at the inn. He is accommodated and finds that the more he sees of Katrina the more he hates to leave and go back to the old life. Finally the court becomes impatient at the absence of the Prince and sends couriers to find him and persuade him to return. Katrina's brother has taken the Prince to task on account of his interest in Katrina and hot words pass. Raolf attacks the Prince, not knowing who he is. While the struggle is taking place Von Tromp enters and Raolf is astounded to learn that they have had the Prince as their guest. The diplomatic relations between Saxe-Tholberg and Austrania have been strained owing to some trouble over the boundary, and war is imminent. The Ambassador of Austrania, anxious to secure the plans of Saxe-Tholberg, corrupts one of the officers of the Saxe-Tholberg army and meets him at the inn kept by Katrina's father. Their conversation there is overheard by Katrina and her brother, who enter the room and accuse the officer of being false to his country. The Austranian Ambassador attacks Raolf. Katrina secures a weapon and accidently shoots the Ambassador. Two officers who have accompanied the Ambassador enter. They seize Raolf and accuse him of the crime. Raolf is arrested and condemned to death in spite of the protests of Katrina, who tells the court that she did the shooting, and of the plot which they discovered. The Saxe-Tholberg officer, however, had escaped and taken the papers with him, so there was no proof of Katrina's story and the sentence of death is ordered to be carried out. Katrina makes a last appeal to the Prince, who pardons Raolf. The Austranian Nation demand satisfaction, but not being able to get it, declare war. In the ensuing war the forces of Saxe-Tholberg are not very successful In a crucial battle the leader of the Saxe-Tholberg forces is wounded and the flag is shot from the flag pole.

Becoming demoralized, the Sax-Tholberg army is about to retreat when the Prince calls for a volunteer to raise the flag. The pole is on a small hill which is swept by the fire of the enemy, and it means almost sure death for the one who makes the attempt. Raolf starts out, but is killed before he attains his object. Several others make the attempt, but are not successful. Finally Katrina offers herself, and, in spite of the protests of the officers and of the Prince, rushes from the house toward the standard. The very boldness of the attempt being made by a woman ensure its success, and the wavering forces of Saxe-Tholberg rally and drive the enemy back. Katrina's reward is that which falls to the lot of many patriots who offer their life for their country's good.

BROADWAY STAR FEATURES.

UNCLE BILL (Three Parts).—On his way to New York to visit his relatives, the Masons, for the first time, Uncle Bill meets "Oiley" Curley, a crook. John Mason, Uncle Bill's nephew, is candidate for Governor and, on the eve of Uncle Bill's arrival, Mason and his political constituents are in secret conference with Murray of the money powers. Meantime, Julia, Mason's wife, goes on a little joy ride with Jack Trent, husband of Vivien, her friend, who is on a joy ride with Mason's father, a delightful old rogue. Glady's, Julia's hoydenish sister, with whose photo Uncle Bill has previously fallen in love, is left home alone. While she is reading, "Oiley" enters by the alcove window and hides. Uncle Bill, on his arrival in town, stops at the "cafe," recognizes Julia as she passes him to enter the cafe with Jack and follows them in, taking a seat nearby. Vivien and Mason, Senior, enter and take a table back of Uncle Bill's, separated from him by palms and a screen. Julia and Jack, annoyed by the stranger's (Uncle Bill's) impertinent interest, endeavor to ignore him, then getting angry Jack knocks Uncle Bill down, sending the screen flying, but fortunately Vivien and Mason are hidden by the palms and escape. Julia and Jack, realizing they are in for trouble, make a get-a-way and Julia is seen and recognized by Mrs. Mason. Father returns home and fears the results. Uncle Bill arrives and introduces himself as Cousin Rudolph. Shortly afterwards, it is discovered the house has been robbed. All dash upstairs, and find "Oiley," in the disguise of Uncle Bill. Vivien, fearing her husband has been killed, rushes in on the Masons. After some exciting adventures and much jealousy Julia makes a discovery concerning father and, by a clever ruse, gets all out of trouble. "Oiley" tries to escape and is caught by the real Uncle Bill to the consternation of the Masons. When Uncle Bill reveals himself, the whole affair winds up with the happy consummation of the love affair between Bill and Gladys.

MY OFFICIAL WIFE (Six Parts).—The story is woven around a beautiful Nihilist, Helene Marie, who, in order to get by the Secret Police on the frontier of Russia, induces Lennox, an American, to introduce her as his wife, in order that she may enter on his passport. Arriving in St. Petersburg, Lennox is met by friends and is compelled to introduce Helene as his wife, also to register her as such at the hotel, where he is stopping. Helene then discloses her identity. Lennox is shocked at first, but already deeply in love with the beautiful schemer, decides to let things take their course. Helene meets her Nihilist friends and they conspire to assassinate the Czar, she being chosen as the one to commit the deed. As the official wife of Lennox, she meets a number of the Russian nobility, and learns that the Czar is to attend a fashionable ball on a certain date. She plans to be present. Lennox has arranged to leave for Paris the afternoon of the same day. Now that the consummation of her plans is so near at hand, Helene has no more use for Lennox and entices an officer of the Royal Guards to become her lover. Lennox becomes jealous of the Russian, misses his train and returns to find Helene in the arms of his rival. Helene and Lennox attend the grand ball, he learns her purpose is to assassinate the Czar and drugs her. She is taken to the hotel, restored to wakefulness and retaliates by playing the same trick on him, telephones her lover and the two make their escape to a yacht, but the secret police, having discovered Helene's real identity, send a torpedo boat after the eloping pair with orders to destroy the yacht. A torpedo blows the vessel to atoms and ends forever the career of Helene Marie, the beautiful Nihilist, and her lover.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum postage stamps accepted :: :: :: ::

SITUATIONS WANTED.

OPERATOR AND MANAGER.—Six years' experience. Wife excellent piano player. Wants position; will work reasonable. Address A. J. Berube, East Tawas, Mich.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR of five years' experience wants position as operator with traveling show. Member I. A. T. S. E. Address R. G. P., care Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

A-1 CAMERAMAN.—Want to make a change; employed at present; good reference. CAMERAMAN, care Moving Picture World, Chicago, Illinois.

CAMERAMAN.—Expert; own outfit; still photographer, all-round man in laboratory, wants position. ALLAN, 352 East 135th St., N. Y. Bronx.

MANAGER AT LIBERTY.—Experienced picture show or vaudeville; advanced ideas for building up business; never fails. Write me what you have. H. D. FAIRALL, Masonic Temple, Davenport, Iowa.

MIDDLE-AGED music teacher wishes position as picture pianist. Desire change in locality; play popular, standard and classic. H. F. VOGEL, 307 14th St., Watervliet, N. Y.

OPERATOR.—Six years' experience. First class house; A-1 projection, A-1 electrician, A-1 recommendations. DAVID REDNISS, care Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

PIANIST, A-1.—A. F. of M. Desires to change. Pictures or vaudeville; orchestra preferred. Good library, references, married. Desires to locate. No booze. Address H. P., care Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

EXPERIENCED young lady pianist desires position in picture theater. No vaudeville or orchestra. Town in south preferred. MISS COURTNEY, 407 N. Second St., Charlottesville, Virginia.

CAMERAMAN.—At liberty. Any class of work. Reliable, strictly sober. Will travel. Low salary. J. S. J., care Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR wishes steady position. Has 3 years' experience in New York. K. O., care Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

CAMERAMAN with outfit makes fine moving pictures anywhere. Produces features, industrial and advertising. EXPERT, care Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED.—Cameramen, all sections, owning their own outfit, to submit undeveloped negative of current news events to "Pictorial News Film." Only experts, whose photography is first class need apply; by mail only. S. J. VAN FLEET, 141 West 142d St., N. Y. City.

CAMERAMEN everywhere (except N. Y. City) owning outfit can learn of valuable service being established for weekly news pictures. Cameras and perforated negative film for sale. RAY, 326 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

EXPERIENCED pipe organ and piano player. Sober and reliable. State wages and reference. Write J. BARNET, Crystal Theater, Minneapolis, Minn.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

SLIDE MAKING PLANT now rushed with work. Located in New York City. Good reasons for selling; $750 takes complete plant; $50 per week profit easy. Room 43, 149 West 35th St., New York.

DIRECTOR.—Am looking for director with general knowledge and small capital to enter partnership. Manufacture single reel comedies. Expenses negligible. Opportunity exceptional. Have studio in midst of beautiful mountain scenery. ERA, care Moving Picture World, N. Y. City.

THEATERS WANTED.

PICTURE THEATERS—Wanted in Colorado, Nebraska and Wyoming. If you have one to sell, write Denver Theatrical Exchange, 1554 California street, Denver, Colo.

REPRESENTING BIG INTERESTS in the photoplay industry in the United States, we are desirous of obtaining a number of theaters now in operation or to be built, with seating capacity of 600 or over in the various cities of the country. Only grade A houses will be considered. SYDCO AMUSEMENT CO., 331 Madison Ave., New York City.

TO BUY.—Modern equipped picture theater west of Mississippi river. Must be bargain. State all first letter. Address Henry Fickensher, 154 Salem Ave., Dayton, Ohio.

WANTED.—Moving picture theater in Ohio, Indiana or Michigan. Population fifteen thousand or over; seating capacity not less than 350. Must show net profit of at least $400 per month. I. E. Wright, Findlay, Ohio.

THEATER WANTED.—A responsible party desires to lease a good moving picture theater. Any city considered, but theater must be well located and in first class condition. Able to give good security. Wish to deal with owners only. No attention paid to agents or fakers. In replying state full particulars. Address Byron D. Bailey, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

THEATER.—Making money; no competition; 7,000 people to draw from. The best class of patrons; 550 seats; 45 minutes from Broadway in New Jersey; $8,000 required; rent low; long lease. A. B., care Moving Picture World, N York City.

THEATER.—300 seats, family patronage in growing Chicago neighborhood. Clearing $75 a week, no competition; good lease; $5,000. Open to rigid investigation. P. S., 428 So. Harvey Ave., Oak Park, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Only first class house in good town of 5,500. Rocky mountain region. Good for $75 clear weekly. Price and terms reasonable. Address F. C., care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

FOR SALE.—Motion picture theater, with inclined floor, stage, isolated lighting plant, brick building, seating capacity 375. In town of about 1,500 doing excellent business; owner must go East. $10,000; cash $7,500. Buyer to assume mortgage $2,500. If interested write Mgr. Banning Opera House, Banning, Cal.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED.—Powers 6a motor drive or simplex. Must be in good condition and subject to examination. Address Lyceum, Terre Haute, Ind.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

BRASS POSTER FRAMES.—For one, three and six sheets. Also brass easels, brass railings. Write for complete catalog. The Newman Mfg. Co., Cincinnati, O. 101 4th Ave., N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Powers' 6-A machine complete, perfect condition, $165. Simplex only slightly used, $195. Standard No. 4, complete, like new, $75. Edison Model "D" helical gears, two months old, $85. Edison rebuilt exhibition model, $50. Powers' No. 5 with new and complete equipment, $85. Compensarc, $40. Model "B" gas outfit, $15. Machines perfect; no junk; fully guaranteed. We sell new machines and take old outfits in part payment. STELZER BROS., 417 Broadway, Lincoln, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Latest model Simplex, everything complete, used one month. Theodore E. Pennock, Tivoli Theater, Syracuse, New York.

CHAIRS.—We ship second hand chairs promptly either set up or knock down. If you want to sell for cash write Empire Exchange, Corning, N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Brand new Williamson Printer never unpacked complete with light shift and light, first order with $50 takes it. Ajasee Mfg. Co., 149 West 35th St., New York.

MACHINES.—Powers V $60; VI-A slightly shopworn $180; Halberg Economizer $50; Powdered Graphite pound 40c; tickets, cement, oil $15c; imported condensers 65c. We carry complete line of supplies, buy, sell and rent machines; also have films for sale. Holdenried Supply House, 804 Sixth Ave., New York.

FOR SALE.—Two G. E. 110-220 Mercury Arc Rectifiers, 50 Amp. tubes A-1 condition, also 2 extra tubes. Bargain for cash. Address S. B. Blakey, 4531 Sheridan Rd., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Edison model B machine without legs and lower magazine. Head almost new and fine running order $75. Powers five complete and good as new, runs steady clear pictures $65. One Edison head exhibition model $15 good shape. Muncie Film & Supply Co., 202 E. Main, Muncie, Ind., Moving Picture Outfitters.

ENTIRE EQUIPMENT.—Of a moving picture house compelled to vacate by Sept. 1st. Owners wishing to build. Two Powers A machines with automatic loop, practically new complete with fine lenses. Three hundred chairs, 1 mirroroid screen, 2 large bill boards, 3 fire extinguishers, 1 marble outside ticket office, 1 large booth, 1 victrola and 50 records. Will be sold at a great sacrifice. Apply Princess Theater, Springfield, Mass.

PHANTOSCOPE.—Portable projecting machine only used few times. Cost $100. Will sell for $40. Machine will be sold subject to examination to first buyer sending $10 bill insuring payment of expressage. Smallwood Film Corp., 1303 Flatiron Bldg., N. Y. City.

BARGAINS.—In films and machines. Two hundred reels, western, dramatic, comedy, industrial films at $2.50 to $5 per reel. The Third Degree, 5 reels, $150; Thou Shalt Not Steal, 2 reels, $10; One Powers 5 machine, $40; one Powers 6A machine, $120. Many others. H. Davis, Watertown, Wis.

MOVING PICTURE CHAIRS.—Two thousand new, 94c and up in small lots. Second hand chairs on hand at all times. Atlas Seating Co., 501 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

CAMERAS WANTED.

WANTED.—Second hand picture camera, must be first class will also pay liberally for instructions to operate same. Address C. H. Kienle, 45 Rose St., N. Y. City.

FILMS FOR SALE OR RENT.

AUSTRIAN MOTION PICTURES.—Imported from Austria; no competition. Unique in America, sceneries, cities, rural life, sports. For sale or rent. Slavic American Correspondence, 389 Second Ave., New York.

SENSATIONAL ITALIAN CAVALRY.—Jumping horses. Wonderful English steeplechase army manoeuvers and Mexican war pictures, 4,000 feet all at 2c. per foot. Address Films, care M. P. World, N. Y. City.

NEW ENGLAND MANAGERS—Book the delightful seven-reel feature, "David Copperfield." Exclusive rights owned by Dorva & Deleon, 17 Berwick Park, Boston, Mass.

HAVE SEVERAL three and four-reel features for state of Michigan for sale; films in first-class condition, each film having been run not over 15 days. Address F. D. NICHOLS, Apollo Theater, Grand Rapids, Mich.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SEE ME FIRST.—Before building your theater. Moving picture theaters a specialty. T. John Folks, Architect, 2nd National Bank Bldg., Paterson, N. J.

FINE PRINTING.—Five hundred business or professional cards, $1 postpaid. Best bristol. Distinctive work. No delay. We want your biz. Cash. Samples free. Call Printing Co., Monessen, Penn.

LINEN POST CARDS.—New beautiful. Tasteful gold initial. To introduce, 25, 10c, postpaid. Any initial. Call Printing Co., Monessen, Penn.

CALIFORNIA
802 SO. OLIVE STREET
LOS ANGELES

APEX

FEATURE SERVICE
PANTAGES THEATRE BLDG
SAN FRANCISCO

SELECT PHOTOPLAY PRODUCING CO.

AT THE OLD CROSS ROADS.—Parepa Mendoza, a former slave owing to the death of her employer, seeks employment in the household of Rev. Thomas Thornton. It is here she meets his son Dayton. Dayton, a ne'er-do-well, has always caused his father sorrow and suffering. Parepa's advent is the cause for a tirade from Dayton who threatens to horsewhip her. The father's interference causes Parepa to promise to assist him in mending the son's ways. Dayton, who, in a drunken brawl, kills James Martin, seeks safety in the hills. It is here he sends for Parepa and holds her as his mistress. Tiring of her he chases her from their cabin. Coming back to town she seeks rest on the steps of a church. It is here she finds that the sermon is 'He who sinneth and repenteth even tho at the eleventh hour will be saved." Entering the church she meets Rev. James Thornton. Being overcome with remorse she rushes to the altar and pleads to confess. The father hearing of the son's sin and that Parepa is about to become a mother takes Parepa back and forces his son to marry her. He does so, Parepa agreeing to keep the marriage a secret. They leave for the North. The father broken in health dies of grief.

After a lapse of eight years Dayton Thornton returns home bringing his daughter Annabel. Parepa is forced to act as a servant, Annabel being in ignorance that Parepa is her mother. Tom Martin, a son of James Martin, hearing of Thornton's return, renews the fight for killing his father. Annabel intercedes and a love affair springs up. Thornton who is opposed is forced to consent by the whip that Parepa holds over his head. Thornton plans revenge. At a reception he announces the engagement and tells his daughter she has negro blood in her and that Parepa is her mother. Annabel, becoming hysterical, is carried away. The negroes hearing of the outrage form a posse to kill Thornton. Annabel, crazed, rushes from the house. Thornton trying to escape is met by Parepa, and following a quarrel, she kills him. Annabel falls exhausted from the horse and is found by Tom Martin. Parepa is arrested and thrown into prison. The day of the trial Parepa secures her release by a sensational climax, and the arrival of her old lover Col. Kerr with papers to prove that Parepa is white and of Spanish origin.

BOSWORTH.

THE VALLEY OF THE MOON (Seven Reels).—At the opening of the play Billy Roberts is successively a pugilist and a teamster, and Saxon, a young girl, works in a laundry. They meet at a Weazel Park picnnc, the afternoon of the lively "roughhouse" between San Francisco and Oakland. They find each is of the race of the sturdy pioneers, which crossed the plains on foot and founded the new empire of the West. "We're just like old friends, with the same kind of folks behind us," says Billy.

We see their simple wedding, and the happiness of the new life. Then comes the teamsters' strike, with its consequent poverty and unhappiness and the embittering of Billy's spirit. A succession of scenes show the rioting that ensues when strike-breakers are imported. A thousand men were used in this part of the play. The action does not pause from the moment the strike-breakers leave the train until the riot culminates in front of Saxon's eyes, in the killing of Bert, Billy's chum.

Things go from bad to worse, but it is when their fortunes are at the lowest ebb, when Billy is in jail and Saxon destitute, and while she sails on San Francisco Bay, that the great inspiration comes to her: the city is just a place to start from and that beyond the circling hills, out through the Golden Gate, somewhere they will find what they most desire. After his release and fired by her enthusiasm, Billy agrees and, with the thought that they are only following in the footsteps of their ancestors, they start out on foot to find a new home. Charming glimpses of the country through which they tramp are given, in the course of which we make the acquaintance of that delightful group of artists who call themselves the "Abalone Eaters," at Carmel; and attend a boxing match at which Billy earns a much-desired camping outfit in twenty-seven seconds.

Finally they come to a cairn and view from it a valley that is all they have looked for. It is Sonoma, an Indian name, which means the Valley of the Moon. Our last view of them is in the midst of busy ranch life, and in a dell in Wildwater Canyon, where Saxon whispers to Billy the secret that crowns the summit of their happiness.

20TH CENTURY.

A SUSPICIOUS WIFE (Four Parts).—The story opens with a full view of the Brooklyn Bridge with a woman in a nervous state stealing along. A policeman, noticing something amiss, approaches her, but too late. The woman jumps to the river below. A sailor on a passing tug, dives overboard and rescues her.

SCENARIOS CRITICISED

By

MARY LOUISE FARLEY

Photoplaywright

607 West 136th Street, New York

"NEWMAN" Brass Frames and Rails

NOW IS THE TIME to fix up your lobby. Throw out those unsightly old wood frames and invest in neat, attractive BRASS FRAMES. You will be surprised how quickly your investment will return to you.

Be sure the name "NEWMAN" appears on all frames—the guarantee of satisfaction.

Write for new 1914 catalog.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.

NEW YORK CINCINNATI CHICAGO

101 Fourth Ave. 717 Sycamore St. 108 W. Lake St.

Established 1882.

A harbor police-boats puts out from shore and they are both taken aboard. Dr. Warren, who is among the crowd on the shore, offers his assistance, but ordinary methods of resuscitation fail, and a call is given for a lungmotor. This revives the woman and she is taken to a hospital where the doctor and his wife are her only visitors. They take a general interest in her, not realizing she is addicted to drugs.

The woman, fully recovered, is brought to court and charged with attempted suicide. She is about to be committed to Blackwell's Island, but on the doctor's and his wife's promise, she is paroled. She is made assistant nurse to the doctor and later becomes infatuated with him. He is not aware of it, but some of his patients notice it and send Mrs. Warren an anonymous letter which she at the time ignores, still believing in her husband. However, on entering her husband's office just as the woman in the throes of an overdose of cocaine and is confessing her love for him, she perceives that something is wrong. Not being satisfied with her husband's explanation, she decides to install a dictograph from his office to her bedroom. Shortly after the dictograph is installed, she hears the woman again avowing her love, also her husband's repulses. Furious she enters the office and orders the woman to leave the house. She leaves vowing vengeance. The wife confesses about installing the dictograph. Forgiveness is granted, and the dictograph is disconnected.

Mrs. Warren attends a reception where she meets Mrs. Halley, who has an opera cloak similar to the one worn by her, and upon leaving the maids give them the wrong cloaks. Mrs. Halley decides to return Mrs. Warren's cloak personally and orders her chauffeur to drive her to the Warren home. Arriving there she is ushered into the doctor's office.

The woman, in the meantime, is prowling about the grounds, and mistaking Mrs. Halley for Mrs. Warren, shoots her from a window of the office. The police are notified of the murder, and in searching the house find the wires that were attached to the dictograph as well as the anonymous letter. Tracing the wires, they find they lead into Mrs. Warren's bedroom, thereby giving a motive, and Mrs. Warren is placed under arrest.

The woman, reading in the paper that she has reaped vengeance on the wrong woman, is terror stricken, but as she reads further that Mrs. Warren has been arrested for the crime, she gloats over it. Being out of funds, the woman in seeking employment, enters the building where the dictograph offices are situated. Being unable to secure employment and in a state of prostration from lack of cocaine, she starts muttering and gloating over Mrs. Warren's predicament. Her voice is heard through the dictograph and an attempt is made to capture the woman; but as the men arrive in the corridor, the woman is seen descending in the elevator. The woman is finally caught by detectives who engage a room in the same house and in her absence a dictograph is installed connecting both rooms over which the detectives and the police hear her re-enact her crime. She is immediately arrested, her reason entirely gone. Mrs. Warren is released and husband and wife are happily reunited.

THEATER TRANSFERS.

Hancock, Mich.—Fred Dickinson has just losed a deal with Herman Stark for the Queen theater in the Schneider block.

Mr. Dickinson intends remodeling the front as well as the interior of the theater and is now having the work done.

Jefferson, Wis.—The management of the Idle Hour has changed hands. S. E. Waterbury is now the manager.

Fort Smith, Ark.—The Empress moving picture theater has passed into the hands of L. W. Brophy, of Muskogee, owner and manager of moving picture theaters in Muskogee, Oklahoma City and McAlester, and formerly owner of the Yale theater in this city.

Toledo, O.—The sun theater, 416 Superior street, has been sold by the Sun Theater Co. to J. V. Wolcott and P. E. Essick.

Stevens Point, Wis.—The lease on the Della theater, South side, which has been held for several months by E. L. Bates, has been transferred to Don C. Hall, who will continue to show the latest in motion pictures, with vaudeville by his theatrical company as an added feature.

Cuba, Ill.—A deal has been made whereby A. E. Wilson purchased the Bell and Odpheum theaters and the Airdome from the Cuba Photoplay company. Mr. Wilson is no stranger to the moving picture business, having conducted the Bell and Airdome for four years, selling to the Photoplay company about six months ago. He intends to continue the serial pictures running at present and will soon start "The Trey o' Hearts," the latest Universal serial.

Chinook, Mont.—L. W. Lamb of Terry, Mont., has bought the Orpheum theater from T. C. Penny of Glasgow. Chas. Jones, who has been managing the show for Mr. Penny, will still retain his position.

Anderson, Ind.—Lawrence Stewart and Glen Gurtner of Wabash have purchased a motion picture show in Anderson. Both these gentlemen are of sterling quality and should make a splendid success in their new position.

La Porte, Ind.—The Etropal theater has passed to new ownership. J. C. Held and Alfred Norris retired. D. M. Nye, by purchase of their interests, assumed possession, the new management being effective forthwith. The Etropal has always been a popular photo-play house.

NEW THEATERS.

New York, N. Y.—Plans were filed for the construction of a one-story theater structure at the northeast corner of Westchester and Forest avenues by the John J. Murphy Estate. Gordon & La Velle, architects, have placed the cost at $100,000.

Conway, Ark.—A new motion picture theater to cost $15,000 will be erected on North Front street within the next thirty days by a stock company, of which R. D. Howell, owner of the Arkway theater, is the head.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A $19,000 moving picture theater will be erected by J. J. Schwartz at Ninth and Lincoln avenues. A permit for the work has been issued by the city building department. A. E. Swager is the architect.

Conwau, Ark.—R. D. Howell, manager of Arkway theater, will erect moving picture theater on North Front street; cost, $20,000.

Louisville, Ky.—Robert Lucas will erect an addition to his moving picture theater; cost, $3,500.

Malvern, Ark.—H. L. McDonald, cashier First National Bank, and Ralph E. Adams will erect a theater, the cost of which is $5,000. C. L. Thompson, architect, Little Rock.

BOSWORTH
INC.

PRESENTS

JACK LONDON'S
VALLEY OF THE MOON

Featuring Miss Myrtle Stedman

PRESS COMMENTS: "Like a breath of fresh air.
"Most realistic mob scene ever filmed."

For Bookings Apply Direct to Exchanges

American Feature Film Co., 162 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.—New England States: Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Wm. L. Sherry Feature Film Co., Inc., 126 West 46th Street, New York City—Greater New York and New York State.

Famous Players Film Service, Inc., 404 Ferry Street, Pittsburgh, Pa., and 37 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.—Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky.

Famous Players Exchange, 1331 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and 71 West 23rd Street, New York City—New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania.

Famous Players Feature Co., 28 West Lexington Street, Baltimore, Md.—Delaware, Maryland, Washington, D.C., and Virginia.

Casino Feature Film Co., Detroit, Mich.—Michigan.

Kansas City Feature Film Co., Kansas City, Mo.—Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa.

Famous Players Star Feature Film Service, Temple Court Building, Minneapolis, Minn.—North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Wis.

Notable Feature Film Co., Salt Lake City, Utah—Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and Idaho.

Progressive Motion Picture Co., three offices—Head office: 642 Pacific Building, San Francisco, Cal.; Central Building, Seattle, Wash.; Marsh-Strong Building, Los Angeles, Cal.—California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico.

BOSWORTH INC., LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, U. S. A.

Paramount

What Men Who Know Are Saying

B. F. KEITH, PRESIDENT
E. F. ALBEE, GENERAL MANAGER

J. J. MURDOCK, EXECUTIVE MANAGER
S. K. HODGDON, BOOKING MANAGER

F. F. PROCTOR, VICE PRESIDENT
A. PAUL KEITH, BUSINESS MANAGER

UNITED BOOKING OFFICES OF AMERICA
(AGENCY)

PALACE THEATRE BUILDING, BROADWAY & 47TH ST.
NEW YORK CITY.

CABLE ADDRESS "HODGKEITH"
TELEPHONE 3710 BRYANT

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE ..... Boston, Mass.
B. F. KEITH'S PALACE THEATRE ..... New York City
B. F. KEITH'S COLONIAL THEATRE ..... New York City
B. F. KEITH'S ALHAMBRA THEATRE ..... New York City
B. F. KEITH'S BRONX THEATRE ..... New York City
B. F. KEITH'S UNION SQUARE THEATRE ..... New York City
B. F. KEITH'S ORPHEUM THEATRE ..... Brooklyn, N. Y.
B. F. KEITH'S BUSHWICK THEATRE ..... Brooklyn, N. Y.
B. F. KEITH'S GREENPOINT THEATRE ..... Brooklyn, N. Y.
B. F. KEITH'S MOYELTY THEATRE ..... Brooklyn, N. Y.
B. F. KEITH'S CRESCENT THEATRE ..... Brooklyn, N. Y.
B. F. KEITH'S HARLEM OPERA HOUSE ..... New York City
B. F. KEITH'S NEW THEATRE ..... Philadelphia, Pa.
B. F. KEITH'S ALLEGHENY THEATRE ..... Philadelphia, Pa.
B. F. KEITH'S CHESTNUT ST OPERA HOUSE ..... Phila., Pa.
B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE ..... Washington, D. C.
B. F. KEITH'S GARDEN PIER THEATRE ..... Atlantic City, N. J.
B. F. KEITH'S HIPPODROME ..... Cleveland, Ohio
B. F. KEITH'S PROSPECT THEATRE ..... Cleveland, Ohio
B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE ..... Columbus, Ohio
B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE ..... Toledo, Ohio
B. F. KEITH'S COLUMBIA THEATRE ..... Cincinnati, Ohio
B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE ..... Louisville, Ky.
B. F. KEITH'S GRAND OPERA HOUSE ..... Indianapolis, Ind.
B. F. KEITH'S BIJOU THEATRE ..... Boston, Mass.
B. F. KEITH'S NEW THEATRE ..... Portland, Me.
B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE ..... Lowell, Mass.
B. F. KEITH'S NEW THEATRE ..... Manchester, N. H.
B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE ..... Jersey City, N. J.
B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE, E. F. Albee, Prop ..... Providence, R. I.
B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE, E. F. Albee, Prop ..... Pawtucket, R. I.
HAMMERSTEIN'S VICTORIA THEATRE ..... New York City
HAMMERSTEIN'S PARADISE ROOF GARDEN ..... New York City
HYDE'S GRAND OPERA HOUSE ..... Philadelphia, Pa.
NIXON'S THEATRE ..... Philadelphia, Pa.
COLONIAL THEATRE ..... Philadelphia, Pa.
KEYSTONE THEATRE ..... Philadelphia, Pa.
NEW BROADWAY THEATRE ..... Philadelphia, Pa.
WM. PENN THEATRE ..... Philadelphia, Pa.
F. F. PROCTOR'S THEATRE ..... Newark, N. J.
F. F. PROCTOR'S THEATRE ..... Troy, N. Y.
F. F. PROCTOR'S THEATRE ..... Albany, N. Y.
F. F. PROCTOR'S THEATRE ..... Elizabeth, N. J.
F. F. PROCTOR'S FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE ..... New York City
F. F. PROCTOR'S 23D ST. THEATRE ..... New York City
F. F. PROCTOR'S 58TH ST. THEATRE ..... New York City
F. F. PROCTOR'S 125TH ST. THEATRE ..... New York City
HARRY DAVIS' GRAND OPERA HOUSE ..... Pittsburgh, Pa.
THE GRAND THEATRE ..... Syracuse, N. Y.
KERNAN'S MARYLAND THEATRE ..... Baltimore, Md.
SHEA'S THEATRE ..... Buffalo, N. Y.
SHEA'S THEATRE ..... Toronto, Ont., Can.
TEMPLE THEATRE ..... Detroit, Mich.
TEMPLE THEATRE ..... Rochester, N. Y.
S. Z. POLI'S THEATRE ..... Worcester, Mass.
S. Z. POLI'S THEATRE ..... Springfield, Mass.
S. Z. POLI'S THEATRE ..... Hartford, Conn.
S. Z. POLI'S THEATRE ..... New Haven, Conn.
S. Z. POLI'S THEATRE ..... Bridgeport, Conn.
S. Z. POLI'S THEATRE ..... Waterbury, Conn.
S. Z. POLI'S THEATRE ..... Wilkesbarre, Pa.
S. Z. POLI'S THEATRE ..... Scranton, Pa.
MAJESTIC THEATRE ..... Paterson, N. J.
TRENT THEATRE ..... Trenton, N. J.
NEW BROADWAY THEATRE ..... Camden, N. J.
MAJESTIC THEATRE ..... London, Ont., Can.
TEMPLE THEATRE ..... Hamilton, Ont., Can.
ORPHEUM THEATRE ..... Montreal, Que., Can.
DOMINION THEATRE ..... Ottawa, Ont., Can.
AUDITORIUM THEATRE ..... Quebec, Can.
HENDERSON'S MUSIC HALL ..... Coney Island, N. Y.
BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL ..... Brighton Beach, N. Y.
NEW BRIGHTON THEATRE ..... Brighton Beach, N. Y.
MORRISON'S MUSIC HALL ..... Rockaway Beach, N. Y.
SHUBERT THEATRE ..... Utica, N. Y.
ORPHEUM THEATRE ..... Reading, Pa.
ORPHEUM THEATRE ..... Allentown, Pa.
ORPHEUM THEATRE ..... Easton, Pa.
ORPHEUM THEATRE ..... Mt. Harrisburg, Pa.
ORPHEUM THEATRE ..... Altoona, Pa.
COLONIAL THEATRE ..... Richmond, Va.
LYRIC THEATRE ..... Richmond, Va.
COLONIAL THEATRE ..... Norfolk, Va.
MAJESTIC THEATRE ..... Johnstown, Pa.
DOCKSTADER'S GARRICK THEATRE ..... Wilmington, Del.
HUDSON THEATRE ..... Union Hill, N. J.
FORSYTH THEATRE ..... Atlanta, Ga.
GRAND OPERA HOUSE ..... Atlanta, Ga.
LYRIC THEATRE ..... Birmingham, Ala.
BIJOU THEATRE ..... Knoxville, Tenn.
COLONIAL THEATRE ..... Lancaster, Pa.
COLONIAL THEATRE ..... Erie, Pa.
SAVOY THEATRE ..... Atlantic City, N. J.

August 6, 1914.

The Wm. L. Sherry Feature Film Co., Inc.
New York City.

Gentlemen:-

In selecting the policy of films and the particular style of entertainment to be presented at my new HIPPODROME THEATRE, in Buffalo, (which will undoubtedly mark a new epoch in New York State theatres, inasmuch as it has a seating capacity of 3000, and represents the last word in modern theatre construction,) I would naturally not enter into any arrangements without having given the matter careful consideration and making a detailed study of the picture programs of the market at the present time.

The result of my investigation brought me to the conclusive belief that in the PARAMOUNT PROGRAM I might find the perfection of the feature film policy, without the defects which marked it under the unsettled feature conditions of the past year, and with all its advantages multiplied, through the constructive plans of the PARAMOUNT COMPANY.

One of the most important considerations is the fact that the greatest efforts of all our prominent theatrical producers will be available for filming at the hands of the FAMOUS PLAYERS, LASKY, and BOSWORTH COMPANY.

The fact that I have seen fit to contract for SHEA'S BUFFALO HIPPODROME, for the exclusive Buffalo use of all PARAMOUNT releases, is the strongest endorsement which I can give to the PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORPORATION.

With best wishes for our mutual success, I remain

Very truly yours,

M. Shea

Others of the largest and best known theatres throughout the United States who have contracted for Paramount Pictures are:

The Strand—New York
People's Amusement Co.—Portland, Ore.
Saxe Amusement Enterprises—Milwaukee
Regent Theatre—Rochester

The Great Turner & Dahnken Circuit of the Pacific Coast operating high-grade photo-play theatres at Oakland, San Jose, Berkeley, Sacramento, Richmond and other points.
Kehrlein's Kinema Theatres at Fresno and Marysville, Cal.
—and many other prominent theatres throughout the country, too numerous to mention here.

Paramount Pictures

Paramount Pict

.ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST FOR

Pictures

About the Paramount Program—

San Francisco, Aug. 5th, 1914.

America's pioneer weekly change house, first theatre in the Far West to recognize Paramount Pictures' possibilities, has just closed an exclusive contract for exhibition in San Francisco. After an eventful year, due largely to the exclusive handling of films made by the principal contributors to Paramount Pictures, we look forward with greater hopes for increased results during the coming year. We congratulate you on your achievement of combining the World's Greatest makers, and cheerfully recommend your service, to any exhibitor, as worthy of being presented to the highest class of theatregoing public.

Wishing for your future success, I remain,
Grauman's Imperial Theatre,
(Signed) D. J. GRAUMAN, Pres.

Los Angeles, Cal., August 6th, 1914.

I am jubilant over the fact that I have been successful in obtaining from you the exclusive first-run service of the Paramount Pictures Corporation productions in this city. I have, as you know, used all of the Famous Players, Jesse L. Lasky and Bosworth productions in my Broadway Theatre during the past year, and have proved tremendously successful. Mr. Hodkinson, you and your associates have done a wonderful thing in combining the interests of these great companies and I believe that you can and will make good your promise to give the exhibitors using the Paramount Service the greatest program of feature productions that money and brains can produce. In looking over the first three months' releases of the Paramount Pictures, I feel safe in saying that with them I can defy any competition and I feel that my business is on a sounder basis than ever before.

Wishing you the success that you deserve, I am,
Tally's Broadway Theatre,
(Signed) T. L. TALLY, Prop. and Mgr.

Cincinnati, Ohio, August 3, 1914.

Previous to the introduction of your features, "The Lubin" was strictly a five-cent house. Famous Players films have enabled us to elevate the tone of our little "Playhouse of the Movies" and, what is more important, we are getting ten cents always. With "Paramount Pictures" we expect to add materially to the quality of our reputation for good shows, and are preparing to install quite a number of reserved seats at twenty cents.

Lubin Amusement Co.,
(Signed) JOS. F. HENNEGAN, Mgr.

Boston, Mass., July 31, 1914.

We have used Famous Players Pictures last season in all of our houses, and can faithfully say that we have more than pleased our patrons, and our houses have become very popular by using same. We are also frank to confess to you that we feel very fortunate in having signed up the "Paramount Service" for all of our houses for next season.

Gordon Bros. Amusement Co.,
(Signed) NATHAN H. GORDON, Treas.

Boston, Mass., August 8, 1914.

Being greatly impressed by the wide-sweeping possibilities of the "Paramount Pictures" program of unusual merit motion picture productions, a group of the leading promoters of high quality motion photography in New England leased The Park Theatre, Boston, Mass., and formed The Park Theatre Company. The Park Theatre is to offer exclusively "Paramount Pictures," charging admission prices of 15 to 50 cents. The location of "The Park" is one of the most favorable theatrical locations in New England, and with "Paramount Pictures" as its drawing attraction, it is most confidently anticipated that even greater triumphs are in store for this playhouse under its new policy.

Park Theatre Company, (Signed) MOE MARK.

New Haven, Ct., July 30th, 1914.

I am very glad to see your efforts on the uplifting of the Motion Picture Industry have started by affiliating with such a magnificent organization as the Paramount. After looking over the field on features for the coming season I came to the conclusion that if your program will be on a par with what you tell me, then you are going to have the greatest program that has ever been presented to the public. The public is being educated more every day to the better grade of picture releases. I really think you have affiliated with a winner, not saying what a Godsend it will be to the exhibitors who wish to run a high-class program.

S. Z. Poli Theatres,
(Signed) R. C. MILLER, Mgr.

Providence, R. I., July 27, 1914.

As a motion picture exhibitor I have always been a firm believer that "quality counts" first and foremost. As a result I am among the first to sign contracts for "Paramount Pictures" Service. I am convinced that this unparalleled service will prove the greatest blow ever struck for distinctive high quality in motion pictures and the most powerful "boost" yet registered as a decided uplift to the motion picture industry in general.

Casino Theatre,
(Signed) CHAS. H. WILLIAMS.

Louisville, Ky., August 8th, 1914.

Having used, during the past year, all of the productions of the Famous Players and Jesse L. Lasky's Studios for four days each, it was with pleasure I have learned of the formation of the Paramount Pictures Corporation. This combination of the foremost producers of high-class motion picture dramas will no doubt create a prestige for the theatre using these productions similar to that enjoyed by the legitimate theatres of high class. Having closed a contract for all of the releases of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, I would cheerfully recommend, speaking from experience, this program to any manager desiring the very highest class in motion picture productions.

The Majestic Theatre Company,
(Signed) L. J. DITTMAR.

Exhibitors who want the best pictures are contracting for Paramount Service: Have YOU done so?
If not, write your nearest exchange immediately. First Paramount release August 31st.

ures Corporation

TIETH STREET, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Paramount Pictures

INDEX

TO CONTENTS.

AD-FILM MEN MEET TO DISCUSS ORGANIZATION 1221
ADVERTISING FOR THE EXHIBITOR..1231
ANSWERS CALL TO COLORS.....1249

"BAREFOOT BOY, THE" (Kalem).....1220
BAUMANN, C. O., TO ISSUE PROGRAM..1250
BON RAY FILM PLANT.....1218
BRITISH NOTES. 1230

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES..1260
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES. 1262
CANADA ENTERS THE FILM FIELD....1229
"CAPTAIN JACK" FOR THE SCREEN...1219
CATHOLIC FILM ASSOCIATION.....1246
CHICAGO LETTER 1223
COMMENTS ON THE FILM (Licensed)...1240
COMMENTS ON THE FILM (Independent).1242
CONCERNING "LITTLE MARY".....1244
"CRICKET ON THE HEARTH" (Biograph). 1216

DE MILLE "TALKS SHOP".....1244
DOINGS AT LOS ANGELES.....1230
DRAWING THE AUDIENCE.....1213

EUROPEAN WAR, THE.....1226
EUROPEAN FILM STAR JOINS CENTAUR.1246
EXHIBITORS' NEWS 1256

FACTS AND COMMENTS 1211
FEATURE FILM STORIES.....1288

GOLDEN, JOSEPH A.....1226

"IN THE LION'S DEN" (Eclectic).....1217
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.....1296
INDEPENDENT CALENDAR. 1262
IRISH HISTORY ON THE SCREEN.....1245

JAMES B. KELLY.....1220

LESLIE WINS AGAIN.....1222
LICENSED RELEASE DATES.....1298
LICENSED CALENDAR.....1260
LUBIN'S FIRST SERIAL NOTEWORTHY..1218
LOVE FEAST AT HOUSE OPENING.....1249

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES...1251
MORALS AND THE FILM.....1212
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, THE...1247
MUCH LITIGATION. 1222
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE.....1225

NOTES OF THE TRADE.....1254
"NORTHERN LIGHTS" (Life Photo).....1250

OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN..1228
OHIO CONVENTION CALLED.....1247

PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE. 1233
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT. 1235

ROSENTHAL URGES UNIFICATION.....1247

"SHEEP'S CLOTHING" (Edison).....1219
"SINS OF THE PARENT" (Ivan).....1248
STAMP OF NATIONAL CENSORSHIP....1224
"SUSPICIOUS WIFE, A" (20th Century)..1217
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).....1269
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)..1278
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Features).....1288

THREE COSMOFOTOFILM OFFERINGS..1215
TRYING TO AMALGAMATE IN NEW YORK. 1247
"THE FILM DETECTIVE" (Picture Playhouse). 1248

UNIVERSAL CITY MOVES.....1250

"VENDETTA" (Kleine) 1214

TO ADVERTISERS.

ASBESTOS SUPPLIES.
H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO.....1303

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.....1280
BELL & HOWELL CO., THE.....1284
CALEHUFF SUPPLY CO.....1301
CORCORAN, A. J.....1280
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.....1301
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS.....1305
FULTON, E. E.....1280
GENERAL ELECTRIC CO.....1303
HALLBERG, J. H.....1270
HOKE, GEORGE M. SUPPLY CO.....1280
MOORE, HUBBELL & CO.....1284
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO...1300
SMITH, L. C., & CO.....1282
STRELINGER, CHARLES A., & CO.....1280

FILM EXCHANGES.
APEX FEATURE SERVICE.....1271
BRADENBURGH, GEORGE W.....1301
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.....1300
GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL CO. 1298
WESTERN FILM BROKERS.....1300

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
GAUMONT CO 1268
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.....1306
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION. 1184
THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION....1178
UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO. 1180-81

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
BAUSCH & LAMB OPTICAL CO.....1299

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH COMPANY. 1261
EDISON, THOMAS A.....1208, 95
ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO. 1182-83
KALEM CO. 1205-10
KLEINE, GEORGE 1200-01
LUBIN MANUFACTURING CO.....1206-07
MELIES FILMS. 1204
PATHE FRERES. 1199
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.....1307
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA.....1209

MISCELLANEOUS.
BARR & BRUNSWIG.....1282
BON RAY FILM CO.....1299
BOTANICAL DECORATING CO.....1301
CENTAUR FILM CO.....1304
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS. 1289
EASTMAN KODAK CO.....1304
GUNBY BROS. 1284
HENNEGAN & CO.....1284
INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE CO....1280
KRAUS MANUFACTURING CO.....1255
MONTGOMERY, FRANK E.....1299
MOVING PICTURE WORLD.....1302
NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.....1300
NATIONAL TICKET CO.....1296
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.....1282
SCENARIOS CRITICISED 1290
STANDARD ENGRAVING CO.....1131
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.....1282
THEATER BROKERAGE EXCHANGE....1900
VIEHL, J. R.....1280
VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO.....1301
WILLIAM FOX (CALL).....1267
WYANOAK PUBLISHING CO.....1299

MOTION PICTURE CAMERA MANUFACTURERS.
SCHNEIDER, EBERHARD. 1282

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
AMERICAN PHOTO PLAYER CO.....1300
DEAGAN, J. C.....1303
KIMBALL, W. W., CO.....1301
SEEBURGH, J. P., PIANO CO.....1302
SINN, CLARENCE E.....1305

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO.....1305
ANDREWS, A. H., CO.....1305
BENNETT SEATING CO.....1305
HARDESTY MANUFACTURING CO.....1305
STEEL FURNITURE CO.....1305
WISCONSIN SEATING CO.....1305

POSTERS AND FRAMES.
AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO.....1261
HENNEGAN & CO.....1301
NEWMAN MANUFACTURING CO.....1290
THEATRE SPECIALTY CO.....1280

PROJECTION MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO.....1303
PHANTOSCOPE MANUFACTURING CO...1295
POWER, NICHOLAS. 1308
PRECISION MACHINE CO.....1263

PROJECTION SCREEN MANUFACTURERS.
ATSCO GOLD FIBRE.....1285
DAY & NIGHT SCREEN CO.....1303
GENTER, J. H., CO.....1304
MIRROR SCREEN CO.....1303

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDES.
ERKER BROS. 1301
MOORE, HUBBELL & CO.....1282
NIAGARA SLIDE CO.....1284
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.....1301

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO.....1303

MISCELLANEOUS FEATURE FILMS.
ALBUQUERQUE FILM CO 1287
ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION....1275
AMERICAN & EUROPEAN FILM CO.....1280
ANIMA FILM RENTAL CO.....1277
APEX FILM CO.....1291
ARCTIC FILM CO.....1302
BOSWORTH, INC. 1193, 1297
CELEBRATED PLAYERS FEATURE CO..1274
CRYSTAL FILM CO.....1287
ECLECTIC FILM CO.....1198
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO.....1186-87
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.....1305
GENERAL FEATURE FILM CO.....1305
HEPWORTH-AMERICAN FILM CO.....1277
KEANOGRAPH CO. 1196-97
LASKY, JESSE L., FEATURE PLAY CO..1179
LIFE PHOTO FILM CO.....1279
NEILSIEN, F. O.....1302
O Z FILM CO., THE.....1194
PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO.....1281
POPULAR PHOTO PLAYS CORP.....1272-73
RAMO FILMS, INC.....1192
RENOWNED PLAYERS FEATURE CO....1282
SAWYER, A. H., INC.....1185-91-95
SELECT PHOTOPLAY PRODUCTIONS CO..1283
TOPICAL NEWS CO., INC.....1276
WARNER'S FEATURES, INC.....1180-89-90
WORLD FILM CORPORATION.....1202-03

COMING!

EUROPE AT WAR

3 Reels. APEX FILM COMPANY

"Full of Laughs"

—one of the funniest comedies ever put on the screen —A REAL HIT!

EDISON FEATURE PHOTO PLAY

MY FRIEND FROM INDIA

three part comedy-drama—adaptation of Du Souchet's farce.

WALTER E. PERKINS

in his original character of

A. KEENE SHAVER.

Portrays the attempt of a retired pork-packer to enter New York society through the medium of a barber.

"Wonderfully Good"

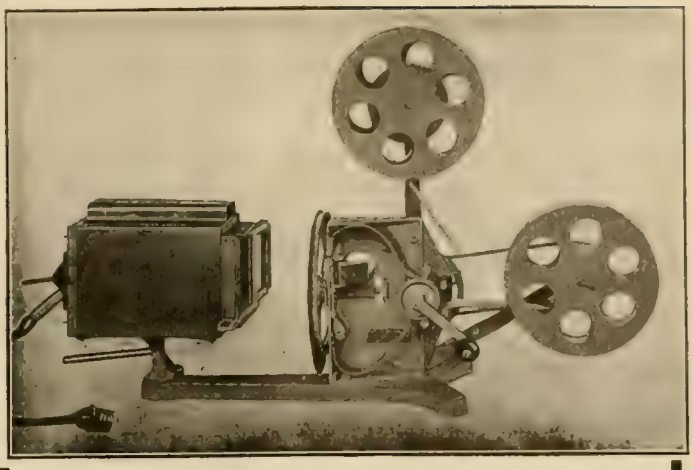
is the universal verdict

This film may now be had through the Feature Film Service of the General Film Co. and its branches, from whom also one, three, and six sheet posters, and attractive two color heralds, may be obtained.

TRADE MARK

Thomas A Edison

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
239 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N, J,
Makers of Edison Kinetoscope, Model D.



THE PHANTOSCOPE

If the General Film Co., the Mutual Film Co., and the Universal Film Co. should turn their enormous photographic equipment to making industrial and educational film there would be an even greater demand for the Phantoscope, for film is but half a motion picture exhibition; a suitable projector is just as essential. To serve the purpose well, the machine must be light and convenient to carry, say 18 lbs. in its traveling case; must accept conditions just as they are, in office, classroom or home; easily and quickly set up without tools by screwing the attaching plug into the nearest lamp socket, and project a large, brilliant, steady picture. All this means Phantoscope, and the price is but $100, including everything.

Phantoscope Mfg. Co.

Bond Building, Washington, D. C.

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES

AMERICAN.
Aug. 24—This is th' Life (Two Parts—Dr)....
Aug. 26—Lodging for a Night (Drama).....
Aug 28—The Song of the Sea Shell (Dr.)....
Aug. 31—The Aftermath (Two Parts—Drama).
Sept. 2—The Wrong Birds (Drama).....
Sept 7—Lola (Two Reels—Drama) .....
Sept. 9—Break, Break, Break (Drama).....

BEAUTY.
Aug. 11—Suzanna's New Suit (Com-Dr.).....
Aug 18—The Silence of John Gordon (Com-Dr.) .....
Aug. 25—Susie's New Shoes (Comedy-Drama).
Sept. 1—A Modern Othello (Comedy).....

"101" BISON.
Aug. 22—The Lure of the Geisha (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 29—Law of the Lumberjack (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Sept. 5—The Return of the Twins' Double (Three Parts—Drama).....

BRONCHO.
Aug. 19—The Robbery at Pine River (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 26—The Sheriff's Sister (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Sept. 2—When America Was Young (Two Parts—Drama) .....

CRYSTAL.
Aug. 18—Vivian's Best Fellow (Comedy).....
Aug. 25—Barreled (Comedy).....
—Bashful Ben (Comedy).....
Sept. 1—A Seaside Flirt (Comedy).....

DOMINO.
Aug. 20—The Defaulter (Two Parts—Drama)..
Aug. 27—The Village 'Neath the Sea (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Sept. 3—The Silver Bell (Two Parts—Dr.)...

ECLAIR.
Aug. 16—A Pearl of Great Price (Society Dr.)
Aug. 19—Bransford in Arcadia (Three Parts—Western Drama) .....
Aug. 23—The Miracle (Drama).....
Aug. 26—The Character Woman (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 30—Mosquite Pete's Fortune (Western-Drama) .....
Sept. 2—The Jackpot Club (Two Reels—Dr.)..
Sept. 6—No Show for the Chauffeur (Com.)..

FRONTIER.
Aug. 16—Memories of Years Ago (Drama)....
Aug. 23—The Strange Signal (Drama).....
Aug. 30—The Janitor's Son (Drama).....
Sept. 6—Under Arizona Skies (Drama).....

GOLD SEAL.
Aug. 18—The Trey o' Hearts, Series No. 3 (The Seaventure) (Two Parts—Dr.)
Aug. 25—The Trey o' Hearts, No. 4—Dead Reckoning (Two Parts—Drama)....
Sept. 1—The Trey o' Hearts, No. 5 (The Sunset Tide—Two Parts—Drama).....

IMP.
Aug. 17—Love's Refrain (Drama).....
Aug. 20—On the High Seas (Two Parts—Dr.)..
Aug. 24—Jim Webb, Senator (Three Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 27—Universal Boy in the Chinese Mystery (Juvenile-Drama) .....
Sept. 3—Tempest and Sunshine (Two Parts—Drama) .....

JOKER.
Aug. 19—Pass Key No. 2 (Comedy).....
Aug. 22—The Diamond Nippers (Comedy).....
Aug. 26—The Little Automogobile (Comedy)...
Aug. 29—Well! Well! (Comedy).....
Sept. 2—Father's Bride (Comedy).....
Sept. 5—Oh What's the Use? (Comedy).....

KAY-BEE.
Aug. 14—The Stigma (Two Parts—Drama)....
Aug. 21—The Winning of Denise (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 28—The Old Love's Best (Two Parts—Dr.)
Sept. 4—Stacked Cards (Two Parts—Drama)..

KEYSTONE.
Aug. 10—The Face on the Barroom Floor (Comedy) .....
Aug. 13—Recreation (Comedy) .....
—The Yosemite (Educational) .....
Aug. 15—Such a Cook (Comedy) .....
Aug. 17—That Minstrel Man (Comedy).....
Aug. 20—Those Country Kids (Comedy).....
Aug. 22—Caught in a Flue (Comedy).....
Aug. 24—Fatty's Gift (Comedy).....

KOMIC.
Aug. 16—Bill Saves the Day (No. 4 of the "Bill" Series—Comedy) .....
Aug. 23—A Physical Culture Romance (Com.)..
Aug. 30—Bill, No. 5—Bill Organizes a Union (Comedy) .....
Sept. 6—The Mascot (Comedy).....

MAJESTIC.
Aug. 18—The Inner Conscience (Drama).....
Aug. 21—A Lesson in Mechanics (Drama)....
Aug. 23—The Second Mrs. Roebuck (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 25—Granny (Drama) .....
Aug. 30—Frenchy (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Sept. 1—The Milk Fed Boy (Com.-Drama)....
Sept. 6—For Those Unborn (Two Parts—Dr.).

NESTOR.
Aug. 19—The Creeping Flame (Western Dr.)..
Aug. 21—A Lucky Deception (Two Parts—Comedy) .....
Aug. 26—A Miner's Romance (Western-Dr.)..
Aug. 28—For Love or Money (Comedy).....
Sept. 4—A Baby Did It (Comedy).....

POWERS.
Aug. 21—The Divorcee (Drama).....
Aug. 28—This Is the Life (Comedy).....
—Beautiful Corsica (Scenic).....
Sept. 4—The Storm Bird (Drama).....

PRINCESS.
Aug. 14—A Rural Romance (Comedy).....
Aug. 21—The Belle of the School (Comedy-Drama) .....
Aug. 28—The Keeper of the Light (Drama)....
Sept. 4—His Winning Way (Comedy).....

RELIANCE.
Aug. 17—Our Mutual Girl, No. 31 (Topical)....
Aug. 19—Izzy Gets the Wrong Bottle (Com.)..
Aug. 22—For the Last Edition (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 24—Our Mutual Girl, No. 32 (Topical)...
Aug. 26—The Stolen Ore (Drama).....
Aug. 29—Through the Dark (Two Parts—Dr.)
Aug. 31—Our Mutual Girl, No. 33 (Topical)...
Sept. 2—The Miner's Baby (Drama).....
Sept. 4—Turned Back (Drama).....

REX.
Aug. 20—A Bowl of Roses (Drama).....
Aug. 23—The Hole in the Garden Wall (Dr.)..
Aug. 27—For the Secret Service (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 30—Out of the Depths (Drama).....
Sept. 3—Daisies (Drama).....
Sept. 6—The Boob's Nemesis (Comedy).....

ROYAL.
Aug. 15—Cupid Dances a Tango (Comedy)....
Aug. 22—His Long Lost Friend (Comedy)....
Aug. 29—A Run for His Money (Comedy)....
Sept. 5—O'Flanagan's Luck (Comedy).....

STERLING.
Aug. 17—His Wife's Flirtation (Comedy).....
—Close to Nature (Educational).....
Aug. 20—Lost in the Studio (Juvenile Com.)..
Aug. 24—A Rural Affair (Juvenile-Comedy)...
Aug. 27—Snookee's Disguise (Comedy).....
Aug. 31—The Tale of a Hat (Comedy).....
Sept. 3—A Bogus Baron (Comedy).....

THANHOUSER.
Aug. 16—Her Big Brother (Drama).....
Aug. 18—McCarn Plays Fate (Two Parts—Dr.)
Aug. 23—A Dog's Good Deed (Drama).....
Aug. 25—Conscience (Two Parts—Drama) ....
Aug. 30—Arty the Artist (Comedy) .....
Sept. 1—A Mother's Choice (Two Parts—Dr.).
Sept. 6—Little Mischief (Comedy).....

UNIVERSAL IKE.
Aug. 18—Universal Ike, Jr., on His Honeymoon (Comedy) .....
Aug. 25—Universal Ike at the Dance of Little L. O. (Comedy) .....
—Turtle Traits (Zoology).....
Sept. 1—Universal Ike, Jr., Almost Gets Married (Comedy) .....

VICTOR.
Aug. 21—The Slavey's Romance (Drama).....
Aug. 24—There is a Destiny (Drama).....
Aug. 28—Counterfeiters (Two Parts—Drama)..
Aug. 31—The Man from Nowhere (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Sept. 4—The Derelict and the Man (Two Parts—Drama) .....

FEATURES.

ALL STAR FEATURE CORP.
July—Dan (Five Parts—Comedy Drama).....
August—The Nightingale (Drama).....

APEX.
July—The Secret Seven (4 parts—Drama)....
July—The Midnight Marriage (4 parts—Dr.)...
August—The Devil's Fiddler (Three Parts—Drama) .....
August—The Suicide Club (Four Parts—Dr.)..

AUSTRO-SERVIAN FILM CO.
August—With Serb and Austrian (Four Parts—Drama) .....

BLACHE.
August—The War Extra (Four Parts—Topical)

COSMOFOTOFILM.
August—What a Woman Will Do (Four Parts—Drama) .....

ECLECTIC.
August—Whiskers (Comedy).....
August—The Boundary Rider (Five Parts—Drama) .....
August—The Masked Motive (Five Parts—Dr.)
August—Perils of Pauline No. 11 (Two Parts—Serial) .....
August—Get Out and Get Under (Comedy).....
August—All Love Excelling (Three Parts—Dr.)
August—The Siren (Five Parts—Drama).....
August—The Masher's Mishap (Comedy).....
August—Nick Winter and the Lost Prince (Three Parts—Drama) .....

FAMOUS PLAYERS.
July 20—The Scales of Justice (Five Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 10—The Better Man (Four Parts—Dr.)..
Aug. 20—Aftermath (Four Parts—Drama).....

GAUMONT.
July 25—The Curse of the Scarabee Ruby (Dr.)
August—War (Drama) .....

GEORGE KLEINE.
August—Anne Boleyn (Three Parts—Drama)..
August—A Kingdom at Stake (Three Parts—Drama) .....
August—Othello (Five Parts—Drama) .....

HEPWORTH-AMERICAN.
August—The Tragedy of Basil Grieve (Three Parts—Drama) .....
August—The Girl from the Sky (Comedy Dr.)..
Aug. 29—The Chimes (Three Parts—Drama)..
—The Terror of the Air (Two Parts—Drama) .....

HISTORICAL PICTURE CO.
August—The Indian Wars (Five Parts—Dr.)..

IVAN FILM PRODUCTIONS.
Aug. 25—Sins of the Parents (Five Parts—Dr.)

ITALA.
August—Cabiria (Twelve Parts—Drama).....

THE KAISER FILM CO.
Aug. 15—Kaiser William II (Topical).....

LASKY.
July 13—The Man on the Box (5 parts—Drama)
Aug. 10—The Call of the North (Five Parts—Drama) .....

LIFE PHOTO FILM CORP.
August—Northern Lights (Five Parts—Drama)

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM CO.
Aug. 10—The Oath of a Viking (Three Parts—Drama) .....

RAMO.
August—The War of Wars, or the Franco-German Invasion of 1914 (Drama)....

SAWYER.
Aug. 20—The Envoy Extraordinary (Five Parts Drama) .....
August—Zingara (Three Parts—Drama).....
August—Her Brother's Disgrace (Three Parts—Drama) .....

SELECT PHOTOPLAY PRODUCING CO.
August—At the Old Cross Roads (Five Parts—Drama) .....

THE DRAMASCOPE CO.
August—$5,000,000 Counterfeiting Plot (Six Parts—Drama) .....

THE I. S. P. CO.
August—Held for Ransom (Four Parts—Dr.)..

UNITED KEANOGRAPH.
August—Money (Six Parts—Drama).....

WARNER'S FEATURES.
Aug. 3—The Tragedy of Room 17 (Three Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 10—The Day of Reckoning (Three Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 17—The Eagle's Refuge (Three Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 24—Across the Border (Three Parts—Dr.)
Aug. 31—The Kidnapped Heiress (Three Parts—Drama) .....

WORLD FILM CORP.
Aug. 10—Uncle Tom's Cabin (Five Parts—Dr.)
Aug. 24—The Lure (Five Parts—Drama)...

ROLL TICKETS

PRICES

Five Thousand	$1.25
Ten Thousand	$2.50
Twenty Thousand	$4.50
Twenty-five Thousand	$5.50
Fifty Thousand	$6.50
One Hundred Thousand	$8.00

Your own special Ticket, any printing, any colors, accurately numbered; every roll guaranteed. Coupon Tickets for Prize Drawings, 5,000 $2.50. Stock Tickets, 6c per 1,000. Prompt shipments. Cash with the order. Get the samples. Send diagram for Reserved Seat Coupon Tickets, serial or dated.

NATIONAL TICKET CO.
SHAMOKIN, PA.

The Suicide Club

4 PARTS

AN ENTHRALLING MASTERPIECE OF FILM PRODUCTION ADAPTED FROM THE NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS, BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

BE AN APEX EXHIBITOR AND BE AT THE TOP OF THE HEAP
NOTHING CAN BEAT THIS SWELL LIST OF FEATURES

QUEEN OF THE COUNTERFEITERS—Our Latest Sensation—4 Parts
THE CLUE OF THE SCARAB—A Drama in a New Vein—4 Parts
THE DARE-DEVIL DETECTIVE—Hayes, the Marvel, Once More—4 Parts
THE DEVIL'S FIDDLER—A Romance of the Latin Quarter—3 Parts
THE SECRET SEVEN—Story of the Roundup of London Crooks—4 Parts
THE EVIL EYE—A Drama of Hypnotism and Heroism—3 Parts

APEX FILM CO.

145 W. 45th ST., NEW YORK. P. P. CRAFT, MGR.
EUROPEAN OFFICE: H. WINIK, 35 LITTLE NEWPORT STREET, LONDON

HUGH HOFFMAN

LICENSED RELEASE DATES

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Geo. Kleine, Pathe, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, Lubin, Vitagraph.

Saturday—Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Melies, Selig, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

Aug. 15—The District Attorney's Burglar (Dr.).
Aug. 17—Tim, the Terror (Comedy).....
—The Game of Freeze-Out (Comedy)..
Aug. 20—The Smuggler's Wife (Drama).....
Aug. 22—The Gypsy Talisman (Drama).....
Aug. 24—The Man from the Past (Drama)....
Aug. 27—The Terrible Lesson (Drama).....
Aug. 29—Spending It Quick (Comedy).....
—Baseball, a grand Old Game (Com.)..

EDISON.

Aug. 14—The One Who Loved Him Best (Special—Two Parts—Drama).....
Aug. 15—While the Tide Was Rising (Drama).
Aug. 17—The Adventure of the Pickpocket (Eighth of the Octavius, Amateur Detective, series—Comedy) .....
Aug. 18—By the Aid of a Film (Tenth of "The Man Who Disappeared" Series—Drama) .....
Aug. 19—The Old Fire Horse (Comedy).....
Aug. 21—The Gilded Kidd (Special—Two Parts—Comedy) .....
Aug. 22—In Lieu of Damages (Drama).....
Aug. 24—Nearly a Widow (Comedy).....
Aug. 25—The Mystery of the Octagonal Room (Tenth of "The Chronicles of Cleek" Series—Drama) .....
Aug. 26—The South African Mines (Industrial).
—Buster and His Coat (Comedy).....
Aug. 28—The Birth of the Star-Spangled Banner (Special—Two Parts—Drama)..
Aug. 29—Treasure Trove (Drama).....
Aug. 31—The Buxom Country Lass ("Wood B. Wedd" Series, No. 9—Comedy).....
Sept. 1—The New York Police Department Carnival (Descriptive).....
Sept. 2—A Village Scandal (Comedy).....
Sept. 4—The Viking Queen (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Sept. 5—Hearts of the Forest (Drama).....

ESSANAY.

Aug. 14—A Gentleman of Leisure (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 15—Broncho Billy Wins Out (Drama)...
Aug. 17—Sweedie and the Double Exposure (Comedy) .....
Aug. 18—The Black Signal (Drama).....
Aug. 19—The Fable of the Two Mandolin Players and the Willing Performer (Comedy) .....
Aug. 20—Slippery Slim and the Claim Agent (Comedy) .....
Aug. 21—The Masked Wrestler (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 22—Broncho Billy's Wild Ride (Drama)..
Aug. 24—Sweedie Springs a Surprise (Com.)...
Aug. 25—Two Men Who Waited (Drama)....
Aug. 26—The Fable of "The Difference Between Learning and Learning How" (Comedy) .....
Aug. 27—Slippery Slim and the Fortune Teller (Western-Comedy) .....
Aug. 28—Seven Sealed Orders (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 29—Broncho Billy's Indian Romance (Western-Drama) .....
Aug. 31—Love and Soda (Comedy).....
Sept. 1—No. 28, Diplomat (Drama) .....
Sept. 2—Fable of the Regular Beanery and the Peachy Newcomer (Comedy) .....
Sept. 3—When Macbeth Came to Snakeville (Comedy) .....
Sept. 4—Under Royal Patronage (Drama—Two Parts) .....
Sept. 5—Broncho Billy, the Vagabond (Dr.)..

KALEM.

Aug. 8—Grey Eagle's Revenge (Drama).....
Aug. 10—The Rajah's Vow (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 11—Old Man Higgenbotham's Daughter (Drama) .....
Aug. 12—At the End of the Rope (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 14—A Substitute for Pants (Comedy)....
Aug. 15—Near Death's Door (Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Old Army Coat (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 18—The Storm at Sea (Drama).....
Aug. 19—The Bond Eternal (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 21—Sherlock Bonehead (Comedy).....
Aug. 22—Kidnapped by Indians (Drama).....
Aug. 24—The Primitive Instinct (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 25—The Counterfeiter's Plot (Drama)....
Aug. 26—The Cave of Death (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 28—When Men Wear Skirts (Comedy)....
Aug. 29—The Car of Death (Drama).....
Aug. 31—The Brand (Special—Two Parts—Dr.)
Sept. 1—The Hand of Fate (Drama).....
Sept. 2—The Oil Well Conspiracy (Drama)...
Sept. 4—The Winking Zulu (Comedy).....
Sept. 5—The Gambler's Reformation (Drama).

GEORGE KLEINE.

July 21—The Stronger Tie (Cines—Special—Two Parts—Drama).....
July 28—On Temptation's Toil (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 4—When War Threatens (Cines-Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 11—The Forbidden Trail (Celio—Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 18—When the Beacon Failed (Cines Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 25—"To Forgive, Divine" (Cines—Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....

LUBIN.

Aug. 13—The Heart Rebellious (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 14—Latin Blood (Drama).....
Aug. 15—They Bought a Boat (Comedy).....
—The Puncture Proof Sock Man (Com.)
Aug. 18—Back to the Farm (Comedy).....
Aug. 19—The Dreamer (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 20—His Brother's Blood (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 21—The Love of Ora San (Drama).....
Aug. 22—Sometimes It Works (Comedy) .....
—Making Auntie Welcome (Comedy)...
Aug. 25—The Widow and the Twins (Comedy).
—The Lucky Rube (Comedy).....
Aug. 26—The Attorney's Decision (Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 27—The Aggressor (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 28—The Better Man (Drama).....
Aug. 29—The Kid's Nap (Comedy).....
Sept. 1—Never Too Old (Comedy).....
—The Green Alarm (Comedy).....
Sept. 2—By Whose Hand (Two Parts—Drama)
Sept. 3—The Face in the Crowd (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Sept. 4—The Shell of Life (Drama).....
Sept. 5—A Fool There Was (Comedy).....

MELIES.

Aug. 15—Voice of the Bells (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 18—A Slight Mistake (Comedy).....
Aug. 19—Children of Fatality (Drama).....
Aug. 20—A Surprising Encounter (Comedy)...
—A Mason's New Assistant (Comedy)..
Aug. 20—The Bulltrainer's Revenge (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 22—The Tell-Tale Photograph (Drama)..
Aug. 25—Circumstantial Evidence (Comedy)...
Aug. 27—The Elopement of Eliza (Comedy)..
Aug. 29—The Man Who Smiled (Special—Two Parts—Comedy) .....

PATHE.

Aug. 10—Typical Russian Dances (Dancing)...
—A Rousing Reception (Comedy).....
Aug. 11—The Art of the Furrier (Vocational)..
Iron and Steel Industry (Bombay) (Educational) .....
Aug. 12—Pathe's Weekly, No. 49 (News)....
Aug. 17—Dakar, the Principal Port of Senegal, French West Africa (Travel)..
—Military Trained Dogs, Belgium (Mil.)
Aug. 18—Cairo, the Capital of Egypt (Travel).
—Uriage and Vicinity (Scenic).....
Aug. 19—Pathe's Weekly, No. 50, 1914 (News).
Aug. 24—Pathe's Daily News, No. 53, 1914 (News) .....
Aug. 24—Edible Fishes of the English Channel (Ocean) .....
Aug. 25—Rapids and Falls at Trondjen (Travel)
—Picturesque France, Lower Brittany (Travel) .....
—From Havre to Buc by Hydro-Aeroplane (Color-Travel) .....
Aug. 26—Pathe's Daily News, No. 54, 1914 (News) .....

SELIG.

Aug. 14—Meller Drammer (Comedy).....
—The Day of the Dog (Comedy).....
Aug. 15—Nan's Victory (Comedy-Drama).....
Aug. 17—The Speck on the Wall (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 17—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 49 (News) .....
Aug. 18—If at First You Don't Succeed (Com.-Drama) .....
Aug. 19—When a Woman's 40 (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 20—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 50 (News) .....
Aug. 21—The Reveler (Comedy) .....
Aug. 22—What Became of Jane? (Drama).....
Aug. 24—The White Mouse (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 24—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 51 (News) .....
Aug. 25—The Sealed Oasis (Drama).....
Aug. 26—The Decision of Jim O'Farrell (Drama) .....
Aug. 27—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 52 (News) .....
Aug. 28—A Low Financier (Comedy).....
—Breaking Into Jail (Comedy).....
Aug. 29—The Harbor of Love (Drama).....
Aug. 31—Who Killed George Graves? (Special Two Parts—Drama).....
Aug. 31—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 53 (News) .....
Sept. 1—Life's Crucible (Drama).....
Sept. 2—To Be Called For (Comedy).....
Sept. 3—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 54 (News) .....
Sept. 4—The House That Went Crazy (Com.).
Sept. 5—Pawn Ticket "913" (Comedy).....

VITAGRAPH.

Aug. 13—The Horse Thief (Drama).....
Aug. 14—Polishing Up (Comedy).....
Aug. 15—The Wheat and the Tares (Special—Two Parts—Drama).....
Aug. 17—Private Dennis Hogan (Drama).....
Aug. 18—An Innocent Delilah (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 19—Taken by Storm (Comedy Drama)...
Aug. 20—The Woes of a Waitress (Drama).....
Aug. 21—The Honeymooners (Comedy).....
Aug. 22—Lily of the Valley (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Aug. 24—Ward's Claim (Western—Drama).....
Aug. 25—Rainy, the Lion Killer (Special—Two Parts—Comedy) .....
Aug. 26—Josie's Declaration of Independence (Comedy) .....
Aug. 27—The Mysterious Lodger (Drama).....
Aug. 28—Such a Hunter (Comedy).....
Aug. 29—Josie's Coney Island Nightmare (Special—Two Parts—Comedy)....
Aug. 31—The Wrong Flat (Comedy).....
Sept. 1—The Hidden Letters (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
Sept. 2—The Lost Cord (Comedy).....
Sept. 3—The Upper Hand (Drama).....
Sept. 4—The Barrel Organ (Comedy).....
Sept. 5—Too Much Uncle (Special—Two Parts—Comedy) .....

Greater New York Film Rental Company
All Specials Supplied. Main Office: 126-132 West 46th Street. Depot: 116-118 East 14th Street, New York.
Licensed Film Supplied to Licensed Exhibitors :-: :-: :-: :-: :-: Write or Call for Particulars

WAR! WAR!! WAR!!!

Is declared in Europe, but

PEACE IN AMERICA

PRINCESS MONA DARKFEATHER, The American Indian, and
FRANK E. MONTGOMERY, Director of Feature Indian and Western Photoplays,

Will arrive in New York City, August 24

Their tepee will be Claridge Hotel, where they will be pleased to meet their old friends as well as the new. Their wigwam is open to all.

Watch for Princess Mona Darkfeather's Indian wardrobe, which will be on exhibition in a prominent Broadway window.

Do You Know

How Much You Pay for Advertising?

Can you say definitely what your results are?

We have a proposition that will cost you less than 1½% with a positive and accurate return.

TRY IT

The whole cost is $15.00
And we will back you up.

Wyanoak Publishing Company
136 West 42d Street, NEW YORK CITY

You Can Fill Your House Every Performance

Each time you please a patron you influence him to return. The best way to hold your people is to project your films through the most efficient lens equipment—its the

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses

The finest detail of every picture is thrown on the screen with surprising clearness when a Bausch & Lomb objective is used—there is a surprising sharpness and brilliancy of illumination.

Regularly supplied with the Edison and Nicholas Power machines and procurable from any film exchange.

Our interesting booklet sent free t oowners and operators.

Optical Co.
566 ST. PAUL ST. ROCHESTER, N. Y.

BON RAY FILM COMPANY

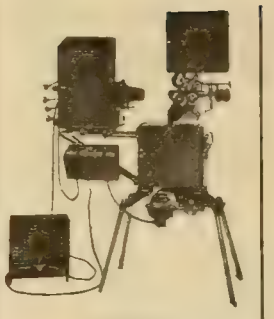
WOODSIDE, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

Largest capacity of any plant in America. Perfect work guaranteed with deliveries when promised. Expert camera men available at all times for any part of the world.

We solicit your film printing and developing at attractive rates.

Tel: Newtown 1671, 1672.
Cable: BONRAY, New York.

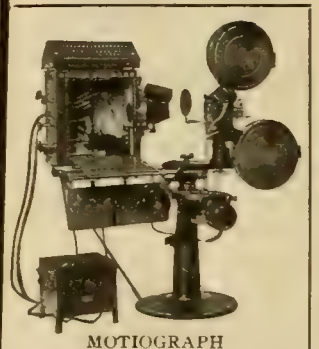
BON RAY FILM COMPANY
F. E. HOLLIDAY, Pres.



POWER'S

Distributors for the Power's 6A Simplex Projector Motiograph 1914

Edison's New Model "D"



MOTIOGRAPH

MACHINES and SUPPLIES

You Can Get What You Want When You Want It. And You Can Get Those Hard-to-Get Supplies at Right Prices

Prompt Shipments and a "Come Back"

Our Motto: If It Isn't Right We'll Make It Right

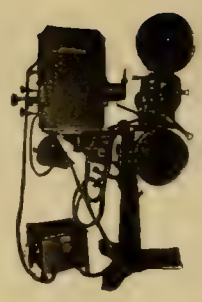
Assures You of That

Deal with a Real Supply House

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 East 14th Street, New York City

The Largest Motion Picture Supply House in America



SIMPLEX

We Equip Motion Picture Theatres Completely

EDISON

We Buy and Sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines

WESTERN FILM BROKERS

37 So. Wabash Avenue - Chicago, Ill.

"FOTOPLAYER"

the instrument that supplies MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES

The American Photo Player Co.

Berkeley, California.

BEST OF CAMERA MEN

Furnished for all Occasions

CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.

4108-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

WE BUY, SELL and RENT

Moving Picture Machines, Films and Chairs

THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE

440 S. Dearborn Chicago, Ill.

GO INTO THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

MAKE MONEY FAST! BE YOUR OWN BOSS!

$30 TO $50 PER NIGHT CLEAR

No Experience Needed

We furnish you with machine, film, curtain and complete outfit ready to go to work with ON OUR EASY PAYMENT PLAN.

Write Now for Our Large FREE Catalogue.

NATIONAL MOVING PICTURE CO.

Dept. M. P., Ellsworth Bldg., Chicago

The W. W. KIMBALL CO.

CHICAGO

announce the removal of their Eastern headquarters from 150 Fifth Avenue to the Columbia Bank Building,

507 Fifth Avenue, at Forty-second St., New York

The personnel and equipment of the new offices provide for every requirement of organ design, sales and maintenance. Technical information regarding weights and dimensions of organ parts and the division and arrangement of organ spaces will be cheerfully supplied to architects and prospective buyers, and expert assistance will be rendered in the solution of acoustical and engineering problems. A trained mechanical staff is attached to this office for the erection of new Kimball organs and the regulation and tuning of organs of all makes under yearly contract.

The W. W. Kimball Company differentiate between the demands of the church, the theatre and the home, and build organs which are adapted to each distinct purpose.

The KIMBALL THEATRE ORGAN is a musical instrument first, provided with all the accessories that have been found to be desirable, and it is built to stand constant daily use. It draws and holds the audiences as no other musical instrument has done. It may be combined with the perfect Kimball Solo Player, giving solo and accompaniment through the compass of manuals and pedals, with or without automatic control of stops and expression. These organs are constructed throughout on principles fully protected by numerous United States patents, owned and used exclusively by the W. W. Kimball Company.

The new offices are most accessible by train, subway, elevated and surface cars and the Fifth Avenue motor 'bus lines. All visitors will be made welcome.

W. W. KIMBALL COMPANY

ROBERT ELLIOT, Eastern Manager

Telephone: Murray Hill 2209 JAMES L. FITZPATRICK, Associated

HENNEGAN'S COLORED PROGRAMS

Beautiful productions of the Off Set Press, printed in colors on heavy paper. Low in price, rich in color, handsome designs. Just the thing for enterprising managers, who desire to add tone to their houses. Send for Free Samples and Prices.

Series Nos. 2 and 4	5,000	$17.50	10,000	$34.00
Series No. 3	5,000	12.50	10,000	24.00

HENNEGAN'S PILLOW TOPS

A splendid assortment of 18 players. Beautiful Sepia Photo, on heavy Lusterine—18 x 18 inches. Price 50c. each—50 for $20.00—100 for $35.00. With every 50 order we furnish 1,000 coupons, intended for distribution to your patrons at matinees or dull nights.

New Date Strips—Day Strips—Three-Sheet Panels—One Sheets, etc.

HENNEGAN & CO. LITHOGRAPHERS PRINTERS
Cincinnati, O.

Awarded Medal at London, England, Printing Exposition, May, 1914.

PUT in your own lighting plant and pay for it with your Central Station bills. A Foos generating set will produce current for less than 3 cents per kilowatt, and is more reliable than service from a Central Station.

Ask for Bulletin 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO.
Springfield, Ohio.

BEAUTIFY YOUR THEATER WITH FLORAL DECORATIONS

It gives artistic Atmosphere. It produces Charm. It gives an appearance of Culture — enhances Beauty— delights your Patrons—produces Tone and Class. It is a profitable-patronage building Investment. We have every imaginable floral effec. and botanical production of America and Europe.

Beautiful Colored Catalogue Mailed Free to You

We Specialize on Floral Parades and Summer Specialties

BOTANICAL DECORATING CO.
504 South Fifth Avenue CHICAGO

READ THIS: We quote absolutely the lowest prices ever offered on reliable goods.

G. W. BRADENBURGH

802 VINE STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

LARGEST AND BEST LIST OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND FEATURE FILMS EVER OFFERED—4,000,000 feet of comedy, drama, and scenic; 1,500,000 feet of Features, two, three, four, five and six reel masterpieces. All multiple reels are furnished with one, three and six sheet posters, ordinary films supplied with one sheets gratis.

WRITE FOR LISTS AND PRICES.

ALL SUPPLIES FOR THE EXCHANGE ALWAYS ON HAND.

No. 27

Absolutely Reliable

Safeguard Against Panic Disasters
Approved by
New York Board of Fire Underwriters
City of New York, Bureau of Buildings

Applied on thousands of buildings in more than 500 cities in the U. S. A. and Canada

Send for Catalogue No. 12D

Von Duprin
Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latches
"Made on Honor"
CAN YOU AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT THEM?

VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO.
General Distributors
"Safe exit is a universal demand" Indianapolis, Indiana, U. S. A.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY

(INCORPORATED)

Jobbers for Powers, Edison, Motiograph and Simplex

LARGEST LEADING SUPPLY HOUSE IN AMERICA

Mercury Arc Rectifier	Wagner Converters
Flame Arc Lamps	Brass and Wood Frames
Automatic Ticket Registers	Ticket Choppers
Exit Signs	Asbestos State Booths
Slide Ink	Ft. Wayne Compensares
Carrying Cases	Fire Extinguishers
Tickets	Fire Boxes
Condensers	Carbons
Pianos	Cement
Chairs	Trap Drum Effects

MIRROR SCREENS
PROMPT SHIPMENTS BACKED BY A SOLID GUARANTEE
A Few Slightly Used Machines
N. W. corner 13th and Race Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and anyone can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact, they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of $3.50 we will send, by parcel post, prepaid and insured, the following:
24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address:

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th Street Brooklyn, N. Y.

Erker's

"The House to tie to"

Every Exhibitor Needs Supplies
We Have Them—Everything You Need
We've Got the Goods—Waiting for Your Orders
Our Catalogues will explain all

ERKER'S
608 Olive Street St. Louis, Mo.

F. O. NIELSEN, booking

"THE SPOILERS"

For the States of

OHIO, WISCONSIN, MICHIGAN, INDIANA and ILLINOIS

(EXCEPT COOK COUNTY)

WRITE OR WIRE

720 SCHILLER BLDG., CHICAGO

NOW READY

BOUND VOLUMES

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

VOLUME No. 20
APRIL—JUNE, 1914

$1.50—EACH—$1.50

Express Charges Collect.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
17 Madison Avenue, New York City

Capt. F. E. Kleinschmidt's

Arctic Hunt

WALRUS MILLING

in six reels

Native and Animal Life in the North. A revelation of life and affairs in the frigid zone. An intimate, close range study of Moose, Caribou, Sea Lion, Polar Bear, Great Kodiack Bear, Walrus and millions of Birds on rookeries. Icebergs the size of twenty-story buildings, precipitated headlong into the sea.

Chance to secure the bargain of a lifetime in Exclusive State Rights

Lecture, Press matter, Lobby display, Lantern Slides
Attractive Litho Paper 24 Sheets, 6, 3 and 1 Sheets

Arctic Film Co. Suite 1209—220 W. 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 3559
Booking New York State

SEEBURG "MOTION PICTURE PLAYER"

It has solved one of the Big Problems of the Moving Picture Business.

"The Wonder of them all"

Played either manually or automatically, it produces real music for the pictures.

Get Complete Information on it by Addressing

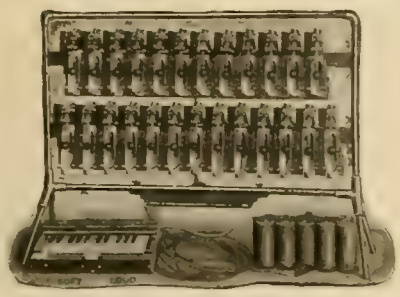
J. P. SEEBURG PIANO CO., Manufacturers, 209 S. Republic Building STATE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

J-M ASBESTOS BOOTHS AND CURTAINS

Made in styles to meet all requirements. They meet the approval of fire underwriters of every city. Write for Booklet. H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO., New York and Every Large City.

DEAGAN UNAPHONE

FOR MOTION PICTURE THEATRES



EASY TO BUY
EASY TO PLAY
EASY TO CARRY
ALWAYS A HIT

Write for particulars.

J. C. DEAGAN,

Deagan Building,
1760 Berteau Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs.

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
Archer Ave. and Leo St., CHICAGO, ILL.

TYPE W FLAME ARC
Powerful LAMPS Economical
For brilliantly illuminating the outside of your theatre
General Electric Company
General Office, Schenectady, N.Y. 4007

Manufacturers of the Wonderful
REMBUSCH PATENTED GLASS MIRROR SCREEN
And all other kinds of Curtains for Moving Picture Projection, White Opaque, Glass Transparent Screens for Rear Projection, Goldcloth Fibre Screens, Mirrorcloth Fibre Screens, Seamless with Stretchers or Rollers.
Phone Seven-Eleven F. J. REMBUSCH, Pres.

MIRROR SCREEN COMPANY, INC.
SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA

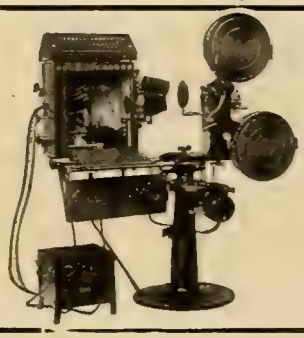
Leave a high door or a ten inch slot in your new theatre because eventually you will buy a Glass Mirror Screen. Why not now?

Nine different finishes. For wide or narrow houses.

MOTIOGRAPH
FLICKERLESS PROJECTOR

MOTIOGRAPH SATISFACTION

The
Enterprise Optical Mfg. Company
564 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.



1914
MOTIOGRAPH
A WINNER

MOTIOGRAPH SIMPLICITY

SMALL UP-KEEP
MOTIOGRAPH

"YOU CAN'T MAKE A SILK PURSE FROM A SOW'S EAR"

AND FOR THE SAME REASON YOU CANNOT GET A PERFECT SCREEN FROM A PIECE OF WHITE CANVAS—FROM PLASTER OR FROM TIN. IF YOU DON'T HAVE A PERFECT SCREEN YOU CANNOT GET PERFECT PROJECTION. IN THIS DAY, IF YOU DON'T HAVE PERFECT PROJECTION, YOU WILL DO NO BUSINESS.

THERE, MR. EXHIBITOR, IS THE SITUATION IN A NUTSHELL

"THE PEERLESS" The Indoor Screen —THE DAY and NIGHT SCREEN— "THE PIONEER" The Outdoor Screen

"THE SCREEN WITHOUT A SEAM"

THE SCREEN OF QUALITY THE SCREEN DE LUXE

INSURES PERFECT PROJECTION

WORLD'S TOWER BUILDING---110 WEST 40th ST., N. Y.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE TELEPHONE 7930 BRYANT ARRANGE FOR TEST

Branch Offices and Distributing Centers at
PHILADELPHIA, NEW ORLEANS, ATLANTA, EL PASO, MEMPHIS, KANSAS CITY, DES MOINES, SAN FRANCISCO
WASHINGTON, LOS ANGELES, SEATTLE, PARIS, BERLIN, LONDON

TITLES

Our Title Department has been reorganized, elaborately equipped and placed under the direction of recognized experts.

Its highly perfected apparatus, linotype machine and job presses enable us to produce the most difficult title work in any language—artistically, accurately and quickly—and at lower prices than have ever yet been quoted.

Developing & Printing

Save money and insure the best results by entrusting your work to the largest and most complete commercial plant in America.

CENTAUR FILM COMPANY

Bayonne, N. J., and 1600 Broadway

"How clear the pictures are!"

You've often overheard that remark—and it's as strong a commendation, brings as much business as does a favorable comment on the picture story itself.

The "clearest pictures" are on Eastman film because the product is right, chemically and physically.

It is easily identifiable by the stencil "Eastman" in the margin.

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

THE J. H. GENTER CO., Inc., Newburgh, New York

THE SYMBOL OF SUPERIORITY IN PERFECT PROJECTION IS

$1000.00—MIRROROIDE—$1000.00

THE SCREEN THAT MADE MOVIES FAMOUS THE WORLD OVER

Get our large free samples. Test against any screen on earth

USE THE EYES GOD GAVE YOU

Mirroroide is Sold Under a Positive 5-Year Guarantee. Over 8000 Now in Use : 8000

MADE IN THREE TINTS—PALE GOLD, SILVER FLESH, SILVER WHITE

$1,000 CASH—NO SCREEN ON EARTH CAN STAND THE TESTS THAT MIRROROIDE WILL. LET US SHOW YOU.

SOLD THE WORLD OVER AT 36 1-9 Cents a Square Foot. $3.25 a Square Yard.

WRITE NOW—DO IT NOW

MIRROROIDE PATENTS PENDING

Non-Breakable and Sanitary STEEL — HIGH Quality — LOW Price — and CAST IRON

Opera Chairs

immediate shipment on many styles; Second Hand Chairs; out-of-door seating. Send measurements for FREE SEATING PLAN. Mention this paper.

STEEL FURNITURE CO.

Grand Rapids, Mich.; New York, 150 Fifth Ave. Pittsburgh, 318 Bissell Blk.; Boston, 69 Pearl St.

OPERA CHAIRS

Latest and Best in Seats

SEND FOR OUR PRICES BEFORE BUYING

BENNETT SEATING CO

537 West Market St.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Are You Tired

of playing waltzes and popular songs for all your pictures? Try "bringing out" the dramatic scenes with dramatic music. The

Orpheum Collection

contains the best music of this kind published. Issued in Three Series:

No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3

Piano, (24 pages each), 58 cts. for each series; $1.15 for any two; $1.70 for all three. Violin, 40 cts. each; 75 cts. for any two; $1.05 for all three. Cornet, 35 cts. each; 65 cts. any two; 95 cts. all three. First and second series have parts for Cello, Flute, Clarinet, Trombone and Drums. Practical for piano alone or in combination with any above instruments. Discounts on orders for four or more parts. Send for free sample pages. Note new address.

CLARENCE E. SINN

1942 West 21st St. Chicago, Ill.

STEEL OR IRON STANDARDS

AGENCIES:

H. S. Ansley, 1476 B'way, Long Acre Bldg., New York City. 'Phone 5619 Bryant

California Seating Company, 720 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Cal.

H. A. Johnson Seating Company, 1214½ Third Ave., Seattle, Wash.

THE WISCONSIN SEATING COMPANY

New London, Wis., U. S. A.

Steel Standards will not break

REAL QUALITY CHAIRS FOR QUALITY REEL SHOWS

Ask for FREE booklet V-2 upholstered Veneer Seating V-3

If you are interested in

Motion Picture Theatre Seating

send ground sketch and we will draft for you FREE seating plan showing the most economical arrangement of seating for your theatre.

American Seating Co.

Display Rooms and Installation Service

14 E. Jackson Blvd., CHICAGO 15 E. 32nd St., NEW YORK

Pittsburg, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Forty Other Large Cities

---

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE

1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865

WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.

115-117 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.

Branches in all Leading Cities

New York Office 1472 Broadway, Long Acre Bldg.

Seattle Office 508-10-12 First Ave., So.

San Francisco Office 782 Mission St.

The "Standardized" Theatre Chairs

Do you want a life-saving chair?
Do you want a space-saving chair?
Do you want a sanitary chair?
Do you want a scientifically built, double standard chair?

We operate the largest exclusive theatre chair factory in the world, AND SELL DIRECT TO YOU. WRITE US

The HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio

COMING!

The Great Train Robbery

(IN FOUR PARTS)

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

220 WEST 42d STREET NEW YORK CITY

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

BOOKLET 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS

of General Electric Company

1402 Broadway

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

733

ILLINOIS ONLY

"The Black Triangle"

5 Reels

Bookings from Sept. 1st

General Feature Film Co.

Mallers Bldg., Chicago

THE MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.

Presents for its feature release

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 6

FOR THOSE UNBORN

A two-part drama of strong purpose and powerful appeal, directed by Wm. Christy Cabanne, introducing in the leading role

BLANCHE SWEET

Who has won world-wide fame in Judith of Bethulia, The Escape, Home, Sweet Home and many other "Griffith" successes

BLANCHE SWEET
Who appears exclusively in "Griffith" Specials and Majestic regular features.

Majestic Standard of Quality

It is of the utmost importance to exhibitors to be able to count in advance on the quality of the regular releases of different producing companies.

That exhibitors may judge for themselves just how far the MAJESTIC Company has progressed in establishing a dependable standard of excellence in its regular releases, we append the following list of one-reel releases and two-part features issued in the past three months:

Double Reel Features	Single Reels
The Double Knot	The Swindlers
The Soul of Honor	The Newer Woman
The Intruder	Their First Acquaintance
The Rebellion of Kitty Belle	Her Birthday Present
The Severed Thong	The Only Clue
Arms and the Gringo	Lest We Forget
The Angel of Contention	Down by the Sounding Sea
The Painted Lady	The Burden
The Mystery of the Hindu Image	The Idiot
Moonshine Molly	The Saving Flame
The Tavern of Tragedy	The Inner Conscience
Her Mother's Necklace	A Lesson in Mechanics
The Second Mrs. Roebuck	Granny

Not every one of these pictures is as good as we should have liked, but 90% have won strong commendation, all are up to general average and many have been pronounced especially superior.

MAJESTIC GUIDE FOR EXHIBITORS

(In which we try to tell only the truth about all Majestic releases)

GRANNY (1 Reel) Release date Tuesday, August 25. A picture of pathos and humor with delightful Dorothy Gish in the leading part.

FRENCHY (2 Reels) Release date Sunday, August 30. A feature of charm and interest, adapted from a popular Pattullo magazine story. It is well produced and has a unique characterization of a dashing French cowboy.

THE MILKFED BOY (1 Reel) Release date Tuesday, September 1. A domestic story with an excellent lesson to teach. The acting is not up to Majestic standard but nevertheless the picture should please.

FOR THOSE UNBORN (2 Reels) Release date Sunday, September 6. This picture, with Blanche Sweet in the principal part, should prove a remarkably strong feature. Next week we shall give you a more decided opinion.

D. W. GRIFFITH HAS GENERAL SUPERVISION OVER MAJESTIC RELEASES

Studio,
4500 Sunset Blvd.
Los Angeles, Cal.

Majestic Motion Picture Co.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

Business Office:
29 Union Sq. West,
New York City

THE HOUSE OF SELIG

SELIG MONEY MAKERS FOR YOU

Selig pictures draw the crowds because Selig productions are thrilling, powerful and picturesque. Demand Selig pictures at your exchange.

SELIG CURRENT RELEASES—Week of Aug. 31—Sept. 5

THEY WILL ATTRACT PATRONS TO YOUR THEATRE.

RELEASED AUGUST 31—IN TWO REELS.

Who Killed George Graves?

A tremendous Selig dramatic picture production. The story of a dreadful conspiracy.

RELEASED AUGUST 31—IN ONE REEL.

The Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 1—IN ONE REEL.

Life's Crucible.

A Selig melodrama telling a love story that ends well. Well worth seeing.

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 2—IN ONE REEL.

To Be Called For.

A Selig light comedy full of laughable situations. Very amusing.

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 3—IN ONE REEL.

The Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 4—IN ONE REEL.

The House that Went Crazy.

One of the most laughable pictures ever produced. Illustrating the mishaps of an inventor when the electric wires became crossed.

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 5—IN ONE REEL.

Pawn Ticket "913."

Relating the misadventures of a pawn ticket, which proved to be a pledge of love.

THREE BIG WINNERS

Order them from Special Feature Department of The General Film Co. Write your nearest exchange for them.

IN TUNE WITH THE WILD

A Selig Jungle-Zoo three-reel special feature, featuring KATHLYN WILLIAMS.

CHIP, OF THE FLYING "U"

A hilarious Selig three-reel comedy special, featuring KATHLYN WILLIAMS.

THE FIFTH MAN

A spectacular Selig three-reel Jungle-Zoo animal picture-play, featuring BESSIE EYTON.

WATCH FOR "THE ROSARY."

A splendid Selig dramatic special. Scenario from Rowland and Clifford's great play.

Brilliant Selig four-color posters for all Selig releases. Order some for your bill-boards and to brighten your lobby.

"THE SPOILERS"

The Selig masterpiece, which has already coined thousands of dollars for motion picture houses. This picture will make money for you.
NOTE: For state rights for "THE SPOILERS" write to our General Offices.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

General Offices, 20 E. Randolph Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

SELIG LEADS OTHERS FOLLOW

SELIG CREATES OTHERS IMITATE

THE WORLDS FOREMOST PRODUCER

BIG FEATURES

OF

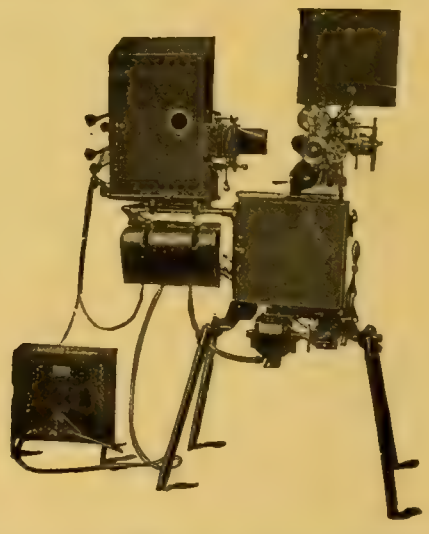
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH

No. 6A

OUR LOOP SETTER keeps the film always in motion, the Lower Loop is Maintained Automatically and dark screens are impossible.

Our Intermittent Movement many times stronger than any other make, longer period of pictures on the screen is obtained, films are better protected and greater definition and clearer pictures are accomplished.

WRITE FOR CATALOG G



THESE FEATURES ARE EXCLUSIVE

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

NINETY GOLD STREET NEW YORK CITY

Vol. 21, No. 10 September 5, 1914 Price 10 Cents

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "The Silent Valley" (Imp—2 parts).

Post Office Box 226
Madison Square Station

NEW YORK

17 Madison Avenue
Telephone Madison Square 3510

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

By Harold MacGrath

Thanhouser's Million Dollar Motion Picture Production

The Million Dollar Mystery is by far the most successful serial production ever brought out. Eleven episodes have already been released. Two-reel episodes are now being released each week. The entire story will take 46 reels. It has been enacted by an all-star Thanhouser cast. The story itself is now appearing in nearly 200 leading newspapers.

Get this point: $10,000.00 will be paid for the best 100-word solution of the mystery. Exhibitors who are seeking packed houses should apply for bookings at once. The Million Dollar Mystery is an independent release and may be obtained regardless of the regular program being used.

SYNDICATE FILM CORPORATION

71 W. 23rd Street, New York — Room 411, 5 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago

Or Syndicate Film Corporation Representative at any Mutual Exchange in the U. S. and Canada

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK:

Tuesday, Sept. 1st. "A Mother's Choice." A 2-reel drama featuring Carey L. Hastings, Arthur Bauer, Charles Emerson, Nolan Gane, Ernest C. Ward and Peggy Bourke.

Sunday, September 6th. "Little Mischief." A play of childhood, featuring Helen Badgley, Carey L. Hastings and Ethel Jewett.

THANHOUSER FILM CORPORATION, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Head European Office, Thanhouser Films, Ltd., London, W. C., England

Thanhouser releases will continue to be features of the Mutual Program

Thanhouser

ESSANAY

PRESENTS

"The Plum Tree"

A PRIZE MYSTERY DRAMA
COMPLETE IN 3 ACTS

Find the Missing Paragraph

HERE IS THE PLAN: The story of "THE PLUM TREE" will be published in The Ladies' World Magazine for October. This edition will be in the hands of subscribers and on the newsstands by September 18, the DATE ON WHICH THIS BIG PHOTOPLAY DRAMA WILL BE RELEASED BY THE ESSANAY COMPANY. In the magazine story the paragraph in which the mystery is solved will be missing. In the Essanay drama the MISSING PARAGRAPH WILL BE SHOWN IN PICTURES AND PRIZES WILL BE GIVEN THE ONES WHO FIND IT AND WRITE THE BEST PARAGRAPH.

THIS IS NO SERIAL PICTURE
The Entire Play is COMPLETE IN THREE REELS

More than FOUR MILLION persons will read the story in THE LADIES' WORLD—MILLIONS WILL SEE THIS GREAT ESSANAY DRAMA IN FILM FORM.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN is featured in this drama and the photoplay fans of the world will demand to see him in this his best part.

THE WISE EXHIBITOR WHO BOOKS "THE PLUM TREE" WILL BOOK THE BIGGEST BUSINESS OF THE YEAR.

Released through the General Film Company's Feature Department

ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

Downtown Offices, 521 First National Bank Building. Laboratories and studios, 1333 Argyle St., Chicago.

$50,000 GIFT

To Universal Exhibitors To Help Boom Fall Business

"Richelieu"

That wonderful film spectacle has been placed on the regular program as a 101 Bison, released September 26th.

The honest profit that the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and the Exchanges are entitled to, will be sacrificed and given to you, as a gift, to help you start your fall business right.

Ten thousand Universal exhibitors will save the extra $5.00 RICHELIEU would have cost them.

You can save part of the $50,000 if you get busy at once and take advantage of the Universal cooperative plan. Book RICHELIEU as early and as long as posible.

Watch for "Shadows!"

A Two Reel King Baggot Imp Special.

Ready Week of Sept. 21st

In which King Baggot plays ten distinctive parts —two women and eight men.

No one else in the cast

MOVING UNIVERSAL PICTURES

VICTOR
"A MYSTERIOUS MYSTERY"

GOLD SEAL
"TREY O'HEARTS"
EPISODE No. 6

REX
"HELPING MOTHER"

UNIVERSAL FILM

1600 BROADWAY

CARL LAEM

IMP
KING BAGGOT IN
"THE SILENT VALLEY"

101 BISON
"OUR ENEMY'S SPY"

ECLAIR
"BOY"

Some Features

That Your Competitors Would Pay Millions For

Released

WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 7th

VICTOR—"Little Meg and I"—A sea Drama with Warren Kerrigan.

IMP—"The Silent Valley"—A two reel King Baggot emotional drama.

GOLD SEAL—"Trey O' Hearts"—No. 6—The Crack O' Doom—A punch in every inch.

ECLAIR—"Boy"—A powerful two reel drama.

REX—"Helping Mother"—Three reel dramatic masterpiece.

VICTOR—"A Mysterious Mystery"—Two reel sensational drama.

101 BISON—"Our Enemy's Spy"—Three reel Military Drama with Marie Walcamp and Wm. Clifford.

Watch for "Shadows!"

A Two Reel King Baggot Imp Special

Ready Week of Sept. 21st

The greatest novelty ever put on a program.

King Baggot's most wonderful offering.

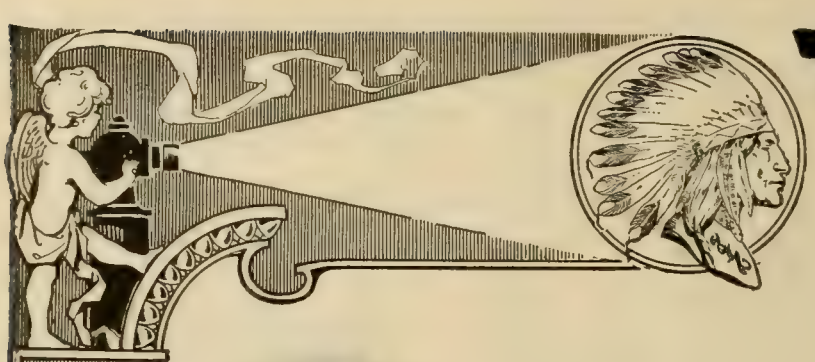
A positive crowd getter.

MOVING UNIVERSAL PICTURES

MANUFACTURING CO.

MLE. President

NEW YORK CITY



ESSA

Six - A

G. M. ANDERSON

Three Big Laughs

Three Big Thrills

MARGUERITE CLAYTON

Released Monday, September 7

"When Knights Were Bold"

A side-splitting comedy of "Ye Olden Days," played with modern equipment.

Released Tuesday, September 8

"Bill's Boy"

A heart interest drama showing that it is possible for a convict to be a real "man." Adapted from The Munsey Magazines.

Released Wednesday, September 9

THE FABLE OF

"The Honeymoon that Tried to Come Back"

By GEORGE ADE

How "Hubby" got stung when he tried to "fix things up" with his wife.

Released Thursday, September 10

"Snakeville's Most Popular Lady"

How a "split ticket" spelled victory for a stranger.

Released Friday, September 11

"The Devil's Signature"

(IN TWO ACTS)

Adapted from The Munsey Magazines

A great mystery drama—a story of realism that will thrill from th first to the last foot of film one of those big Essanay productio that always draw packed houses.

Released Saturday, September 12

"Broncho Billy, a Friend in Need"

A western drama, showing how Broncho Billy saves a girl fro being robbed by a gang of desperate criminals. Featuring G. M ANDERSON.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN

First to Make Films Recognized as Standard

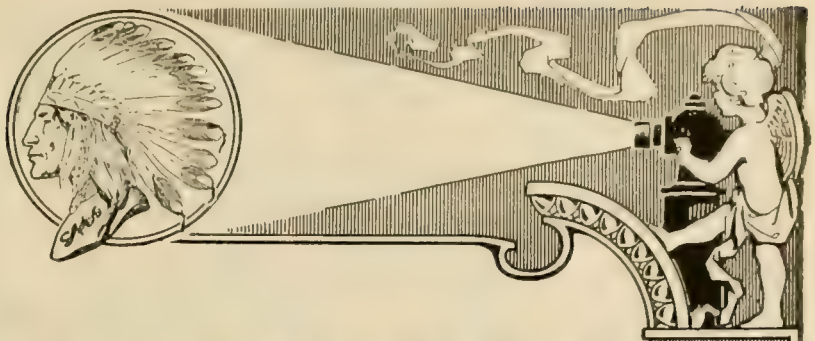
Always the Best

VICTOR POTEL
as "Slippery Slim"

Essanay Film

Laboratory and Studios, 1333 Argyle St., Chicago. Downtown Offices 521 F

-Week



A FEW BIG FEATURES

"ONE WONDERFUL NIGHT"

(In 4 Acts)

Exhibitors everywhere are calling it "one wonderful picture." They are booking it twice and three times and asking for more.

"THE GOOD=FOR=NOTHING"

A Western drama in 4 acts, featuring the greatest of all photoplay actors—G. M. ANDERSON. This play abounds in red blood and thrills.

"BLOOD WILL TELL"

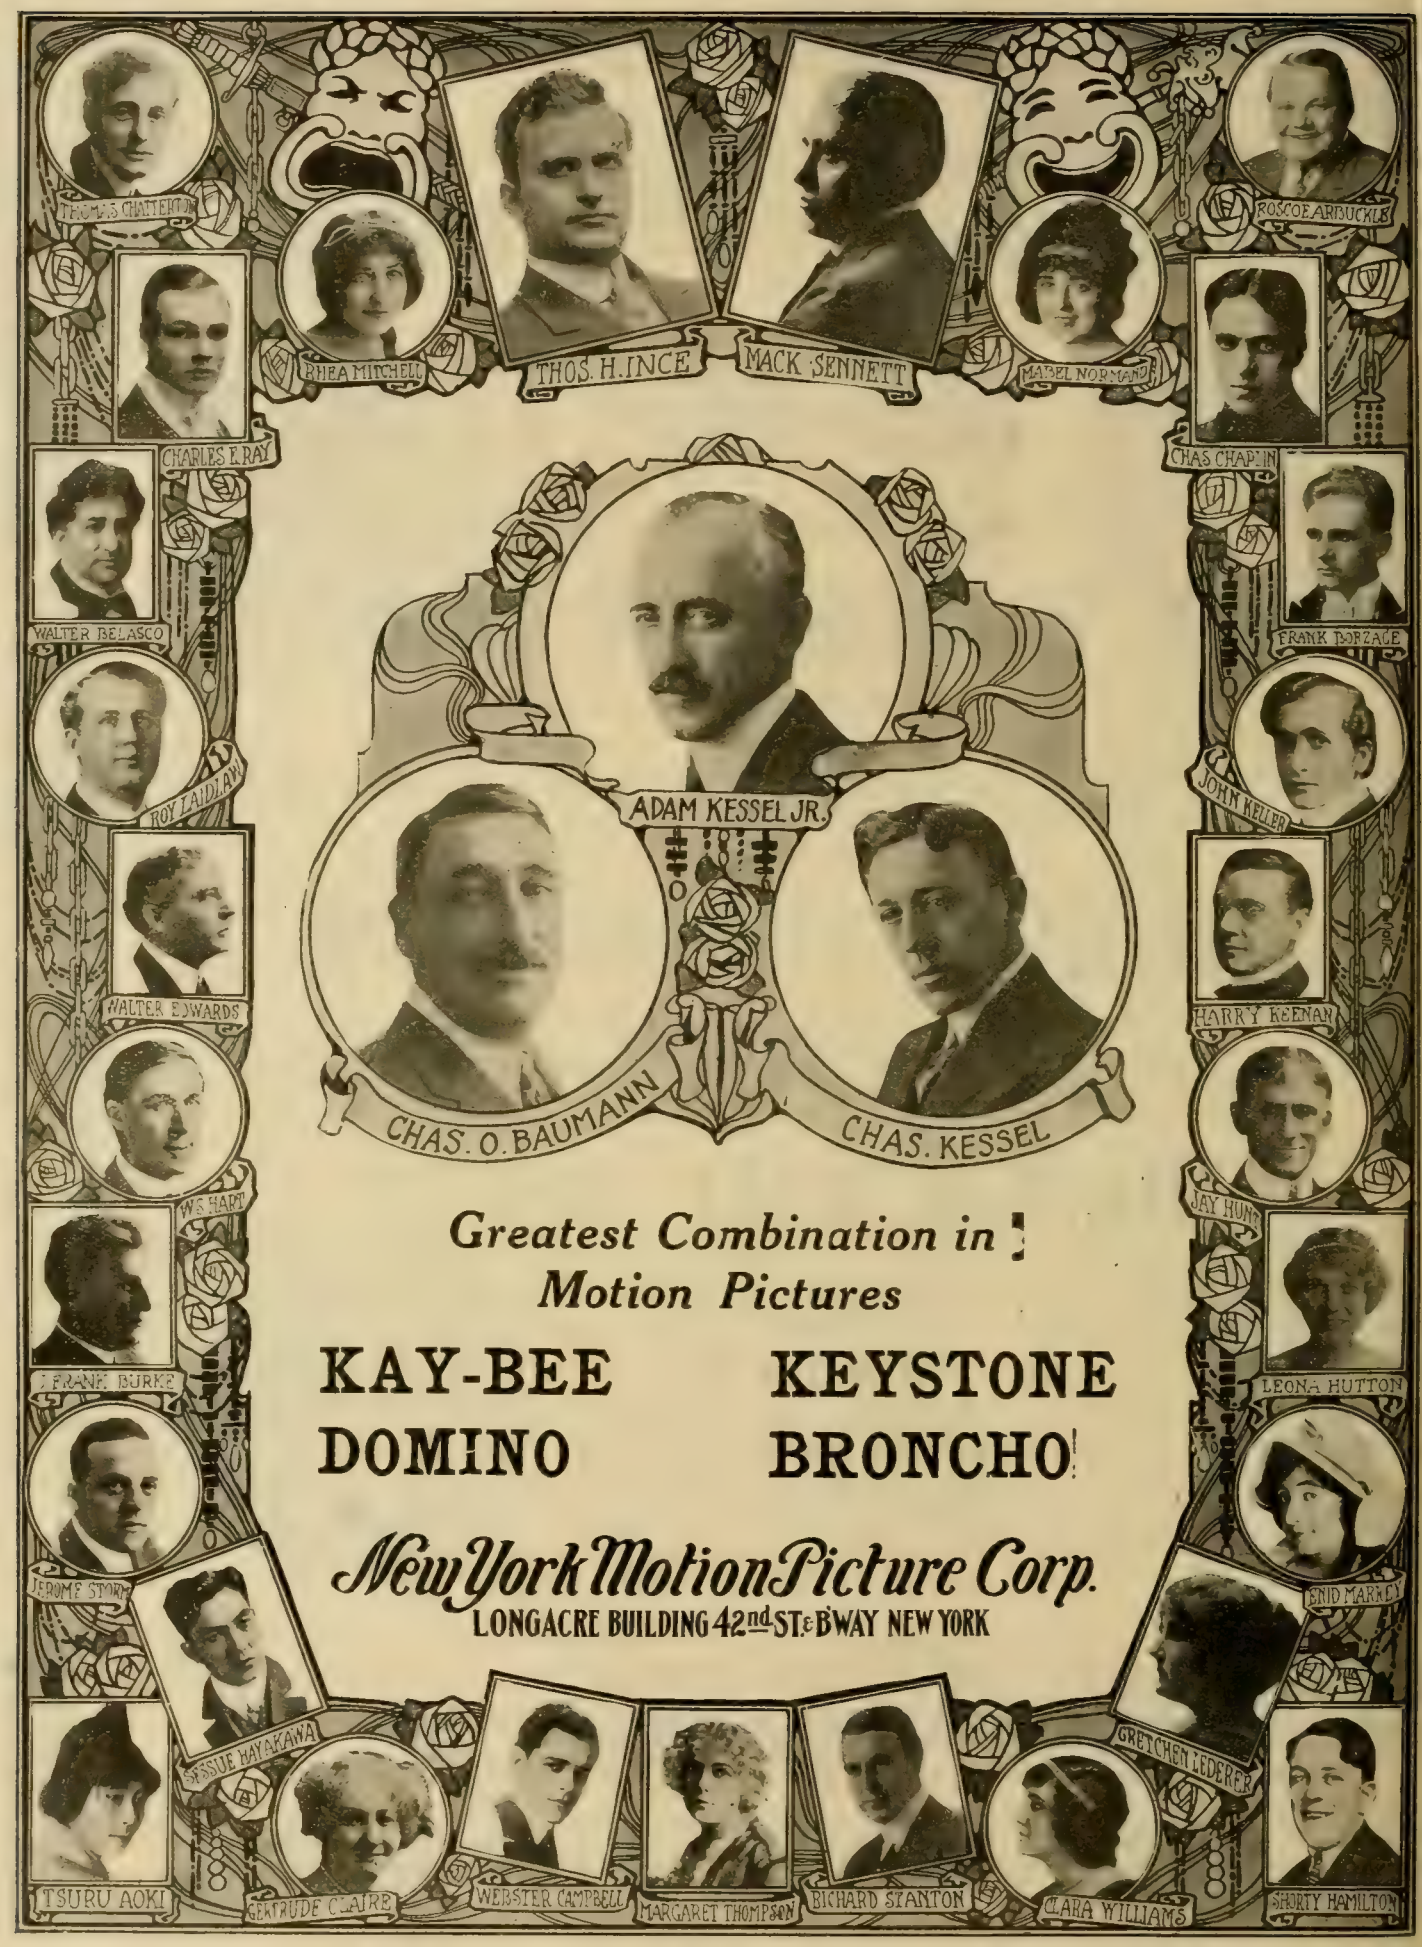
One of the greatest 3-act Colonial dramas ever produced. Thousands of dollars alone were spent on the settings for this picture.

"AMBUSHED"

A new kind of 3-act drama of mystery and adventure that is drawing packed houses everywhere.

Manufacturing Co.

lational Bank Building. Branch Offices in London, Paris, Berlin, Barcelona.



Greatest Combination in Motion Pictures

KAY-BEE KEYSTONE

DOMINO BRONCHO

New York Motion Picture Corp.

LONGACRE BUILDING 42nd ST. & B'WAY NEW YORK

THE WAR

WILL NOT AFFECT THE SUPPLY OF

HEPWORTH & TURNER FILMS

THE HEPWORTH MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LONDON, AND THE TURNER FILMS, LTD., BEG TO ANNOUNCE THAT THE EUROPEAN CONFLICT WILL BEAR NO EFFECT UPON THE PRODUCTION AND RELEASING OF THEIR FILMS AND THAT THE SAME STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE WILL BE MAINTAINED AS HERETOFORE

SPECIAL NOTE

IN SPITE OF THIS CRISIS, HEPWORTH'S AND TURNER'S WILL NOT DUPLICATE.

EVERY PRINT WILL BE TAKEN DIRECT FROM THE ORIGINAL NEGATIVE.

FEATURE AND SPLIT REELS RELEASED WEEKLY

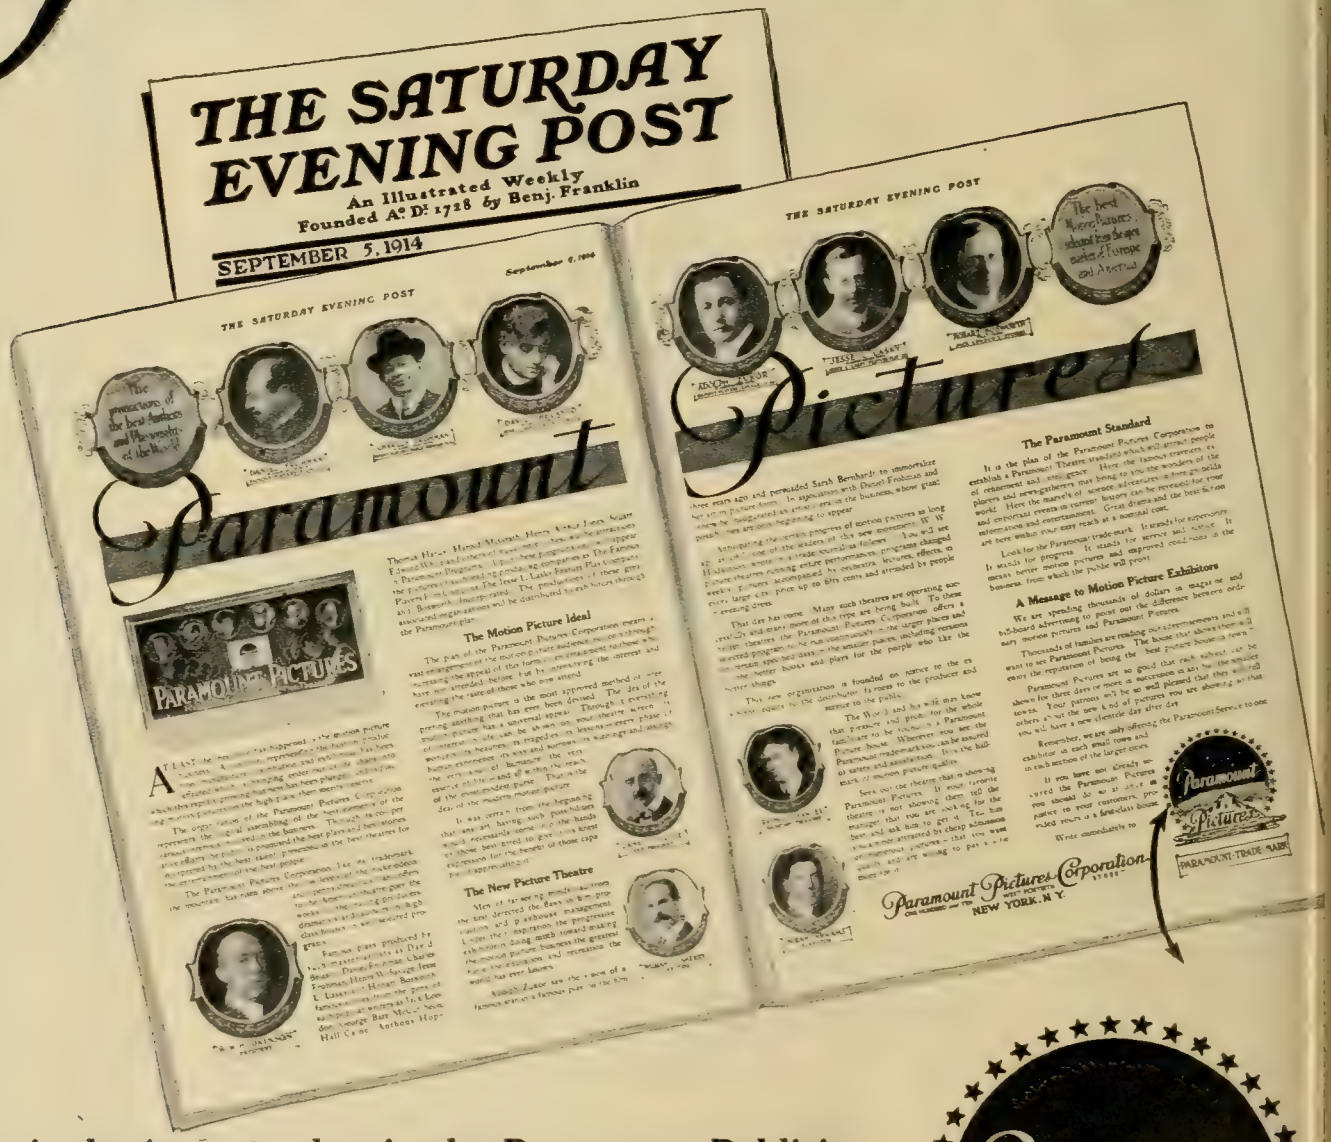
DELIVERY GUARANTEED

HEPWORTH AMERICAN FILM CORPORATION

WORLD'S TOWER BUILDING
110-112 WEST 40th ST., NEW YORK
Telephone 3095 Bryant

The Productions of the Famous Players Film Company, and Bosworth, Inc.

Paramount



—here is the first big shot in the Paramount Publicity Campaign—a double page spread in the September 5th issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

This will be followed monthly by full pages.

The Post is unquestionably the most valuable medium thru' which the message of Paramount can be conveyed to the public. The issue in which this double page spread appears has a circulation of approximately two million and a quarter, so it is safe to say this announcement will be read by at least ten million (10,000,000) people—one out of every ten in the United States!

Company; Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play constitute the Paramount Program

Publicity—

Paramount is Not Promising—

Paramount is now conducting a gigantic advertising campaign that will cause hundreds of thousands, yes, millions, of people who can afford to pay ten, fifteen, twenty-five and even fifty cents, to look for the house showing the Paramount Trade Mark.

The Paramount Campaign is reaching hundreds of thousands of people who are already regular attendants at the better grade of motion picture shows—and this publicity will be instrumental in holding their interest and causing them to patronize Paramount Houses.

The Paramount Campaign is naturally reaching thousands of people who frequent "nickelodeons"—and this publicity will show them the difference between a first class house and the ones they are at present attending.

The Paramount Campaign is also reaching thousands of people who do not go to any motion picture theatre—and this publicity will convince them that now they can see a two dollar show on the screen for ten, fifteen, twenty-five and fifty cents.

This is the kind of cooperation the Paramount Pictures Corporation is offering to the right kind of exhibitors everywhere. Do you realize what it would mean to you to be known as "the Paramount House" in your city? After you have read this announcement, turn the matter over in your mind for a few minutes and you will appreciate the advisability of showing the Paramount Program in your house.

First Three Releases

August 31st the Famous Players Film Co. will release "Lost Paradise" with H. B. Warner as the star; September 3rd Bosworth, Inc. will release "Odyssey of the North" with Hobart Bosworth as the star; September 7th Jesse L. Lasky Co. will release "The Virginian" with Dustin Farnum as the star—this merely indicates the quality of the Paramount Program.

Write immediately to your nearest Paramount Exchange. It will be your first step in the direction of GREATER prosperity, and assured success.

—here is a reproduction of the beautifully colored 24-sheet Paramount Poster now appearing on the billboards in over five hundred cities. Send for a better reproduction.

Paramount Pictures Corporation

ONE HUNDRED and TEN WEST FORTIETH STREET

NEW YORK, N.Y.

PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Program

September—October—November

PRODUCTIONS	ARTISTS
"THE LOST PARADISE"	H. B. WARNER
The world-renowned drama of capital and labor by Ludwig Fulda and H. C. DeMille. RELEASED AUGUST 31
"THE UNWELCOME MRS. HATCH"	HENRIETTA CROSMAN
Famous emotional drama by Mrs. Burton Harrison. RELEASED SEPTEMBER 10
"SUCH A LITTLE QUEEN"	MARY PICKFORD
The celebrated comedy-drama by Channing Pollock. RELEASED SEPTEMBER 21
"MARTA OF THE LOWLANDS"	Mme. BERTHA KALICH
The noted masterpiece of the distinguished Spanish dramatist, Angel Guimera. RELEASED OCTOBER 5
"HIS LAST DOLLAR"	DAVID HIGGINS
The greatest racing play ever produced in America. RELEASED OCTOBER 15
"THE COUNTY CHAIRMAN"	MACLYN ARBUCKLE
Henry W. Savage's greatest comic-dramatic production by George Ade, with many of the original cast, including the star and Willis P. Sweatman. RELEASED OCTOBER 26
"BEHIND THE SCENES"	MARY PICKFORD
The charming play of theatrical life by Margaret Mayo, author of "Baby Mine." RELEASED NOVEMBER 2
"THE MAN FROM MEXICO"	JOHN BARRYMORE
H. A. Du Souchet's famous comedy success. RELEASED NOVEMBER 9
"WILDFLOWER"	MARGUERITE CLARK
A typical Marguerite Clark characterization by Mary Germaine. RELEASED NOVEMBER 30

PRODUCED BY

FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM Co

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President,

DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director EDWIN S. PORTER, Technical Director

Executive Offices,

213-229 W. 26TH STREET, NEW YORK.

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

36 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

JESSE L. LASKY

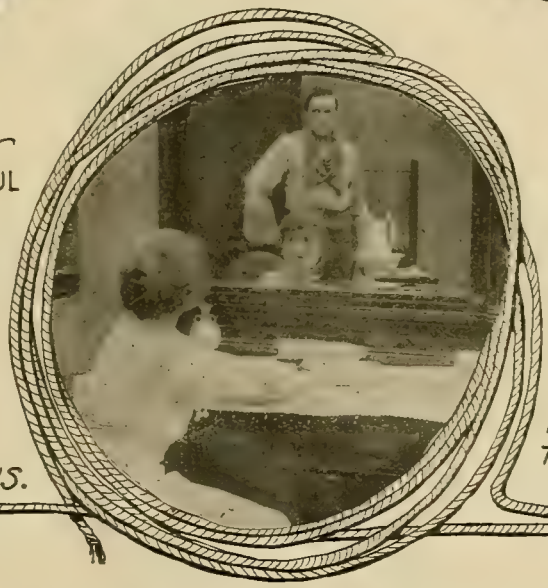
PRESENTS

THE MOST POPULAR FIGURE ON THE SCREEN

DUSTIN FARNUM

IN

STAR OF THE YEAR'S MOST SUCCESSFUL PRODUCTION "THE SQUAW MAN"



A BIG MAN IN A BIG MAN'S PLAY

5 REELS OF ABSORBING DRAMATIC AND COMEDY SITUATIONS.

A CHEERING BREATH FROM THE WEST THAT REMINGTON KNEW

THE VIRGINIAN

FROM THE PLAY OF KIRKE LA SHELLE AND THE BOOK BY OWEN WISTER

RELEASED SEPT. 7.

THROUGH PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORPORATION

JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY COMPANY

LONG ACRE THEATRE W. 48TH STREET

JESSE L. LASKY, PRESIDENT — N. Y. C. — SAMUEL GOLDFISH, TREAS. & GEN'L MANAGER

CECIL B. DEMILLE, DIRECTOR GENERAL

AM

BOSWORTH
INC.

PRESENTS

MARTIN EDEN
BY

JACK LONDON

Jack London

A Virile, Gripping Story, Well Told

For Bookings Apply Direct to Exchanges

American Feature Film Co., 162 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.—New England States: Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Wm. L. Sherry Feature Film Co., Inc., 126 West 46th Street, New York City—Greater New York and New York State.

Famous Players Film Service, Inc., 404 Ferry Street, Pittsburgh, Pa., and 37 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill. — Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky.

Famous Players Exchange, 1331 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and 71 West 23rd Street, New York City — New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania.

Famous Players Feature Co., 28 West Lexington Street, Baltimore, Md.—Delaware, Maryland, Washington, D.C., and Virginia.

Casino Feature Film Co., Detroit, Mich.—Michigan.

Kansas City Feature Film Co., Kansas City, Mo. — Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa.

Famous Players Star Feature Film Service, Temple Court Building, Minneapolis, Minn. — North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Wis.

Notable Feature Film Co., Salt Lake City, Utah—Utah, Colorado, Montana, Wyoming and Idaho.

Progressive Motion Picture Co., three offices—Head office: 642 Pacific Building, San Francisco, Cal.; Central Building, Seattle, Wash.; Marsh-Strong Building, Los Angeles, Cal.—California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico.

BOSWORTH INC., LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, U. S. A.

WORLD'S LARGEST
SAWYER INC.
FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK
A. H. SAWYER
Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

"GREAT"—PRESS

IT EXCEEDS EXPECTATIONS

The Envoy Extraordinary

OR

THE WORLD'S WAR

FIVE REELS

THE INITIAL PRODUCTION OF

THE SANTA BARBARA MOTION PICTURE CO.

Written and Produced by Lorimer Johnston

SENSATION FOLLOWS SENSATION

THRILL FOLLOWS THRILL

NOW READY FOR BOOKING IN ALL SAWYER ZONES

IF YOU WANT A WAR PICTURE

BOOK "THE ENVOY"

ALCO PROGRAM

The Exhibitor may now count upon a feature film of distinction every week. By the combination under the Alco banner of the strongest and most distinguished creators of motion pictures, a great production is within reach for regular booking. Hereafter these greatest of manufacturers will release exclusively through Alco:—

All Star Feature Corporation

California Motion Picture Corporation

Popular Plays and Players, Inc.

Favorite Players' Film Company

Excelsior Feature Film Company

Exchanges are now being established in the principal cities of America

YOU WILL WELCOME OUR POLICY

Alco Film

ALCO BU

218 West 42d Street

IS COMPLETE

First Release October 5th and One Every Week Thereafter

OCTOBER 5—ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION.
ETHEL BARRYMORE, in "THE NIGHTINGALE"
By AUGUSTUS THOMAS.

OCTOBER 12—POPULAR PLAYS AND PLAYERS, INC.
ANDREW MACK, in "THE RAGGED EARL"
By GRATTAN DONNELLY.

OCTOBER 19—CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION.
BEATRIZ MICHELENA and House Peters, in "SALOMY JANE"
By PAUL ARMSTRONG.

OCTOBER 26—FAVORITE PLAYERS FILM COMPANY.
CARLYLE BLACKWELL, in "KEY TO YESTERDAY"
By CHAS. NEVILLE BUCK.

NOVEMBER 2—EXCELSIOR FEATURE FILM COMPANY.
OCTAVIA HANDWORTH, in "PATH FORBIDDEN"
By JOHN B. HYMER.

NOVEMBER 9—ALL STAR FEATURE CORPORATION.
DIGBY BELL, in "THE EDUCATION OF MR. PIPP"
By AUGUSTUS THOMAS.

NOVEMBER 16—CALIFORNIA MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION.
BEATRIZ MICHELENA and House Peters, in "MRS WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH"
By ALICE HEGAN RICE and ANNE CRAWFORD FLEXNER.

NOVEMBER 23—POPULAR PLAYS AND PLAYERS, INC.
JACOB P. ADLER, in "MICHAEL STROGOFF"
By JULES VERNE.

NOVEMBER 30—FAVORITE PLAYERS FILM COMPANY.
CARLYLE BLACKWELL, in "MAN WHO COULD NOT LOSE"
By RICHARD HARDING DAVIS.

Applications for service will be considered in the order of their receipt.

WE WILL WELCOME YOUR SUPPORT.

Corporation

LDING

NEW YORK CITY

A. H. SAWYER
Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

HAVE YOU SIGNED FOR THESE

NEW SAWYER FEATURES?

WRITTEN BY ELEANOR GATES

"DOC"
4 REELS

PUBLISHED IN SATURDAY EVENING POST

TWO-REEL "RANGER"

"THE HERO OF THE NORTH"

"THE KING OF THE BOWERY"
FOUR REELS

FOUR REELS OF WAR, LOVE AND INTRIGUE

"The Tyranny of the Mad Czar"
A MAGNIFICENT PRODUCTION

"HER BROTHER'S DISGRACE" TWO REELS
A STORY OF THE CANADIAN NORTHWEST

NEXT WEEK

FIRST LIBERTY MOTION PICTURE CO. RELEASE

SEPT. 1st FOUR MORE SEPT. 1st

"A WOMAN'S BRAVERY"
an episode of the Servian War in three parts
FAME
RELEASED AUGUST 29th
GAUMONT COMPANY
110 West 40th St. NEW YORK.

THE GREATEST WAR

LAY DOWN

A STUPENDOUS FILM DRAMATIZATION OF LATE BARONESS BERTHA VON SUTTNER

One of the many remarkably realistic battle scenes

4 PARTS

The Picture With a Purpose

By portraying the terrible horrors of the battlefield and the disastrous effects of war upon the families of combatants, this photoplay is the most powerful argument for universal peace ever advanced.

It Is Here and It Is Great

THE MOST STIRRING PHOTOPLAY EVER SEEN

All Who Have Seen The Marvelous Production Are Enthusiastic in Their Praise

ITS TERRIFIC REALISM IS STARTLING!

The most gigantic and sensational battle scenes ever shown—with vast armies of soldiers, struggling for victory, then fleeing in defeat from the jaws of death; troops of charging cavalry; artillery in action, shells exploding, causing terrible destruction. All the gruesome aspects of war vividly depicted—battlefields strewn with wounded and dead; churches and barns filled with the wounded, etc.

WISE STATE RIGHT MEN WILL SECURE THIS GREAT ATTRACTION AT ONCE
THOSE WHO MISS IT WILL HAVE MUCH TO REGRET

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. COPENHAGEN

GREAT NORTHERN

PICTURE EVER PRESENTED

YOUR ARMS

THE WORLD FAMOUS WAR NOVEL BY THE WINNER OF A NOBEL PEACE PRIZE

4 PARTS

Most Timely Film Ever Offered

After six months preparation, by an odd coincidence, the picture was completed just when the great European War began. It is therefore extraordinarily timely, now that all interest is centered upon war.

Book This Feature NOW!

The heroine searching for her husband in a church full of wounded soldiers.

Wonderful Newspaper Comment:

The New York Herald, The New York Sun, The Boston Post, and The New York Times have printed articles about the picture, the New York Herald having devoted an entire page in its magazine section.

"We need such a picture. It'll do us good."—Moving Picture World.

"War is pictured—terrible, overwhelming reality of battles and mangled bodies of horses and men, distress in business and disease that follows in war's wake. The production must have required enormous outlay to present with so much vividness these battles."—Motion Picture News.

"The many battle scenes are most realistic—many thrilling portrayals of the horrors of war, almost indistinguishable from actuality."—New York Telegraph.

"Makes one feel like crying out loud for peace."—The Billboard.

ENTERPRISING EXHIBITORS WILL BE QUICK TO REALIZE THE WONDERFUL POSSIBILITIES OF THIS EXCEPTIONAL OFFERING

FILM COMPANY

110 W. 40th St.
NEW YORK

C.O. GREAT NORTHERN FILMS COPENHAGEN

WORLD'S LARGEST
SAWYER INC.
FILM MART
1600 BROADWAY-NEW YORK
A. H. SAWYER
Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

EXHIBITORS:
in
ILLINOIS and WISCONSIN

SAWYER'S FEATURES NOW READY FOR YOU AT

ZONE No. 12 UNION FILM CO. 166 W. Washington St. CHICAGO, ILL.

THESE ZONES ALSO BOOKING

ZONE 1-New York
"SAWYER"—1600 Broadway

ZONE 2-Boston
PHOENIX FEATURE FILM CORPORATION, 164 Federal St.

ZONE 3-Newark
STATE FILM CO., 60 Bank St.

ZONE 4-Albany
"SAWYER"—29 N. Pearl St.

ZONE 5-Montreal
B. C. FEATURE CO., New Birks Bldg.

ZONE 6-Philadelphia
"SAWYER"—Address next issue

ZONE 7-Pittsburgh
"SAWYER"

ZONE 8-Buffalo
"SAWYER"—Address next issue

ZONE 9-Dayton
EDWARDS-ZETTLER FEATURE FILM CO., U. B. Building
(Will move to Columbus, Sept. 1st)

ZONE 10-Detroit
PROGRESSIVE FILM & EQUIPMENT CO., 97 Woodward Ave.

ZONE 11-Indianapolis
PROGRESSIVE FILM & EQUIPMENT CO.—Address next issue

ZONE 12-Chicago
UNION FILM COMPANY
166 W. Washington St.

ZONE 13-Davenport
"SAWYER"
Cor. 2nd and Main Streets
(The Davenport Office to Move to Omaha Oct. 1st)

ZONE 14-Minneapolis
SHERMAN FEATURE FILM SERVICE
Temple Court Bldg.

ZONE 15-St. Louis
"SAWYER"

ZONE 16-Knoxville
FRANK ROGERS, Knoxville, Tenn.

ZONE 17-Dallas
WILL OPEN AUG. 31

ZONE 18-Denver
WILL OPEN SEPT. 1

ZONE 19-San Francisco
INTERNATIONAL FILM PRODUCERS' CO., Pacific Bldg.,

ZONE 20-Seattle
INTERNATIONAL FILM PRODUCERS' CO., Pacific Bldg., WILL OPEN SEPT. 1

ZONE 21-Washington, D. C.
HEFFERT NAT. FILM CO.
225-227 Woodward Bldg.

ZONE 22-Los Angeles
INTERNATIONAL FILM PRODUCERS' CO.

ZONE 23-Syracuse, N. Y.
"SAWYER"—SEPT. 1.

ZONE 24-Cleveland
"SAWYER" SEPT. 1.

ZONE 25-Winnipeg, Can.
B. C. FEATURE CO.

Bungling Bunks' Bunco

3-Part Wild Animal Comedy

Bunks is a better talker than a hunter of big game but talk and photographs of stuffed lions don't get by with his girl, so he takes to the real wild life and is treed by real wild tigers and elephants, and worse yet—is cornered by a wild girl. He prefers lions to harem life and makes his escape with a lion in a cage. Arrived home, the lion takes his turn at making an escape, assisted by Bunks' disappointed African inamorata, and the party of Bunks' admirers make their escape to the roof. Bunks has his eye on the roof, too, but there's the girl and the lion and—your patrons doubling up in their seats and gasping for breath.

The Woman Without a Heart

A 3-part tragedy with a strong dramatic climax and lively action of interest-absorbing caliber. The story of a woman who leaves her mother dying on the floor in order to attend a fashionable reception—and the woman herself once upon a time wasn't fashionable. She hasn't any heart at all, though she appropriates many hearts of the opposite sex which she turns into stone. It is also proved that "SHE who dances must pay the fiddler."

The Perils of Pauline

Anybody with a taste for romance and adventure (that leaves out nobody) has a taste for Pauline. The taste for Pauline is not an acquired one—it's inborn—it appears at the same time your announcement paper appears, and the more Pauline you feed it the more it grows. If you keep it up long enough you will have to build a larger theatre. She gets people in and keeps them in. She makes patrons out of former passersby.

PAULINE TAKES THE CAKE AND THEN HANDS IT TO YOU

Whiffles' Double (Comedy)

AND

Kashmir, British India

(In Natural Colors)

An A-1 split ree' combining the humorous manoeuvers of Whiffles in his encounters with his double, and natural color scenic views of Kashmir, a beautiful district in British India.

Uncle's Finish

An entertaining American comedy in 1 reel—made by Hartigan.

Atlanta, 61 Walton st.; Boston, 3 Tremont Row; Chicago, 5 So. Wabash Ave.; Dallas, Andrews Bldg.; Los Angeles, 114 E. 7th St.; Minneapolis, 4th and Hennepin Sts.; New York, 115 E. 23rd St.; Pittsburgh, 715 Liberty Ave.; San Francisco, 67 Turk St.; St. Louis, 3210 Locust St.; Syracuse, 214 E. Fayette St.; Cincinnati, 217 E. 5th St.; Salt Lake City, 68 South Main St.; Cleveland, 622 Prospect Ave., S. E.; Portland, 392 Burnside Ave.; Philadelphia, 1235 Vine St.; Washington, 7th and E Sts. N. W.; New Orleans, 910 Gravier St.; Seattle, 810 Third Ave.; Omaha, 1312 Farnam St.; Denver, Nassau Bldg.; Kansas City, 928 Main St.

THE ECLECTIC FILM COMPANY

110 West 40th St. New York City

"The Cream of American and European Studios"

Pictures from all over the World on one film

Getting News Straight

All news that you read is strained news. It's cut down, and censored, and passed from mouth to mouth. It's rumored and reported and then contradicted, But—is the original news taken deed for deed at the original source and no amount of transference or repetition can change it. It comes from all over the world and everybody is interested in something that is going on in some part of the world. They can see it in the Pathé Camera News and when they see it there they know it happened and know how it happened. You know that you won't have to worry about filling your house because straight news—the Pathé Daily News interests so many people. (Issued semi-weekly.)

The Pathé Daily News

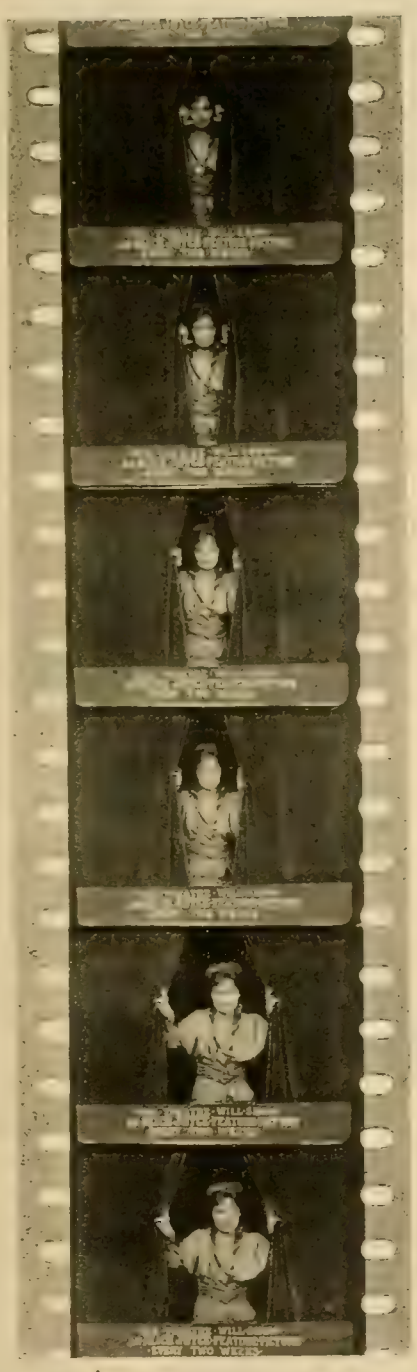
THE PATHÉ DAILY NEWS

1 CONGRESS STREET, JERSEY CITY, NEW JERSEY

Atlanta, 61 Walton St.; New York, 115 E. 23rd St.; Cleveland, 622 Prospect Ave., S. E.; Denver, Nassau Bldg.; Minneapolis, 4th and Hennepin Sts.; Cincinnati, 217 E. 5th St.; Seattle, 810 Third Ave.; Boston, 3 Tremont Row; Pittsburgh, 715 Liberty Ave.; Portland, 392 Burnside Ave.; Omaha, 1312 Farnam St.; Chicago, 5 So. Wabash Ave.; San Francisco, 67 Turk St.; Philadelphia, 1235 Vine St.; Salt Lake City, 68 South Main St.; Dallas, Andrews Bldg.; St. Louis, 3210 Locust St.; Los Angeles, 114 E. 7th St.; Syracuse, 214 E. Fayette St.; Washington, 7th and E Sts., N. W.; New Orleans, 910 Gravier St.; Kansas City, 928 Main St.

"The ALICE JOYCE SERIES Increased My Business 20%"



Yet photoplay patrons must pass two opposition houses and climb up a very hilly street to get to the theatre owned by the exhibitor who recently made this statement. Competition? Why, his opposition show three to five-reel features on the days he has the Alice Joyce Series. Nevertheless, there is always a waiting line in front of his house. There is nothing can compete with the Alice Joyce Series in pulling power.

Here are two features of the Series which are scheduled to be issued during September. Like the preceding stories each is complete in itself.

The Mystery of the Sleeping Death

An Astounding two-act story of Reincarnation
Released Monday, September 14th

The mysterious trance into which the millionaire and the girl of the slums have fallen, baffles the physicians. As a last resort, they call in Amar, a Hindu mystic. The legend he relates solves the mystery and holds spectators in breathless interest.

The Viper

A Modern Two-Act Drama. Released Monday, September 28th

After slaying his father-in-law's butler, Crane, a good-for-nothing, escapes. Later, the murderer is reported dead. Mary, his wife, remarries. She and her second husband go yachting—and are suddenly confronted by the scoundrel. Can't you picture the tremendous situation which follows?

The scenes on the 1, 3 and 6-Sheets for the features above COMPEL Attention

Alice Joyce Curtain Call

What would you give to have Alice Joyce appear at your theatre during each performance and announce that you are showing the series in which she is featured?

The Alice Joyce Curtain Call shown on the left, is the next best thing to having Miss Joyce appear in person. It is a film 17 feet long in which Kalem's beautiful star smilingly announces that your theatre is showing the Series. Sent express paid, for $1.75 in stamps, coin, express or postal money order. Do not send checks. Address Dept. L.

KALEM

Kalem Company, Dept. L, 235-9 W. 23d St., New York

ALICE BRADY

THE DE WOLF HOPPER SUCCESSES

THE GRACE GEORGE SUCCESSES

HITCH UP

THOMPSON BUCHANAN

SOME OF THE IMMEDIATE

WILLIAM A.

PICTURE PLAY

READY COMMENCING SEPT.

"THE PIT" BY FRANK MORRIS & CHANNING POLLOCK FEATURING WILTON LACKAYE SUPPORTED BY GAIL KANE

"THE DOLLAR MARK" BY GEO. BROADHURST FEATURING ROBT. WARWICK

"MOTHER" BY JULES ECKERT GOODMAN FEATURING EMMA DUNN

"THE MAN OF THE HOUR" BY GEO. BROADHURST FEATURING ROBT. WARWICK

"THE GENTLEMAN FROM MISSISSIPPI" BY THOS. WISE & HARRISON RHODES FEATURING THOS. WISE

"THE FACE IN THE MOONLIGHT" ROBT. MANTELL'S GREAT SUCCESS

GAIL KANE

WORLD FILM CORPORATION HAVE EXCLUSIVE

WORLD FILM

130 WEST

THOS. WISE

WATCH FOR ANNOUNCEMENT

SHUBERT

OFFICES IN ALL PRINCIPAL CITIES

JESSIE BONSTELLE

PHILIP BARTHOLOMAE

LEONORA HARRIS

THE ROBERT MANTELL SUCCESSES

MADGE KENNEDY

THE GEORGE BROADHURST SUCCESSES

TO THE STARS

RELEASES OF THE

BRADY

COMPANY, INC.

IN PREPARATION WITH OTHERS TO FOLLOW

"DARKEST RUSSIA" BY A. GRATTON DONNELLY — FEATURING CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG

"AFTER DARK" BY DION BOUCICAULT

"THE SHEPHERD KING" WRIGHT LORRIMORE'S GREAT SUCCESS

"THE CUB" BY THOMPSON BUCHANAN

"A WOMANS WAY" BY THOMPSON BUCHANAN — GRACE GEORGE'S GREAT SUCCESS

"THE RACK" BY THOMPSON BUCHANAN

"AS YE SOW" BY THE REV. JOHN SNYDER — FEATURING ALICE BRADY

CONTROL OF ALL THE Wm A. BRADY PRODUCTIONS — PAST AND FUTURE

CORPORATION

46TH ST., N.Y.C.

OF FUTURE

FEATURES

IN UNITED STATES & CANADA

EMMA DUNN

ROBT. WARWICK

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG

WILTON LACKAYE

LOTTIE BLAIR PARKER

JULES ECKERT GOODMAN

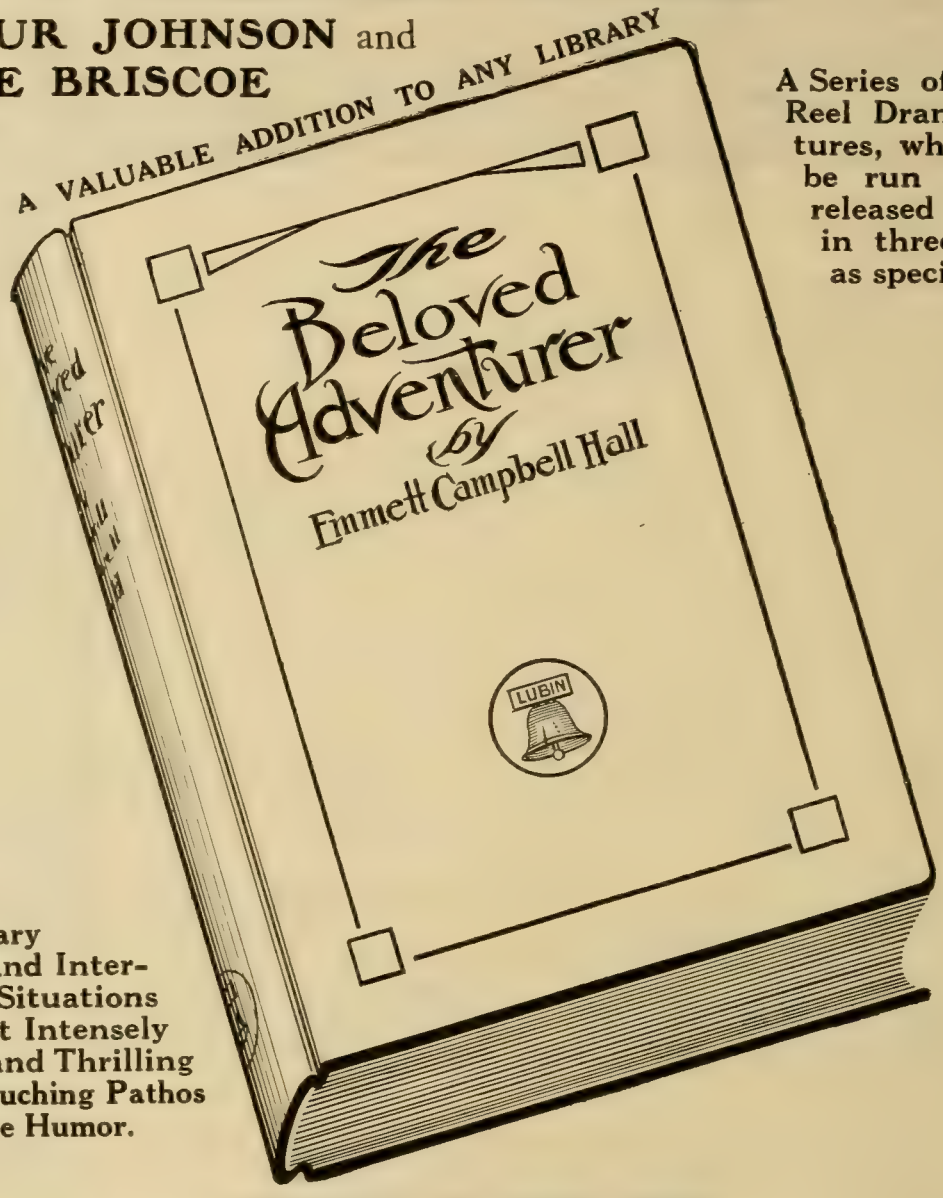
LUBIN'S NEW RELEASE

BEGINNING MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 14th
and continuing each Monday thereafter

"THE BELOVED ADVENTURER"

By EMMETT CAMPBELL HALL, FEATURING

ARTHUR JOHNSON and
LOTTIE BRISCOE



A Series of 15 Single Reel Dramatic Pictures, which might be run singly, as released or used in threes or fives as special features

A Story of Extraordinary Strength and Interest, with Situations of the Most Intensely Dramatic and Thrilling Nature, Touching Pathos and Genuine Humor.

PUBLISHED IN BOOK FORM

Coincident with the release of the films, there will be published, in book form, the complete story of the series. This idea is as novel as it will prove valuable to the exhibitor.

The book is in full cloth binding with 15 full page half-tone illustrations and would ordinarily sell for $1.25. Desiring that it may share in the expense of promoting, to the highest degree, the success of the exhibitors showing this series, this book will be supplied at a special low price—a price absolutely unheard of in book-publishing. Write us for full details regarding price and helpful hints for distribution.

Exhibitors Are Urged to Place Orders for This Book at the Earliest Possible Moment, as the Edition is Limited

The Lubin Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office, 154 West Lake Street

LUBIN

Two Big Masterpieces Now Being Shown With Remarkable Success

6 Reels "THE WOLF" By EUGENE WALTER
Produced by Barry O'Neil, with Geo. Soule Spencer, Ethel Clayton, Ferdinand Tidmarsh, Ruth Bryan and Bernard Siegel

5 Reels "THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR" By J. HARTLEY MANNERS
Produced by Barry O'Neil, with Geo. Soule Spencer, Ethel Clayton, Edwin Barbour and Joseph Kaufman.

Four Big Lubin Masterpieces to be Released Soon

EVELYN NESBIT THAW
and her son, Russel William Thaw, in
5 Reels "THREADS OF DESTINY" By William Clifford

CAST OF CHARACTERS

MARIAN GRUNSTEIN — EVELYN NESBIT THAW

ISAAC GRUNSTEIN (Marian's father) ..... BERNARD SIEGEL
RACHEL SHAPIRO (Marian's friend) ..... MARGUERITE RISSER
ABRAHAM SOLMAN (Rug Merchant and Leader of Jewish Colony) ..... JOSEPH STANDISH
THE NUN ..... MARGUERITE MARSH
FEDOR TOMSKY ..... JACK CLIFFORD

Produced by JOSEPH W. SMILEY

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK
"The Funniest Man on the Stage"
In a distinctly unique 5 Reel Comedy Drama written especially for him by Lawrence McCloskey. Produced by George Terwilliger

EDWIN ARDEN and ROMAINE FIELDING
in
EAGLE'S NEST By Edwin Arden
Produced in Colorado by Romaine Fielding

WILLIAM ELLIOTT
Late Star of "Madame X" Company in
"THE FORTUNE HUNTER"
By Winchell Smith Produced by Barry O'Neil

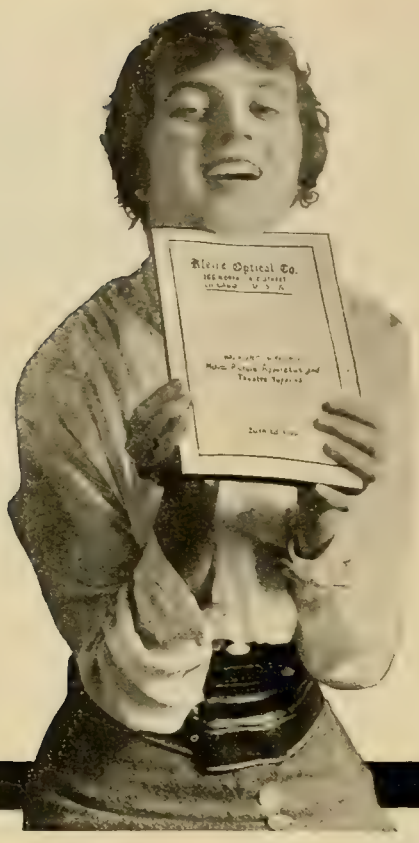
Five Regular Releases Each Week

"NEVER TOO OLD" / "THE GREEN ALARM" } Split Reel Comedy ..... Tuesday, September 1st
"BY WHOSE HAND"—Two Reel Drama ..... Wednesday, September 2nd
"THE FACE IN THE CROWD"—Two Reel Drama ..... Thursday, September 3rd
"THE SHELL OF LIFE"—Drama ..... Friday, September 4th
"A FOOL THERE WAS"—Comedy ..... Saturday, September 5th

Special One, Three, Six and Eight Sheet Posters

Lubin Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago Office - - - 154 West Lake Street



Don't Flirt With Time!

Your Copy is Ready and Waiting

Hundreds of Copies are Mailed Out Every Day

The Edition is Limited

Ask for YOURS NOW !!

This Wonderful 176-Page Book Free!

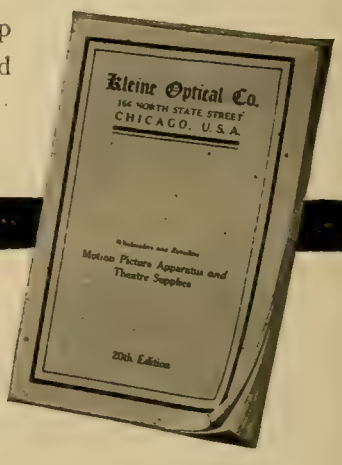
Almost encyclopaedic in scope, contains timely and invaluable hints for the Man About to Redecorate or Build! Articles on Theatre Construction, Lenses and Countless Kindred subjects Make This Splendid Volume More Than a Mere Price-List.

But the Biggest, Most Comprehensive, Handiest Price List Imaginable! Carefully arranged, instantly accessible, you can lay your finger on the wanted article in a moment's time. All repair parts for machines printed on one page and numbered for your quick convenience in ordering. No item too small to be listed or too large to be carried in stock in our three big warehouses.

The Kleine Optical Co. is the oldest and largest wholesaler and retailer of motion picture apparatus and theatre supplies in America. OUR EXCLUSIVE ENERGIES devoted to this one line enables us to offer you all that is best in theatre equipment, Prompt, courteous service, and Rock Bottom Prices.

Twentieth Annual Edition Just Off the Press

Write for This Beautiful 176-Page Book Now. Send 5 cts. in stamps to help cover cost of postage. Handsomely printed on heavy white enameled stock and bound in durable Advertiser's Cover.



KLEINE OPTICAL CO.

GEORGE KLEINE, Pres.
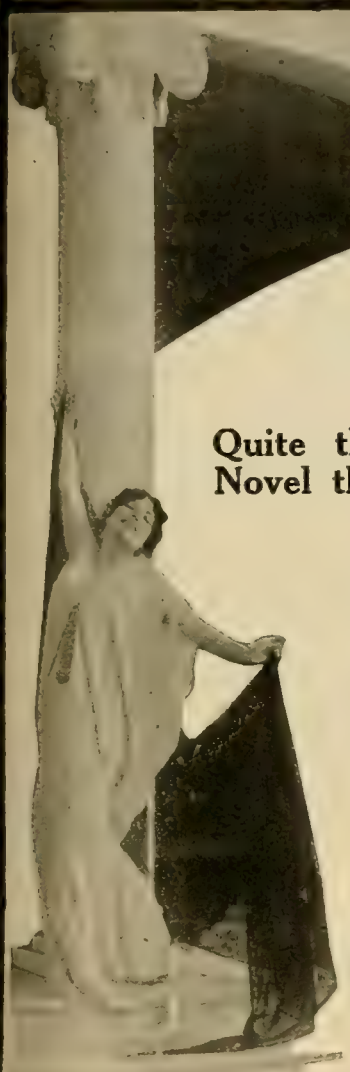
INCORPORATED 1897

166 NORTH STATE STREET, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

VENDETTA



FROM THE NOVEL BY MARIE CORELLI

Five Parts (5071 Feet)

Quite the Most Beautiful, Realistic and Absorbing Novel the Famous English Novelist Has Yet Written

A Man Buried as Dead, returning to consciousness in his coffin, knocking it by his struggles from its niche in the wall; thereby breaking open a casket filled with jewels; smashing his way out the tomb to his castle only to find his wife and dearest friend unfaithful to him; plotting a revenge Hellish in its execution; the killing of his faithless wife in that self-same tomb by earthquake the night of his second marriage to her—these are the essentials of a story we firmly believe unrivaled in the annals of filmed Novels. One thrill treads upon the footsteps of another. Pantomime finds its highest expression in "VENDETTA."

The settings are more than beautiful—the photography as clear and brilliant as a mountain stream. In "VENDETTA" we offer all that is possible in Motion Photography.

For Release Through Special Feature Department, General Film Company, September 1

(Complete publicity campaign, including 1, 3 and 6 sheets, two styles, 3 and 6, heralds, slides, etc.)

GEORGE KLEINE

166 N. State St., Chicago

EDISON

FACE VALUE

A Dramatic Adaptation of a Recent Magazine Story.

By W. B. M. FERGUSON. In Two Parts.

An absorbingly interesting drama which unfolds the various phases of its plot in a delightfully original manner. Attempting to impersonate Silas Wilding's nephew and so become heir to a fortune, Kelly marries a girl on "face value" and thereupon gets so deeply entangled in a plot that his fortune and happiness seem highly improbable. The story ends auspiciously.

To be released Friday, September 11th.

COMING EDISON RELEASES

Saturday, September 12th	DICK POTTER'S WIFE	1,000 feet	Drama
Monday, September 14th	GENERALS OF THE FUTURE	525 "	Descriptive
	BUSTER BROWN ON THE CARE AND TREATMENT OF GOATS	550 "	Comedy
Tuesday, September 15th	MAKING A CONVERT	1,000 "	Educational
Wednesday, September 16th	A SUMMER RESORT IDYLL	1,000 "	Comedy
Friday, September 18th	SHEEP'S CLOTHING	2,000 "	Drama

Order Edison Posters of the Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland, Ohio, direct.

Thomas A Edison INCORPORATED

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.

239 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

Makers of Edison Kinetoscope, Model D

VITAGRAPH

"The Wrong Flat"

Comedy.....MONDAY, AUGUST 31ST

The boys get in the wrong apartments. The girls are indignant at their presence. It might have been serious, but it struck them so funny, they all become the best of friends. A cast of Vitagraph favorites.

"The Hidden Letters"

Two Part Drama.....TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1ST

They reveal the flirtations of a wife, who is killed in a fearful automobile accident. Another girl tries to protect the wife's name. The husband is so impressed with the girl's purpose, he marries her. JULIA SWAYNE GORDON, ANTONIO MORENO and NORMA TALMADGE are the principals.

"The Lost Cord"

Comedy.....WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2D

The fat man loses the cord of his bathing suit. What might have happened is better seen than told. The thin man goes home in the fat man's clothes and the situation becomes interesting. HUGHIE MACK and LILLIAN WALKER in the leads.

"The Upper Hand"

Drama .....THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3D

He bullies his wife and claims she is not his wife, to hold the upper hand. His sudden death proves him a liar and gains for his wife the happiness he had denied her. LEAH BAIRD, WILLIAM HUMPHREY, WILLIAM RANOUS and REX HITCHCOCK are the cast.

"The Barrel Organ"

Comedy.....FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4TH

It grinds out a fortune for the kindly tramp and the widow. The monkey rescues a man and child from a burning house and brings more money to the happy couple. ROSE TAPLEY and ETIENNE GIRARDOT in the leads.

"Too Much Uncle"

Two Part Comedy.....SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 5TH

He happens in on his nephew who has to have a wife to get Uncle's money. He borrows his friend's. The complications which arise are exceedingly funny. When it ceases to be a joke, the truth is told and the fun starts all over again. An all-star cast.

SIX A WEEK

"THE UNWRITTEN PLAY"
Drama .....Monday, Sept. 7
"BRANDON'S LAST RIDE"
Two-Part Drama .....Tuesday, Sept. 8
"THE BAND LEADER"
VITA-LAUGH Comedy .....Wednesday, Sept. 9
"BELLA'S ELOPEMENT"
Drama .....Thursday, Sept. 10
"A STUDY IN FEET"
Comedy .....Friday, Sept. 11
"HE DANCED HIMSELF TO DEATH"
Two-Part VITA-LAUGH Comedy .....Saturday, Sept. 12

VITAGRAPH ONE, THREE AND SIX-SHEET POSTERS.

The Vitagraph Co. of America, E. 15th St. and Locust Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

DRAMA COMEDY FARCE BROADWAY STAR FEATURES EVERY ONE A WINNER

PRODUCED BY THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA

RELEASED

5-PART CLASSIC
A Million Bid

3-PART SPEED COMEDY
Love, Luck and Gasolene

3-PART COMEDY
Bingles' Melodrama

3-PART BURLESQUE
Goodness Gracious!

6-PART WAR DRAMA
Captain Alvarez

5-PART RUSSIAN DRAMA
My Official Wife

6-PART MASTERPIECE
Mr. Barnes of N. Y.

3-PART DRAMA
Shadows of the Past

3-PART COMEDY
Uncle Bill

COMING

3-PART DRAMA OF THRILLING INTENSITY The Painted World STORY OF A HUMAN SOUL LAID BARE

5-PART DELIGHTFUL FARCICAL FANTASY A Florida Enchantment A HAPPY BLENDING OF COMEDY, PATHOS, DRAMA

AS PRESENTED AT THE Vitagraph Theatre
NEW YORK CITY

FOR TERMS AND FURTHER PARTICULARS APPLY
General Film Co.'s Special Service
By Arrangement with Broadway Star Feature Co., Inc.

STATE RIGHTS STILL AVAILABLE FOR "THE CHRISTIAN" Apply VITAGRAPH-LIEBLER FEATURE FILM CO., 116 NASSAU ST., N. Y.

THE MYSTERY OF THE SLEEPING DEATH

An ALICE JOYCE SERIES Feature in Two Acts. Based upon a Hindu Legend

Twenty minutes after the girl of the slums and the millionaire meet, both fall into a deathlike trance. Physicians call in a Hindu mystic as a last resort. The Hindu legend he relates solves the mystery in an astounding manner.

Released Monday, September 14th. The 1, 3 and 6-Sheets show the most exciting events

Into the Depths

Even the most astute photoplay "fans" will believe that Stanford really sells his wife to his friend Arthur. The outcome furnishes a startling surprise. Alice Hollister in a strong role.

Released Tuesday, September 15th. Strong 1 & 3-Sheets

Easy Money

McGuff wants an auto, while Mrs. McGuff wants a farm. Weary Bill wants the money which is to pay for the foregoing. What happens as the result, will make your patrons hold their sides.

Released Friday, September 18th

The Moonshiners

A Two-Act Tragedy of the Hills

The generation-long feud between the Wetlocks and the Bradys bursts out anew when the clans meet on the mountainside. The desperate combat which follows, will draw observers to the edge of their seats.

Released Wednesday, Sept. 16. Striking 1, 3 & 6-Sheets

The Cub Reporter's Assignment

A mix-up in identities causes the cub reporter to become the guest of the old inventor. How he balks a thief's plot to steal valuable plans makes this a decidedly attractive offering.

Released Saturday, September 19th.
Superb 1 and 3-Sheets.

KALEM COMPANY, 235-9 West 23d St., New York

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
THE FILM INDEX
EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.
Published Weekly by the
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.
(Telephone, 3510 Madison Square.)
J. P. Chalmers, Sr.....President
J. F. Chalmers.....Vice-President
E. J. Chalmers.....Secretary and Treasurer
John Wylie.....General Manager
The office of the company is the address of the officers.
WESTERN OFFICE—Suite 917-919 Schiller Building, 64 West Randolph St., Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Central 5099.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.
United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and Philippine Islands.....$3.00 per year
Canada.....3.50 per year
Foreign Countries (Postpaid).....4.00 per year

ADVERTISING RATES.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING—no display—three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.
DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES made known on application.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.
All changes of address should give both old and new addresses in full and clearly written.

NOTE.—Address all correspondence, remittances and subscriptions to MOVING PICTURE WORLD, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square Station, New York, and not to individuals.

(The Index for this issue will be found on page 1434.)

Entered at the General Post Office, New York City, as Second Class Matter.

Saturday, September 5, 1914.

Facts and Comments

DESPITE the stupendous and sanguinary conflict which is rending the nations of Europe and demoralizing the business machinery of the world at large, the motion picture industry of the United States, just now at least, seems to be particularly favored of fortune. Although cut off from much of the world's market, the loss thus sustained is compensated, for the time being, by the cessation of picture production in the principal centers of the industry abroad, and the general report concerning conditions here is consequently encouraging. Not only are our manufacturers called upon to supply the great demands of our own country, but those countries with whom commercial relations have not been interrupted by the European war must look to us for their supply of pictures. This presents a rare opportunity to American manufacturers which, however much we may deplore the circumstances that make the opportunity, should not be permitted to pass unheeded. This would seem to be the psychological moment for every branch of industry in America and not the least of these is the motion picture.

* * *

WHEN are we to reach the limit of motion picture production in the United States? There are now three regular programs of weekly releases of one and two reel pictures; two programs of feature subjects of three or more reels and a promise of at least two more weekly feature programs soon to materialize, to say nothing of the occasional feature offerings by unaffiliated manufacturers. Studios of pretentious character and large capacity are going up everywhere, apparently, and there seems to be no limit to the flow of capital toward the motion picture. Not all of these ventures are successful, to be sure, but there is a sufficient air of permanency about many to entitle them to serious consideration. The question arises: If all these concerns fulfill their promises in the matter of the number of subjects to be released is there not grave danger of price cutting? While there are many large theatres being built for the purpose of showing motion pictures, will the demand for pictures be sufficient to absorb the supply? In the event of an over supply, what will the manufacturer do; will be curtail his output and raise his price, or will he indulge in the dangerous expedient of cutting prices to secure the volume of patronage he desires? Of course there will be some price cutting, but it will not be serious unless it should become general. The margin of profit is none too wide at present. Conservative manufacturers should keep on the safe side by not attempting to force the market with large programs for which there is not in sight a definite demand.

* * *

AMERICANS make a serious business of going to the theater. It has cost Oscar Hammerstein a lot of money to find this out. It has cost others more or less considerable sums. Now the motion picture exhibitors, in their efforts to find something new, are here and there parting with their hardly earned dollars to verify previous discoveries. More than one recent enterprise has been based on the idea that the American theatergoer has acquired the habit of loafing gracefully in the evenings, at least. It is supposed that he will be willing to follow the example of his English brother and not care a hang whether or not he sees the entire performance so long as he has a good time while that performance lasts. It is argued that he may wish to dance, might care for drink during the continuance of the performance, and so in various of the large cities places of amusement are erected offering several attractions for a single admission in the blissful and confiding belief that, so long as the patron gets something for his money, he will not particularly care what that something is. It is argued that in England the tea room is an important adjunct of many of the large houses. The visitor drops in, sees a couple of films, enjoys afternoon tea or an ice, looks at more film and wanders out again, well content. He goes to a music hall and may not see a single act of the long program, content to visit with his acquaintances in the bar or promenade. Why should he not do it here? The bald answer is because he has not been raised that way. He goes to the theater to see a performance. He wants to see all that he pays for. He regards it as a solemn duty to stick to his seat and get full value for his money. The only multi-attraction that will ever make money in this country in this generation is the three-ring circus, and that is merely because it is all in plain sight at the same moment.

Mere Opinion an Injustice

By Louis Reeves Harrison

MANY oral evidences, and even written ones, signed by leading producers, convince me that intelligent criticism of moving pictures is widely read and considered. There is no doubt that such criticism exists, but it is more often sincerely attempted and only attempted. Among those who can hark back to the days when capable criticism was menaced by cancellation of advertising contracts, there is now full recognition that only one policy can hold the confidence of exhibitors, that of telling the truth. To tell the truth, however, means more than sincere intention. It means more than the delivery of an opinion—it means adherence to a standard of judgment and an ability to deal with many points of view.

To decide upon the merits and demerits of moving pictures is a valuable and legitimate business of interpretation. To merely generalize with opinion, so far from being criticism, is an attempt to escape from the examination and proving of merit and is of less value than the opinion of those members of an audience who are not picture-sated. It is at one moment pessimistic, at another optimistic, and may even depend upon whether or not the reviewer has digested his last meal. Criticism, so far from being a question of individual opinion, must concern itself with general judgment. General judgment will make up its own mind without troubling much about the authorities, but it must be foreseen, studied and determined, quite as much for the sake of the producer as for the exhibitor. There are few harder tasks than those of the sincere and ambitious critic.

The intelligent appreciation of moving pictures, just estimate of their relative value and rank, has had a great deal to do with their improvement, quite as much in the enlightening of exhibitors who were very much in the dark as in determining the purpose, quality and even proportions of screen stories. No laurel wreaths adorn the brows of the best reviewers; there are no voting contests as to which is the most popular; their photographs are not even employed as space-fillers when copy runs short; though their combined influence is tempering the spirit of screen visualizations, is helping materially to formulate and regulate the most wonderful art the world has ever known. All are not, however, the best reviewers, and there are gentlemen engaged in this work who start out with no standards of judgment, who lack both largeness of mind and aggressive force of character, and these men are delivering some very positive opinions.

To announce that this or that play is the greatest of the year, that it is superior to any preceding it, is bare opinion, and an offhand one at that. No one of us has either opportunity or time to give the whole sweep of large photodramas careful study. Then such opinion is unkind to many—it is odious to those who do not believe that any one picture rises so far above all the others as to be called a masterpiece. The favored play's purpose may be one of the noblest, that of bettering humankind; its theme may be one of striking originality; its idealism may be sublime; its imagery may set the mind aflame; its examples may give it tremendous ethical power; yet it may not be a masterpiece, and I recently saw a play set upon that pinnacle although it contained not one of the above enumerated qualities. Even from a business point of view, there is a lack of sense in booming one firm's product at the expense of all others.

Highest consideration should be given to the spirit of a play—does it contain something which is bound to meet with enthusiastic support by those for whom it was made? Has it anything to do with what is uppermost in their thought? It is not criticism to give biased approval or disapproval, but to get at the essence of human interest and show wherein a photoplay is addressed strongly to that interest. Exalting one work is not to be done on any individual prejudice in its favor. Before all other popular products are thus dispraised and belittled, it might be well for a critic to study the secret of their power and charm. It is not just to those of proven worth to announce in advance a new play's superiority to them; it comes pretty close to being actual proof of incompetence on the part of a critic that such a sweeping announcement is made. Only the test of time can determine a masterpiece.

Form seems to most deeply impress those who have not grasped the full meaning of criticism. The form of a screen story and its treatment are well worth high consideration, but they must be weighed and given only what credit is due. Wherein are thought, imagination and emotion stimulated by the play? A mere idea of the action does not exhaust the function of criticism. To simply recapitulate and pronounce a verdict is only description and opinion. The reviewer can creditably stop with unbiased description. The moment he goes beyond that, he must show that his judgment is warranted by some larger reason than preference. The genuine critic is largely benefited thereby, for he is constantly schooling himself, is growing with his work. He is receiving in the act of giving. Let us admit with good grace that we are only qualified as we qualify. Our verdict should be fair to all, even to those who are struggling upward, considerate of the weak and appreciative of the strong, an education to ourselves quite as much as to our readers.

The success of a picture very naturally depends upon the aim of its producer. If his motive is obviously that of making easy money, there are questionable methods of doing it, and his picture will usually present evidences of purely mechanical execution. The pecuniary reward for poor plays, in consequence of the new art's marvelous popularity, has been so great that only a few attempt original conception or superior treatment. Those few deserve encouragement. Broad differences of subject and manner of presenting it are to be expected, and they add to the charming variety of a program. These differences, however, should be studied without bias, and not used to elevate one fine portrayal above many others of approximate sincerity and merit. It seems better to give each the special credit it deserves without unfair comparisons. To announce that one is a masterpiece superior to all others, is not just, because it is merely an opinion on a product which has not had its final test. The final test, that of presentation before many audiences, during a considerable period of time, is the only one justifying extreme praise. Hence critics are discrediting criticism by pronouncing in extravagant terms on the value of one picture. They are also discrediting hundreds of other untried products for the sake of one. It is much nearer the ideals of criticism to present the merits and demerits of a realease in an unbiased way and allow the exhibitor to formulate his own opinion. To thrust extreme views into print is neither just to him nor to those producers who are relegated to inferiority by a mere opinion.

The Regular Program

By W. Stephen Bush.

KEEN observers of the present conditions in the film industry have summarized the situation as a constant battle between the regular program and the irregular feature. Few exhibitors will fail to agree with this definition. The greatest task of the exhibitor today is to balance his program with an equal regard for the advantages which a regular program gives him and for the benefits its features are supposed to insure. With but one notable exception producers and distributors of regular programs have been unable to fully meet the demand for a first class feature service. This fact occasioned no surprise, indeed one might say that experienced and intelligent exhibitors discounted it months in advance. It took no great powers of discernment to realize that the same kind of wood does not usually furnish the raw material for both the kitchen table and the parlor table. Appreciating this fact the exhibitor began to look around for what he considered the best and most harmonious combination of a regular program and a feature service. He found himself plunged in difficulties. The group of producers and distributors organized on the basis of a firm weekly supply were naturally reluctant to let the exhibitor do his own choosing. If he came to them for their best and their best only, he found himself viewed with suspicion if not with disfavor. They might be willing to part with their best only for a big and well-known theatre. They would make exceptional bargains with the "big bugs" among the managers, knowing that the exhibition of their films in the highest class of theaters would help to advertise their product generally. The managers, with whom the organized producers and distributors were inclined to make such contracts are very few indeed. When the ordinary exhibitor appears with a demand for the best only he is discouraged and told that he must take "the bitter with the sweet." He is, of course, free to subscribe for the entire service and then show only what he likes or rather what he thinks his patrons will like. The rest he may do with as he pleases, keep it in the booth or send it back to the express office at once. This of course is a very expensive proceeding for the exhibitor, but it has to my own certain knowledge been put in practice and followed by some measure of success. No better proof could be had for the popularity of an eclectic program—a program chosen absolutely on a basis of merit and quality. The public are tired of the same old time-table kind of "releases," they long for a medley of the best and will go in search for it prepared to pay a good deal more than the price of a nickel.

Subscribing for two or more services and using only the best is of course an almost heroic remedy, and the average exhibitor cannot afford such a step. His public as a rule is just as eager for the best as the public in the first class theaters. Day after day he is compelled to listen to the plaint of his patrons telling him he shows too many pictures of "one kind." Between the exchange which seeks to "load him up" with all that comes out of the "producing mill" and the insistent demand for quality plus variety he has a hard row to hoe. He begins to realize that the market is not quite open, it is only closed less tightly than it used to be. The lines of distribution are still decidedly rigid and it will be some time before we may look for any substantial relaxation. In other words the regular program is even at this moment indispensable to the vast majority of exhibitors. The feature had opened the door a little bit, but the rest of the old wall is standing intact. In the battle between the regular program and the irregular feature it must be said that the regular program has so far shown itself the stronger of the two. If an exhibitor were confronted by the alternative of dispensing either with a regular program or a pure feature service what decision is he most likely to make? I will not presume to decide for him, but I am tempted to believe that with but few exceptions he would obey the law of necessity and commit his fortunes to the regular program.

In connection with this eternal problem of the Regular Program vs. The Irregular Feature, it may be pointed out that none of the successful producers of features—I am now speaking of feature specialists—has ever attempted to supply regular service in addition to the feature. Such a combination may be in the lap of the future, it may come to us as one of the anticipated blessings of a truly open market—it may come and it may not.

One point, however, must be made clear. In its more or less unsuccessful battle with the regular program the irregular feature has to shoulder a good deal of the blame. Allowing for all the advantages which a regular program confers on the exhibitor who uses it, it was not so much the strength of the regular program as the weakness of the average feature, which must be made responsible for the result. The overproduction in features and above all the poor quality of so many of these irregular features has been the cause, to some extent at least, of this long survival of the regular program.

In the meantime the great war, which has turned Europe into a chaos of conflict, will help to strengthen the position of the regular program. Most of our features from the very good ones down to the worst come from Europe. It is true that Italy, with its twenty-two industrious producers, has so far escaped the commercial destruction which follows in the wake of war. It may, however, be drawn into the deadly vortex at any moment and even if it remain neutral the development of the Italian film industry, promising as it is today, will have to suffer from the depression in the rest of Europe. In England, France and Germany the demands of the war will deprive the producers of their best men in the studio as well as in the factory.

Now, if ever, the American producer of feature films of high merit has the opportunity of equaling and eventually, we hope, of eclipsing the great masterpieces of European film art. In the matter of quality we hope and expect much more from feature than from the regular program. We cannot help looking upon much that is offered by way of regular programs as poor in quality, monotonous, stereotyped and tiresome. We hope to see the feature lift the regular program to a higher level of quality and we would like to see the Americans in the front rank of the feature makers especially as to quality. Present conditions are extremely favorable to the realization of our hopes.

REEL FELLOWS HOLD ROUSING MEETING.

One of the most successful meetings held by the Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago was enjoyed on Wednesday evening, August 19, at the Advertising Club headquarters, where the meeting members banqueted and enjoyed a well-selected program furnished by the entertainment committee. Besides vocalists, singers and monologists, the club was entertained with a variety of the latest dances as interpreted by French and Jasper.

"Under Royal Patronage"

Two Reel Essanay, Released Through General Film.

Reviewed by James S. McQuade.

MOVING picture fans like a manly lover and delight to see him play his part nobly and bravely, more especially when the lady of his choice is beautiful and devoted to him. In Essanay's two-reel feature, "Under Royal Patronage," scheduled to be released by the General Film Co. on Sept. 4, they will be treated to a film story of love and intrigue that cannot fail to delight them. It is only necessary to state, in order to arouse unusual interest in these films, that Francis X. Bushman and Miss Beverly Bayne appear as the lovers.

This is no ordinary love story in which a Jack and his Gill figure; it is a story of love in high places, when princes and princesses, and royal highnesses and high state officials play their parts amid courtly surroundings, and in which the course of true love is crossed by almost insurmountable difficulties. Yet the plot brings two pairs of lovers happiness in the end, though the plans laid by the men in the case would have led to their undoing had not Fate declared otherwise.

The direction of this photoplay was in the care of E. H. Calvert, and he must be complimented on the appropriate settings (interior and exterior) which he has furnished the spectator, and on the skill displayed in telling this knotty story clearly. The palace of H. R. H. Francis of Hofgarten is a vision of architectural beauty, and it might be of interest to know that it is the home of one of our Chicago millionaires, who courteously lent it to the Essanay forces for the occasion. The costuming of the various roles has also been supervised with artistic discretion, and the atmosphere throughout is in strict keeping with the demands of the story.

Francis X. Bushman is seen in the romantic character of an adventurous American, by the name of Richard Savage. In appearance, physique and action, Mr. Bushman is especially fitted for romantic roles. He is an athlete of no mean prowess and an adept swordsman. In his clash, in a small room, with three men of stalwart build and determined onslaught, he puts up a fight of such lively interest that one unconsciously cries, "Bravo!" In the love scenes with the Princess (Miss Beverly Bayne), he will convince the coldest spectator of the opposite sex that he is an apt master of affairs of the heart.

Miss Bayne is altogether lovely as the Princess. There is an unaffected sweetness in her impersonation that fits the part admirably. That excellent character actor, Thomas Commerford, makes H. R. H. Francis of Hofgarten appear in person. The make-up and costume leave nothing to be desired. Phillip, heir-apparent to Hofgarten, is ably sustained by Bryant Washburn. The peppery, autocratic vim of this young royal personage is well taken off. E. H. Calvert is particularly happy in the role of Count Karl von Blumen, and Chas. Hitchcock, as Frederick of Strelitzburg, gives a careful impersonation. One of the best studied and well acted roles in the strong cast is that of Baron Spitzhausen by Lester Cuneo. Here we have facial make-up and acting that are in perfect accord with the character of the scheming Secretary of State. Miss Betty Scott in the part of Baroness Karm, Miss Jane Paddock as the real princess in disguise, and Harry Dunkinson as Humphrey, the spy, all contributed to the merits of this well-acted photoplay.

Francis of Hofgarten aims at the union of the adjoining principality of Strelitzburg with his kingdom, by the marriage of his nephew, Philip, and the Princess of Strelitzburg. Philip loves, as he thinks, a girl of humble birth, and persuades an American friend of his, Richard Savage, to proceed to Strelitzburg and impersonate him, and then marry the Princess. Richard Savage falls in love with the woman he has been sent to betray, and his conscience is lashed by a million little devils. He plays his part to the end, which results in the revelation that the girl whom he supposes to be the Princess is an American girl, Helen Scene from "Under Royal Patronage" (Essanay).

Churchill, who, is a dear friend of the real Princess, had consented to impersonate her and prevent an unhappy marriage. As the real Princess had been absent from Court for 15 years, at school in a convent, the substitution was made without fear of detection. It also turns out that the humble girl who had won the heart of Philip of Hofgarten, is the real Princess, so all ends happily.

"The Perils of Pauline"

Twelfth Episode, in Two Parts, of the Popular Photoplay Serial, by Charles Goddard, as Played by the Pathe Players Under Special Lease.

Reviewed by Harry W. De Long.

LEADING CHARACTERS:

Harry Marvin .....Crane Wilbur
Pauline—His Adopted Sister.....Pearl White
Owen—The Villainous Secretary.....Paul Panzer
The Gypsy Leader.....Clifford Bruce

SERIOUS objections have been made by many picture-play patrons, heretofore, that the long serials, arbitrarily chopped into reel lengths, make it hard to get any intelligent grasp of the story in its entirety. There is no gainsaying that it is necessary to see the first and subsequent installments. To miss one part, particularly the first, or opening reels cause the patrons to grope hopelessly and with dissatisfaction through the rest. This seems to have been obviated to a great degree in the "Perils of Pauline," and each installment release has given satisfactory entertainment, and such a diversity of beautiful tropical scenery has been shown in bright, clear photography with perfect focus, pleasing to the eye, combined with the innumerable complications, intense situations and hairbreadth escapes in the development of the plot, so far, that, though each installment ends at the most interesting moment it is a complete picture in itself.

Scene from "The Perils of Pauline" (Eclectic).

This twelfth episode is full of thrills and gingery acting. Pauline is discovered in a hammock in an angry mood because Harry has prevented her from attending the McCallum wedding, and blames him for causing her recent automobile accident. Harry, however, shows her a newspaper containing an account of what happened at the wedding, where the lion tamer, true to his promise to Owen, let the lions escape, endangering the guests. Pauline realizes that Harry has acted for the best and becomes reconciled. Owen, not being satisfied with the activities of his friend, Hicks, and who has discovered in the person of the leader of a band of gypsies a man who is as daring as he is unscrupulous, decides to use this man to carry out his plans. He goes to the gypsy camp and makes arrangements with the leader to kidnap Pauline and do away with her. The chief uses one of the old women to lure Pauline away from the protection of the house. This old woman under the guise of selling Pauline some of the fake beauty cure which they manufacture, and telling her fortune, gets her to a position where some of the band are hiding.

The band captures Pauline and takes her to the camp. The gypsy leader protects her from harm as he admires her charms and wants her for himself. This arouses the jealousy of one of the young women of the band to whom the leader has paid a great deal of attention. She decides to get Pauline away from the camp, and to achieve her purpose she stops Harry in his car and informs him where Pauline can be found. Harry sets out to get her. He arrives at the camp, but on attacking the leader, is set upon by the whole band, and the young woman as well, who suddenly has changed her mind on seeing the leader in danger. Harry has the fight of his life, but finally rescues Pauline.

"England's Menace"

A Patriotic Film Drama in Three Parts Produced by The London Film Company and Presented in America by the Cosmofotofilm Company.

Reviewed by Harry W. De Long.

CAST.

The Foreign Emperor.....Lewis Gilbert
His Imperial Chancellor.....Douglas Munro
His Chief Counsellor.....George Bellamy
His Chief Spy.....Vincent Clive
His Ambassador to England.....Gerald Ames
The Prime Minister of England.....Charles Rock
His Secretary .....Arthur Holmes-Gore
Lady Betty Talbot, the secretary's little daughter, Edna Flugrath

COINCIDENTALLY this drama was written some little time previous to the breaking out of the present European imbroglio, and that it should have been smacks of foreordination or of the miraculous. The series of incidents in the action of the picture are concise and sustain the deepest interest. In the first part of the first reel the photography is hardly up to snuff, and in the acting in the scenes where the diplomats of both governments flash back and forth not much dignity is displayed on the part of some of the actors. However, the theme is so well carried out this can be forgiven, and when we see the splendid actino of the two children, of which more anon, in their various scenes you forget discrepancies. The scenes showing the battleships stripped for action and in war array are impressive to a high degree.

The Emperor of a foreign power is making secret plans to invade England. Of his advisers only the Chancellor protests against the outrageous scheme; his military and naval leaders are eager to obey his commands. One of the chief spies of this foreign power secures a place as butler in the house of Lord Talbot, secretary to the British Prime Minister. He uses his opportunities to copy important papers which Lord Talbot has charge of—papers which refer to the movements of British ships and soldiers. Lord Talbot's two children have installed an amateur wireless outfit in a playhouse in the garden which the spy discovers and surreptitiously uses to receive messages from his government. He burns a sheet of paper on which he has decoded a message and drops it on the floor. The children find the burned fragment which has remained intact and though they make nothing of the message (the ink of which is still visible on the burned paper) they copy it off together with the numbers which represent the letters.

The date fixed for the invasion arrives. The spy doffs his butler's livery and leaves Lord Talbot's house, going for the last time to the wireless outfit to receive his final message from his government. But the two children are already in the little wireless house; moreover, they have taken down the code message and by the use of the key which they made from the charred paper have succeeded in translating it. Just as they realize the significance of the message, "That the foreign fleet is on its way toward the English coast," the spy enters the wireless house. He tries to balk them; the girl slips under the table and out of the door with the message; the boy trips the spy with a hockey club and they escape him on their motorcycle. The spy follows and steals a motorcycle standing on the street, and an exciting chase occurs. The spy collides with an auto. The children succeed in delivering the cipher code to their father and the Prime Minister. The British government acts at once. Orders are issued with swift decision. The fleet gets up steam; the troops begin to march. By a clever use of the enemy's code the Prime Minister sends out a wireless which turns back the enemy's ships and transports. The danger is passed. The British government breathes a sigh of relief and the English people go placidly about their daily business, without realizing how narrowly a dangerous menace has been averted.

This three-part picture was shown at the Strand Theater, New York City, during the week beginning Sunday, Aug. 23.

"Grand Opera in Rubeville"

A Two-Reel Edison Burlesque by Ashley Miller—Rich in Choice Comedy.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CAST.

Alphonse, a scamp	Richard Tucker
Will Green, the organist	Herbert Prior
Eldora	Bliss Milford
Aunt Martha, her aunt	Mathilde Baring
Sapphira	May Abbey
Her Father	Charles Sutton
Editor of Clarion	Edward Boulden
Printer Hodd	Edward Clark
Constable	William West
Cy Jones	Frank Lyons
Will Jewell	Saul Harrison

ASHLEY MILLER has done it again. He has portrayed the amateur company in an attempt at grand opera this time, affording a lot of opportunity for a large and efficient company, especially for Richard Tucker and Bliss Milford. Some of the highly and intelligent and altogether delightful Edison Company are too fond of "acting" in the old-time sense of that word, and I do not know but that Director Miller has a deep-laid scheme to let them release their cherished aspirations in the two-reel farce comedies, with a view to their eventual reform. Tucker and Miss Milford, however, are veritable artists in their recent work, and contribute materially to the sum of values in "Grand Opera in Rubeville."

Scene from "Grand Opera in Rubeville" (Edison).

Scene from "Grand Opera in Rubeville" (Edison).

Bliss Milford has the part of a church singer, whose voice rouses the enthusiasm of the local press and elicits comment that her voice is superior to that of many now singing in grand opera. She sends a copy of the paper to her aunt in Boston, and it falls into the hands of one of that aunt's boarders, an impressario, Richard Tucker, about to fly by night to escape an overdue bill. He makes his way to Rubeville, sets up a rival institution to the singing school of the church organist and creates a furore among the ambitious vocalists of the place by organizing a company for the presentation of "Bohemian Girl." For the sake of contrast, the amateur principals are carried to the city by a wealthy enthusiast and given a view of "Bohemian Girl" as done by professionals. We are then treated to the amateur performance in all its wondrous crudity.

Tucker surprises as a comedian. His impersonation is so faithful, so entirely responsive to all the requirements of his role, that he enslaves the eye at almost every moment he is performing. He is a delightful impresario, not an exaggerated one—he is not even farcical—and seems to enjoy relief from his habitual assignment of "jeun premier." He is a lost sheep in the midst of a chaos of amusing experiences, his artistic sensibilities intermingled with gross material cravings, a veritable character worthy of reproduction in some higher form of comedy, for, after all, there is nothing funnier in the world than the contradictions presented by human nature, the kind most of us secretly possess, whether we openly announce it or not.

Tucker does not, however, absorb all the limelight. Bliss Milford's keen intelligence and quick grasp of limited opportunities marks her as a striking comedy possibility. She has some of the insouciant manner that made Florence Lawrence a source of continual delight in her Biograph days. This and the delicacy with which she hints at human weakness, leaving the rest to the spectator, will make her effective in social comedies. She and Tucker do much to raise "Grand Opera in Rubeville" above the farce, adding an element of true comedy which is all too lacking in plays intended to amuse, however mildly. Director Miller might well consider linking these two surprises in light skits of satire, particularly as the Edison drift seems to be towards comedy,ever one of the prime essentials of a varied program.

VIRGINIA PEARSON IN "AFTERMATH."

THE next release of the Famous Players Film Company is to be the powerful domestic drama by Professor William Addison Hervey, of Columbia University, "Aftermath." The film version of this noted play of American life is splendidly enacted by the celebrated leading lady, Miss Virginia Pearson, and the famous motion picture star, Owen Moore, supported by a consistently capable cast.

Miss Virginia Pearson.

"Aftermath" is a modern drama of error and atonement, the story of two souls that emerge from the depths. Ruth Morgan and Allan Buchanan, two unfortunate victims of evil and despair, are both drawn to the river's brink seeking merciful oblivion.

The two waifs of misfortune, thus strangely thrown together, turn away from death and begin their struggle back to hope and faith together. Allan becomes of service to a wealthy man, who secures him a position that enables him to marry Ruth, and shortly after the wedding Ruth learns that her husband's benefactor is the man of her past. Overwhelmed by the crushing revelation, Allan thrusts her from him, and the aftermath of the terrible past seems about to engulf both, when, through a thrilling combination of circumstances, Allan learns to forgive, and the two emerge from the shadows that lay behind them, into a wonderful happiness.

The production is in four reels, with never a pause of interest from the leader to the terrific climax of the story.

"THE SPOILERS" IN LONDON.

Announcements have been received at the general offices of The Selig Polyscope Company in Chicago from the London office, announcing the showing of "The Spoilers" in London. This typical Selig masterpiece is being well advertised and a great demand for it has been already evidenced. It is expected that "The Spoilers" will play in England for at least the year.

C. O. Baumann Talks of Plans

The President of the Photo Plays Corporation Outlines His Policy in the Production of 28 Reels Weekly.

By George Blaisdell.

FOR the second time in the history of the young motion picture industry announcement is made by advertisements of the production of a program of twenty-eight reels weekly by one concern. This time the Popular Photo Plays Corporation is the company, and Charles O. Baumann is the man who will direct its extensive operations. Mr. Baumann, besides being president of the Popular, is also president of the company operating the Willat Studios and Laboratories at Fort Lee, the technical output of which is to be under the skilled eye of C. A. ("Doc") Willat, secretary and treasurer. It is no secret that between the two organizations there is more than an ordinary community of interest. The active co-operation of Mr. Willat in the manufacturing end will give assurance to exhibitors that the photography will be of the best and that all the many steps between the camera and the screen will be taken with high regard for the most approved methods and up-to-the-minute machinery.

Mr. Baumann entered the motion picture business in 1908, when in conjunction with Ad Kessel he opened an exchange. In 1909 the two men formed the New York Motion Picture Company. May 21 of that year saw the first release, a "Bison." Mr. Baumann was the treasurer of the company and the directing spirit. Later in the same year the company added to its program the American releases of Itala and Ambrosio. Mr. Baumann assisted in organizing the Sales Company, the first group of independent manufacturers. He acquired the Miller 101-Ranch aggregation, and made the name of the brand featuring this popular company the 101-Bison. On the breaking up of the Sales Company Mr. Baumann in May, 1912, organized the Universal, becoming its first president. This alliance lasted but six weeks, when the New York Motion Picture Company withdrew. For another six weeks the New York was on the open market, when it affiliated with the Mutual group. The name of the 101-Bison brand was changed to Kay-Bee. Other companies organized by the New York were Broncho, Domino, and what, in Mr. Baumann's opinion, has been one of the greatest successes in the industry, the Keystone. The latter company began work in July of 1912, and its first subject was released in September following.

Charles O. Baumann.

In the course of a conversation the other day, Mr. Baumann pointed out that his company had been the first in the world to issue a multiple-reel subject as a weekly release on a regular program. Those who have knowledge of matters in a film way extending back a few years will remember that it was the Bison brand. This one action of Mr. Baumann in making a reel for each horn of the Bison bull is a significant index to his capacity for seeing into the future, his ability to forecast the lines on which public taste is going to fall, and to proceed immediately to aid in molding that belief into a fact.

"It is my intention in the Popular releases to make high-class feature pictures," said Mr. Baumann, "and that remark applies regardless of the number of reels, whether there be one or four or more. The story will control the length, not the exigencies of the moment or the day. We will adapt popular plays interpreted by popular players from time to time, which will be incorporated in the regular weekly service and on such terms to our booking exchanges as will obviate the necessity of extra prices being charged to the exhibitor.

"In the making of our pictures no essential expense will be spared. It is my belief, and that belief is based on my business experience, that real economy lies in the employment of competent actors and actresses, men and women of real ability. A director will outline to a real player the particular action to be portrayed in a certain scene. In one rehearsal the man will show that he has a complete comprehension of what the director desires to put over. He is ready to go on with the taking of the picture. An inferior man has to be coached and rehearsed, over and over. Much time is lost, hours sometimes; in the meantime overhead charges automatically pile up, and one scene is taken where with the right sort of acting intelligence several might have been. I believe in the employment of men of the type of Ince and Sennett, who started with me a couple of years ago at ordinary salaries and are now drawing $50,000 yearly.

"The Popular Photo Plays Corporation will pursue the policy of getting the best. I don't mind saying that I will not hesitate to employ directors who can earn five hundred or a thousand dollars weekly. As to actors and actresses no price will be too high to stop us from getting those who are worth while. We have in mind many who for a number of years have been starring on Broadway.

"Now, you speak of programs and balancing them. It is my intention to have well-balanced programs, a daily variety. On the Popular Program there will be no day on which, for instance, four westerns will be released. You see, there is a distinct advantage in having one man dictate subjects and dates of release, to regulate the character of the program. Duplications will be avoided and also the unpleasant combinations that sometimes result from the nominations of individual members of a group working independently of each other. Our pictures will be made in New York, Florida and California. This will give us variety of backgrounds.

"There is another angle to this single program. The Popular management will be responsible for every subject released. It will get the blame directly for any indifferent story, as it will get the credit for an unquestionably good one. Of course, we are going to try to avoid making any of the former sort. Also we are going to make a systematic attempt to stimulate our program by injecting the larger subjects, even if on these the ledger fails to show a profit. If in our opinion the subject is a worthy one the cost will not stop us.

"It is my conviction that the absolute ownership of the booking exchange, as will be the case with the Popular program, is going to result in advantage to the exhibitor as well as the manufacturer. Each man will be supreme in his own territory. He will be subservient to nobody. I believe that thirty generals will do more to advance the interests of all than can be the case with one general and thirty privates. Each man will be able to meet and conform to the conditions of his jurisdiction without interference. We are simply putting the moving picture business on the same plane as other commercial enterprises.

"In conclusion, I just want to say that in all my enterprises I have been associated with Ad Kessel. While I am undertaking this enterprise alone I want to lay emphasis on the fact that we continue the best of friends. I am still vice-president of the New York Motion Picture Corporation. While our paths may diverge our personal relations are unchanged. He is the head of a big concern and my heartiest good wishes go with him. I believe this new organization will give me the opportunity to put into effect ideas I have had in mind for a long time."

An Analysis of the English Market

By Harold Z. Levine.

AS Great Britain is wanting in the advantage of a ready and reliable domestic source of supply, it naturally has become an international dumping ground for the film output of the world. Every reel of film made on the face of the earth ultimately is tagged and placed on the bargain counter of this "free for all" market. As a protection against the natural evils engendered by the ceaseless influx of such a conglomeration of material, discriminating buyers and showmen have organized an alert corps of viewers who hold the sieve with vigorous vigilance and "try" to separate the refuse from the "real" goods.

Approximately three hundred and fifty subjects are exploited weekly over there, as against two hundred in the United States. Of these two hundred subjects here, one hundred and thirty are actually sold and placed before they are made. In England, not a foot is "placed" before it is actually "viewed." Many foreign subjects dumped on the English market seldom get further than the dump heap. Of the three hundred and fifty subjects exploited, therefore, possibly one hundred and fifty actually reach a release day and find a market. This figure as compared to the one hundred and sixty subjects released weekly in this country (a little less than nine-tenths of domestic manufacture), sounds almost incredible, considering the wide difference in scope of the two markets. There are 15,000 theaters in the United States as against four thousand in England, and two hundred and fifty exchanges compared to one hundred in Great Britain. Yet in the face of this tremendously larger field here—almost four times as many theaters and more than twice as many exchanges—Great Britain releases about as many subjects a week as we do. The public there gets just as large a variety of material as we do here!

This extraordinary condition perhaps is due to the fact that unlike merchandise, amusement enterprise is not governed so much by the economic law of supply and demand, as by population. Great Britain, which is about as large as New York State, has a population of more than 50,000,000. The United, States which covers an area of about sixty times larger than Great Britain, can only boast of 90,000,000, an advantage of only 50 per cent. in population as compared to an advantage of 6,000 per cent. in area. There are 12,000 souls to each theater in Great Britain as compared to 6,000 souls to each theater in this country, or an advantage for England of 100 per cent. This substantially is the secret for the surprisingly large consumption of film by the British market.

England shows its public as big a variety of subjects as we do over here; it would not be accurate to say that England's total footage of purchases and sales equals that of ours. It is almost impossible to estimate the actual number of feet of film sold weekly in the two countries. It would, however, surprise many if our advantage were more than 100 per cent.

One of the chief reasons why England is, practically speaking, on a par with us in total purchases and why this almost unbelievable condition exists despite our bigger outlet, is due to the short commercial life of a film over there—by commercial life is meant the life of a film from the time it is released to the time its possibility for booking is absolutely exhausted. Therefore the greater number of copies sold in a restricted territory with a given population, the shorter the life of the film. Thus in England because nearly as many subjects are sold there as here (and almost if not quite as many copies), the commercial life of the film is materially reduced—in view of the limited number of possible bookings. Four thousand theaters, supplied by one hundred hirers, means an average of forty customers to the hirer; thus, the average life of a film commercially is about sixty days—or a three days' booking by half of forty customers. It seldom happens that all the customers of the hirer book one film through. Here the average life of a film is ninety days—after that its usefulness is practically gone. Both here and abroad the exchangeman figures on getting his original investment out of the film in the first thirty or forty days, the remaining bookings should be the profit.

Because the life of a film is so short in England, hirers often pursue the practice of selling "commercial stuff" to continental agents—thus, a subject is reincarnated, as it were, placed in circulation in some foreign territory and thus it pursues a profitable career. This evil has grown up into a good sized leech that bleeds the continental revenue of many American manufacturers. Of course, this practice is regarded as legitimate—for it is the only way some of the smaller hirers can eke out a profit. Not infrequently will hirers complain that they are only working for manufacturers and that only those plutocrats and the exhibitors are the ones making the big money.

England's large number of magnificent first, second and third run houses—the ratio as compared to the number here being three to one—naturally militates for quantity as well as quality. There is always a big scramble among the showmen for good stuff and they all want to show it, when it is new. Thus, hirers are sometimes compelled to buy more than one copy of a subject to comply with this artificial demand. To them it means an increase of expenditures without appreciable returns in sight. As an illustration of this situation —Mr. J. Frank Brockliss, awhile ago sold about seventy-two copies of "When the Earth Trembled" (Lubin), and more than one hundred copies of "Ivanhoe" (Imp). Every live-wire exchange had from one to two copies of these subjects. After the first two weeks every big theater in Great Britain had booked the stuff—then there was no one of consequence left—and the film had to go on the shelf.

The showman, the agent and the manufacturer made money on the proposition; the hirer had to charge it up to "profit and loss" plus experience.

After the market had been oversold several times in this way, the hirers bethought themselves and for a time they encouraged and patronized the "exclusive" or subjects for which they were guaranteed territorial rights and for which only a limited number of copies were sold. This of course, applied to "features" only. The "exclusive" had but a short period of popularity. The scheme had a tendency to flood the market with junk and increase prices, so the showman went up in arms against it. While a good many hirers still buy nothing but "exclusives" they are exceptions and not the rule.

England, today, is going through a period of transition. There is a revulsion of feeling against the long films (which had been foisted on the gullible—as features, but in reality were nothing but increased footage of single reels), and the entire market is gradually coming to a point where it will not be swayed by artificial influences.

The great equilibrator in England is the "bi-weekly change." All kinds of wild-cat schemes will come and go—but, the great final test will always be whether or not a film can pass a three-day public scrutiny. So long as the bi-weekly change is in vogue, so long will the English public get the best of the world's market. It is one thing that has a tendency to bring everybody in the business over there back to their senses with a jolt after one of those periodic business "sprees." Whether it would have the same effect over here, is of course a matter for conjecture.

The advantages and disadvantages of the bi-weekly change over the daily change has often been the "excuse" for many a dissertation. Also the subject of Open Market vs. Monopoly has been wrestled with pro and con by students of the market. If bank accounts are fair criterions, however, we over here, have made bigger fortunes by working the daily change and the "closed door" policy than our English cousins who adhere to the bi-weekly change and the "open door" policy. There is much in favor of both plans, but I doubt whether one or the other can be worked in both places with success. After all the geographical and psychological differences between the two countries are factors that have to be considered with mathematical precision.

That there is this great difference is evidenced by the characteristics of the two peoples. Plays and pictures that are winners here fall flat over there. The American agent may arrive at some very profitable conclusions by following the English speaking stage. It is interesting to observe what pleases their audiences. However, just when you come to the conclusion that you understand them perfectly along comes something that completely shatters all your preconceived notions about their likes and dislikes. The writer, for weeks at a time, made careful observations at the English music halls and theaters—so when it was announced in London that "Potash and Perlmutter" was coming, we prognosticated that it would be a dismal failure—because the subject was essentially American and so indigenous of New York. It seemed so foreign to the English social or economic system—yet the play came three months ago; it is still running and playing to "standing room only." It is a phenomenal success—so there you are!

WILL LEASE NEW THEATER.

A new theater is under construction at San Antonio, Texas, at the corner of Houston and St. Mary's streets. It occupies the first floor of an eight story building, is modern in every respect, and one of the most up-to-date theaters in the South. Owner Lytle who also now has the Wigwam 1 and Wigwam 2 in San Antonio, will lease the new theater, which will be opened late in the fall.

"For the Last Edition"

A Snappy Two-Reel Reliance—Realistic and Full of Interest.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

PRINCIPALS IN THE CAST.

Robert Barry ..... Robert Burns
Bess Landers ..... Irene Hunt

ON the go from start to finish, "For The Last Edition" is a presentation creditable to all participating in its production. Only two of the characters, the principals, were named in the list given me, whereas I would have gladly credited others. There is a disposition on the part of those impersonating minor roles to make them realistic—no playing up to the camera—and they contribute materially to the support of sustained interest by quick appreciation and readiness of action. That there is little or no lost time is probably due to the director, whose name, as well as that of the author, was not to be had for the purposes of review.

Scene from "For the Last Edition" (Reliance).

The story contains an element sure to be popular, that of demonstrating the efficiency of those now seeking a new freedom, those who should be our companions in truth as well as in theory, skirts to the contrary notwithstanding; those who constitute one-half of the human race, and its best half at that. If woman had not been a negligible factor in Europe, we should not be treated to the shameful spectacle of de-civilization now presented by the most enlightened countries of the Old World. Only the potential genius of woman, raised to its highest development by equal opportunity will end the purely destructive relation of nations.

Scene from "For the Last Edition" (Reliance).

The potential genius of "For The Last Edition" is a plucky young reporter, impersonated by Irene Hunt. She is treated fairly by the newspaper men among whom her lot is cast, and proves that only a little such encouragement is necessary to prove the genial fire of her sex. Creative by instinct, yet pitiful with those who err, the girl reporter undertakes to rebuild an unfortunate reporter's reputation and restore him to the career of his aspirations. To do this she takes desperate chances to aid him in a grand scoop. Her activities keep the story constantly on the go, give it ceaseless activity with an ultimate triumph in which her unlucky comrade shares.

For the edification of those exhibitors who affect melodrama, be it said that there is an "explosion" in the drama, pronounced at most of the exchanges "eggsblozhun", but this is a mere incident. Attention is held for two reels by live sympathy for the girl and interest in the outcome—will she pull off the scoop in time for that terrible last edition and save the day for the young man who has not made good in previous opportunities? This curiosity, this projecting of mind as to the conclusion, is constantly enhanced without the employment of impossibilities. The whole story is realistic and its go will keep almost any audience entertained.

"Creatures of Clay"

A Three-Reel Hepworth-American Film Production, Depicting the Way in Which a Thief Saves a Woman's Honor.

THIS three-reel number is presented by a cast of English performers including Stuart Rome, Alice De Winton, Jack Raymond and Harry Vibart. It illustrates how an old love flaming in the heart of a thief induced him to save the woman he had so madly worshipped from certain dishonor.

The story runs along in an interesting way. The plot contains no elements of a surprising, novel nature, yet the scenes as they follow succeed in arousing considerable interest.

Hilary Sinclair and Michael Trevis both love an actress named Vasca de Lisle. She weds Hilary. Michael is heartbroken and finds it difficult to congratulate his successful rival, but he forces himself to do so. Later Michael becomes dissipated and goes down the hill until he becomes an accomplished thief. There is no intense, gripping action in any of these situations, and it seems that the actors might have thrown a little more feeling into their work. Too much conscious posing is apparent in a number of scenes.

Scene from "Creatures of Clay" (Hepworth).

It develops that Vasca is considerable of a spendthrift and Hilary is unable to pay off her debts. She attends a house party, with her husband, and at a reception she notices a diamond necklace slip to the floor from the neck of Mrs. Trevis, Michael's mother. Terribly tempted, Vasca conceals this necklace, but she is observed by an old admirer, Stuart Finlay.

Finlay, a villain at heart, tries to make terms with Vasca to maintain silence. She spurns him and he cries out that he has found the thief. Vasca had placed the necklace in a box, but in the meantime Michael, having come with other members of the gang to rob the house, had taken the necklace himself.

This brings the observer to the main incident of the production, when Vasca is charged with the theft and Michael advances from behind the curtains to take the blame upon himself. He at first wears a mask, but later tears it away so that all present see to what depths he has fallen. Then comes another turn in the plot, when Michael's father draws a revolver from a drawer and hands it to his son. All turn away as Michael steps out of the door with the gun. Presently a shot is heard and they rush out to find that the black sheep has taken his own life at his father's suggestion.

Many of the scenes in this offered greater possibilities for dramatic work than were realized by this cast, but the story holds the interest fairly well as it stands.

James Oliver Curwood.

An Interesting Interview with the Famous Author of "Kazan" and Writer of Photoplays, Who Is Now Seeking Fresh Inspiration in the Far North.

By James S. McQuade.

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD, who writes two novels a year, a short story every two weeks, and numerous popular photoplays—and who, incidentally, spends from two to three months every year exploring and hunting in the far northland—was in Chicago for a number of days recently, dividing his time between the Selig studio and the Red Book magazine, in which publication his new novel, "God's Country and the Woman," began last June. A short time ago a literary magazine stated that Mr. Curwood was the prize literary hustler of the continent, and it came near the mark. This doesn't mean that he is hustling to the deterioration of his work; for every novel he writes is proving itself bigger and stronger than its predecessor, not only in this country, but in England as well, where his "Kazan," a novel of the North, is now one of the big sellers.

James Oliver Curwood.

Within the last year Mr. Curwood has become prominent in this country as a writer of photoplays. When asked what sort of a system he has, whereby one photoplay out of one hundred and twenty-seven have been returned to him, he said:

"It isn't so much a system as the fact that into every photoplay I write I put as strong a plot and as conscientious work as in my work for Colliers, the Saturday Evening Post, or any other magazine."

Then he went on, filled with the enthusiasm so strongly characteristic of him: "And why shouldn't one do as good work for the screen as for the best magazine on earth? That has been the chief weakness of the writing end of the photoplay up to the present time—the general belief that it's as easy to write a photoplay as it is to mix up a batch of biscuits. Not only the amateurs, but a good many successful fiction writers, have fallen down because they believe that any old batch of incidents strung on a film will make a photoplay. Today a corking good story in scenario form means as much to a picture manufacturer as a first-class piece of fiction does to a magazine publisher. 'Incidents' don't make a magazine story, and they won't make a film drama or comedy.

"Thousands of writers have been stringing 'incidents' for the film manufacturers as they might string beads for a bunch of kids, and, as a result, it's a wonder that two-thirds of the manufacturers and editors are not in insane asylums. A plot—the real, red-blood animal itself—is even a bigger factor in the photoplay than it is in the fiction story. In other words, you can spill a whole lot of sentiment and good English in a short story or novel that wouldn't make fifteen feet of interesting film.

"The other day I was talking with a well-known fiction writer who complained that a photoplay, his first, had been returned. 'The Lord knows there was enough excitement in it,' he said. 'There were killings, a wreck, a fist fight and a fire.' I read that script later, and found he was like ninety-nine per cent. of the would-be photoplay writers. He had expected that a batch of exciting 'incidents' would pull the thing through; but as for plot, there wasn't as much as you might have put in ten lines."

Possibly no man in the country has more editor friends, especially among the magazines, than Mr. Curwood, and when asked what he saw in the future for the photoplay writer he said:

"It's my personal opinion that the next five years will see a quarter of the magazines in the country driven to the bad by the photoplay. The screen story has already won a tremendous place for itself; but it's not yet out of its swaddling clothes. Only a few years ago the so-called better class of people hesitated about going to a picture show. Now they all go. The screen picture has already hit the book publishers hard. I know that, for I'm close up in the book game. One publisher told me recently that a few years ago his firm figured that each year from four to six of their books would sell anywhere from 50,000 to 200,000 copies. Now it's a cause for rejoicing if two books a year reach even the first figure. And it's because of the photoplay.

"More and more of the picture houses of every town are filling the requirements of fiction. Instead of reading a book or a magazine, Mr. Brown and his family go down town and see half a dozen stirring pieces of fiction on the screen. That's why we are going to have bigger and better stories on the screens. We've got to have them. 'Incidents' alone no longer go. Mr. Brown and his wife want a story, and they want a good one. They want the best stories that the best writers can give them, whether those writers are famous or not. And the manufacturers are seeing the necessity for stronger and better film stories, for the simple reason that new thousands of book and magazine readers are being won over to them every day. So again we come down to the real thing in the writing end—the plot. The best fiction writer that lives can write nothing too good for the screen, though I know a lot of them now who smile in good-natured toleration when you tell them so."

When the matter of censorship was brought up Mr. Curwood bit his cigar in two.

"The moving picture has simply become the goat of the censors," he said. "For years the public has been clamoring for censorship of something, and nothing has ever been censored. Now, the censors have found an opening, and all the 'accumulated censoring' of a decade is falling upon the photoplay. If we believe these censor-fanatics, the photoplay is bound to drive the world to hades; yet it's a curious fact that statistics show there is less crime of every kind now than before the screen picture became popular. If books and magazines were censored as the picture is, about a hundred thousand writers would have to go back to the farm. In their straining for the Essence of Virtue the censors themselves are educating several million very young people to look for and expect the things which otherwise they would never have realized. In other words, a good deal of censorship does more to poison young minds than to save them, from the mere fact that the censors are howling themselves hoarse in their efforts to train children to recognize sin when they see it."

Mr. Curwood After a Trip Down from the Barren Lands in the Far North.

Mr. Curwood's method of working is interesting. The secret of his great literary productiveness and the high grade of his work, both in photoplay and fiction, lies really in the fact that he believes in conserving all of his mental and physical energies for purely original work. He has three clever assistants in his employ. One is a reader, another a stenographer, and the third, what he calls his 'professional adviser.'

"My reader spends six hours each day reading ancient and modern history," explained Mr. Curwood. "I give him one hour of my time each day, and in that hour he tells me what he has read in six. This saves both my time and eyes; and, as he talks, I smoke a cigar and watch for ideas. When I have a working idea I think it out along lines of action, and then call in the young woman whose sole work is the reading of all photoplay announcements and reviews, and whose value lies in her ability to keep in touch with current and past photoplay ideas. I tell her my plot, and if I am using situations already filmed she points out the similarity, and I make the necessary changes.

My stenographer's ideas are obvious. Some may possibly laugh at the idea of securing modern photoplays from the Bible and ancient history. I wrote fourteen reels of photoplay from the "Lives of Plutarch," and in most instances a single line gave me my idea for a story. Among the Plutarch plays were: 'When Women Go on the Warpath' and 'The Lost Millionaire,' filmed by Vitagraph; and 'The Vengeance of Priam, 'The Stutterer,' and 'The Richest Girl in the World,' multiple reels to be put out by Mr. Selig. Such a modern comedy as the multiple reel, 'When the Devil Visited Mr. Scraggs,' also to be put out by Mr. Selig, I got in the Bible, and my modern war-drama, 'The War Makers,' came from half a dozen lines in 'The Burning of Rome.'

"But, after all," Mr. Curwood says, "there is nothing like the solitude of the great North for ideas," and every time that he returns from his adventurous expeditions beyond civilization he brings back with him the material for his biggest and best work in both fiction and photoplay. Mr. and Mrs. Curwood left for the far North on August 13. Headquarters have been established in Jasper, Alberta, from which hamlet expeditions will be made to points offering the best atmosphere and inspiration for his work.

The scenario for "The Fifth Man," a big three-reel spectacular jungle feature for Selig, was written by Mr. Curwood. My review of these films will appear in the next issue of the World.

Bessie Learn in War Panic

Edison Player Witnesses Stormy Scenes in Holland and England Following Outbreak of Hostilities.

MISS BESSIE LEARN, the well-known Edison player, has just returned from a trip to Europe the closing fortnight of which furnished her with sufficient excitement to answer any craving she may have for that sort of thing for some time to come. Miss Learn went abroad early in June. She visited Switzerland, Italy, France, England, Ireland and Holland. It was on July 30 that she left England for Holland. There she found everyone disturbed. Bulletins were being posted and read by great throngs. Some one explained to Miss Learn that war was brewing, and she determined to cut short her visit. In Amsterdam the steamship piers were crowded with Americans. Many who had just arrived were fighting to get started back. Five hours were required by the train to get from Amsterdam to Rotterdam. There Miss Learn was fortunate to get checks cashed by an express company, while others lined for blocks in front of the banks were having trouble. Miss Learn has no bouquet for the American Consul in Rotterdam. She says that even a United States Senator failed to get anything in the way of advice from this official. Finally Miss Learn got a boat by way of the Hook of Holland to Harwich and saved her baggage, which she said she had to watch over every minute. She had to stand up from Rotterdam to the Hook. On the boat there were 750 passengers crowded into quarters intended for 300. There were incidents a-plenty, although the vessel was convoyed by two warships.

Miss Bessie Learn.

When Miss Learn arrived in London she had not a cent of currency. To her dismay she learned it was a bank holiday. The manager of the American Express Company, however, cashed some checks and that helped a lot. By good luck Miss Learn heard of an available ticket at the office of the Cunard Line, which some one had returned, and she found that by going to Liverpool she could get possession of the bit of paper. This latter city was crowded by Americans so anxious to get passage they were offering high prices for the privilege of sleeping on deck. Miss Learn paid for a third class ticket just twice what it cost her to go over first class. She was able, however, to change to second cabin on the second day out.

The Laconia was eight days in making the trip. All lights were blanketed at night. The passengers were very much excited throughout the journey, in spite of dances every other day on deck, a number of concerts and entertainments furnished by two professional boxers who were among the passengers. At one time the steamship stopped dead for fourteen hours on account of dense fog. So tense was the situation that it was reported among the passengers that the captain had been obliged to ignore a S O S call, fearing it to be a decoy. At one point of the trip freezing weather was encountered, and it was said the ship was near Greenland. The night before the Laconia docked the passengers saw in the not great distance the lights of Atlantic City, many miles south of New York.

"You can't imagine how good the Statue of Liberty looked to me," said the little actress. "By the way, I ought to be a sure-enough American now. I thought I was a real one when I left home, but in England before we returned I was obliged to pay a head tax of $4, as I had with me no papers to prove my nationality. Yes, you may be sure I am glad to be home. But I certainly did have two real weeks."

GIVING FREE TOPICAL NEWS.

Giving away 1,000 feet of topical film every week is the task which the Topical News Company, Inc., has set for itself for the next fifty-two weeks. Its agents are already in the field headed by Carlisle H. Rogerman, who was recently editor of the Animated Weekly of the Universal Film Company. Meanwhile the company is housed on the fourth floor of No. 18 East Forty-first street, where Blair Frazer is president, Maxwell Ryder, vice-president, and the Duke of Manchester, treasurer.

Dr. Ryder, who is to be very active in the concern, has a long career of journalism and theatrical activity back of him. He brings to the company an experience which will be invaluable in both the news end of the business and in the dramatic side which must be considered in a large part even in the telling of current happenings by means of a canvas screen. Dr. Ryder is perhaps better known for his work on stagecraft, which was published in 1891, than for any other achievement. This work had a wide circulation.

Mr. Rogerman, who will be the editor and manager of the Topical News, has been in the film business for a number of years and has devoted the greater part of his energies to topical films. While he was with the Universal, he produced many features, principal among which was the Dayton flood release which was the first film showing that disastrous calamity exhibited in New York and abroad. He got the inauguration of President Wilson and went with the big Congressional party which visited the Panama Canal. He afterwards exhibited these pictures to members of the Senate and House and presented them to Secretary Bryan. His "Who's Who in the Cabinet," showing the members of that body at work, was an achievement which brought him to the attention of the film world. These pictures were taken with the aid and co-operation of the U. S. Government.

Blair Frazer, the president of the company, is also general manager for the International Education League with which the Topical News Company is affiliated, so that the facilities of the larger company will always be at the disposal of the topical weekly. The treasurer, the Duke of Manchester, who is well-known to filmdom as having recently launched the most extensive motion picture plan in many months, is also president of the International Educational League. The secretary, Alfred A. Sommerville, will have charge of marketing the product.

BRADY'S PLAYS FOR WORLD FILM.

The World Film Corporation has acquired all the rights and producing privileges to the plays which William Brady has produced during the past twenty years. As far as possible the World Film Corporation will employ the same casts which presented Mr. Brady's successes on Broadway. Mr. Brady has consented to this arrangement and many of the actors and actresses who played the leading roles which they made famous in the original speaking stage version.

Even more elaborate mountings will be given Mr. Brady's plays than when Broadway first saw the "legitimate" attractions. Exteriors will be taken on the actual sites called for in the author's book, while Mr. Brady has consented to loan the interior sets used in his production to the World Film Corporation to assist it in its picturing of his successes.

"The Devil's Dansant"

A Kalem Two Part Subject Possessing Rare Technical Excellence—Produced by Robert Vignola.

BY reason of good acting, clear, sharp photography and artistic settings the Kalem Company have produced a subject in "The Devil's Dansant" that is worthy of more than passing notice. The story, written by Hamilton Smith, is simple in construction and does not afford many thrills. If it was intended to carry a lesson that lesson is that frivolous wives should listen to the words of admonition given by their usually more experienced husbands. Especially does this bit of advice pertain when the husband of the aforesaid frivolous wife happens to be a district attorney and bent upon reforming the town.

Scene from "The Devil's Dansant" (Kalem).

Robert Vignola was the director of this picture and a particularly good bit of work has he turned out. There is noticeable care in the settings which approach exactness in point of reality. Several of the scenes introduce dancing in a cafe and it is said that many of the extra people who take part in those scenes are of the elite of Jacksonville, near which city the picture was made, and with the best people of which city

Scene from "The Devil's Dansant" (Kalem).

Mr. Vignola is very popular. At any rate they are all good dancers who appear in the scenes and their presence adds to the charm of the picture.

It is not stated who the photographer was, but we would offer, as a guess, George Hollister. In this very necessary particular the subject is most pleasing. Every scene is clear and sharp and the tones are easy on the eye.

As for the story, Dominique's place is a sort of cafe dansant which is a cover for a gambling joint where men and women of wealth and fashion may play on the quiet. The wife of the district attorney goes there to dance and is discovered by her husband, who leads her away and forbids her patronizing the place. She rejects his advice and is again seen there, but, with the assistance of Robert Walker, the silent partner of Dominique, manages to escape discovery when her husband again appears. In making her escape she is taken through the gambling room where she tarries long enough to win a little money and is then led out, through a secret entrance, after which she returns home.

The idea appeals to her and she tries it again, but this time she loses all her money and a handsome brooch just given to her by her husband. Deceiving her husband as to the whereabouts of the brooch when he misses it, she asks Dominique to return it and is told that he will do so if she will introduce some of her wealthy friends to his place.

In the meantime Walker has threatened to squeal on Dominique if he allows the district attorney's wife to enter the place again and discovering her there he tells the district attorney all about the plant. A raid is planned and pulled off while the erring wife is in the gambling room. The loyal husband protects her by saying that she is there to assist him in securing evidence and in the next scene he forgives her, whereupon the picture ends.

There is very little opportunity given any of the players to display their ability for everything runs so smoothly to the finish, but Miss Hollister is quite acceptable as the frivolous wife and the dancing is good.

BUSY ON NEW PROGRAM.

Great Activity at Warner's Features, Inc.—Producing Companies Form an Organization.

THE mahogany-furnished offices of Warner's Features, Inc., fairly buzz with activity just now, and things are moving so fast that even the most energetic cameraman would be hard put to it to keep up with them. There is good cause for the commotion. The launching of a complete program by this big feature film company is thrilling enough to make everybody connected with it feel excited. And with the first release date rapidly approaching, the entire staff is on the jump.

To put out such a program as is the declared intention of the Warner Company, involves a large amount of work and a great expenditure of money. No detail can be slighted—no half-way measures tolerated. Everything must be exactly right before the precise opening date is definitely announced.

One of the most interesting phases of the making of the Warner's program is the organization of the producing companies which will provide the pictures. All the details of the organization had not been perfected in time for announcement in this issue of the Moving Picture World, but it will include a number of the best companies in the business. Next week the officers of the producing organization, together with the names of individual companies, will be made public.

The producing organization itself determines the class of films to be produced by each company, assigning dramas to some, comedies to others, Western productions to others, and so on. The program, which will also be definitely announced next week, is to consist of from twenty-one to twenty-eight reels a week, divided into threes, two, and singles. It will be as complete as a program can be made, covering all classes of films and filling practically all requirements of exhibitors.

The Warner Company has letters from many leading theater managers in which the advent of the new program is given a hearty welcome. This unusual incident is due to the reputation won by the company as high-grade feature film producers.

With thirty-four exchanges conveniently located, the Warner Company is in a position to take care of exhibitors promptly and efficiently.

EDNA GOODRICH IN WAR'S TOILS.

Edna Goodrich, who was to have begun work this week for the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company on the moving picture production of the "Warrens of Virginia," in a letter to Samuel Goldfish, head of the Lasky firm, advised that the picture would necessarily have to be postponed as she was marooned at Ostend, Belgium, and had busied herself for the past two weeks as a member of the Belgium Red Cross. "I have occupied my time," writes Miss Goodrich, "by making bandages for the wounded. My hotel, The Kursaal, has been turned into a hospital and there are three hundred badly injured soldiers here. Everybody is coming forward with a magnificent spirit to aid in the alleviation of the suffering of the poor fellows who had given their lives to their country."

The production of the "Warrens of Virginia," in which Miss Goodrich was to have appeared for the Lasky Company is completed, and the cast was engaged, but had now been dispersed by De Mille and the productions postponed until the early part of January.

R. Henderson Bland, Actor

Well-Known English Player Who Will Be Remembered for His Notable Portrayal in Kalem Masterpiece.

By George Blaisdell.

WHEN you put in eight consecutive hours in the company of a man you get a fairly accurate line on his ideas of things in general and on his work in particular—that is, if from time to time by leading questions you direct the conversation into a certain channel. On Saturday the writer had the pleasure of extending an acquaintance with R. Henderson Bland, the actor who so notably portrayed the Saviour in Kalem's famous "From the Manger to the Cross." Mr. Bland had been in the United States but ten days. It is his first visit to this country. There is much that is new and of deep interest to him; his talk reveals that he is a keen observer and possesses a mind that works rapidly. His speech is evenly deliberate, and it is picked with discretion from a wide vocabulary.

R. Henderson Bland.

Mr. Bland is more than an actor. He is a poet—a real one, not of the near variety. He has issued two volumes of his works—"Poems" and "Moods and Memories." Poet and actor is an unusual combination, but surely it is a happy one. Mr. Bland's activity with the pen has not been confined to verse. The Dramatic Society of London recently produced a play the joint work of Mr. Bland and Mr. Manning-Austen, entitled "Catherine the Great." In collaboration with Mrs. T. P. O'Connor Mr. Bland wrote a play produced four years ago. He has written and produced several one-act plays. Clifford Brooke, who has just arrived in New York, where he will be a producer for Liebler & Co., has in his possession a play by Mr. Bland which he hopes to produce soon. Mr. Bland has contributed articles and poems to many journals and magazines. So, too, he has written songs. At the present time he is under engagement by the Intelligence Bureau of London—a press syndicate—to write his impressions of American life, with especial reference to clubs, the effect of the war, and to touch on the sidelights frequently unseen by the average commentator. Mr. Bland started on his stage career in 1897 with Sir Herbert Tree, with whom he remained two years. Then followed two years' strenuous work in the Provinces playing such parts as Bassanio, Laertes, Macduff, Joseph Surface, Ernest Vane in "Masks and Faces," Rudolph in "Leah," and Sir Ernest Vane in "East Lynne." Following that experience came a long tour with the Ben Greet company in "The Three Musketeers," in which he played Athos. After an engagement at Drury Lane Mr. Bland played in "M. Beaucaire" under Louis Waller. He then toured South Africa with Mrs. Langtry, playing Oliver in "As You Like It" and Viscount Stornaway in "The Degenerates." On returning to England Mr. Bland for a year toured the Provinces with Austin Melford, playing the Spider in "The Silver King." He then took up Herbert Waring's part in "Idols" under the Hutchinson management, and played it for six months. In Mrs. Brown-Potter's company Mr. Bland created the role of the Duc d'Aiguillon in "Du Barri," and later joined Sir George Alexander's company to play Detchard in "The Prisoner of Zenda." Mr. Bland's last work in London was in "Julius Caesar," where he sustained the role of Brutus, with Godfrey Tearle as Cassius and James Berry as Marc Antony. The English player makes no attempt to conceal his pride in the fact that he was a pupil of Captain Hutton, who at one time was considered the greatest fencer in Europe.

The foregoing will indicate that for the last fifteen years Mr. Bland's has been a busy life. "In my experience nothing has so impressed me as my work in Palestine," said the player. "The Kalem's company in the Holy Land was composed of a splendid lot of men and women, and they had marked ability of the all-around kind. They treated me with wonderful courtesy. I felt, of course, that as an Englishman coming into an American company to play the leading part I was in a delicate position. I recall an incident that happened the evening of the third day after my arrival in Jerusalem. Director Olcott had come to see me in the costume of the character I was to portray. He sent for the members of the company. They filed into the room and looked at me very closely, but retired without uttering a word. I didn't know what to do. It was not until after the work in Palestine was finished that Mr. Olcott told me that the players had all come to his room straight from mine and told him they believed I was the man for the part and that they would stand by me in every possible way. It was fine of them.

Mr. Bland as the Christ in the Garden of Gethsemane in Kalem's "From the Manger to the Cross."

"It is hard to convey in words a description of the respect and courtesy of which I was the recipient from every one. In passing through crowds I was always protected from the natives who would try to get near, sometimes to touch the garments I wore. You may understand how impressive it all was. Every effort was made to prevent anything from disturbing me. If the company were rehearsing I would be at one side, remote, until everything was ready for me to enter the scene. I was shielded in every way possible so that I might keep in the spirit of the story and the wonderful character. If you remember the portrayal I think you will agree with me that there is little of the theatrical it it."

Mr. Bland as the Christ on the Mount of Olives in Kalem's "From the Manger to the Cross."

Mr. Bland is a believer in restrained acting. "I have seen many pictures that in my humble opinion were spoiled by overacting. So, too, sometimes we see examples of underacting."

"Was my engagement by the Kalem company rather sudden? Yes, indeed, it was a remarkable example of your American quickness in doing things. I was engaged to go to Palestine in a matter of minutes or hours. You know as a rule managers would be inclined to look over every actor in London before deciding. I think Mr. Olcott was in London less than two days.

"What kind of roles do I like best? Well, I have played in all sorts of characters, Shakespearean and other kinds, but as a rule I like parts in which there is an opportunity for all-around work, a part with a bite in it; yes, and a bit of comedy, too. My ideal of a good stage character is the Spider in 'The Silver King.'

"I have noted that you Americans are a great theatergoing people. The other evening—I believe it had been the hottest day of the year here—I saw 'Peg o' My Heart.' I was particularly interested in observing the ready response to humorous situations, the keen perception of the mass of the audience. Such a big house on such a night in England would not have been possible. I have been surprised, too, to see so large houses in your picture theaters in the day time—so many business men coming in for an hour or two. In England the business man does not think of amusement or a bit of recreation until the day is over. Your plan of ventilating theaters here at stated periods is very interesting. In the streets the cosmopolitanism of the throngs impress me. It reminds of Paris.

"Mr. Bland, you have over in England two American directors, Mr. Shaw and Mr. Tucker, with the London Film Company," we suggested. "How about it?"

"The London Film Company has been very successful. I think some of the reasons for this has been that it has employed the best of actors and the most skilled stage men and scenic artists. If in a London picture you see a paneled wall it is just what it purports to be. Then, again, the company has patronized the best costumer in the country. Nothing is left to chance."

We asked Mr. Bland how long he intended to remain in America. "Why, you see," he answered with a trace of a smile, "I can't just tell. I have been talking with one or two of your manufacturers here, and I may make a long stay."

Marion Digs Up Some Facts

To the Editor of the Moving Picture World:

I hold no brief from the Biograph Company and this communication is written without the knowledge or approval of the officials of that company, but I feel somewhat in duty bound to my old colleagues of the Biograph studio to make some comment upon the story exploiting Mr D. W. Griffith and his "$100,000 salary" in a recent number of McClure's magazine. To begin, I doubt very much if Mr. Griffith was privileged to read the proof of this story. If, however, he stands back of it, I am sure the Moving Picture World and its host of readers will have a sufficient interest in the true history of the business to allow me a stick or two of space.

I therefore call upon the following old-timers of the Biograph studio to either bear me out or correct me: H. N. Marvin, Wallace McCutcheon, William Bitzer, Joseph Harrington, Fred Armitage, Fred Dobson, Sid Olcott, Gene Gauntier and Lee Dougherty. Were he alive, I should also call that notable pioneer of photographers, Arthur Marvin, to witness.

And the first point I want to make is this: that Mr. Griffith did not invent or originate either the "big figure" or the "cut-back." As a matter of fact, the big figure was a feature of Biograph work in 1898 when I joined the Biograph staff. Have any of the real veterans of the business forgotten that the Biograph Company produced "Rip Van Winkle" with Joseph Jefferson himself in the title part in 1896? And is there any doubt but that the scene of where Mr. Jefferson delivers the famous toast was the first "close-up"? Here are a few very well-known names of people who themselves posed in "close-ups" in the Biograph studio in the nineties: Marshall P. Wilder, Anna Held, Loney Haskell, Petite Adelaide, Cissy Fitzgerald, Katherine Osterman, Sandow, Cruikshank, Grapwin and Chance, Rice and Cohen, Eva Tanguay. I could list a host of others by referring to my old Biograph catalogue. Mr. Griffith the discoverer of the "close-up"? Why, it was a tradition and a command in the Biograph studio years before he applied to me for a job.

Now as to the "cut-back." I can name the dramatic production in which it was first named in the Biograph studio in the same sense as it is used today. This was "The Fire Fiend," and the title part was played by Harold Vosburg, who is one of the leading artists in the business today. I am sure "Vosy" will bear me out in this, and I am equally confident that Sid Olcott and Gene Gauntier will both have a clear recollection of it.

Without detracting one whit from Mr. Griffith's genius, I submit that rather than claim to have introduced the "big figure" and the "cut-back" to the Biograph studio, he should instead acknowledge his great indebtedness to Biograph traditions and to the careful coaching of his camera operators, Arthur Marvin and William Bitzer. Mr. Griffith certainly has given us some fine work in dramatic interpretation, but when it comes to camera work, hats off to Arthur Marvin and "Billy" Bitzer. And in acknowledging what Mr. Griffith has done in a dramatic way, let us not forget the man who made the first dramatic moving picture in America, Mr. Wallace McCutcheon, producer of "The Moonshiners."

Just one word more: Those of us who were in the business years before Mr. Griffith applied to me for a job and did not get it will smile at the assertion in the McClure story that when Mr. Griffith joined the Biograph company it was a small and unimportant concern. I suppose some will assert next that when Oklahoma joined the Union, the United States Government was a small and unimportant unit among the nations of the world.

I write this on behalf of the "old Biograph crowd," with whom I served my apprenticeship. I fancy Messrs. Smith and Blackton, Lubin, Selig and Edison may have something to say along the same line.

F. J. MARION, Kalem Company.

August 19, 1914.

Famous Authors With Universal

"That Program" Will Carry Many Subjects Written by Leading Story Writers of the Day.

THE Universal are corraling many of the big well-known writers and securing the exclusive rights to produce in photoplay form their best works. Already the Universal program has benefited by stories from such well-known authors as Annie Fellows Johnstone, George Gibbs and Eugene Manlove Rhodes. More stories are coming from these writers and from others, such as Campbell MacCullough, the well-known magazine writer; Molly Elliot Seawell, author of many published novels; George Bronson Howard, famous playwright and author; Bruno Lessing, Louis Joseph Vance, Clara Louise Burnham and others. Stories by O. Henry and Jacques Futrelle, big writers who are now dead, have also found a place on the Universal program. Arthur Stringer, the distinguished American writer, was the author of "The Case of Cherry Purcelle," an Eclair Universal feature which created a widespread success when released some time ago.

In this connection it might be mentioned that Mr. Stringer was the first of the living American authors with whom the Eclair-Universal Company contracted for the production of his stories and books in Photoplay form. Mr. Stringer took a warm interest in the production of his "Case of Cherry Purcelle." His "Secret Agent," a story which was featured in the Saturday Evening Post and soon to be released in motion picture form, will have numerous scenes involving technical points concerning the U. S. Secret Service. It is being staged under the author's personal direction.

Miss Gates, who is also well known to the readers of today's best magazines, has listed for production by the Eclair company a powerful story, "The Silver Belle of Los Morales." Miss Gates has, in the past year or two, achieved prominence as a dramatist.

Booth Tarkington, whose latest contribution to contemporary literature, "Penrod," has the reading public agog with anticipation, is also to be a contributor to the Universal program. "The Flirt," which was a delightful feature of the Saturday Evening Post for several issues, is to be filmed by the Eclair.

Probably the greatest Western writer we have today is Eugene Manlove Rhodes, who lives in simple obscurity at Apalachin, New York. His story, "Sealed Orders," which was featured in the Saturday Evening Post, was recently done by the Universal's Victor company with the popular star, J. Warren Kerrigan, in the lead role, "Good Men and True," one of his best books will also be filmed for release by the Universal. His "Little Eohippus" will be remembered by everyone for the novelty of its action and the charm of its literary style. This also ran as a serial in the Post. When the Eclair company arranged with Mr. Rhodes to produce this as a photoplay, he stipulated that it should be done under his personal direction. Accordingly Mr. Rhodes joined the Eclair company at Tuscon, Ariz., and collaborated with the director in producing the difficult effects called for by this story. "The Little Eohippus" will be released by the Universal Eclair shortly and there is little doubt that it will score a success far beyond that which can be looked for from an ordinary studio script.

Another Western writer who is taking a strong interest in the production of his books in photoplay form is William MacLeod Raine. Practically all of Mr. Raine's books, which stand high among the "best sellers," are in course of production by the Eclair companies out West and will be released on the Universal. Fortunately, Mr. Raine has a ranch located within easy distance of Tuscon, and production is going ahead very successfully under his active co-operation.

WORLD FILM FEATURES.

"The Dollar Mark," George Broadhurst's Broadway success, has been pictured by the World Film Corporation in five reels. Robert Warwick has been featured in the photoplay adaptation of Mr. Broadhurst's drama. After September 1 the World Film Corporation will release one multiple reel a week.

Among other Broadway successes which the World Film Corporation has contracted to produce are "Mother," in which Emma Dunn is to be featured; "The Gentleman from Mississippi," featuring Tom Wise; "The Man of the Hour," featuring Robert Warwick; "The Pit," from Frank Norris' book, featuring Wilton Lackaye and Gail Kane; "After Dark," by Dion Boucicault and "As Ye Sow," by the Rev. John Snyder.

Foreign Trade Notes

PARIS TODAY.

A Graphic Description of the Effect of War on the Picture Business in France.

By Our Special Correspondent.

Paris, Tuesday, August 11, 1914.

IN common with every other trade, the moving picture industry in France has been seriously disorganized through the terrible European war now being waged. The immediate effect of the mobilization order was to strip small and large firms of, at a low estimate, eighty per cent. of their staffs. Simultaneously export of films from Paris to the provinces and foreign countries was immediately rendered impossible. Studios, which up till ten days ago were working at top speed, are now silent and empty.

The most famous French photoplay artists are now playing a part in the greatest and most terrible drama the world has ever known. One and all went with a will that has won the applause of the entire civilized world. Many players offered their automobiles to the war office and took them to the front.

It is probable that some of the big film manufactories will be turned into hospitals. At the present time millions of feet of film lay idle on the manufacturers and renters' shelves.

The several English firms acting as agents for American manufacturers who have their positives printed in France are unable to get supplies through to London. Instead of the usual eight hours, traveling to London now takes fifteen hours and no luggage is allowed. None but English, Americans and French people are permitted to make the journey, and all must be furnished with the necessary papers and passports. Both in France and England it is dangerous to carry a camera. A London cinematographer told me that while taking mobilization pictures at Portsmouth he was arrested and had his negative confiscated.

No photographers or war correspondents have yet been allowed to leave for the front. A whole army of journalists and cameramen are now in Paris, awaiting instructions from the authorities. Even when the men do get off it is feared that they will not be allowed to go within a couple of miles of the firing line. The last topical pictures to be taken in the French capital were those showing the mobilization scenes. These are now being shown at the few picture theaters which have remained open. The exhibitors who been able to continue giving exhibitions are doing extremely good business on account of the fact that the cafes and restaurants are all closed at nine o'clock at night. In most instances prices of admission have been reduced to ten cents and the bulk of the profits is being handed over to the Red Cross.

A. H. Kaffenburg's well-known American Theater is one of the few halls located off the main boulevard which has not closed down. Mr. Kaffenburg, who is an American citizen, gave a great matinee last Thursday in aid of the Red Cross. Each week throughout the war he will continue to present substantial sums of money to the Red Cross.

Felix Isman is another generous citizen from your side of the Atlantic who has rendered the French government valuable assistance. As I have previously reported it was Mr. Isman's intention to show "Cabiria" at the beautiful Theater des Champs Elyseés. Mr. Isman has now placed the great theater at the disposal of the Red Cross for use as a hospital.

Among the hundreds of Americans still here is William N. Selig, the famous producer. He was staying at the Hotel Edouard VII when war was declared. "War is hell," he said to me yesterday. "I have never seen such a stirring sight as these Frenchmen marching off to the front. Their courage was wonderful to behold, and I shall never forget it." As are all other Americans here, Mr. Selig is perfectly safe and at ease. He intends stopping here for some little time.

I have just been informed that Messrs. Gaumont has arranged to supply exhibitors with films at reduced rates. Of course, no new productions will be issued. Patriotic pictures are greatly in demand and all French, Russian and English picture plays are being re-issued as rapidly as possible. Messrs. Gaumont announce that their topical service will be continued.

As may well be imagined, the picture theater audience of today is far from gay, for the people of Paris are very sad. Now and again pictures of President Poincaré and French, Belgium and British soldiers bring forth applause, but on the whole the halls are significantly silent.

The people here don't ask how many Germans have been killed; they want to know the French losses. Paris is in a mood that I have never seen her in before. She is grave, and sobbing for those of her gallant sons who are fighting for their country. The great white domes of the cathedral of the Sacred Heart on the summit of Montmartre overlook a grief-stricken capital—a capital that will soon be a city of hospitals and crying, sobbing, bereaved men and women. Such is war. JOHN CHER.

BRITISH NOTES.

COMMUNICATIONS with the United States are now normal, although last week's scare caused a temporary rupture. However, the film industry has not yet suffered any ill-effects of the war and now that the Admiralty has declared the Atlantic free from marauders there is little reason to anticipate any danger to trans-Atlantic steamers.

* * *

The Essanay and Universal organizations announce their intention of working to their pre-arranged program regarding the release of their respective products, and this declaration alone has inspired confidence in film-hiring quarters, where a strong rumor had been prevalent that certain American issues would be curtailed. Obviously, in the commercial sense the suspension of transport of goods between England and the chief ports in Germany, Italy, France, etc., is bound to be to the distinct advantage of the United States in more respects than in moving pictures. For this is one of the few branches of industry in which Great Britain cannot keep herself supplied, and under present circumstances the only way of maintaining the film market is through American importations. There is a probability that such firms as Gaumont and Pathe may be able to retain their usual control over certain Continental productions, but of the numerous other European brands it is useless to prophesy.

* * *

A bolt fell among exhibitors last week-end in the form of a notice in the Press from the War Office prohibiting the exhibition of any moving pictures depicting incidents of the present war. The order is so drastic as to ban even local topical films of the British troops mobilizing or in camp, but no restriction is placed upon staged films such as dramatic pictures with naval or military settings or upon real military films showing British soldiers practicing army maneuvers. One firm in particular has seized hold of the opportunity to make the best of this unusual piece of officialism and day by day as the real war progresses they enact the principal incidents and movements with a large company of players in the south of England. The sections of the great drama are finished with astonishing rapidity so as to be ready for exhibition a day or two after the actual events. The opening scenes of the war are already being screened here in serial form.

* * *

In nearly every town of importance in this country a working arrangement has been effected between local moving-picture theaters and the newspapers. In London and Manchester the latest developments at the front are flashed on to the screen at short intervals, in some cases a drama being interrupted to permit of a slide being shown. The news is, in most cases, telephoned from the newspaper office to the theater, but a few of our more important kinemas have their own tape machines.

In view of the rush for war pictures which is bound to be experienced in England and America I give the following list of suitable films which are available for booking here during the next few weeks: "Shannon of the Sixth" (Kalem), 4,000 ft.; "No Finer Death" (Andrews), 2,700 ft.; "Frederick the Great" (Edison), 2,020 ft.; "England's Menace" (London Film Co.), 2,500 ft.; "His Country's Honor" (C. & M.), 3,000 ft.; "On the Verge of War" (Bison 101), 2,940 ft.; "Fighting Blood of 1809" (Continental), 4,000 ft.; "War and a Woman" (Continental), 2,500 ft.; "The British Army" (Keith Picture Co.), 6,000 ft., educational; "Woe to the Conquered" (Victus), 3,000 ft.

* * *

The second International Kinematograph Exhibition, due to open at Olympia, London, in a few weeks, has been postponed until Christmas. The definite opening date is not yet fixed.

* * *

W. N. Selig is at present in Paris engaged upon the business of the Selig Polyscope Co. in that city. So long as existing conditions prevail a special discount of 12½ per cent. will be allowed to buyers of Selig films. This new arrangement, explains E. H. Montague, is subject to prompt settlements.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

What a Picture Has to Do

MEETING Vinnie Burns personally, it is hard to realize that the pretty little star of Solax and Blache photo-dramas is the same dare-devil actress whose reckless regard for life and limb has made her famous throughout the civilized world.

When it is recalled that in the last four years she has been seen falling from the top of a stage coach as it rolled down an embankment; falling from a horse in front of a stampede of the horses of two whole troops of cavalry—the Fifth and the Fifteenth U. S. Cavalry, now at Fort Bliss; buried to her neck in mud at Lake Hopatcong in winter weather; pinned down by a horse that fell upon her; jumping from a third story window and landing upon her perfect little nose; fainting and falling from a circus horse as a bareback rider; sliding down a rope from a roof; sliding down three sheets from a high window and falling when the sheets parted unexpectedly; jumping through a closed window-glass and all; receiving a bad spill from a motorcycle; riding upon a runaway elephant which wrecked the reptile house in Bronx Zoo; appearing in an animal picture which called for her entrance into a tiger's cage every day for three weeks; and numerous other feats of daring—when these exhibitions of nerve are recalled and it is remembered that Vinnie Burns has but recently celebrated her eighteenth birthday, which places her age at just fourteen years when she was discovered by Mme. Alice Blache, of the Solax Company, some idea can be formed of her extremely interesting personality.

Miss Vinnie Burns.

Massachusetts Apprenticeship Law

By F. H. Richardson.

IN my account of the trip to Boston I made mention of a new apprenticeship law which has been passed by the Massachusetts legislature, signed by the governor, and is now in full force and effect. I have written for a copy of this law, but as yet it has not been received. However, its practical effect is to provide the following requirements as a necessity in securing a license in the state of Massachusetts: the novice must first serve a three-months' apprenticeship, after which he may apply for a second-class license. During these three months he is not allowed to run the projection machines at all, but only to rewind films, patch films, keep the operating room in order, and, also, presumably, to trim the lamp of the idle projector. Second class license, which is secured presumably after examination, allows him to do all the foregoing and, in addition, to operate the projector while a licensed operator is present in the operating room, but at no other time. At the end of the second three-months' period he may apply for examination for a first-class operator's license and upon receipt of same he becomes a full-fledged operator.

Now this law, while it requires an apprentice to serve just half the length of time he ought to, is a big step in advance of anything heretofore secured, and the writer is most heartily in favor of securing, or attempting to secure, the same kind of law for the State of New York. I believe that, with the assistance of the executive board of the New York State Federation of Labor, and the active co-operation of the various New York State Unions, it would be quite possible for such a law to be put through the legislature and that, with the precedent established by Massachusetts, the governor would sign it.

The main objection raised to this procedure is that it might be declared unconstitutional. I don't believe that such a law would be so declared by the courts. Most certainly if society can claim and exercise the right to examine operators and refuse to allow them to operate moving picture machines unless found competent, and do this under the police power to protect its citizens from fire hazard, it can also extend that authority to cover an aprenticeship which will compel the seeker after a license to first procure actual practical experience in the handling of projection machinery in theatrical work. This, it seems to me, is merely a matter of plain, horse sense. Anyone knows that, while it is possible for a man to pass a creditable examination without having had any practical experience in actual theatrical projection, still such a man is unsafe and highly undesirable in the operating room. His knowledge is almost entirely theoretical, and, while theory is a splendid thing in its place, in order to produce real results it must be combined with practical experience.

The securing of the passage of such a law will not be altogether an easy matter. It will probably meet with strenuous opposition on the part of those interested in operator's schools and on the part of many managers who seek the abundance of numbers rather than quality, but, nevertheless, as I have before said, I think it can be done, but it will require the active support of all the various unions and every wire that can be pulled. Get busy!

Massachusetts has the advantage of New York, in that the state capital is in Boston, and Boston operators are thoroughly organized into a high-class, powerful organization, which is right there on the ground. While I am not thoroughly acquainted with the situation in Albany, nevertheless both Albany and Troy have operators' unions, and I know that within the membership of these unions are some thoroughly capable men—brother La Grow, for instance, and I am sure that among the membership of these two organizations a committee could be readily found which would be thoroughly capable of working with the legislative committee of the State Federation, or handling the matter alone, if that body cannot be interested.

It seems to me that the first step towards procuring this exceedingly important law would be the sending of a representative to the State Federation of Labor Convention with instructions to that delegate to meet with the Albany and Troy locals after the convention is over and select from the membership of those two locals a legislative committee to act in conjunction with the State Federation of Labor Committee when the legislature is in session. Also to act in conjunction with the State Federation of Labor and draft a suitable law, the same to be placed in charge of some friendly member of the state Senate and of the Assembly. This is merely a suggestion. But let me warn you to scan the draft of the law very carefully and see to it that it contains no "jokers" which will give its enemies ground to attack it in the courts.

King Baggot the First

By Thornton Fisher.

ONCE upon a time when the mind of man ran not to the movies nor ladies fair sent violet-scented missives to the heroes grand—well, anyway, a certain number of brief years ago a young king unostentatiously began his reign in these United States. To be explicit, it all happened in that Missouri Metropolis on the Mississippi, and it is doubtful if, with the exception of the Baggot family, anyone recalls the event, which introduced to the world one destined to achieve distinction in his profession, and there in that city where eighty-five in the shade is cold, and ninety-six is just comfortable, young Baggot was nurtured through his tender years and attained young manhood.

UM, IS THAT SO?
THIS PROPERTY WILL INCREASE 100 % IN VALUE WHEN THE PROPOSED TROLLEY LINES ARE PUT THROUGH.
PLOT
REAL HONEST REAL ESTATE
FISHER

Nothing conspicuous or unusual seems to have marked these years—no one detected signs of genius in the young man, who apparently was normal in every respect. Then came the time when the inevitable question thrust itself against him. Papa Baggot being a politician and business man agreed that a course in a commercial college might develop son Baggot's faculties for a successful business career, whereupon the youth studiously labored to acquire the rudiments of business.

Incidentally he played roles in amateur dramatics. These were usually church entertainments, but unconsciously the lad was laying the foundation for his future success. Thoroughly masticating all they served up at the business school, King was ready to apply theory to practice and collect a living from the world. He went into real estate and it is quite probable that many St. Louisans have heard an enthusiastic young gentleman emphatically declare that "this property will increase 100 per cent. in value when the proposed trolley lines are put through" or perhaps have seen this same chap arguing with a tenant on Olive street to the effect that "the landlord won't paper the attic without raising the rent."

Eventually the restlessness of youth attacked him, and having been offered a position as bookkeeper with his uncle's firm in Chicago, he shook the dust of St. Louis from his boots and went to work for E. Baggot & Son, Plumbing, Gas and Electrical Fixtures. Perhaps it was homesickness or restlessness, but whatever it may have been, King turned his eyes again in the direction of St. Louis and went back to the old town where he engaged in the electrical fixture business.

During this time, however, the little dramatic germ had developed to a large unwieldy specimen and King was irresistibly drawn to the theater. He had talents, he had appearance and personality and all he lacked was the right opportunity. Finally it came and Baggot joined a local stock company in St. Louis. All aspirations for a business career were discarded, and King began a relentless fight to make good in his new profession.

Soon he had a chance to join a traveling company and went on the road. The first place he played was Kansas City, and it was there he had his first thrill. In one of the scenes Mr. Baggot was to battle with coyotes which he supposed were to be represented by "property" heads made to cause the effect of many of these animals dashing about, the bodies of which were to be indistinctly seen by the audience. All went well until the moment for the fight, when Baggot discovered, much to his chagrin, that they were live coyotes. Less acting but real fighting occurred for a few moments.

It is the ultimate ambition of all actors to play in New York, and Baggot was no exception, so he was secretly elated when the company left for the East. However, his cup of joy not run over, for the company played Hoboken, from whose heights the lights of the great city twinkle and temptingly beckon. It is a brief trip from Hoboken across the river, and Mr. Baggot says that after the first evening performance, accompanied by a fellow actor, he crossed and saw the metropolis for the first time. That night he went to the writing room of the Waldorf and wrote a note to his mother.

The time was soon to come again when he would return to St. Louis, again in stock, and St. Louisans can remember this handsome young actor who weekly delighted the playgoers in that city.

Leaving stock he began to appear in the large productions, among them "Salomy Jane," "Mrs. Wiggs" and "Seven Days." It was during one of his trips to New York the opportunity came to play before the camera. An actor was suddenly required at a studio and Mr. Baggot acted the role. Up to that time the idea of performing for moving pictures had never seriously occurred to him, for he was at that time cast in a big production. So well did Mr. Baggot play his part that he was offered a steady place in the company with which he is now affiliated. That company is the "Imp" and it was for them he posed in his first picture.

I called recently to see this lovable, good-natured fellow at the Screen Club where he reigns. Up there in the club parlor we discussed—politics. It is no breach of confidence to say that King Baggot is a staunch Wilson adherent. I listened patiently as he extolled the admirable qualities of the President. Did he handle the Mexican affair in a masterly fashion? He did! King Baggot said so. At any rate it required a nice bit of diplomacy to start the conversation along another channel.

Here is a justly popular man, not only among screen fans, but he is hailed a prince by his associates. Regarding his acting—well, why mention it? Everyone is acquainted with the splendid work of the genial blue-eyed hero of the screen.

Doings at Los Angeles

GEORGE LARKIN has surely done "some" stunts in the production being put on by Wilfred Lucas, known as "The Trey o' Hearts." He is a regular athletic young man and can show his ability to great effect in this big series. Many people who have seen Larkin in his work have been amazed at his acrobatic work and his dare-devil qualities. In the east he was formerly known as "Dare-devil Larkin," and he evidently is going to live up to that name while in the west. In No. 5 of this interesting series, which is said to be the greatest of all thrillers, George is thrown over a real cliff, and in so doing he sustains severely skinned shins. He showed the shins to me at the studio the other day, and, believe me, they are peeled—and the peeling is gone, too. Anyway, he fell to the ground below and the other man followed where the fight finished. (The picture shows the distance from the top to the bottom.)

Scene Done for "The Trey o' Hearts."

Margaret Gibson, of the Vitagraph company, not only is a moving picture star but a sort of originator of new ideas. Her latest is a stocking stunt of having a specially made garter in which several coins can be placed. The idea is a good one and has caught on with beach bathing girls who carry money on their garters with which to buy "hot dogs," sandwiches and drinks of soda pop.

Fred J. Balshofer said the other day, "If you want to do me a favor please put in the World, for I know everyone will see it there, that Ford Sterling has not left this company, and that I am not going to release under another brand. Someone started those rumors, and I beg you to stop them." He said that he wanted another pair of comedy people, a good man and a woman, to work in an additional company in a week or so.

Lee Hill, who was formerly with the Majestic and Edison, is now with Albert W. Hale at the beach Kalem studio as juvenile leading man and assistant director. He looks after the details that come in his line and is quite a busy man. Mr. Hale is turning out some really funny stuff, and with his leading lady, Betty Teare, and Johnny Brennan as the comical feature the Kalem has a team of good workers.

Will H. Lynch, who recently returned from a tour of China, is trying to go back, but on account of the recent war and the imminence of trouble in that country will have to wait a while. His Chinese actors are all busy there, but he cannot be there for some time.

Will H. White, who also has returned from a Central American cruise, is in San Francisco conferring with some Chinese people on the project of making moving pictures in the Orient. He has as his students in Los Angeles Walter and Ben Pack, two sons of a prominent Chinese capitalist, who are soon to depart with outfits for their native land to film many subjects and start a studio, probably in Shanghai.

Al Christie and his Nestorites have departed for the Exposition City to get a picture of the fair grounds. They are doing a travesty on "East Lynne" with Victoria Forde and Bess Meredyth featured. Bess has just been added to the company.

Bruce Mitchell, who recently started the Pathe company, is as busy as any good director could be. He has Rena Rogers and Howard Davies as leading people, and "Fat" R. MacComas who was formerly with the Joker comedians. A. M. Fralick, who has been with Marshal Neilan at the Kalem, has also joined this company. They were at the Venice beach last week doing a roaring comedy on the ocean shores, using all the amusement devices as settings.

When a party of Mutual players returned to the studio Monday morning after a fifteen hours' fishing trip off the coast in a launch, they were asked what number flesh color paint they had used and what they were made up for. The said number four was a generous coat of tan. They caught no fish, but got seasick. That's sport.

Tod Browning has a broken nose as the result of a taunt to Miss Fay Tincher of the Mutual studios. They were having a recess between scenes and he asked her to play ball. "I know women can vote in California," he said, "but one thing they can't do is throw a ball." She threw it, and the doctor says he will be able to take the splints off in about two weeks. Fay is a regular fan and plays most every day.

The city of Santa Monica had taken by Albert W. Hale a couple of hundred feet of the municipal parade, and a comedy of the beach variety will be filmed by Hale to be put on the reel with the parade picture. It will probably get a regular release through Kalem Company.

When Jessie Lasky was here he said that he was most surprised with the progress at his western plant. He has a right to be surprised for, in the past two weeks, the "Lasky house" has been changed from a dressing room house to a wardrobe factory, a string of new dressing rooms erected, and a new carpenter shop built. The laboratory space has been doubled, and everything is going ahead rapidly. "The Man from Home" has been started, and "The Rose of the Rancho" with Bessie Barriscale and Jack W. Johnson featured, will be started soon.

Manager Bernstein of the Universal is so proud of George Larkin and his wonderful work in "The Trey o' Hearts" that he has ordered an osteopath to give George treatments thrice a week to keep the athletic young actor in condition to go through with his strenuous work in this great series. The company is using a downtown skyscraper which is in course of construction in one of the late numbers of the series. Scenes are made while George is out on the end of a swinging beam in midair. "Daredevil Larkin" is surely befitting.

It is said here that the present European war is menacing the production of film because of the lack of Metol which is imported from Germany. It cost $8 a pound last week, and today it is being sold at $12.50 a pound.

CLARKE IRVINE.

BEVERIDGE AGAINST STATE CENSOR BOARD.

"The report that I favor the creating of a political board of motion picture censors in Indiana is without foundation," says Albert J. Beveridge, the Progressive party candidate for United States Senator in Indiana. "The statement that I was nursing a bill calculated to establish a state censor board for motion pictures emanated from Evansville, Indiana, where the Progressive party must contend with strong brewery interests. Instead of being against the motion pictures I am decidedly for them. I believe the motion picture is doing as much for the education of the masses as the newspaper and school book, and I have yet to witness a photoplay which needed the shears of censorship.

"I understand that William F. Miedreich, an Evansville, Indiana, attorney, who is connected with the brewery interests of the state, and at present a member of the Indiana legislature, is the father of a bill which, if passed, will establish a state censor board similar to the Pennsylvania board. Mr. Miedreich is the Democratic candidate for representative in Vanderburg county, and I sincerely hope he is defeated at the polls. If motion picture exhibitors would band themselves together and spread the message of a candidate's unfitness for office, it would be an easy matter for them to defeat their enemies by utilizing their screens in flashing the truth before that vast number of people who go to the movies."

Moving Picture Educator

Conducted by the REV. W. H. JACKSON

RESEARCH BY MOVING PICTURES.

THE part played by cinematography in scientific and technical research, together with some of the things that may be expected of it in the future, are set forth in an interesting lecture before the German Engineers' Society by Dr. Hanz Goetz and printed in The Scientific American as follows:

"The most obvious way in which the cinematograph may act as an aid to science is in recording rare phenomena, such as scenes in the life of seldom seen or difficultly accessible animals, unusual surgical operations, etc.—fields in which considerable success has been attained. Its usefulness only begins here, however.

"Just as the scale of objects may be varied when they are represented graphically, so the time scale of actions may be changed when they are represented by the cinematograph. By an increase in speed, Professor Pfeffer, of Leipzig, has been able to produce in three minutes a ten-day period of growth of a horse-chestnut twig; pictures for this reproduction were taken at five-minute intervals. A large field for the study of the growth of both plants and animals is thus opened. Just as slow motions can be hastened so that it is possible to see the total effect in a truer perspective, so it is possible to retard and analyze quick movements, and the limits are only those of the speed with which the pictures can be taken. With the most refined mechanical devices it is not possible to take more than 250 pictures per second, but by illuminating the moving object with regularly succeeding electric sparks and photographing on a film moving continuously rather than intermittently, it was found possible to increase the number of exposures to 2,000 per second. Bull, for example, has made valuable studies of the flight of insects in this manner.

"From an engineering point of view the cinematograph has been most useful in studying projectiles and their effect on armor-plate. Much higher frequencies had to be used than Bull obtained, and the apparatus employed differed from his in not using a mechanical interrupter. In series with the illuminating spark-gap was a large condenser, and in parallel with it a small one; the large condenser is charged by an induction machine, and when it is discharged the small condenser is alternately charged and discharged across the gap.

"The period of the alternations can be judged with fair accuracy by the tone. Since an explosion can take place in the 5-1000th part of a second, the speed of 9,000 to 50,000 exposures per second, obtained by this method, is sufficient to furnish interesting results. Since it is obviously impossible to have the camera near the object photographed, a special arrangement is used.

"The cinematograph can also be used for making quantitative measurements of movements. The fall of a body has been studied by photographing on the same film the falling object and the hand of a chronograph, and in the same way the action of a steam-hammer has been timed.

"In these lines the cinematograph has just begun to be developed, and offers great possibilities in solving problems dealing with time and space in fields as wide apart as engineering and biology, and makes possible the study of motions so slow that it has hitherto been impossible to form conception of their whole meaning, or so fast that it has been almost impossible to form any conception of them at all."

Current Events.

Of course, today current events means more, especially that which is connected with the war than anything else: the various "weeklies" are, therefore, very interesting and helpful and from now on should be more carefully followed than before. Every picture house should show them, and all young people should see them.

That pictures of the actual warfare will be forthcoming is most improbable and people should be aware of false and misleading advertisements. Pictures of mobilizations, and all preparations are to be very general; these afford a great variety of knowledge which is a valuable addition to the true newspaper accounts. The last series issued show the Czar of Russia in review of troops going to the front, and drinking to their prosperity as they leave Warsaw. A good picture of the Emperor of Germany and his staff is not very warlike, the Emperor receiving gifts of flowers from a group of young girls is described as in his "human atmosphere." German dirigibles hovering over French troops is perhaps one of the first pictures of the two nations in close quarters; the marching of French troops through Algiers is a truly military picture. Prince Henry of Prussia is seen at his post of duty with his soldiers, while the evidence of warfare is brought to our doors by a view of the English cruiser Suffolk guarding English interests in American waters.

Recognizing Ability—Even to $100,000.

The time has come when the moving pictures demand the best equally with any other of the arts, sciences, or commercial fields. Not long ago there was published a review of the salaries paid to the leading moving picture actors in all parts of the world. Men who began with most meager beginnings are now receiving their tens of thousands and many whose ability was discounted on the dramatic stage have more than made good in the silent drama. There never was a movement which has afforded such opportunities for rapid rise in genuine ability than in the field of the moving picture.

The art of scenario writing is a distinctly new one, yet it has brought to the front many an otherwise obscure person with an undreamed-of ability. The recent Sun-Vitagraph contest is a good evidence of the fact there is an underlying power of conception waiting to be developed by such means as is now afforded by the moving picture. When a young girl suddenly realized that she has within her the possibility of earning $1,000 (and there seems to be many such) by one literary effort, who can deny but that cinematography, besides being the greatest of educators, is also awakening the greatest powers of education in its behalf. McClure's Magazine is at the present time publishing a series of articles entitled "Stories of Hundred Thousand Dollar Salaries." In the September number the "One Hundred Thousand Dollar Man of 'The Movies'" is reviewed as follows—"Six years ago David W. Griffith escaped a fruitless tramping of the streets by securing a job as a 'super' in a struggling film company. His pay was five dollars a day—if he worked—but he might only work two days a week, or perhaps not at all. Today he ranks with the highest paid men in America and presides over a gigantic film-producing plant in Los Angeles—and he is only thirty-five years of age."

In the same period of time moving-picture making has undergone a similar revolutionary change. Six years ago the cost of producing was perhaps not more than one-tenth what it is today, and to this remarkable Mr. Griffith has contributed his share of the necessary ability. The article in McClure's is well worth reading as it will give a splendid impetus to the many minds capable of being rightly influenced along lines so educational and so immensely lucrative at the same time. Let it be widely known that in every branch of moving picture activities there is abundant opportunity for educative and educational development with the added power of the earned dollar besides. Nowhere does education pay better and nowhere is education more required, demanded, appreciated and rewarded.

BEST FRIEND IN THE BUSINESS.

Mount Clemens, Mich., August 4, 1914.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—Enclosed find check for $3.00 for a year's subscription for your most valuable magazine. Send August 1 issue as the first copy.

I find that the Moving Picture World is the best friend I have in the moving picture business.

Very truly yours,

Lyric Theater. H. C. Pierce.

OBSERVATIONS

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

THE movement in this city to have incorporated the Church Motion Picture Society has set some regular motion picture exhibitors guessing as to the real purpose of the organization. On the first application by the society in the Supreme Court for a certificate of incorporation the Court declined to grant it because the papers submitted failed to show that the society was of a voluntary character and not for business purposes. A second application was made on amended petitions and the court now has them under consideration.

* * *

Among the most active directors of the society is Mr. Cleveland Moffett. He is in fact the instigator of the movement and has been experimenting for several months in a church on Fifth avenue, Manhattan, in which he takes an active interest. The success he met with was so gratifying that he decided to invoke the aid of wealthy people interested in the condition of the poor in the formation of a society to extend the work throughout Greater New York and has already received promises of co-operation in Manhattan and Brooklyn. Applications for certificates of incorporation are now pending in the courts of both boroughs, and if they are successful the work will be extended to the other two boroughs, and also in Bronx County.

* * *

A friend of Mr. Moffett said: "The petitions for incorporation state that the purpose of the society is to 'promote the use of church and other buildings of worship for the purpose of entertainment and to instill a spirit of national and civic patriotism among the people.' This is mere formal phraseology to get the matter properly before the court and no doubt has created misapprehension on the part of people already engaged in the business of exhibiting motion pictures, particularly those having places in the poorer districts of the city. But the prospectus quoted does not reflect Mr. Moffett's real sentiments. Neither Mr. Moffett, nor anyone associated with him desire to engage in the motion picture business."

* * *

When attention was called to the title of the society and statement was made that it clearly foreshadowed some connection with the business the friend said. "Quite true. But the name does not indicate whether the connection is to be with the exhibiting or manufacturing branch. It is as vague in that respect as it is with respect to Mr. Moffett's real intentions, and there is no objection to enlightening the public as to what they are. His connection with a church and Sunday school showed Mr. Moffett that there was a disposition among certain people of the poor classes to avoid places of worship in spite of persistent missionary work. He found that to successfully get their interest it would be necessary to have some attraction to win their attendance in the church or church hall, and decided that the strongest magnet of present time is the motion picture."

The friend was told the idea was not a new one. That motion pictures have been shown in churches and school halls for years. To this he replied "But Mr. Moffett's idea is new because its scope is of a different character. Other religious organizations have given such exhibitions for benefits with advanced sale of tickets, or fixed prices of admission at the door. Mr. Moffett sells no tickets and charges no price of admission. His co-workers go among the people to be reached and invite all, regardless of nationality, creed, or color, to come to the entertainment. Men, women and children are asked to come and have an evening of pleasure free of cost. They are welcomed at the door and shown to seats. After the entertainment they are again greeted by the committee and cordially invited to return on a certain evening and witness another exhibition. In this manner the people ultimately become regular patrons and eventually many of them are induced to become regular attendants at the church, or Sunday school. So you see the real operation is of a missionary character with the motion pictures used as an agency to accomplish the purpose."

* * *

When asked how expenses are provided for Mr. Moffett's friend replied "At first this was a serious problem, but the success attained through the entertainments solved it. The church installed a thoroughly up-to-date booth and projecting apparatus and sustained the cost of current used. The pictures and operator were provided by volunteers. They now have their own operator."

* * *

The interview was gratifying in one respect at least. Certain church people have been contending for years that attendances at the churches and Sunday schools have been seriously interfered with by the moving pictures. Mr. Moffett has shown by practical demonstration that they can be made an important factor in religious work. If it were not so a society would not be organized to extend what was started as an experiment. In the face of all that has developed within the last few years it is difficult to see what line of reasonable argument the anti-motion picture people have left. First the pictures had the theatrical people against them; then the holier-than-thou reformists came forward with denunciations of a character that should almost kill any form of entertainment; and then came the reformer-political office seeking armies. All have failed—theaters, churches, colleges, public and private schools, penal, reformatory and charitable institutions, hospitals and homes—all are adopting the once despised form of entertainment and instruction.

* * *

From the regular exhibitor's standpoint the project of the Church Motion Picture Society is viewed with suspicion by many. But this is noticeable only in localities where the poorer class of people predominate. It is feared by some that their business will suffer should the society open their work near the houses now operating. An exhibitor having one of the cheap houses takes a more philosophical view of the matter. He says such entertainments will differ in character from those he gives and he will retain the patronage of those who have money to pay. "Those who haven't got the money I would not get, anyway," he said.

* * *

A gentleman who is not an exhibitor, but has considerable interest in the motion picture business expressed the opinion that the Church Motion Picture Society movement would be of great benefit to legitimate exhibitors as it would no doubt in time wipe out many places that really should not be in existence. They are motion picture houses only in a technical sense. The managers are as poor as their patrons, consequently the programs are poorer than both and the places are merely outlets for stuff that is really unfit for exhibition from a standpoint of merit. "It is no crime to be poor," the party said; "indeed, the poor are to be pitied and are entitled to consideration as well as their more fortunate brethren; but that is no excuse for not giving the people value for their money. I have noticed some of the houses filled several times during the day and night at the same prices charged in better localities and yet the pictures shown are far inferior in quality both as to the subjects and condition of the films."

* * *

A country exhibitor visiting the city, when told of the church movement, said it could not interfere with regular business in the smaller towns. He took the view that its usefulness was limited to densely populated sections of the large cities. The small places, he said, could not sustain exhibitions without outside aid, and that could not be expected. 'When we get outside aid it comes for something other than operating picture shows," said the visitor. "And I do not see why the city people need fear the competition. Even among the poorest people there are many with pride and do not want others to know that they have not got money for shows, and will pay their way when they have the price; so I guess the patronage will remain normal even if the new movement gets going."

"THE SILENT VALLEY" (Imp).

King Baggot is featured in this drama of the elemental. In plot, the play is simple, but in the telling it carries a tremendous power. That love can heal all wounds, turn a man's nature, dominate over beastial instincts and finally resurrect a degraded soul is the theme and treatment of the play. The great good that lay dormant within the giant, played by Mr. Baggot, for so many years is finally brought to light and made active by a sweet girl who visits the backwoods neighborhood with a travelling repertoire company. The play was directed by Mr. Baggott and written by George Hall. Playing opposite Mr. Baggott is Miss Arline Pretty. Frank Smith also has a good role. In two parts, the play will be released September 7.

OPENS NEW HOUSE.

H. W. McKall has recently opened the Grand theater at Cushing, Okla., a magnificent house "built from the ground up." The theater is one of three operated by Mr. McKall in Cushing.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Watching It Grow.

HARRY RAVER, of the Itala Film Company, is using a novel stunt in connection with the Chicago run of Cabiria at the Illinois theater, that opens up interesting adaptations along other lines. He has a board in front of the house that is changed at the close of each performance to give the exact number of admissions sold to the D'Annuzio drama. The scheme cuts three ways. In the first place, it drives home to other exhibitors the value of a big attraction and suggests Itala attractions. It points to the public the interest felt in the attraction, and reminds the passer-by that he has not yet added himself to the total, and the regular passer-by gets the habit of looking at the bill each day as he passes to see the figures grow and not only keeps the play fresh in mind, but supplies a topic for small talk.

The scheme can be used by the small town manager in connection with anniversary or any other special week, in connection with some special star or with a voting contest. Take the special week for instance. The sign could read:

So far
This Week
3,873 Persons
Have Attended the Princess'
Anniversary Week.
When Are You Coming?

For a special star the board could stand, but would be changed only when the star had shown on the screen. The text might be:

Since Sept. 1
11,853
Admirers
Have Seen
Miss Mary Pickford
In This Theater.
Next Chance,
October 23,
The Eagle's Mate.

In keeping up the interest in the voting contest the board would read:

1,456
Votes
Were Cast Yesterday
In Our Popularity Contest,
Making a Total of 53,972
Votes Cast.

These suggestions are capable of infinite variation, but the idea holds throughout that a changing sign is bound to challenge attention. If you "cheat a little" on the figures, do not overdo.

Wants to Be Kicked.

H. S. Ford, of the Olympic, Tulia, Texas, doesn't complain that we hit him too hard, but that we did not hit him hard enough. This is rather unusual. He writes:

> Some time ago I sent you in a copy of one of my first house programs, and asked you to give it what criticism it needed, and not to fear, but to get on it with both feet. I was a little disappointed when I saw the criticism in the World, as it was not half so severe as I expected, and I read over your suggestions several times, carried it to my printer and we went over same, we got up a new form and tried hard to avoid these things that you told us to watch, as we both wanted to learn. We took for our Motto, "CLIMB YET A STORY HIGHER," and, by the way, have been using it on our programs right along until this time, but it's not on this copy I see. Any way, I am sending you one like the first we got out 3 months ago, and, in fact, up until you came out with your criticism, and one of our newer ones. We want you to tell us where our numerous mistakes are, as we want TO CLIMB YET A STORY HIGHER, as I find people 'phone us if they fail to receive one every Monday, and this shows us that we should get out a good, attractive program, and you promised to sit on the job until you pulled us through. We are using a special cream paper, with brown ink exclusively. What do think of the combination, and do you think one should use the same kind of stock and ink each week, the same form, etc.? I would like to have your ideas, and again, what do you think of having the printer bind 2 heralds in with the program, say in the center, one on Lucille Love or Trey O' Hearts, and one on Paramount pictures. I would like to have your ideas, as I want to get out a good program as soon as possible, as I find it certainly pays.

Mr. Ford probably knows we like the scheme of a uniform program, something characteristic. We like something that, if seen across the street, is recognized as the program of the Olympic, or whatever it is. If he can get a light blue stock and print in the same brown he is using, getting a little better grade of ink, we think he will have something still more distinctive. Cream is better than white, but not so distinctive as a more pronounced tint. A light green done in silk green ink also makes an attractive combination. Colored inks cost a little more than black.

One change Mr. Ford has made we do not like. In the early issues he had about half a page of chat about the house and coming attractions. The house chat is dropped for a straight advertisement of the present attractions, though this simply repeats the substance of the program proper. The lower half of the third page should be set in either eight or ten point and be straight reading matter and not displayed.

The back page should be torn down, the ornamentation distributed and the space taken for the coming attractions. Four could be given where now there are but two. If there are only two underlines the specials for the current week can be picked up again. Ornamental work in the first page is all right, but further back than that good type is better than quirliques. There is no objection to binding in heralds with staples, but if more than one is inserted they should be side stitched instead of saddle stitched, or else the paging will be incorrect.

This is all the suggestion Mr. Ford gets, because we think it is about all he needs. Now and then he makes advantageous use of the ¶ to break up a paragraph into sentences. This calls special attention to each line so marked, but in writing copy for the printer be careful, for the sign also means to commence a new paragraph.

Needs More Dates.

Jack Glenn, of the Princess theater, New Martinsville, W. Va., sends in the first issue of the Filmocrat and asks for suggestions. The Filmocrat is a colored cover, four by five and a half, and eight white pages three and a half by five. The smaller inside page suggests a misfit and does not look workmanlike. The pages should be trimmed all the same size. The name of the town should be placed in a small type under the name of the house on the title page, and each day of the actual program should be dated so as to read Monday, August 10th, and not merely "Monday." The only clue is on the first white page, and should the program pages become detached there is nothing to show whether it is the program for next week or last month. Every time you use the day of the week in an announcement add the month and the day of the month.

The cover is done in black and red. One color would do just as well, since no effective use is made of the combination. There is no use paying for two printings unless you get more than the second printing costs, and here the dirty-looking red (partly due to the color of the paper) does not pay its cost. The back page reads:

The Universal Gets the Plays the Players
the Pictures

The Princess Gets the Universal

You Get the Princess

This might be adapted by other houses to suit their needs. It is well phrased.

Three pages are given to the advertisers and one is devoted to the first of a series of house talks in which the announcement is made that the program will give film news as well as the program, though there is nothing in this issue.

It is not at all a good job from a typographical point of view. The type faces are not attractive, nor well displayed, and the press work suggests that it is run off on a small hand press. In the program part there is no punch to the type. The titles are set in a very ordinary face that does not throw them up prominently. You look at the double page and you are merely conscious that you are looking at some printing. Nothing stands up. Mr. Glenn should go into executive session with his printer. And while he is talking, he might point to that "Educ 1" in Friday's copy. There was plenty of room there to have spelled the word out.

Neat and Gaudy.

Neat in appearance and yet as lurid as a hot wave, E. E. Belcia's vest pocket program for the Park theater, Jacksonville, Texas, is worth looking at. It is a red that fairly yells at you, and yet it does not offend. It is printed in black and the program runs across the inside pages. The type is small but readable, titles and names being set in bold face. It is a neat job from any angle. Perhaps Mr. Belcia will send you one if you inclose a stamped return envelope, and you certainly should ask for one, if you are contemplating a small edition, because this gives an excellent display in such small compass.

Tried It—and Did.

Billy Welch, of the Empire theater, Kansas City, and Secretary of Kansas City Local No. 1, M. P. L., writes:

> Am inclosing a program for criticism. The World is my standby. On its contention I raised the admission from five to ten cents and am doing well. Best luck for you and much deserved success. I was sorry to learn you did not raise the subscription price of The Moving Picture World. It is certainly worth ten cents a copy, and exhibitors who are too cheap to be willing to pay for what they get are usually the ones who run eight reels for a nickel because they think their patrons are as cheap as they are.

That's just about the answer. We want those "cheap" people. We want to get them where we can talk to them, and if we have to sell them the paper for three dollars a year because they would not pay five, it would not be fair to soak the ones who are willing to pay five or ten dollars, for that matter. At three dollars a year this paper reaches practically every man in the business. At five it might not. We want every last one, and the eight-for-five exhibitor most of all, because he needs us most. Lots of people run eight to eighteen reels (yes, eighteen—over in Philadelphia), not because they realize what they are doing, but because they get scared on account of competition. They think that with quantity they can fight better than with quality. It never occurs to them to put a sign out in front of he house that reads:

Only Three Reels,
BUT GOOD ONES.

But we've ridden our hobby clear from K. C. to the banks of the Delaware. Let's hustle back to Mr. Welch. His program is a Hennegan colored cover. In the front space is the name of the house and the Summer schedule "Open Tuesday—Thursday—Saturday—Sunday and all Holidays." Then a line, "Properly presenting the World's latest and greatest photoplays." Inside he turns the sheet around and prints the two pages as one single page. He goes a little further than dating his shows. He says "Saturday, August 8th. Tonight." "Sunday, August 9th. Tomorrow," then "Closed Wednesday. Open Thursday, August 13th." That makes a bad jump, but a top line advertises the Tuesday, and we are sorry to see that it is "Traffic in Souls."

The program is nicely laid out. It has been written with care and set by a printer who knows his business. This is the first time we have run across a four pager handled in just this way, but it has this marked advantage! The Hennegan programs are the regulation six by nine size. This would give about a five-inch column, running across page, or two rather unsightly narrow columns. Turning it so that the inside gives a page nine by twelve, we get two or three and a half inch columns and a pretty wide margin. It is so much better than the usual layout that it is recommended to all who use a six by nine four pager.

More Scott.

Luke J. Scott, of the Amusu, Warrensburg, Missouri, sends in some stuff and forgets to tell about one of the items, a bill headed "More Bricks—Less Mud," and stating that "each ticket means another brick." Evidently they are up against a paving proposition there and the Amusu is helping. Mr. Scott can be trusted to get into any popular movement, but we wish he would send the bill of particulars. Probably he gave a percentage of his receipts on that night, or rather two nights.

He "sasses" us back in one item. He is using three lines of Old English type in an announcement and writes that he does not think that O. E. is objectionable in such small quantities. It is objectionable whenever you have a line you want to have read, and naturally the lines here are the title of the play, the house and the name of the star, the three important lines. Of course two lines are not so discouraging to the eye as a whole advertisement, but we would kick the hip pocket off any printer that handed us a single letter when the sample books are so full of good clean lines. That would we do. The announcement is nicely worded. Perhaps it will help others, if they will select more attractive type. You would not purchase a couple of flaming arcs for the front of your house and cover them up with flour barrels. Why hide your most important lines in a type that is hard to read? Here is the text:

> In answer to the increasing demand for the most finished productions of the photoplay world, we wish to announce that we have contracted for a series of the Famous Players' Company's celebrated Features. These pictorial depictions of the best known Broadway productions will be shown upon Tuesdays for a period of several weeks.
>
> It is our pleasure to submit for your approval Tuesday, June 30,
>
> "IN THE BISHOP'S CARRIAGE,"
> A four-part Photoplay dramatized from the novel of Miriam Michelson with > MISS MARY PICKFORD
>
> In the leading role, supported by an all-star cast.

Mr. Scott is also making effective use of the Kraus post cards by printing his announcement of coming events on these portrait cards, the most certain scheme we know of for having the advertisement kept. The Kraus people are constantly bettering their work, and the cards make things that are kept.

From Cuba.

Not from Cuba in the south seas but Cuba, New York, come two programs from George Foster, of Foster's Photoplay House. One is the regular issue and one the anniversary of the third year. The anniversary one-day program marks no special feature, being a title page, a greeting and the day's program, but we like in the other a front page space devoted to the specials for the whole week. This gives the feature stuff at a glance, and holds the attention over to the inside pages. The advertisements run top and bottom a space two and a quarter inches square, costing only one dollar a month—which is far too little. And also under the caption of "The Best Advertising Medium" is the sole paragraph of house talk. It would pay Mr. Foster to take fifty cents worth of his own space for more house talk with a proper caption. From those rates he is getting $3 a week in advertising. It is not what it costs to print the program, but the good the advertising will do that counts, and if space is worth no more than this it might pay him to take all of the space. If, without any change in the apportionment of space, he will close up the program to go on two pages and use the space on the back page for a convincing chat, he can honestly tell the outsider that space in his program is worth a lot more than he charges for it. Cuba is a small town, and he can reach everyone. It is worth his own money to reach them for himself, but he can condense the program a little and still have the same space to sell. At a dollar an insertion his advertisers would value the space more.

All House.

The latest program from the Royal theater, Geneseo, New York, gives a new layout. The program is given on the second page and repeated on the back page. The third page is given to a lot of house talk about the coming films, just chat to match with the heading, The Listener Chatters. They have taken up the one-piece coat hanger. If they get as much fun out of it as we did with the envelopes sent, they will have a winner and be as grateful to Mr. Llewllyn as we are. That hanger stunt is going to be even more popular than the wall paper dodger that is still being used.

Three a Week.

The Vaudette theater, West Point, Ga., home of the one piece coat hanger, goes the usual door knob two better, getting out a special three times a week. They use a gray-brown stock paper almost heavy enough to be a card, but not of expensive quality and get a good looking special when the ink is right, but one card printed in an orange ink, is rather faded looking. For brown the best colors are black, blue, red and a much deeper brown. Purple classes as that is red and blue, but yellow and generally green will fade in. It is a good plan to get a sample before the run starts if you are not absolutely certain of the effect.

We'll Give a Guess.

The Amaranth theater, wherever that may be, seems strong on contests. One of the questions is: "What class of pictures did Huerta refer to as food for the brain?" If we had three guesses we'd hazard the opinion that he was talking about the Mutual's pictures of General Villa. If we don't get the prize maybe the Mutual will let us pose in the Mutual Girl series, anyway.

Getting It.

The Lowell theater, Lowell, Arizona, boosted the price for The Spoilers to 50 and 75 cents for Friday and Saturday AND THEN had to give a Sunday matinee before they returned the films. If you get your heart so far up in your mouth that it threatens to fall out every time you raise to fifteen cents for a special, sit down and think this over.

It is one of the standard precepts of the street fakers that if they cannot sell an article for ten cents they can get twenty-five as quickly as they can fifteen. You are selling tickets to the same people. Here is a house that does better.

In passing the Lowell is using two color work now and is making intelligent use of the second color in pulling up the special titles and that sort of thing. They make it pay. They do things well down there.

THE PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Plan a Campaign.

IGNORING the careful calculations of the astronomical sharps, fall is supposed to happen along September 1st, as regards the field of endeavor. "Summer" is over and the serious work of the "season" is on.

Suppose that this season you plan a campaign. Plan to give so much time a day or so much time a week to photoplay work. Keep track of what you do. At the end of each month sit down and go over your work for the month and see what progress, if any, you have made. See if your contiguity is better, see if you are improving in handling incident. Find out, if you can, what your weak point is and give yourself extra work along that line.

Suppose that you think you can improve your connection between scenes, for example. Take all the stuff you've ever written. Go over every script. See how many times you have failed to move smoothly from one scene to the next. See what you can do to improve on your handling of the poor scenes. Perhaps the ideas of the scripts are so poor that it would not pay to revamp them for sale. It will pay you to study them, to work over them, not with the idea of selling them, but of making your good work more salable. Once we told a man we were going to make him take a certain story and he laughed. He has bought it since—twice—but he doesn't know it. The story was bad, and so was the idea, but we built up the idea and made it good, and we did not do that by figuring that the story was not worth while working over. Just remember that you cannot expect to write salable scripts all of the time. Some of your work must be along the lines of preparation for bigger things, for a better construction, better plotting, better appeal, and the time spent on these points is far from being wasted.

It would be well if, in dividing your time, you arranged to two-thirds or even half your time to studying old scripts and the rest to the production of new work. It does not really matter to you in the end whether you spend ten hours writing a story or five hours writing it and five in finding out how. It will matter later on, because the study work you do now all helps you later.

Keep your work in such a shape that you can review it. Note your progress and see from time to time how you get ahead. Keep a list of the scripts you write and the companies you send to. Find out how many stamps it takes to sell a script and find out how much postage each studio gets. It is not merely a matter of postage. If the Blink Company gets most of your work and it costs you an average of six cents to sell there and you spend forty cents sending scripts to the Gumph for every one you sell, remember that perhaps the Gumph is last on your list and gets last choice, and so not so many stories apt to be good, though at times you will find that the best story sold the ninth or tenth time out. If you spend several dollars on the Grumpy Company and sell nothing, give them a rest until you read of a new editor or some other change that may affect acceptances. Keep posted. Build up a catalogue. Get a set of cards or a book. Put down every scrap of information you can obtain. If you learn of some director just taken from some other company mark the fact down. Perhaps he was the chap who gave you such a good production while he was with the other company. Perhaps some time you'll have another story along precisely the same lines. Send it there with the suggestion that you think that it might be found to be along Mr. Blank's line of work. Note the leading players, their likes and dislikes. If a leading woman who generally plays polite parts shines as an adventuress in some play you see, mark down the fact. Six months from now you might have just that sort of character, and it might be just what they are looking for.

Work systematically, and by the end of the season you'll have a lot of worth while data. You cannot get anywhere with a hit or miss policy. Head somewhere and aim to get there methodically and systematically. Don't waste another year.

Plain Bad.

We have "laid off" the Photoplay Author's League since our first few remarks on the subject in the hope that it would round up into something sane, but they seem to get crazier with each issue of the Script. In the third number of that amusing little sheet J. Searle Dawley makes the astounding suggestion (according to the Script) that authors advertise their rejected scripts that directors may look in the sheet for a certain style of story. This quotation is from Mr. Dawley, as quoted in the script:

> "I believe that from a director's and producer's standpoint, there would be a big advantage if all the members of the Photoplay Authors' League would send in a list of their scripts which they have for sale, giving the number of characters, the period and the style of story which they have. If this was published in The Script it would then give a director an opportunity of knowing just where to get hold of a certain line of work which possibly he is anxious to do.
>
> "I know that while I was connected with the Edison Company, if I would have been able to take up a paper like The Script, look over it and see a list of subjects, possibly dealing with Western life for example, I would then immediately have known where to get in touch with people who had such scripts and would no doubt have written for a great number of them. It seems to me a list like this would be a great advantage to the producers as well as the authors of photoplays."

In a word you advertise that you have on hand a certain number of unaccepted scripts. The advertisement costs five cents a line, with a minimum charge of one dollar a month. For non-members the cost is doubled.

Now let's see how it works out. The President of the League is Frank E. Woods, head of the Mutual Department. Mr. Woods turned back to us not long ago three scripts. He did not read them because we told him that they had been rejected by Lubin. He considered that a rejection by one single company was sufficient cause to return scripts unread. Will the President of the League earnestly scan the columns of the League organ for scripts that palpably have been rejected? If the President will not, who will? If none will, why the expenditure of a dollar or more a month?

Who?

The last Script says that the page advertisement in the Mirror for the various authors of the Photoplay Author's League was great publicity for the League, and intimates that the excitement created has not yet died down. Helping the excitement to keep alive, we contribute this question. Did the League get the solicitor's commission on the advertisement, or did the members? And if not, why not?

Petty Kicks.

Comes a letter from a lady who says that all she ever got out of Lubin was to have her paper clips stolen. The best we could ask would be to have that same thing happen in case the story was rejected. A clip taken off and replaced in a different spot means either a tell-tale scar or the use of a warm iron. Many editors do not attempt to replace the clips. They have not the time to replace them exactly, so they throw them on the floor rather than mark up a script. It's an intended kindness, and it is a kindness.

Comes another letter from another lady who points out that she sent a ten cent stamp to the Sun-Vitagraph contest and didn't get it back. She was willing to give them ten cents for reading the script if they asked for it, but no such charge was made and she thinks, &c.

Comes another letter—a man this time—saying the writer sent four cents in stamps to a company along with a script and the story came back with only one two cent stamp and he thinks, perhaps, they took the other stamp for the envelope they used.

These are the three leading petty kicks. We believe that the Sun has not returned all of the scripts yet. Even if they had, and for some reason this particular ten cent stamp was mislaid, neither the Sun nor the Vitagraph is in such need of stamps as to steal them. The same holds good of the last kick. When the script came in, the loose stamps were put into the stamp drawer. When it went out a two cent stamp was placed on the company envelope to clear it from the office. There was no intention of stealing the stamp, nor yet of charging two cents for the envelope. It is simply that the company cannot afford a clerk to keep a bookkeeping account with the authors who send in loose stamps. We would rather have the kicks come here than to the company, but why kick over two cents?

Comedy Care.

One nice, easy way of losing sales is to figure out that anything will do for comedy. Scripts are thrown together with no regard for the technique of construction on the comfortable proposition that anything will go, so long as there is a laugh. Bless your foolish heart, it won't. If there is any one department where careful construction is needed it is in comedy. Dramatic stories will now and then care for themselves, but comedy is not dependent on the story, but the action, and the action should be so carefully planned that the best effect of the business can be obtained. Comedy should be written with extreme care just because it is comedy. It is not comedy action alone that counts. The comedy suspense must be maintained, the rising action must most carefully be preserved, and only the highest development will turn out good comedy.

Comedy construction is not so patent as dramatic construction and is not so easily studied, which is one reason why the novice jumps to the conclusion that comedy requires no particular care, and therefore is easiest to write. If you will look carefully into the matter you will find that the men who write the best comedies are the most careful students of construction. Men like Coffin, Swan Donaldson, Dillon and others of that class are most careful students of constructive technique. They have to be in order to sell their wares. They have no gripping dramatic theme to carry their faults; they have as little theme as possible, for they need the footage for action, and it is the technical treatment of the action that makes the real writer of comedies.

The hardest job in the whole range of photoplay is to write a low farce in such a fashion that the director cannot possibly make it idiotic.

Miss Justice's Plan.

Miss Maibelle Heikes Justice, writing from her summer camp in the Adirondacks, talks interestingly of her work. Perhaps the most important point is that she gives a part of each day to her work. The next most important point is that she plays as well as works. She can put scripts aside and go out and have a good time and come back to the work all the better equipped for her mental vacation. The letter alludes at the start to our own comment that twice lately we had done twelve scripts in a week—under exceptional circumstances, but that this did not affect our general average of twenty subjects a month. To this she replies:

> I note what you say about my working up to your number record of scripts if I tried on one specialty like you—comedy. But don't believe I ever should, for this reason: My method of doing scripts, just like everything else, is singly my own. I sit at my machine every morning at about nine and write till one daily, and make it a rule to do at least one reel a morning when I am working in a two-reel multiple. Sometimes I use a third morning to write out the synopsis and scene plot, but not always, as this ordinarily requires but a short time. After my work hours are over—I go out to play at whatever I can find, and you may be sure it is always something out-of-doors, for, except when I am asleep or at work, I am not still a minute and I don't run after "blue stockings" either, and fight shy of talking "shop" if anything more interesting comes along. Sometimes for two or three days I do not work at all, but, as a rule, by that time two or three plays are in embryo. With regard to specializing—I couldn't to save my life. When I have the blues I write a comedy and some of my best dramas have evolved in my highest spirits. But whatever is written, must be the following of an inspiration, and I can never tell from one day to the next whether it will be comedy, drama, romance or tragedy—the plots seem to all be alloted by some arrangement of their own, so I grasp and treat them in their turn. Thus it is improbable that I should ever specialize, but save when I need a rest, never allow a day to go without writing something. Sometimes a multiple is finished in a day's work when I fear an interesting plot will elude me and I work fast and hard while constructing it, but life with all work and no play would be exceedingly dull for me, and I never believe it right to strain one's health nor tax the best that is given one in this writing game—namely, inspiration. I find it easier now, I believe, to write a multiple than a single reel story, for the reason, perhaps, ideas fly so fast that in the past especially there was not room in a single to hold all my story. Mr. Selig told me recently that he frequently had gone over my scripts with his directors to see what scenes to leave in and what to take out. All this, meanwhile, can be obviated in the two-reel story, and I find more of the liberty in such than I find in doing fiction—there is room to broaden and reach out for effect, and the two-reel plot has now become such a habit that the story seems to round out itself without any particular effort; yet no one enjoys seeing a good one-reel story more than myself, and I shall always attempt to write them. With all, it's mighty hard to work up here in the mountains and woods, and in this fine air mornings, one feels more like an airship than an automaton in front of a typewriter. But time and the whirling reel wait no one; to complete, one must work.

Hobbies.

It is not often that the daily papers, and least of all the sporting page, but Righ Cross, in the Evening Journal, contributes some advice anent the celebrated Mr. Mathewson that is just as sound for photoplay writers. Here it is:

"Golf," observes dear old Matty, "keeps my mind from dwelling on baseball constantly."

To which the scoffer might say that a man is probably much better off with his mind dwelling on baseball, a statement spurious in both wit and principle. If Matty has no other reason for playing golf he has the best reason in the world. Also, while it may be just a coincidence, Matty began getting a new lease of pitching life after he took up golf and it is more than likely that this was the cause and effect. Nearly every man who is markedly good on his job has an absorbing interest entirely apart from the said job. This idea is older than Arnold Bennett. It is contrary to the copy-book shibboleth to the effect that a man's greatest joy should be his daily toil, but it gets results.

The more efficient a workman a man is the more bizarre is his hobby, when taken in connection with his occupation. We know a man whose business is the successful manufacture of intricate electrical appliances. His idea of an orgy is prowling around forgotten grave-yards of New England villages for the names of deceased ancestors, which he writes into a huge chart that looks like a map of the nervous system. Another who is unexcelled at hunting down the elusive dime in a mass of financial statements divides his spare time between prize-fights and rare china. A chap who, as head of the sociology department of a university spends ten months of the year in a nicely furnished office vandyking the mental insides of his fellowmen, counts that vocation lost which sees not his life in jeopardy at least once a week. He did some of his best work the winter following the rescue of a collapsed companion in the Hudson Bay country when he brought him back to a trading post single-handed after a week's fight with the wilderness on nothing but strong tea and strychnine.

The idea is to do photoplay as hard as you can while you are doing it, but not to talk photoplay and think photoplay twenty-four hours a day. Physicians, lawyers, ministers, teachers and others make photoplay an avocation and derive rest as well as profit from it. Those who make it a craze seldom get very far. The best workman is always the best player when he does play, but he does not play in working time or work in playing time, and in each case he concentrates on what he is doing. Two classes of persons fail most signally in photoplay, the dabbler and the monomaniac.

Working From Synopses.

The other day we asked to be excused from supplying a synopsis to a probable purchaser on the plea that we did not, right at the start, want to be tied down to any absolute run of action. We were dealing with an intelligent man, and he passed the leading idea without demanding a set story. Two new scenes, necessitating some slight changes from the story as originally planned, have been one of the fruits.

It is almost impossible for an author to sit down and predetermine that he will write precisely one story along a certain prescribed line, and no other. There may be a few who work best that way, but we think that the best results are gained where the author comes to the typewriter with a general idea of what he wants to do, but not absolutely committed to any one particular line of development.

In a story done this morning we started with a character in the fourth scene intending to use the character in two scenes. It happened that she insisted on staying through the whole play and we let her, with the result that she materially helped the climax and some other scenes. Working on a set synopses she would have been in scenes four and five, and in no others. As it is, she works in nine scenes in a thirty-scene play and in five of those she swings the action, and the story as a whole is fifty per cent. better, while the climax is several times better than the one originally planned.

Of course there are some persons of method who must first draft the story and then write it, but we think that more than eighty per cent. of writers will be better off if they learn to let the story lead them and do not force it to walk along a predetermined line of development.

This doesn't mean letting the story boss you all over the place and firing you out of your own office. It means taking the story as a literary partner and letting it help instead of making a slave of it and requiring it to do as it is told. You may be walking through the woods. You have the intention of following a certain path. You come upon a by-way so enticing that you turn down that instead. You knew nothing of the by-path until you came to it. In the same way, you can plot your story, and suddenly develop a possibility so much better than the one thought out, that it pays to abandon the original idea and turn to this. If you are committed to synopses you cannot. If you work with a free mind you can go anywhere the story leads you, always being prepared to yank it back if it goes the wrong way.

One Pitfall.

A really clever man recently wrote us that he thought he would take a position as editor with a certain company. We told him we did not like the idea, but the job of editor looked good to him, and he might have taken it, had not a better-paying position offered itself with a licensed company. The head of the wildcat company is back in the home town after having broken jail.

We know of three other companies that seem to be less solid, but which not yet have been found out. Look out for the company in the small town that makes it's appeal to the local pride and promises to put the town on the picture map. Some of them may be on the level, but the per centage is so small that it is well to keep away from all of them.

To Correspondents.

We like to get letters of any sort from readers of this department, but please realize that the helpful stuff is the record of your personal experiences and difficulties rather than a letter that simply says that the writer quite agrees with us that—and a paraphrase of matter already printed in this department.

If you have a new wrinkle for writing or studying or selling, pass it along for the benefit of the rest, and you'll stand a better chance of getting into print than with a "jusso" letter.

Synopsis Only.

William Lord Wright now comes along to take up the cudgels in behalf of the "synopsis only" incompetents. That last word is used with the full appreciation of its definition. Mr. Wright cheerfully points out that one of the Vitagraph prizes was won on a synopsis only. Speaking generally he remarks that "the synopsis was first considered and the detailed script was developed later." The particular writer mentioned by Mr. Wright (not Miss Sterne) cannot develop a decent detailed plot or action if her life depended on it. She never will learn how so long as she can loaf along on synopses, and that is one of the leading reasons why we do not like the synopsis only idea.

Any unimaginative boob can tell a great artist to paint a picture of a mother leaning over her dying child, but it takes the artist to paint the picture that will wring the emotions. Almost any person of intelligence can sketch a synopsis, but it takes an honest-to-goodness writer to write the action that tells the story and the credit should go to the person who does the story into action and not the one who merely suggests.

It is only through writing the synopsis of every story that a writer gains a real knowledge of the technique of a construction, and it is only the person who can write the action who can get the most out of a story. Synopses only put a premium on laziness and incompetency, and the person who cannot do all of the work on a script is not entitled to be called the author. Some of the short-sighted editors who take synopses only and who defend the practise do much to hold back the full development of some who might make good writers and encourage to their doom the others who cannot plan the plot of action because they do not possess the right sort of brains. If the Vitagraph paid out prizes for synopses only—and we doubt it—it made a decision in defiance of the announcement that the contest was for plays and not for ideas alone.

Technique of the Photoplay

(Second Edition)

By EPES W. SARGENT

Not a line reprinted from the first edition, but an entirely new and exhaustive treatise of the Photoplay in its every aspect, together with a dictionary of technical terms and several sample scripts.

One hundred and seventy-six pages of actual text.

Special chapters on Developing the "Punch," Condensing the Script, Writing the Synopsis, Multiple Reel Stories, Talking Pictures, Copyrights, etc.

In cloth, two dollars. Full leather, three dollars.

By mail postpaid. Add ten cents if registration is desired.

Address all Orders to

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT is an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until such articles have been demonstrated to the editor of this department.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending 4 cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay.

The first seventy-four questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form. They may be obtained by remitting 25 cents, money, or stamps, to the editor. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy. You may be surprised at the number of questions you cannot answer without a lot of study.

New York Operators, Notice.

Until September 5, 1914, the initiation fee of Local Union 306 has been reduced to $5. New York operators can save money by taking advantage of this opportunity.

Question No. 48.

Best answer will be published, and the names of others sending in replies of excellence will appear in the Roll of Honor. Permissions to use the contributor's name must accompany each answer, otherwise only the name of the city will be used. Theater managers looking for high class men will do well to watch the Roll of Honor.

Give the rule for finding the c.m. area of a wire to conduct any number of amperes, d.c., any distance with a given drop in voltage. Apply this rule, and figure necessary size of two-wire operating room circuit, 100 feet in length, to supply 50 amperes at 3 volts drop.

Roll of Honor.

The Roll of Honor on Question No. 42 is confined to Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas, Harry T. Dobson, Toronto, Canada, and Burlington, Iowa, all of whom sent in excellent replies. Smith went to considerable trouble in sketching out his idea; in all he made eight drawings, six of which were of different oiling systems. On the whole, however, I think that Burlington, Iowa, contributed what is, all things considered, the most practical reply.

Reply to Question 42.

By Burlington, Iowa.

The Question:

Suppose the engine purchased to be capable of using kerosene or gasoline. What steps would you take to determine which is best, all things considered? Suppose it was finally decided to use gasoline, tell us how you would arrange your fuel supply to insure safety, using diagrams to illustrate, if necessary. What kind of oiling system would you prefer for the plant, and why?

The Answer:

The first part of question 42 was duplicated in question 41, which I presume was an error. Having decided to use gasoline as engine fuel, I would seek some spot outside the building, accessible to a wagon if possible, since gasoline is now usually delivered by tank wagons, and would construct a brick or concrete lined pit, and in that pit I would place a tank made of heavy galvanized iron with lapped and soldered joints, sufficient in size to hold at least sixty gallons. This tank would, of course, have an inlet pipe at the top, which same should be of iron pipe, covered with heavy galvanizing, and closed with a screw plug. The inlet pipe should extend through the top of the tank, to which it should be firmly attached with suitable flange, and extend down to within ½ inch of the bottom of the tank. At its side and firmly attached to it for support should be a one-fourth inch iron, galvanized, vent pipe, also closed with a plug cap, in which is a pin-hole vent. This same to let out the air when gasoline is poured in and vice versa. The inlet pipe may also be used as an outlet pipe by attaching a tee next the top and right next to the tee insert a plug valve from which the pipe is continued on to the over-flow cup at the engine. The one-fourth inch vent pipe must just extend through the top of the tank. Having arranged all this I would cover the pit over permanently, either with a brick or concrete arch supported on I beams, making the same water tight, of course, on top of which should be not less than one and preferably two feet of earth.

This, of course, makes a permanently sealed tank, but if the metal of the tank be properly galvanized, and the tank itself be properly and carefully made, there should be no reason for disturbing it for at least ten years.

The walls of the pit should be thoroughly plastered, outside and in, with cement, also the top of the floor, so that it will be thoroughly water tight, and a good, heavy coat of asphaltum varnish on the outside of the tank would not do any harm. The tank should, of course, be located as close as possible to the engine, though a reasonable distance offers no serious objection. I have said that the inlet pipe may be used as the outlet pipe, but the better practice would be to make an outlet pipe at the bottom of the tank, in fact in the bottom of the tank, and carry the same through the wall and underground to the engine, where it would be brought up.

If the engine be located above the supply there must be an over-flow cup provided, the same being something on the order shown in sketch. This is to insure a perfectly steady supply of gasoline.

There are two methods of taking gas from a tank of this kind; one being to pump air into the tank by means of a small compressor, the other to pump gasoline out of the tank by means of a small pump. In case the former be used the one-fourth inch vent pipe will answer admirably as an inlet for the air, but the pin-hole in its cap must be closed. The over-flow cup should be provided with a glass so that the operator can see at all times how the gas is feeding. Of course where the engine is located in a basement the feed from the tank will be by gravity, and it is always much the best to locate the engine thus when possible.

As to the oiling system, as a rule, the particular engine purchased will determine that question, since it will be equipped for a certain method of oiling, and to change the system would probably involve considerable expense and lots of trouble. However, the ideal system consists in a small tank located above the engine, with small copper pipes leading to all the bearings or to the oil cups thereon, and an oil filter located below the engine, with pipes leading from all the bearings thereto. By this system the engineer has the oil at all times perfectly under control, and as the oil is used over and over again the system is ideal so far as economy be concerned.

Question No. 37 Discussed.

William E. Smith of the Film Inspection Department of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Orange, New Jersey, contributes the following discussion on question 37:

Seeing that you have not yet received a satisfactory answer to question 37 I will endeavor to contribute one. You may use a single phase motor on two or three-phase systems, using only one phase of the circuit. You can also use a two or three-phase motor on a single-phase circuit in the following manner; all the phases are connected to the single-phase circuit, but the several currents are made to differ from each other in phase by the use of resistance, and inductances, as per Fig. 1.

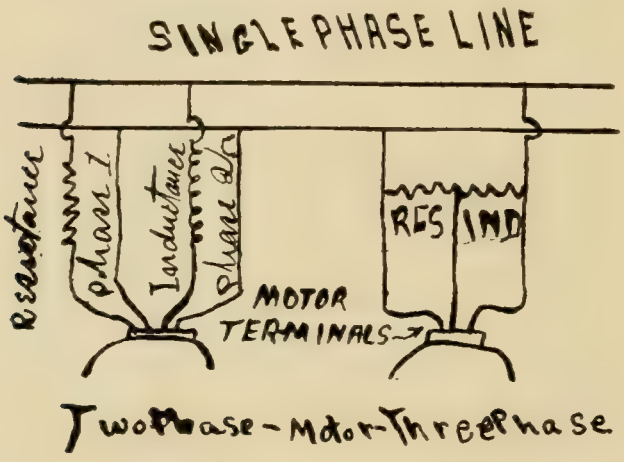

FIG 1.

The current in the phase having the inductance will lag enough behind the phase having only resistance in series to cause the magnetic field to revolve. Phase splitting is only needed at starting; hence, the resistance and inductance are usually switched out of circuit as soon as full speed is attained, the connections being such that the motor will then run as a single phase machine. Single-phase current is a current which when plotted, consists of half-waves of equal area in successively opposite directions from the zero line. Two-phase current is a current in which the terminal voltages on the two circuits differ in phase by 90 degrees. Three-phase current is a current in which the terminal voltage on the three circuits differ in phase by 120 degrees. In my judgment the two or three-phase systems would be best adapted to the work, particularly the three-phase system the connections of which are shown in Fig. 2, and which same I believe will be self-explanatory.

Three delta connected transformers on three phases showing motors operated on phase wires at 220 volts, and lamp circuits on 110-220-volt three-wire system. 1, 2, 3 primary lines; 4, 5, 6 transformer primary coils; 7, 8, 9 secondary three-phase circuit; 10, 11, 12 three-wire lamp mains with neutral shaken as middle taps from secondary transformer coils; 13 three-phase 220-volt motor generator; 14, 15, 16 three single-phase motors neutrals marked N. If voltage between 1, 2 and 3 is 2200 with transformer ratio 20 to 1, then voltage between 7, 8, 9 will be 220 and between the neutral and phase wires of each transformer will be 110.

This article is very excellent indeed, though I am afraid it will be beyond the average operator; still I do not see how brother Smith could have made it any plainer. Careful examination of Fig. 2 will show just exactly how the various connections are made, and the thing is carried out from the transformer to the last motor and the light system. As to Fig. 1, the thing would be extremely confusing and meaningless to the average man as it is put, but with the addition of the statement that any amount of resistance may be used in conjunction with any amount of reactance, the matter becomes plain, the idea being that just enough reactance and resistance to cause the lagging of what we might call the second and third phases behind the first phase will operate to create a slightly rotating field, or, in other words, a field having sufficient rotation to start the motor and bring it up to speed, after which it will operate with the reactance and resistance cut out. The field will then be what is known as a pulsating field.

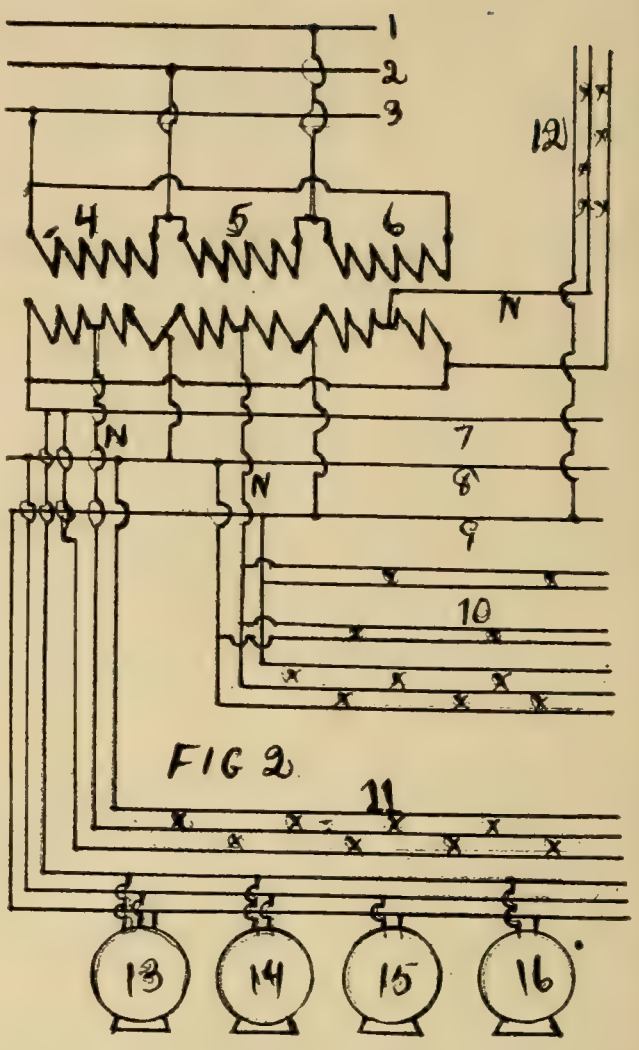

FIG 2.

This article, of course, knocks out the answer by Brother Upstill, page 699, August 1st issue, in part, since Brother Upstill said it would be impractical to operate a two-phase motor on a single-phase system. I was myself under the impression that the brother was correct, but I find that I was in error in this matter.

By Special Train.

L. S. Usher, Winnipeg, Canada, one of our correspondents, writes:

Suppose you think by now that I have acquired a case of cold feet in not writing the department for so long. In explanation, I have been traveling for the government, exhibiting on a special train. No joke, either! Run pictures occasionally while train was moving between stations, using gas, the machine being perched on two seats half way down the car. My troubles would fill a page. But, anyhow, my Worlds were all waiting for me at home, and I find trouble in them likewise waiting. In reply to brother Stewart, Waitsburg, Washington, July 18th issue, page 428, regarding errors in electrical measuring instruments: what I had in mind when I wrote those particular lines was a d. c. to d. c. motor generator set, using d. c. instruments on each side. If brother Stewart will read on he will see my next paragraph states the situation when the inductive and non-inductive loads are to be compared. He is entirely right, and I thank him for the gentlemanly way in which he brought the matter to my notice. It is such criticism that makes apparently mysterious passages in the answers quite plain to all. With regard to Mr. Straith, July 4th issue, page 62, I will say little. I do not approve of swedging portions of the commutator bars under any condition. There is a variation of armature windings and machines. My system of temporary repair is certainly not good for the armature if a live coil is being short circuited, nor is any temporary repair good for the armature under those circumstances. If the operator in charge has a coil burn out and is going to fix it temporarily I take it for granted that he knows what he is about. If he has the time, soldering the dead bar as a jumper is certainly the better method. The wise man would shut down or use any other source of supply available, or else quit until it could be soldered up properly. I am sorry that I cannot now get time and quietness to answer the questions. I am shifting around so much that I cannot do it, but my heart is there all the same. I hope soon to settle down and dig in with renewed vigor.

I shall welcome that time, Brother Usher, and trust it won't be long. Yes, showing pictures under those conditions must have provided you with a bunch of trouble, but trouble is the good man's middle name. He eats it alive, and I have no doubt but that you got by with flying colors.

An Explanation.

Washington is surrounded by a wall of trouble over which he tosses the following:

> Is there any way you can put the W. S. James article, April 18th issue, so that an ivory-domed nut like myself can understand and assimilate its value. I have been earning my bread by the sweat of my brow since I was eleven years old, and consequently my education sums up to the total of what I have been able to dig out after ten hours' labor each day, plus the work put out by the American Correspondence Schools, two volumes at $9.00, which are worth about 30 cents; also books by Hawkins and Swoope. What gets my nanny is this: ¼ + 1fi = 1-3 and 3fi ÷ 12 = 4fi. Enclosed find 25 cents for the questions.

The fault very largely lies in the way the thing was printed; it should have read one-fourth plus one fi equals one-third. Of course that really means $\frac{1}{4} + \frac{1}{fi} = 1\text{-}3$, but the average man doesn't stop to think of the fact that the fraction ¼ really means 1 ÷ 4. He simply reads it as it is put ¼ + 1fi = 1-3. Of course, the mathematician will say there is not any difference, but I say that in the mind of the average reader there is a big difference when it comes to doping a proposition of that kind out. In the problem presented, fi is the distance from the center of the front condenser lens (this is not precisely correct, but as near as it is possible to put it. It is really what is known as the nodal plane, but while the condenser theoretically has a nodal plane, in practice, due to certain elements, such as uneven density and strata in the glass, spherical aberration and lack of perfect curvature, the nodal plane is disrupted and broken up to such an extent that it may be said that it don't exist) to the point where the condenser rays theoretically cross, and would all actually cross but for the element of spherical aberration.

I know this is not very clear, but you must remember, Washington, that it is by no means easy to simplify matters of this kind. I think, barring the error in printing the thing in the form of fractions, brother James' article is as clear as it is possible to make it. Incidentally I would suggest that while perhaps it is not proper for me to say so, still, you will get more practical value out of the Handbook, which you seem to have overlooked, than from all the other books put together, though it is not as strong on electricity as the Hawkins and Swoope works, it is a practical work for practical operators, price $2.50 from the Moving Picture World. It contains 450 pages, and already has had a sale of 10,000 copies.

On second thought perhaps there are those who do not understand how to work problems such as the one referred to, therefore, I will give detailed solution.

Assuming fi to be 20 inches, we would have (1 ÷ 4) (1 ÷ 20) = 1-3, now to divide one by four you annex cyphers to the one, thus: 1.00, and then divide and you get the result .25. One by twenty is 1.00 ÷ 20 = .05, so we have .25 + .05 = .30, or $\frac{30}{100}$ or $\frac{3}{10}$.

Finds He Does Not Know It All.

Centralia, Washington, writes:

> Dear Friend:—I suppose I may call you such because you have helped me immensely through the department and Handbook. I have been reading the World for a long time, and do not believe I could get along without it. Have been operating seven years and like many others, thought I knew it all, until I got hold of your Handbook and discovered that I still had much to learn. Projection is fairly good in our theaters, with one exception and that one is very poor at present. I had a fine room to work in and was getting a very nice picture until the union started, and then the manager got the fellow who was janitor to grind the machine for $10.00 a week, and such a picture. Where I am now I am told to go into the operating room and deliver the goods, and that is all there is to it.

I understand from other sources that the Centralia boys are organizing a union, and the managers are disposed to oppose that action. I would like, in all kindness and good feeling, to say to the Centralia managers that they are taking a very much mistaken position. If the Centralia managers sought to form a managers' association (union) and the film exchanges undertook to say they would not furnish film to any member of such an association, I can imagine the howl there would be, and the strenuous and very proper protest Centralia managers would put up. Yet the film exchanges have just as much right to do this as the managers have to oppose the formation of an operators' union. But, aside from that, opposing the formation of a union is a foolish thing to do. There is no sense in it, and opposition cannot possibly win out, excepting temporarily. That is the history of the past. Bucking the labor movement is just like trying to sweep back the tides of the Atlantic with a broom; you may think you are doing it because the beach becomes clear of water, but really you are not; it is just the tide going out, and presently it will return and overwhelm you. But aside from all the foregoing, it is a foolish proposition because, as I have said time and again, better salaries and better conditions for the operator means better work on the screen. That is a plain matter of one and one make two. I am glad to hear that you, like thousands of others have been helped by the department and the Handbook. The difference is that you are honest enough and generous enough to admit it, whereas many who have really been helped do not.

Insufficient Data.

Eugene Upstill, Long Pine, Nebraska, says:

> I have a Powers Six A with a 7½ back and a 6½ front condenser. To get any kind of result at all I have to push the lamp as close to the condenser as I can get it, and even then the result is not satisfactory. Have tried changing the condenser and moving the whole lamp house, but get no better results. Have also tried to find a remedy for this difficulty in the Handbook, but believe you have missed this one point.

Friend Upstill, I have not missed anything of the kind, and your saying so simply shows you that you need to study the subject of lenses a little more closely. You have not given me the focal length of your objective, nor the length of the throw or width of the picture, so I do not know what condensers you really need, but from your description I should say probably two 7½ lenses. At any rate, it is a cinch you should have the 6½ behind and the 7½ in front if you use your present combination. If that does not clear matters up get two 7½s. Have you measured those lenses (page 356 of the Handbook), and are you sure they are really 7½ and 6½ lenses?

Congratulations.

H. Albert, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, writes:

> Allow me to congratulate you on your answer to question of A. T. Weiss, New Orleans, with regard to short circuit in rheostat, July 11th issue. You have made the matter as clear as it would be possible to make it to anyone not well versed in electrical action. As you well know, there will always be doubters, and those who will argue against facts which have been proved by our best electrical experts. Thus, when an arc is fed by alternating current the light is lighted and extinguished at every alternation. The humming noise is caused by the contraction and the expansion of the arc stream, which produces a corresponding vibration in the surrounding atmosphere. With some currents there is a much louder humming than with others, the amount being dependent upon the number of alternations per second. The higher the current frequency the less the noise.

Well, Brother Albert, I had never thought of the matter in that light, yet your explanation sounds very reasonable, but still the fact remains that there is a considerable difference in the noise produced by different arcs working on the same cycle current. This does not necessarily operate to dispute your theory. It is quite possible that the variation in noise may be caused by the surroundings. For instance: one lamphouse may be more susceptible to vibration than another, and hence would amplify the sound. Another thing, those who accept this theory must not lose sight of the fact that humming is frequently caused by the transformer sitting too close to sheet iron which, under these conditions, the magnetic action of the transformer causes to vibrate and produce a loud humming noise.

Wail of an Exchange Man.

The following is allowed to use up printer's ink, not because it sets forth anything new, but because it is sent in by the manager of an exchange. The various faults cited have been pointed out time, time and again in this department, but, nevertheless, perhaps the novelty of having an exchange man do it will give emphasis, therefore it is given space. I desire, however, to comment on the last paragraph as follows: This exchange manager does a lot of criticising, and then smears a thick coat of salve on the wound by saying that he really does not want to criticise that bunch of exceedingly good fellows, the theater managers. Well, the editor is perfectly willing to criticise them, all right, and in all too many instances would be quite willing to lend emphasis to his criticism by means of a three foot club, if he was not afraid of being arested for cruelty to animals. A manager does not wear any halo, in the estimation of the editor, just simply because he is a "manager." The operator does not hold any patent right to the privilege of being seven or eight varieties of a chump, when it comes to standing directly in his own light, and the operator performs that stunt often enough, but the manager, take him by and long, can give Mr. Operator cards and spades, and then beat him to it. The wail of the exchange man as hereinafter set forth is a mild, little squeaky wail, compared to the roar it might justly have been. But, be it known to all and sundry, the average exchange manager has quite a bundle of sins of his own to answer for—yea, verily, quite an extensive bunch, and some of them are the sinniest kind of sins. For instance: sending out reels with ripped sprocket holes, splices a half inch wide, stuck together with tobacco juice, or Heinz's peach marmalade, and a few other such minor, trifling faults. The exchange manager writes as follows:

> I can't help but criticise some men who are entering the moving picture business. Those I refer to spare no expense in matters that tend to decorate the theater, but they seem to overlook the most important and remunerative part of the business. For instance: during the past few months I have been confronted by no less than a dozen exhibitors who made inquiries for second-hand machines, and quotations on the lowest class of service. These two items, machines and service, are absolutely the most essential parts of a moving picture theater, but this fact they overlooked. As an illustration, take one of these men who proposes to open a moving picture theater, and proceed to build the best house money can provide. But when they are ready to open it will be found that the operating room has been supplied with a machine already discarded because it was found unfit for further use by its owners, who must have been live wires looking after that part of the business which brings in the return. They are of the type of people the exchangemen like to meet. Exhibitors cater to the public at large and when the individual parts with a nickel or a dime for an admission ticket, he expects to see good pictures, properly projected, and the exhibitor does not exist who can satisfy his patrons with poorly projected, bad ones. I wonder when the exhibitor who thinks he can get away with a counterfeit show will get wise, and use the brains the Creator gave him at birth. Of course, every exhibitor at one time or another has a complaint or two to enter—no one is perfect—and I am always willing to do a little bit more than go half way in remedying any adverse conditions, providing the exhibitor will be reasonable and come to me with his kick, so that we may talk things over. My office door is never closed to a patron, and no card of admission is required. I am always glad to greet our customers, and, if possible, to offer suggestions for the good of all concerned. If the exhibitor would work for the interest of the exchange as willingly and earnestly as the manager of the exchange works for that of the exhibitor, many evils would quickly cease. I'd like to point out some of the faults of the theater owners. For instance: a reel of film costs the exchange something more than $100, and it takes some time before this sum of money is realized from rentals. Nevertheless the reel is run on a machine smeared with oil—oil on every part but where it should be—and if, perchance, there happens to be no oil looking for a night's lodging on the film, thanks to the operator; nine times out of every ten the machine needs a general overhauling, and tears the life out of the films. But when the owner's attention is called to this fact, he flies off the handle, makes a vigorous protest to the exchange man and asserts that the reels were received in that condition, when in truth he never saw them until they were projected, the operator obtaining and returning them to the exchange. This is the stand he takes to protect himself, but he makes no move towards having the machine adjusted and repaired until it almost falls to pieces. He should take enough time to inspect the machine and see that it continues in good condition. It is good policy to buy such supplies as the operator legitimately has need for, since this aids to good projection, and extends the life of the machine. Thus you not only save yourself additional expense, but you help out the fellow who next gets the reels.

Take the matter of lithographs—these are something the exhibitor must have. They cost like the deuce, and are very short lived, yet the average man seems to lose sight of the fact that others after him must use the same prints. They should be given as much care as the films themselves.

I really do not want to criticise the exhibitors for, as a whole, a better set of fellows never lived. Their main trouble is that they get careless after a while, for it is said that familiarity breeds contempt. And it is so with our business; we handle films and posters so much that we have little respect for anything other than their drawing qualities, and pay little heed to the fellow who must use them after they leave our hands. The business needs a little injection of that fellowship feeling whereby through a more careful use of the films the exhibitor who gets a later service obtains them in much better shape, and the need of the audience for umbrellas during a performance is lessened.

Another Motto.

Mottoes are mighty good things, or at least some of them are, provided you stop and consider what the true meaning behind the particular bunch of words in question is. Here is one that is of peculiar and particular value to certain operators:

"SOME MEN COULD LEARN IF THEY DID NOT KNOW IT ALL."

Now the average man will look at that sentence, wrinkle his face up into a grin, and say, "Huh! that is pretty good at that," and—then forget it. But perhaps that same man could reap very decided benefit if he would stop and try those words on, as it were—see if they fit him. If he would pause and consider the real meaning of this particular sentence, laying his egotism aside for the moment, it is more than probable that he would reap large advantage. One of the greatest bars to advancement that I know of is the mistaken idea that one already knows all there is to know about it. How many, many times I have tried to tell someone something, to be met with the exclamation: "I know. Oh, yes, yes," accompanied by a manner designed to convey the impression that he knew all about that particular thing long before he ever saw or heard of Richardson, and many, many, many times I have taken another tack and brought the matter up in an entirely different way only to discover that either he did not know, or his knowledge of the subject was very shaky.

My own plan has always been to hold my pride in check and keep my fool mouth shut when some one is trying to tell me something. Perhaps I know more about the subject than the informer does, but regardless of that fact nine times out of ten he will tell me some little thing about it I did not know, whereas, if I had shut him off with the "Oh, yes. I know all about it," I would not have learned or gained anything at all.

The great trouble with many men is that they are so afraid some one will imagine there is something in the world they are not fully posted on. They imagine it is a sort of disgrace to admit there is anything, or that there can be anything they do not know all about. Piffle! And likewise nonsense. Again I repeat there are none of us so wise that he cannot learn, and the more receptive is his state of mind the more he will learn, and the wiser he will become. So returning to the motto it really ought to read: "Some men could learn if they did not imagine that they already knew it all."

From England.

John Griffiths, one of the valued correspondents of the department who has contributed some excellent articles on optical matters, writes from Stockport, England:

> Just a line to let you know I am still keeping in touch with the boys. With regard to the formula which you state you cannot make sense of, its solution is as follows. (As I have already given the correct solution, I won't repeat it.—Ed.) I would esteem it a favor if you would send me a letter of reference as to my ability. Jobs here are pretty scarce and exhibitors give them to the man with the best reference, regardless of actual ability. It is the custom of the country.

It is a real pleasure to send the kind of letter Brother Griffiths asks for, because he is a real operator. That may be the custom of the country, but it is a mighty poor custom. I am sorry, however, that the brother is going to get a job over there. I would rather see him return to this glorious land of the supposed-to-be free. We need men like him on this side of the Duck Pond. Come back, friend Griffiths, and stand not on the order of your doing it.

P. S.—Perhaps, however, the brother proposes to stick around in England to settle the King's personal grudge against one or two other Kinks and Emp'rers.

An Experimental Streak.

Frank B. Payne, Adrian, Michigan, writes:

> I have had an experimental streak lately, and I mean to see it through to the end. Have been watching the various letters dealing with condenser troubles, discoloration, breakage, etc. Also have been having the same line of trouble myself. It seems that you cannot get a condenser that will not discolor, or else break in the course of time. Certainly there ought to be a cure for these ailments, and I believe I can see it. A relative of mine is a glass manufacturer, and I intend to consult him with regard to this matter. He has a certain ingredient, known only to himself, which he uses in the manufacture of art glass. This ingredient imparts intense clearness. I can personally vouch for the effectiveness of his plan. Why, then, cannot this be applied to the condenser proposition? I do not think lens manufacturers have paid the attention to condenser lenses which their importance demands. They are too eager for the almighty dollar. What do you think of the marketing possibilities of a perfect condenser lens? Meaning one that is extremely clear, proof against discoloration and properly annealed or tempered to guard against breakage.

In the first place, let me say to you, Brother Payne, that the fault primarily lies with theater managers, who have demanded a cheap lens. A condenser lens ought, in the judgment of the editor, to sell for anywhere from $2 to $5; probably nearer five than two. As a matter of fact they are selling as low as 50 cents. What do you expect? If your relative can produce a condenser lens which is approximately perfect in curvature and plano, which is clear and white, and which has an approximately even density, and is not abnormally stratified, and which will be reasonably free from breakage, that is to say, not more inclined to break than present lenses, this department will do all it can to push its sale on the broad ground of the good of the business. I believe, however, these lenses should be not only made in the plano-convex, but also in the meniscus and bi-convex.

Manager Representation.

E. M. Smith, treasurer of the Gillingham & Smith theater enterprises, appeared before the ordinance committee of the Grand Rapids, Michigan, city council recently, for the purpose of explaining the workings of the license laws in other cities as applied to moving picture operators, it having been recommended by the Grand Rapids ordinance committee that more stringent rules be applied to the licensing of motion picture operators. Mr. Smith declared himself in favor of such action, and also stated that he favored the placing of a representative from the motion picture houses on the licensing board. It is probable that the ordinance will be amended in the near future to fit the needs as outlined by Mr. Smith.

All of which may be all right, and may not be all right. Mr. Smith says he favors more stringent rules and the "placing on the board of representatives of the motion picture houses." Exactly what has Mr. Smith in mind? If he really favors more stringent rules and proposes to have a practical motion picture operator placed on the board, well and good; but if he simply proposes to have a manager placed on the licensing board, then we think Mr. Smith would have to do some pretty strenuous explaining as to the benefit to be derived before we would undertake to back him up in a proposition of that kind.

Down in a Maryland city, not so very long ago, one of the heads of a big motion picture theatrical enterprise was on the examining board, and, rightly or wrongly, there were very serious charges made by the operators in connection with his board membership. It was claimed that this manager used his position to flood the market with school operators; it was also claimed that he had a large, juicy interest in one of the schools. We do not vouch for the correctness of these charges, but they were made, and remade many times, and we personally believe they were, at least, partly true.

It is altogether possible that Mr. Smith is entirely honest in his desire to see more stringent rules adopted for the licensing of operators. It is also altogether possible there is a large size African concealed in this particular wood pile. If there is going to be any motion picture theater representation on that examining board it certainly should be a practical operator, and no one else. This department will be perfectly willing to offer the Grand Rapids city council ordinance committee any advice it may seek, and supply it with information with regard to the best practice by New York City, Boston and other cities and states, where the licensing of operators has reached a high plane.

Comments on the Films

Licensed

THE STORM AT SEA (Kalem), August 18.—This is a superior picture drama in many respects. The author is Hamilton Smith and the producer Robert G. Vignola. The leading people are Helen Lindroth, Alice Hollister and Harry Millarde. There are many beautiful marine scenes in this picture. Incidentally it contains one of the most realistic storms ever filmed. The plot tells a touching story of a sister's sacrifice. The outcome of it all contains great heart interest. This is a splendid offering.

THE BLACK SIGNAL (Essanay), August 18.—This is a depressing sort of a picture, wherein a young man is convicted of murder. Just before the execution the mother of the boy calls on the governor of the state pleading for stay of execution. He discovers that she is his wife, from whom he had separated; he had thought her dead for years, and that the accused is his own son. He attempts to stay the execution by telephone. As he lifts the receiver he sees the black signal fluttering from the prison flagpole. In sorrow he and his wife are reunited.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE (Melies), August 18.—This is heralded as a comedy picture, but foolish would be more appropriate. A young lady imagining that she can read the stars predicts her father's death. The old man comes home drunk and falls asleep. The daughter imagines him dead and calls the undertaker. The father awakes and the undertaker and mourners make a sudden exit. The daughter consults her book on astronomy and learns she made a mistake, that the conjunction of the planets meant a wedding, so she had to hustle to prove her theory.

IF AT FIRST YOU DON'T SUCCEED (Selig), August 18.—A comedy-drama picture by Wallace C. Clifton and directed by E. A. Martin. Featuring Frank Newburg. This is a story of a couple who agree to disagree directly after the honeymoon. The wife yearns for caresses and sweet sayings but the husband is engrossed in business. The wife insists on practicing vocal lessons. There is considerable trouble, but in the finale the sweet sentiments of love prevail. A mild comedy but interesting.

BACK TO THE FARM (Lubin), August 18.—A one-reel comedy written and produced by Will Lewis. Babe Hardy, Herbert Tracy and Eloise Willard are the principals. There is considerable legitimate comedy in this picture and it receives much laughter. Two boys from the country visit their auntie in the city. She has written them she may not be at home, but that two flights up they will find the key to her door under the mat. They make a mistake, going only one flight up, getting into the wrong flat and also into a heap of trouble, so much that they make a bee line back to the farm. A good comedy offering.

BY THE AID OF A FILM (Edison), August 18.—Tenth of "The Man Who Disappeared" series. Directed by Charles A. Brabin. Featuring Marc McDermott, supported by Miriam Nesbitt, Barry O'Moore and Harry Mason. Perriton is suspected of murder and to prove his innocence of the butler's death, conceives the idea of taking motion pictures of incidents connected with it. When they are flashed on the screen before the real murderer the surprise forces a confession, and his arrest and death follow in succession. Later Perriton and his sweetheart marry.

THE FABLE OF THE TWO MANDOLIN PLAYERS AND THE WILLING PERFORMER (Essanay), August 19.—This is another of George Ade's funny features, introducing two young men who are mandolin players and who are also rivals for the affections of a dear young thing. They have been languishing eight years and have made no more progress than to sit straight up in chairs, gaze at her and play mandolins for her edification. They are visited by a country cousin, a regular rube as they think. They take him to see Myrtle. He is so backward that in two minutes he is holding her hand. In three weeks they are married, and the music is furnished by the two boobs. Moral: To Get a Fair Test of Speed Use a Pacemaker. Continuous laughs.

TAKEN BY STORM (Vitagraph), August 19.—One of Elizabeth Carpenter's legitimate comedies. Directed by James Young. The cast is as follows: Clara Kimball Young, Charles Eldridge, Lionel Belmore and James Young. There is a rural flavor pertains in this offering that is very pleasant to visualize, and a homely love story which depicts many comical scenes, showing how a wilful girl meets her match. Her lover absolutely carries her to a justice of the peace where they are married. Then the trouble begins, but the husband convinces his wife that he is the stronger of the two and she is glad to admit he is the master. This is a splendid picture and receives almost continuous laughter.

THE OLD FIRE HORSE (Edison), August 19.—This is a very reasonable and a real comedy photoplay, by Mark Swan and Charles H. France, director, has brought out all the salient points. Harry Eytinge, Ellen Bower and Floyd France, with good support, take care of the acting part in fine shape. The comedy hinges around an old fire horse who is bought by a farmer. One of the farm hands is in love with the farmer's daughter but is "cut out" by a city chap. While the family is absent they hitch up old Jim and elope. A fire bell rings and old Jim starts on a run for the sound, landing them not only at the fire but in front of Betty's father and mother. A cracking good comedy.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL (Selig), August 20.—Many topical and interesting events are shown in this number, embracing the very latest happenings covering almost the entire world. Some grand photography pertains and all in all it is certainly worth the viewing.

THE WOES OF A WAITRESS (Vitagraph), August 20.—This pictureplay was written by W. A. Tremayne. This plot has merit because it is human and shows the weaknesses of human nature. A girl waitress in a small restaurant has a steady who is a plumber. Impressed by the pretentions of a new customer at the restaurant, "a confidence man," she shakes the plumber and takes up with the flashily dressed fellow. He robs her, but the plumber saves her money, and she gladly accepts his protection. Maurice Costello and Naomi Childers have the leading parts.

SLIPPERY SLIM AND THE CLAIM AGENT (Essanay), August 20.—This is a laughable comedy as regards plot. The acting of Slim, Sophie and Pete help things along to make it funnier. Slim hears of a man getting $50,000 damages from a railroad for injuries received. He gets an idea. Rigging up a dummy he puts it on the track and pretends that it is he that was run over. The claim agent offers to settle for $5 but Slim refuses. Pete poses as Slim, when another agent comes and releases the road from responsibility for $9.50. Then the rough house begins.

THE SMUGGLER'S WIFE (Biograph), August 20.—The plot of this picture play, while it is edifying, seems to lack conviction, although no fault can be found with the direction, acting and photography. A wife is driven to desperation on account of the impending fall of her husband and she adopts measures to help him which he misunderstands and thinks her treacherous. Later he realizes his mistake and finds she has been loyal.

A SURPRISING ENCOUNTER (Melies), August 20.—A farmer buys a board to repair his fence and carries it home on his shoulder. It is a long board and he meets up with many experiences. Finally he bumps into three men who bump him, they then cut the board in two and tying him to one of the parts pitch him into the river, and he goes over the falls. It gains some laughs.

A MASON'S NEW ASSISTANT (Melies), August 20.—A worthless individual obtains a job in the masonry line. He is sent to repair a wall, awkwardly he breaks a water pipe; he calls for help and everybody gets soaked; he calls a plumber who turns a wheel under his nose and the water is turned off. Both of above on same reel.

THE HONEYMOONERS (Vitagraph), August 21.—This is a silent comedy by J. Stuart Blackton. It has been reviewed at length in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and produced 250 times on the stage of the Vitagraph theater, Broadway, New York City, by John Bunny, Mary Charleson and James Morrison, Vitagraph stars.

THE REVELER (Selig), August 21.—A Western comedy, written by B. M. Bower and produced by Colin Campbell. Wheeler Oakman is featured. The scenes are located at the Flying "U" Camp and Rusty Brown's place in Dry Lake. Mr. Oakman plays a dual role, Weary and "Irish" Mallary, and plays them both artistically. There is not a female in the cast, but that does not detract from this offering, which receives many laughs.

THE LOVE OF ORO SAN (Lubin), August 21.—This picture drama was written by W. M. Ritchey and George Stanley directed it. The plot is laid in Japan and many beautiful scenes are shown which have been magnificently photographed. Many of them are harbor scenes, where the U. S. S. South Dakota lies at anchor. The theme of the plot is a love story between one of the American officers of the Dakota and a little Japanese maiden, Oro San. She saves the young officer from the vengeance of her Japanese lover and eventually sends him away in despair, as their love is hopeless. Tom Forman and Velma Whitman play the principal parts. It will please the sentimental.

SHERLOCK BONEHEAD (Kalem), August 21.—A Marshal Nielan comedy, who is also the director, featuring Ruth Roland and Lloyd Hamilton. The theme of this plot embraces the fact that $1,000 reward is offered for the capture of a smuggler. All of the characters are involved, each trying to earn the reward. The complications they meet up with furnishes the comedy. After strenuous efforts, after all the others have failed, the girl and the government detective (Dick Rosson), win the reward. A good comedy.

WHAT BECAME OF JANE? (Selig) August 22.—A melodramatic picture by Eustace Hale Ball and directed by Edward J. LeSaint. Stella Razeto is featured, supported by Guy Oliver, Al W. Filson and Eugenie Besserer. This is a conventional story of a country girl going to the city because she has ambitions for the stage. She has the usual country lover, who she leaves behind. She has a mediocre career, gets mixed up with a swift set, but keeps her feet on the ground. Her country lover comes in search of her, and being tired of it all, she goes back with him to her old home. Mildly interesting.

MAKING AUNTIE WELCOME (Lubin), August 22.—On the same reel with "Sometimes It Works." E. W. Sargent is responsible for this also and Will Louis was brave enough to direct it. The plot is a good one for a comedy of this nature. A married couple receive word from their auntie that she is on her way to make them a long visit. Jack decides that to get rid of her he will pretend to be crazy. He practices on his wife and when the aunt comes he chases her up the street. He is arrested, accused of killing his wife, and gets into a peck of trouble. A very funny comedy.

SOMETIMES IT WORKS (Lubin), August 22.—On the same reel with "Making Auntie Welcome." Written by E. W. Sargent and produced by J. Murphy. This is a slap-bang comedy in which everybody wants to do everybody else up. It is full of scraps which sometimes end satisfactorily, and then again they don't. In the end it looks like a new war, but explanations develop the fact that they have all been mistaken. It gets good laughs. On the same reel with above.

KIDNAPPED BY THE INDIANS (Kalem), August 22.—A Western drama featuring Princess Mona Darkfeather, supported by Charles Bartlett, Rex Downes, Big Moon and a good cast. Frank Montgomery is the director. It is full of the usual melodramatic scenes engrafted in a Western play. The characters are desperadoes and Indians. In the finale the Indian maiden is discovered to be of white blood. The scope of the backgrounds is beautiful and the photography clear.

BRONCHO BILLY'S WILD RIDE (Essanay), August 22.—In this pictureplay Broncho Billy plays the part of an outlaw and is discovered and chased by the sheriff's posse. Coincidentally, he saves the county judge's daughter, whose horse is running away with her and he is captured. The young lady, through gratitude, pleads for him and obtains his release. A fair offering.

IN LIEU OF DAMAGES (Edison), August 22.—Written by Hapsburg Liebe and directed by Richard R. Ridgely. Featuring Herbert Prior and Mabel Trunnelle. There are a number of interesting complications embraced in this plot and the scenes are laid in a mountain community called Jackson's Hollow. The characters are made up of the natives of that locality, rough and ready men and hard-working women. There is something of the tragic pertaining. It is all interesting and human. It holds the interest of the audience.

THE GYPSY TALISMAN (Biograph), August 22.—"Vengeance is sweet" is the theme of this plot. A wrong has been committed and retaliation is the only thought dominant in the mind of the one who has been wronged. Nothing else will satisfy. When he fancies that he has utterly crushed his victim and is congratulating himself, he discovers that he has been thwarted. Mildly interesting.

THE MAN FROM THE PAST (Biograph), August 24.—A woman with a past becomes a faithful wife and uses every endeavor to live down her past, but is suddenly confronted with its shadow—a menace to her present and future happiness—another enemy looms up to destroy her peace of mind. The two dangers clash, the husband returns and developments happily conceal the truth. A fair offering.

NEARLY A WIDOW (Edison), August 24.—A comedy by J. Edward Hungerford, directed by Ashley Miller. Sally Crute and Barry O'Moore have the leading characters. Because a husband refuses to pay for a dress she has purchased, the wife threatens to go home to mother. She starts, but changes her mind. When the husband finds that she has not returned he decides to teach her a lesson. Leaving a note he pretends to commit suicide. How his wife turns the tables on him will make you laugh heartily.

SWEEDIE SPRINGS A SURPRISE (Essanay), August 24.—Sweedie's boss decides to discharge her but owing to the fact that she is considerably larger than he is, he is in a quandary as how to go about it. He borrows his neighbor's maid who is even larger than Sweedie. He buys her flowers and takes her home, thinking that they will make short work of Sweedie. When they see each other they embrace, as they are sisters, and walk out, leaving the boss to do the cooking.

THE HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL, NO. 51 (Selig), August 24.—This contains visualizations of topical subjects covering a vast scope. Many beautiful scenes are shown in widely different locations. Much attention is paid to martial doings both in the armies and navies of the world. In an educational sense it is valuable.

WARD'S CLAIM (Vitagraph), August 24.—A Western pictureplay written by W. A. Tremayne and directed by Ulysses Davis. The principals in the cast are William Duncan and Myrtle Gonzalez, who are well supported by an able cast. Many exciting scenes of the Western country, which are well photographed, follow each other in rapid succession. A chase occurs where, in pursuit of his sweetheart's abductor, the hero snatches the girl from a horse galloping at full speed. As he saves her the villain on his horse dashes over a precipice. A good release.

Licensed Specials

AN INNOCENT DELILAH (Vitagraph), August 18.—Special feature in two parts. Written by Elizabeth Kendrick and directed by Ulysses Davis. The leading parts are played by Robert Grey and Jane Novak. The plot develops a story of the West. There are many interesting and gripping scenes, both interior and exterior, which are well photographed. Intensity is a feature. The father endeavors to use his daughter to further despicable and dishonest transactions. The girl saves her lover's life. The father is exposed and all ends happily. A very good release.

THE BOND ETERNAL (Kalem), August 19.—A two-part photodrama featuring Marin Sais, supported by an all-star Kalem cast. George H. Melford has given it careful direction. There is a great amount of heart interest displayed in the various scenes and a drunken husband causes much sorrow in the life of a faithful and suffering wife. The plot covers twenty years. The poor woman eventually dies in the arms of her son, although he does not know that she is his mother. An interesting offering.

THE DREAMER (Lubin), August 19.—This two-reel picture drama is written by Romaine Fielding who directs and plays the leading part, the title role. He is ably supported by Joseph Sedgwick. It is a story of two brothers, the other brother being Mansfield Ardis. It is a peculiar sort of a plot and contains scenes which do not seem entirely germane to the continuity of the story. However, it is interesting and depicts a lesson of sacrifice and unselfishness, but it all ends in a sort of a sentimental way that lacks conviction.

WHEN A WOMAN'S FORTY (Selig), August 19.—A two-part pictureplay which is somewhat of a society drama, written by W. E. Wing, in which he demonstrates how love wins against time. E. A. Martin has directed it with all attention to details. Eugenie Besserer is featured and William Stowell ably supports her. It is a story of a woman who in her youth, obsessed with a proud spirit, sends her lover away and he departs for India on a tiger hunt. She hears news of his death and locks the iron gates of her beautiful rose garden where they last met. Twenty years later she throws open the gates and enters the garden. Her lover recovers from his injuries and coincidentally returns and enters the open gate, so love wins the race against time. The scenes and photography are beautiful.

HIS BROTHER'S BLOOD (Lubin), August 20.—A two-reel story by William H. Lippert and produced by L. B. Carleton. This is another plot that is somewhat conventional. It is the story of two brothers, one a physician and the other an artist, but it develops as it proceeds in absorbing interest of a scientific nature, illustrating the theory that heredity can be traced through the blood and that later will be recognized as a new medical authority. Ormi Hawley, Edward J. Peil, William W. Cohill and Richard Morris ably handle the leading parts. A well produced picture which is worth the viewing.

THE BULL TRAINER'S REVENGE (Melies), August 20.—This two-part picture play tells the story of a widow who owns a large cattle ranch. An unscrupulous manager attempts to get possession of the property. In revenge he turns loose a vicious bull which attacks the widow. The executor of the estate saves her. The herd stampedes, the manager unable to get out of the way, is trampled to death. Some fine cattle scenes are in this picture and worth seeing.

THE GILDED KID (Edison), August 21.—This two-part picture comedy has been reviewed at length by Louis Reeves Harrison in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, issue of August 1, and can be found on page 680.

THE MASKED WRESTLER (Essanay), August 21.—A young lady witnesses a wrestling bout, in which one of the contestants, the winner, wears a mask and is known as the masked wrestler. The young lady becomes very much interested in him and closely follows his career for some little time. Eventually she is overjoyed to discover that he is none other than the man she loves. Acting, direction and photography are adequate. An ordinary offering.

THE TELLTALE PHOTOGRAPH (Melies), August 22.—This two-part picture play embraces a plot that is out of the ordinary. A man is accused of murder on circumstantial evidence and is convicted and sentenced to be hanged. An aviator has taken a photograph of the scene of the crime, while in the air. Hearing of the extenuating circumstances, that an innocent man is about to be executed, he arrives at the prison just in time to show the photograph of the real murderer and save the innocent man. Rather an exciting offering.

LILY OF THE VALLEY (Vitagraph), August 22.—A two-part picture play by William Addison Lathrop and produced by Wilfrid North. Lillian Walker is the bright particular star, assisted by Earle Williams. The story is a very plausible and interesting one. A young lawyer to protect the name and honor of his old friend and preserve his sweetheart's independence, sacrifices his own fortune. The girl who has snubbed him two years previous, accidentally learns what he has done, but she will not accept his sacrifice, but relents when he proposes to share it with her.

THE WHITE MOUSE (Selig), August 24.—A drama of the snow country, in two parts, by James Oliver Curwood. The plot of this story demonstrates the value of a friend in need. Bessie Eyton is featured, assisted by Wheeler Oakman. This story is full of punches and contains many beautiful snow scenes. After the occurence of many strenuous stunts, a young trapper is falsely accused of murder and thrown in jail. His wife plans his escape and the policeman through pity for the wife allows him to get away. He is rearrested and tied hand and foot with rawhide thongs. His capturer leaves him to get his dog feed. A little white mouse gnaws through the tongs and releases him. He makes his escape and eventually joins his wife and baby. A logical but entertaining release.

THE PRIMITIVE INSTINCT (Kalem), August 24.—This two-part picturedrama has a most unusual plot. Marin Sais is featured and is ably supported by a strong cast. George H. Melford has carefully directed it. A physician, engrossed in experimental work, neglects his wife and child. An artist comes into her life who urges her to elope with him, which she refuses to do, until a sudden impulse prompts her to visit his studio. The artist is not present. A painting depicting a primitive man attracts her attention. She falls asleep and dreams of the primitive part of the story, which is thrown on the screen. The horror of it, when she awakes, induces her to return home to her husband and child.

Independent

THE BELLE OF THE SCHOOL (Princess), August 21.—A girls' school story, nicely pictured and containing a bevy of attractive misses. The girl thief turns over some money to Muriel, who is expelled as a result. Later the real thief confesses and everybody is forgiven. Boyd Marshall is the hero. A bright, well-pictured offering.

A LESSON IN MECHANICS (Majestic), August 21.—A country boy strikes oil on the farm and goes to the city. He wears a pair of tight patent leather shoes which afford some good comedy situations. Later, when his auto stalls, the girl's mechanical ingenuity saves them from some drunken ruffians. Also he learns that she doesn't mind getting her hands and face dirty. Robert Harron and Dorothy Gish are the young couple. A light plot, finely photographed and with a good humorous turn.

A DOG'S GOOD DEED (Thanhouser), August 23.—The story of a small boy and two dogs. The shepherd belonging to the rich lady hauls the washing home on the wagon for the boy. A slight plot but pleasing.

A PHYSICAL CULTURE ROMANCE (Komic), August 23.—Fun at a girls' school, showing how an awkward country girl takes up physical culture and becomes attractive. A good light plot, helped out by very good photography. The lady demonstrator's one-piece bathing suit was decidedly breezy for some audiences.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL (Reliance), August 24.—Series No. 32. Margaret tries on some new styles in hats and sweaters and makes a visit to the studio of James Montgomery Flagg. The latter draws her portrait. Dunbar is still trailing the gem thief and promises to round him up in the next number.

A RURAL LOVE AFFAIR (Sterling), August 24.—This features Little Billy with a cute little girl. He brings her a rabbit and this escapes down a bluff. Billy goes after it fearlessly and both he and the rabbit have to be rescued. An interesting number enacted entirely by children.

SUSIE'S NEW SHOES (Beauty), August 25.—Harry Pollard and Marguerita Fischer here appear in another domestic comedy. The young husband takes his wife's pocketbook as a joke when she goes shopping. This action leads to a number of natural and amusing complications. The photography is good and the plot slight but enjoyable.

GRANNY (Majestic), August 25.—A country boarding house story of very fair interest. The girl and her grandmother get work washing dishes. The girl falls in love with the new boarder and saves him from robbery. Dorothy Gish plays the girl. The photography is good and the film quite entertaining.

UNIVERSAL IKE IN THE DANCE AT THE LITTLE L. O. (Universal Ike), Aug. 25.—A short comedy number in which young Ike pours two jugs of whiskey into the well. The tango dancers all proceed to fill up. This has been done before, but it is amusing here.

TURTLE TRAITS (Universal Ike), August 25.—A few views of alligator and water turtles and land tortoises. On same reel with above.

A MINER'S ROMANCE (Nestor), August 26.—A film story written by Seymour Hastings, with Murdock MacQuarrie, Agnes Vernon and others in the cast. The scenic effects about the placer camp are good; the story contains some old features but holds the attention.

LODGING FOR THE NIGHT (American), August 26.—Ed Coxen and Charlotte Burton appear in this. He stops over night at the mountain home and the girl saves him from robbery. In the scuffle her father is killed with his own revolver. This is well photographed and contains plenty of action. The main situation is of course very old.

THE STOLEN ORE (Reliance), August 26.—This Western offering is not a very strong one. There is confusion of characters at times and the plot does not get up much feeling. The hero succeeds in saving the valuable ore from his treacherous rival. The title does not fit the picture very well as the ore was never really stolen.

FOR THE SECRET SERVICE (Rex), August 27.—Robert Leonard appears as a young inventor in this two-reel story. The invention itself is an interesting one; it is an ingenious device for detecting happenings miles away and for exploding gasoline at a distance. The machine itself is used in getting the hero and heroine out of a serious predicament at the close. This story is well constructed and has numerous exciting moments. Ella Hall plays the part of a girl spy in a government office and it is through her efforts that the hero is saved from the conspirators. This plot has all been done before in different ways, but it is entertaining as presented in this number and has several novel incidental features.

SNOOKEE'S DISGUISE (Sterling), August 27.—A characteristic Ford Sterling number. He appears as a cornet player who flirts with a girl across the way. His wife also flirts with a clerk and the principals meet in a restaurant where rampant trouble ensues. There is shooting, broken crockery and some of the usual slapstick work.

THIS IS THE LIFE (Powers), August 28.—Lloyd Ingraham is the producer of this drama. The story is weakened by an indefinite conclusion, leaving the beholder much in doubt.

MESQUITE PETE'S FORTUNE (Eclair), August 30.—A Western comedy number, better than the average in both acting and photography. Pete passes up the young waitress, who afterward inherits fifty thousand dollars, in favor of an old maid from Boston. The scenes are typical and the characterizations good. Not a strong laugh producer, but an entertaining offering.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS (Rex), August 30.—Rupert Julian has the lead in this story, which if not dramatically strong, has the merit of being interesting.

TALE OF A HAT (Sterling), August 31.—An eccentric comedy number in which the husband puts the rent money in a straw hat. The hat blows off his head and falls into the clutches of some tramps. Later it again gets away and blows into the wife's hands just in time to pay the rent. There are amusing spots in this and one thrill where the handcar falls through the open bridge draw.

A SEASIDE FLIRT (Crystal), September 1.—A low comedy number located at the beach. Vivian appears in a very abbreviated bathing suit; other characters are the cop, the colored girl, Willie Boy and life guard. It seemed possible to have worked up a stronger plot here; this is very slight. The photography is clear.

THE JACKPOT CLUB (Eclair), September 2.—A well-staged picture, based on the contention that in the game of life it is not so much the holding of good cards as in playing the poor ones well. The story is not entirely convincing—that a man capable of inventing a most useful automobile appliance and building up a great business in two years should on account on an injunction be compelled to go to work as a machinist, and then after the loss of his left arm be unable to obtain any kind of employment. The story tries to point out that a man in his club may be charitable and yet in the conduct of his business permit injustice. There is a happy ending.

FATHER'S BRIDE (Joker), September 2.—This is a straight farce, with Bess Meredyth and Ernest Shields in the leads. The son cannot admit his marriage when the father comes. The latter is finally compromised in a way that makes him amenable to reason. The story has amusing moments and is well constructed, but it did not lead up to a sufficient climax and has other drawbacks.

DAISIES (Rex), September 3.—The tired business man in the country marries a girl he discovers in the daisy field. Later another woman comes into the story, he is ruined financially and deserted by all save his wife, who still proves true. This contains much that is old and hackneyed in plot and fails to get a very strong hold on the feelings of the observer. Rupert Julian and Elsie Jane Wilson play the leads.

A BABY DID IT (Nestor), September 4.—A farce utilizing a good old Nestor idea that is still full of laughter for the average spectator and will make an acceptable offering. The baby gets put in the car of the bachelor stopping at the same hotel as the widow. This gets the man in wrong with his girl and ends with the baby's mother, the widow, consoling him for it. It is well played and one of Al Christie's productions.

O, WHAT'S THE USE? (Joker) September 5.—This is a low comedy number showing Max Asher and his company at their best. Max goes on a hunting trip and is supposed by his family to be dead. He arrives home in time to attend his own funeral ceremonies. There is some good burlesque business in this and it is free from offense. A good offering of the low comedy type.

UNDER ARIZONA SKIES (Frontier), September 6.—A Western number in which Dolly Larkin plays the mayor's daughter. The bandit saves the girl and her companion from the Indians. This is an average offering of the kind. None of the scenes stir up much feeling until toward the last, when there is some excitement.

NO SHOW FOR THE CHAUFFEUR (Eclair), September 6.—An entertaining comedy conception, in which the owner of the auto changes places with his chauffeur. The girl falls in love with the supposed driver and they are of course united after numerous happenings. The photography might have been improved in places, but for a slight offering this is pleasing.

UNIVERSAL IKE, JR., NEARLY GETS MARRIED (Universal Ike), September 8.—In this characteristic number Ike, Jr., is believed to have inherited a large fortune. The girl's parents immediately take a strong liking to him, but later when it is discovered he inherited only a lot of debts they experience the usual change of feeling. The plot in this is a little stronger than in some of this series.

Independent Specials

FOR THE LAST EDITION (Reliance), August 22.—In this two-reel story F. A. Kelsey has produced a combination strike and newspaper yarn which rings true in almost every respect. The girl, presented by Irene Hunt, goes to the assistance of the young reporter. She enters an office and gets wind of a plot to blow up a freight car and throw the blame on the strikers. The explosion and attending scenes get up considerable suspense. Later the paper scores a beat on the story. Not a powerful offering, but one that contains plenty of action and holds the interest.

THE SECOND MRS. ROEBUCK (Majestic), August 23.—A two-reel offering, taken from a story by W. Carey Wonderley. R. A. Walsh, Blanche Sweet, Mary Alden and Wallace Reid are in the cast. The photography is very good and the story a well-rounded one, strong in its interest and admirably presented. The dramatic situation at the close might have been handled more strongly, but the story is new in so many details that it proves very entertaining. The proposal by dictating a letter to the girl was a clever piece of business. A society story quite strong in plot and treatment.

THIS IS TH' LIFE (American), August 24.—A two-reel number with a strong educational value and one that tells a story with a lot of horse-sense in it. It demonstrates how a hard-headed, narrow-minded farmer finally comes to see the advantage of modern farm improvements. George Field was convincing in this part. Ed Coxen and Charlotte Burton are appealing as the young couple. Numerous uses to which electricity may be put on a farm are shown. This should have wide appeal in country districts.

CONSCIENCE (Thanhouser), August 25.—A two-reel number with Mignon Anderson and Irving Cummings in the leads. This tells a highly improbable story, but it has a pretty sentiment behind it and works up to a pleasing climax. The young bank teller, needing money to send his wife to Arizona, takes a $10 gold piece from a beggar's hat, plays it on the lucky ten at roulette and wipes up a fortune. This he feels compelled to turn over to the beggar, after confessing to his wife, but Blind Baggage Jake takes only a limited amount of the money and leaves the rest. The plot is almost fantastic, but the result is a cheerful yarn which leaves a pleasant feeling with the observer.

COUNTERFEITERS (Victor), August 28.—A two-reel number in which Florence Lawrence and Matt Moore impersonate an Italian organ grinder and his wife in order to elude the girl's parents. They are rounded up in jail and the girl's father gets them out. This is quite a pleasing comedy offering, based on a slight plot. The title, "Counterfeiters," is not used in a literal sense.

THE SUNSET TIDE (Gold Seal), September 1.—This is the fifth two-reel installment of the "Trey o' Hearts" series. Rose and her friends again collide with Judith and her party on Smugglers' Island. There is further pursuit and capture and escape, the scenes rather repeating previous episodes and being split up into many parts in a somewhat confusing manner. Toward the last there is one big scene in which Alan saves Rose and Barcus from the rising tide, they having been tied to a rock by the conspirators. The story itself does not gain much headway in this installment.

WHEN AMERICA WAS YOUNG (Broncho), September 2.—A photoplay in two reels depicting realistically the life of early settlers in the Indian country. The manner in which the father quarrels with a savage over a trapped bear and the subsequent fighting was pictured convincingly. The action and suspense are good and the saving of the girl by her boy playmate was nicely shown. This is a Western offering of the usual type but much better in every way than the average. The action is particularly good throughout.

THE SILVER BELL (Domino), September 3.—This two-reel photoplay contains a wealth of California sunshine in most of the scenes. It presents in an attractive manner a story of the early mission days. The costuming and settings are all that could be desired and the plot is handled very convincingly. It tells of the theft of the mission bell and how the hero works on the superstitions of the bandits in order to recover it. This is a very fine offering of its type.

STACKED CARDS (Kay-Bee), September 4.—A two-reel story of politics by T. H. Ince and R. V. Spencer. The trap worked on the reform candidate for mayor was rather highly colored, showing the adventuress receiving him at her bedside under pretense of illness. Later, in Alaska, he saves another man from becoming her victim by telling of his own experience. The picture closes with Travers shutting her out of his cabin. This treads on delicate grounds in certain scenes, but holds the interest throughout. The theme as a whole is not a very elevating one.

THE DERELICT AND THE MAN (Victor), September 4.—A two-reel sea story written by Leslie T. Peacocke, with Walter Miller and Irene Wallace in the leads. Walter Miller doubles. Some of the situations are very interesting, but the whole production is marred by inferior photography, many scenes being very dark and obscure. The story itself shows how a sailor impersonates a young doctor in order to gain his inheritance. The scenes on the doctor's return are full of action. But the poor photography makes it impossible to recommend the offering.

SILENT VALLEY (Imp), September 7.—A two-reel number, written by George Hall. This features King Baggott, grown up from an incorrigible boy into a bully. He terrorizes the entire country district and finally breaks up a show troupe by carrying off the dancer. He takes the girl to his cabin, pursued by the angry villagers, but releases her without harming her. Later he reforms and the girl returns to wed him. The plot is unique, but steps from one situation to another in rather abrupt fashion. The transition of the bully into a good citizen was too much taken for granted. Nevertheless Mr. Baggot's forceful personality carries the story along to success in spite of imperfections in development of the plot.

THE CRACK O' DOOM (Gold Seal), September 8.—This is No. 6 of the Trey o' Hearts series. It contains one big feature in the second reel where a train running at full speed crashes into a damaged automobile. The passengers all pile out and the scene is decidedly realistic. This carries the story forward in an appealing way and the installment closes with all the principals heading for New York City.

FIXING THE "CLASS" IDEA.

Happy Phrases by Theater Managers Convey Sense of Quality and Comfort to Public.

By Frank H. Madison.

A NEW school of photoplay theater advertisers is developing throughout the United States. When the business was young most of the newspaper space was given over to the circus style of exploiting the films. The words "sensational," "thrilling," "extraordinary" and meaningless phrase "Grand Special Extra Program" were the favorites in the smaller cities. This type of advertising is still in evidence, but it is passing as rapidly as the storeroom type of picture show. The alert manager realizes that he has something more to do for his patrons than to run off the films which he secures from his exchange. The best pictures he can give must be backed up by giving his patrons physical comfort and a feeling that they are patronizing a house which has "class." Consequently shrewd exhibitors have coined or evolved happy slogans and phrases which fix the names of their houses in the minds of photoplay goers. The Moving Picture World does not claim that all in the following list are original, but they show what some live managers are doing:

Conveying an Idea of Quality.

"Where Quality is a Reality, Not a Promise."—Bijou Theater, Missoula, Mont.

"The Theater of Realization."—The Grand, Mankato, Minn.

"You need't look at the posters for you will always find a program that pleases you."—The Cool Majestic, Corsicana, Tex.

"Ask our regular patrons about our pictures De Luxe."—Majestic, Boise, Idaho.

Coolness and Ventilation.

"New pictures every day; Fresh air every minute."—Colonial Theater, Greenville, Tex.

"Under the fans at the Varsity, Daniel Frohman presents."—Varsity Theater, Lawrence, Kan.

"Breezy as the seashore."—Savoy Theater, Greenville, Tex.

"Cooler than an airdome."—Lyric Theater, Oklahoma City, Okla.

"One of the cool theaters." (Strong because of its modesty.)—Oracle Theater, Ogden, Utah.

"The theater known for its coolness."—Princess Theater, Austin, Minn.

"The one absolutely well ventilated theater in the city."—Grand Theater, Austin, Minn.

"At that ice-cool, ice-cooled Majestic Today."—Majestic, Corsicana, Tex.

"The cool and beauty spot of the city."—Wonderland Theater, Tulsa, Okla.

Humane—Appeals to Labor.

"A new cooling system that cools Union operators in charge of our machines."—Hippodrome, Dallas, Tex.

Suggestions of Comfort.

"Plenty of fresh, cool air, pipe organ music and comfort. The place? Why, the Arcade, the house of a thousand delights."—Arcade, Walla Walla, Wash.

"Every seat a fat-man's seat."—Drexel Theater, Joliet, Ill.

"Compare your comfort at the Star with the others."—Star Theater, Missoula, Mont.

Fixing the Admission.

"It tickles a nickel to act like a dime. Tickle your nickel and yourself at the Bijou."—Bijou Theater, Racine, Wis.

"Value received for each side of your dime."—Princess Theater, Austin, Minn.

"At hard time prices—five cents."—Airdome, Chickasha, Okla.

"Admission always the same, 10c., no matter how big the show."—Majestic Theater, Madison, Wis.

"Bijou pictures are the best, prices the same as all the rest."—Bijou Theater, Walla Walla, Wash.

"Always a good show, Always the same price, 10c."—Majestic Theater, South Bend, Ind.

For a Special Program.

"Let's not go away until Thursday. Alice Joyce is at the Alhambra Wednesday in The Vampire's Trail."—Alhambra Theater, Springfield, O.

Getting Next to the Public.

"Phone us for information at anv time. Our number is Main 2270."—Apollo Theater, Tacoma, Wash.

"Our business is your pleasure—at least that is what it should be, and we are doing our level best to make it so. Just simply getting the crowds does not satisfy us—we are more anxious that our programs please the people. This is a show for the people; of the people and by the people. We want you to feel that you have a voice in the conduct of it—if you have any helpful suggestions we will appreciate them."—Grand Theater, Jonesboro, Ark.

Guaranteeing a Comedy.

"No laugh; no pay."—Yale Theater, Tulsa, Okla.

"STRIKE UP THE BAND"—ROTHAPFEL WAS A SAILOR.

Dr. W. Taylor of the U. S. Navy, who at present is recruiting officer in Newark, N. J., stopped abruptly in the entresal of the Strand Theater as S. L. Rothapfel, the managing director, came out from the auditorium. Mr. Rothapfel also stopped. "Pardon me, but your face looks very familiar," said the naval officer. "Yes?" said the manager, "my name is Rothapfel—I believe I know you, too. Aren't you Dr. Taylor of the Navy?"

It did not take the two men long to renew their acquaintance, which dates back to 1901. At that time they were shipmates, or at least serving their country on the U. S. S. "Bancroft," Dr. Taylor as the ship's surgeon and Mr. Rothapfel as a corporal of marines. Dr. Taylor was surprised to find Mr. Rothapfel as manager of a theater. "I knew Rothapfel was ambitious," said the doctor later, "but I never dreamed that I would see him in the capacity he has now.

"When he was in the Navy he was one of our smartest lads, and it was evident that he was anxious to work himself up. We all knew that he was studying for a commission and it did not take long before he was placed in command of the large six-pound gun, which, by the way, was the first six-pounder in service at that time.

"While I was on board the 'Bancroft' Rothapfel was promoted to a corporal, which at the time made him both happy and proud. He was always a good fellow, anxious to distinguish himself, and to my personal knowledge he saw actual service at Panama and Venezuela. Rothapfel was the best shot in the Navy and his gun crew always carried off the honors; as a matter of fact it was due to Rothapfel's zeal that the shooting score of the Bancroft jumped from the lowest to the highest amount of points."

CLEAR OF MANY A PITFALL.

Southern Pines, N. C., August 11, 1914.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—I hand you herewith my check for $3 for renewal of the World from September, 1914, to August 31, 1915. I would as soon try to run my house without a picture machine as without the World. It has steered me, a beginner, clear of many a pitfall, and its criticisms of the productions I am showing have been an invaluable asset.

Very truly,

CHAS. W. PICQUET, Manager.

Princess Theater.

Charles J. Hite, Dead

Successful Film Manufacturer and Capitalist Succumbs to Injuries Received in an Automobile Accident.

CHARLES J. HITE, president of the Thanhouser Film Corporation, died on the morning of Saturday, August 22, in the Harlem Hospital as the result of injuries received the evening before when the high-powered car he was driving crashed through a fence at the corner of 155th street and Central Bridge. He is survived by a widow and two children.

Mr. Hite was alone in the machine, which he had owned but a month. There had been an unusually heavy rain on Friday afternoon, and the pavement was still wet. The accounts of the accident vary, but when aid reached Mr. Hite as he lay under the machine forty feet below the street level he said something to the effect that the brakes would not stop the car. He was, too, able to give his name and address. He lost consciousness when with the aid of jacks from the nearby elevated shops the automobile was raised so that he could be lifted out. Mr. Hite was at once removed to the Harlem Hospital, where it was found that he had suffered a fracture of the skull, compound fracture of the jaw, fracture of the left ribs, and internal injuries.

Central Bridge is to 155th street as the cross on a capital T. Coming toward the bridge there is a sharp decline. Mr. Hite naturally would have turned to the left, but his car plunged through the stout fence on the right-hand side, plainly with great force. It was said by an eye-witness that he had tried to avoid hitting a pedestrian who had blocked his path. Another person said that he had gone through the fence with his car reversed. What is probable, however, is that the machine skidded and the brakes failed to hold.

The funeral services on Tuesday afternoon were held from the beautiful home in which Mr. Hite had resided since taking up his duties with the Thanhouser Company. It is one of the show places of New Rochelle, and is known as the Francis Wilson estate. The ceremonies were conducted by the Rev. Charles Canedy, of the Episcopal Church. The unusual number of floral pieces testified to the regard in which Mr. Hite was held by his employes, his business associates and friends and his neighbors. There was a large attendance of film men from New York. The pall bearers were Edwin Thanhouser, the founder of the company bearing his name, who arrived in New York from Italy on the morning before the day of the funeral; Dr. Wilbert Shallenberger, Dr. W. Edward Shallenberger, Dr. A. E. Jones, John R. Freuler of Milwaukee, Lloyd F. Lonergan, Roy L. McCardell and Paul Davis. Among others who came to pay their respects were John F. Skerrett, Adam Kessel, Charles O. Baumann, Richard Brady, J. E. Brulatour, J. C. Graham, Crawford Livingston, J. M. Naulty, Alfred Weiss, Walter N. Seligsberg, Phil Gleichman, Arthur Lucas, M. A. Neff, Claude Hite, George A. Hutchinson and Arthur De Sormeaux. The Screen Club, of which Mr. Hite was a life member, was represented by a committee composed of C. A. Willat, Arthur Leslie, Jack Standing, Carl Leviness, Leo Delaney, Joseph Farnham and George Blaisdell. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hite of Lancaster, Ohio, the father and mother of Mr. Hite, arrived just before the beginning of the services. As a mark of the respect in which Mr. Hite was held by his fellow-townsmen the flags over the City Hall, Police Headquarters and the City National Bank were at half mast. Dr. Jones had charge of the funeral arrangements, and he was aided by Bert Adler, both of whom had been unusually close to Mr. Hite. Pending decision as to the place of interment, Mr. Hite's body was placed in a receiving vault.

The Late Charles J. Hite.

Charles J. Hite was born thirty-nine years ago in Ohio, where his family had lived for many years. His first work was on a farm in Lancaster. After a course in the district school he spent three years in the Ohio Central Normal College. Then for a time he taught school. His first commercial venture was in a lyceum film exchange in which he supplied films to the Ridpath lecture bureau. Then with S. S. Hutchinson, now president of the American Film Manufacturing Company, Mr. Hite opened a small film exchange in Chicago, to which was given the name of "H. & H." The combined capital was $1,200, but the partners divided $10,000 the first year—1909.

Harry Aitken, now president of the Mutual Film Corporation, at that time was conducting the Western Film Exchange in Milwaukee. He joined Mr. Hite and Mr. Hutchinson in organizing the American company. Then Mr. Hite with Mr. Hutchinson became interested in the Majestic Company. On account of the opposition to the admission of the Majestic to the Sales Company the partners conceived the idea of acquiring exchanges of their own. The result is the present Mutual Film Corporation.

Mr. Hite was a firm believer in the business value of popular players—those whom the picturegoing public automatically would associate with a given brand of output. In a conversation with this writer last winter he said that he held on to his good players with hoops of steel—they were a vital part of his assets. The few changes in the personnel of the Thanhouser company since he took over the studio two years ago from Edwin Thanhouser bear out this statement. In another column will be found an appreciation of Mr. Hite from the pen of Bert Adler; the many who have been privileged to know the late president of the Thanhouser Company will read it with interest.

Mr. Hite had many business associations. As one of his leading players remarked on the day of the funeral, it seemed as if he found the largest measure of relaxation, the best means of forgetting his rapidly multiplying business cares and responsibilities, in his speed boat and his automobile. These furnished the tonic his sturdy body craved.

Mr. Hite, besides being president of the Thanhouser Company, was vice-president and treasurer of the Mutual Film Corporation and the treasurer of the New York Motion Picture Company. He was also president of the Broadway Rose Garden, an establishment combining with a large picture house many recreation novelties as well as a restaurant. He was the organizer of the Syndicate Film Corporation, which is handling "The Million Dollar Mystery," the Thanhouser serial to the making of which Mr. Hite had devoted much of his personal attention. He was also interested in the Bangs Laboratory and had in charge the exploitation of the pictures taken by the Williamson Submarine Expedition, which he had previously financed. It is announced that there will be a meeting of the stockholders of the Thanhouser Film Corporation on September 1, at which time the successor of Mr. Hite will be elected.

The following statement has been issued by the Mutual Film Corporation: "The officers of this company are so appalled and grieved by the death of their associate, Charles J. Hite, that it is impossible to make a suitable statement of their grief at the present moment. As was to be expected of a man of Mr. Hite's popularity and character, his business affairs have been left in perfect order. At the forthcoming meeting of the board of directors a full expression will be made."

C. J. Hite, the Man

By Bert Adler.

THE death of C. J. Hite was typical of the man—quick. None of us at the Thanhouser Studio ever saw a man who got to the core of things with the lightning quickness of C. J. Hite, or who could accomplish so many tasks within short spaces of time. He was always on the rush, of necessity. But even after business he would rush! rush! take his fun quick in his speed boat or fast car. I know of at least one man who won him because he reflected Mr. Hite's own trait of moving fast. This man also won a plum for which many had been striving. It was the European agency for the Thanhouser films. When it was announced that we would "change agents" over there, the biggest importing agencies in Europe dispatched representatives to Mr. Hite. And a hustling British youth, representing no one but himself, got the agency almost only because he beat the others to it! He got the promise of the agency from Mr. Hite at the Pennsylvania Station, New York City, two minutes before the leaving time of a train that was taking Mr. Hite on a quick visit to his parents at Lancaster, Ohio; and when Mr. Hite got back he mailed the contracts to London, where the young and hustling Mr. Kimberley started to accumulate a fortune.

Outside of his belief in speed, he had other firm faiths. Chief was that in a clean life, which he thought everyone should live. He neither drank nor smoked, and while a thorough mixer and extremely good fellow, he was never known in his life to have told a two-edged story and he carried his cleanliness right into his business.

Among C. J. Hite's business beliefs was that an employee was worth treating right. Perhaps that is why every visitor to the studio thought us a "happy family." He wanted you to feel that you had a life job if you cared to stay with him. That's why you seldom read of Thanhouser changes. I do not remember him dismissing a single man of all our vast force. And he personally righted every grievance that an employee presented to him. They actually loved this man at Thanhouser studio, from temperamental little ingenue to hard, grimy property man. He represented Fairness to all of them.

Unfavorable criticism of his product in the press hurt him more than most people thought. He was wounded by the criticism of our pictures right after the Thanhouser fire, at a time when he thought reviewers should have been lenient. And I never saw a big man who was so sincerely thankful for the very smallest paragraph of praise. When the trade papers spoke nicely of us, which I am glad to say was most of the time, he would show the notice to all of his intimates with a good deal of pride. It will be remembered that he engaged one young woman, Miss Billington, for the Los Angeles studio because Mr. Harrison of the World in a review said that she stood out in a small part in "Carmen." That must show what he thought of a good notice!

Speaking of engaging players, I ought to record that he did not believe in "taking people" from his opposition.

It may interest many to know Mr. Hite's opinion of Mr. Laemmle, who was one of his chief opposition. It was that he was a good fighter, and a favorable opinion therefore. Mr. Thanhouser had had a strong personal liking for Mr. Laemmle which, it seemed to me, he had communicated to Mr. Hite, and the storm of film conflict didn't affect it.

Just prior to the last election of Mutual officers the report somehow gained credence that Mr. Hite had become opposed to Mr. Aitken, who was to succeed himself as president and with whom Mr. Hite had formed the Mutual and been otherwise associated for some years. Dame Rumor is a sad creature. To his very end Mr. Hite, I am certain, had only the most cordial feelings for Mr. Aitken, whom he regarded as a great organizer. He ever referred to Mr. Aitken with pride as "his partner." Once when he heard an action of Mr. Aitken's criticised, he said that Mr. Aitken often came in for criticism that he didn't incur in the slightest, but which, as president of the Mutual, he would have to receive. The talk of ill-feeling was the silliest balderdash.

Mr. Hite was the best man to his family that I have ever seen. They were ever in his thoughts. He would bring his little daughter, Marjorie, to his office on his busiest days, if it was her wish to be with him. He aided his own brothers in every way possible. Of his brother Claude, now in the film exchange business, he prophesied a great future as an exchange man and was always glad that he had introduced him to the business. By the by, high up on his list of ideal exchange managers were R. C. Seery and J. R. Freuler. As an ex-exchange man he always had a lively interest in exchanges and their management. But he had ever disliked this work while he himself was doing it—the haggling over prices of "service," the continued need of explanation of "disappointments," real and fancied—and was thankful that he was out of it. In fact, to change from his exchange labors he once tried for the position of manager of a certain film producing company and couldn't get it! And that wasn't so long before the time he raised the money to buy out Mr. Thanhouser, either! It's a wonderful world when you know the facts.

Who have been Mr. Hite's closest confidants? I think, Dr. Wilbert Shallenberger, his Thanhouser partner; Lloyd F. Lonerman, his producing chief, and Mr. Aitken. A. E. Jones, a man of whom the film world has heard very little, but who has been active in the business end of "Million Dollar Mystery," was also unusually "close" to Mr. Hite, as were A. P. De Sormeaux, also of the "Mystery," and Paul Davis, a young Chicagoan, not in the film business, than whom he held no man in higher regard. It seems hardly necessary to mention in this connection such men as Mr. McIlhanie and Mr. Livingston, with whom, of course, he was in constant touch. Of his associates, he had known Dr. Shallenberger the longest, by quite a margin; as young men they had taught school together in the Middle West. This must kill the oft-published yarn about Mr. Hite, overworked in his Chicago exchange, going to see a strange doctor (Shallenberger), for treatment and receiving instead a check—to invest any old way! Of course, the story was inspired by the faith that men had in C. J. Hite. Merely to look him in the eye was to ever after confide in him, implicitly and absolutely.

OHIO CONVENTION.

The officers of the Ohio League wish to anounce that there will be no published program of the convention. Anyone wishing to give an exhibition of their manufactured product or accessories, will please communicate with the manager of the Southern Hotel, Columbus, Ohio. The League will hold its convention on the 15th and 16th of September. We welcome all manufacturers, exchanges and others interested in the motion picture business. The afternoon of the second day will be an open meeting for a general discussion. Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday forenoon will be strictly an executive meeting for the motion picture exhibitors who are members of the League, paid up and in good standing. It is expected that the attendance at the convention on the 15th will be the largest ever held in the state owing to the many important matters which will come before the League for adjustment and agreement. The Ohio League will not only celebrate four years of its successful organization, but will make history for the League that will live for many years to come. There are over a thousand exhibitors in the state of Ohio and the League expects not less than 550 in attendance.

M. A. NEFF,
President,
JOHN H. BROOMHALL,
Secretary,
Ohio State Branch No. 1 of the M. P. E. L. of A.

PARAMOUNT TO TRY NATIONAL ADVERTISING.

Announcement is made by the Paramount Pictures Corporation, distributor for the Famous Players, Bosworth, Inc., and Lasky Features, that it will come out with a double-page advertisement in the September 5 issue of the Saturday Evening Post, to be followed by full-page advertisements each month. This is to be supplemented by advertising in other magazines of national scope. Belief is expressed that this campaign will have the effect of improving picture theater conditions.

KLEINE OPTICAL COMPANY WILL NOT INCREASE CARBON PRICES.

In this season of the general increase in prices of commodities of all kinds, The Kleine Optical Company announces that its stock of carbons will be sold at regular retail prices until exhausted. Unlike a number of supply houses, no advantage will be taken of theater owners to institute a general raise on stocks purchased at the usual figure before the war. Carbons are being sold in limited quantities to single purchasers.

"The Fair Rebel"

Receives First Presentation at Opening of Adelphi Theater Tuesday Evening—Other Features Shown.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

A LARGE and happy gathering was present Tuesday evening, August 25, at the opening of the new Adelphi Theater, Broadway and 89th street, New York. The new house is spacious and built along the most improved lines for the picture playhouse. It has a seating capacity of 1,200, a splendid ventilating system and high frescoed ceiling and walls. A. J. Wolf and J. W. Springer of the Trio Amusement Company are sponsors for the new house.

The opening of the theater was highly successful in every particular. Invitations had been sent out freely to friends of the management and the seats were filled with delighted guests. The orchestra played a number of popular airs and following this many pictures, new and old, were thrown upon the screen.

Scene from "The Fair Rebel" (K. & E.-Bio.).

"The Fair Rebel," a three-reel Klaw & Erlanger-Biograph production, was the first of the new releases to be shown. In this was seen the perfected war photoplay, dealing with the Civil War period. This covers ground that has been touched many many times by other war dramas, but in completeness of setting, well-rounded plot and convincing realism but few offerings have equaled this. The production shows exquisite care and foresight in almost every detail.

Scene from "The Fair Rebel" (K. & E.-Bio.).

The opening scenes are taken in the year 1860 at West Point, showing Stephen and his chum, Ezra, together as classmates. Bronson, the Plebe, who plays an important part in subsequent proceedings, is also introduced in the romantic atmosphere of the famous military institution.

Prior to the outbreak of the war is also shown the Southern home of Stephen's sister, Clairette, a beautiful plantation setting. The girl, who plays the name part of "The Fair Rebel," is an ardent confederate, and runs up the rebel flag during the visit of some confederate officers. Captain de Perrin, the Frenchman who after appears as the villain of the piece, is also introduced in the early scenes.

The war engagements are shown in a vivid, realistic way. The plot is merged into these scenes in a pleasing manner. The meeting of the former chum before the Southern home, one a victorious commanding officer and the other a prisoner, was dramatic and made the most of. The views of rat-infested Libby Prison, both interior and exterior, were undoubtedly accurate. The hero's escape, aided by Clairette and Bronson, was the result of a well-devised plan.

Throughout this production are numerous minor touches, depicting the tragedy and comedy of the times in a commendable way. The photography is smooth and clear in almost every scene.

Among the other features shown at the opening of the Adelphi were an Essanay entitled "Two Men Who Waited" and "Jess of the Mountain Country," a new Shubert release.

A PICTURE WITH A PURPOSE.

The Great Northern Film Company's big production of "Lay Down Your Arms," which is about to be released, is a picture with a great purpose. It presents the most powerful message for peace ever advanced, by its terribly realistic portrayal of the horrors of war. No one can witness its exhibition and see the awful carnage on the battlefields and the miseries that war brings into the homes of combatants, without becoming a bitter censor of war and an enthusiastic advocate of peace. The picture deals with the greatest problem of all times and is destined to accomplish much toward advancing the cause of universal peace throughout the world.

The book of "Lay Down Your Arms" has been aptly termed the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of European literature, so forcibly does it describe the reigning menace of Europe. As "Uncle Tom's Cabin" exposed the chief evil of America at the time of its publication, so does "Lay Down Your Arms" expose the principal evil in Europe, but while slavery was abolished in this country, war still flourishes abroad.

Baroness Von Suttner's novel once caused a famous European ruler to issue a manifesto of peace, so moved was he by the narrative. What effects the picture, which is far more vivid even than the book, will cause, is now a matter for speculation.

HOUSE PETERS MARRIED.

The news has leaked out that House Peters, the New York motion picture actor who has just concluded his contract with the California Motion Picture Corporation at San Rafael, Cal., recently joined the ranks of the benedicts. This will be a sad blow to the host of matinee girls who have been showering the popular actor with letters of admiration.

Peters' wife is a New York girl who came out to join him at San Rafael. It is understood that the couple will take an extensive honeymoon before the husband returns to the "movies."

KLEINE TO RELEASE NEW FIVE-PART SUBJECT.

"The Woman Who Dared" is the title of an exceptionally strong five-part subject to be released by George Kleine through his branch offices early next month. The story centers about a daring and successful effort of an officer's wife to free him from the charge of high treason. The film features a splendidly sensational race between an automobile and a passenger train, has many charming glimpses of circus life, and shows throughout a carefully prepared scenario and a deftly executed climax that marks it a master-picture of its kind.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE POISON POOL."

The Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., by splendid judgment, has selected as its next release, a picture entirely different and distinct from those that have gone before, "The Mystery of the Poison Pool," in which is featured the famous actor, James Gordon.

This play is from the pen of James Dawley, who has written some of the greatest successes in moving picturedom. The whole five reels fairly teem with daring and exciting scenes.

Betty Harte, who has taken leading roles with the Famous Players and who for years was star for the Selig and other prominent companies, takes the leading woman's part, and for fine acting cannot be surpassed.

CHICAGO LETTER

BY JAS. S. McQUADE

NOW is the time when the best interests of the moving picture industry in this country demand the hearty co-operation of all concerned; when the general good of the trade—and not individual selfish ends—should receive chief consideration. The European war has created conditions that will work hardship in many ways, unless an altruistic attitude is taken in business relations between the various departments of the trade.

To mention only one of these temporary hardships—the shortage in carbons—there should be a disposition on the part of wholesale houses and distributors to make the burden as easy as possible for exhibitors. To take advantage of the limited stock of carbons in the country by boosting prices just now will surely re-act on the wholesale firms and supply houses that do so.

It is to the credit of Charles L. Kiewert, sole importer in the United States of Bio carbons, that his prices were never raised while his stock on hand lasted. He had shipments on three steamers for delivery in New York, and the vessels were well on their voyages when they were recalled to Hamburg by wireless, in the latter part of July. Mr. Kiewert desires to correct the statement, recently made in a trade paper, that he had sufficient carbons on hand to last him for six months. The statement would have been true had the shipments mentioned been landed in New York.

The prices of Electra carbons to supply houses in Chicago were raised immediately after the declaration of war, and the prices now quoted show an increase of 33 1/3 per cent.

The National Carbon Co., of Cleveland, has given out that it had on hand, at the outbreak of the war, a small stock of carbons and that a number of rapid orders exhausted its entire holdings. This company has instructed the heads of its factories to go ahead immediately and manufacture on a large scale. This is now being done, and it is expected that a large stock will be ready in about six weeks.

The Kleine Optical Co., the largest firm in the country handling machines, accessories and supplies, has made no change—nor will it make any—in the regular listed prices for carbons, while the stock on hand lasts, giving preference, of course, to steady customers.

One supply house in the city recently charged an exhibitor $9 for one hundred 5/8-in. by 12-in. carbons, nearly 100 per cent. increase on the regular price. This firm has been blacklisted by the members of the Chicago branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

A little altruism—a little thought for the other fellow—will pay in the long run.

Concerning the Titles of Films.

In a recent issue of the Chicago Tribune, the accompanying article, which treats of moving picture titles, merits careful reading by all who are responsible for the inappropriate names given some picture subjects:

Every once in a while some editorially minded person raises his voice via his typewriter in regard to the sensationalism and inappropriateness of many of the titles bestowed upon motion pictures to their public discredit.

But in all the din of the "biggest thing yet" put on and the train wrecks and automobile smashups and airship ascents and deep sea dives for the sake of instilling thrills into the celluloid, these modest protests have been quite overlooked, and companies go on releasing pictures under names about as attractive and suitable as a fur coat in August.

The editorially minded folks aren't the only ones who notice this, however. Exhibitors, with their fingers catching every beat of the public pulse, have the matter of names down in their diagnosis of public taste.

Two of them were consulting their lists of films the other day. Mr. A., skimming through the names with exhibitorial comment, as to the worth of the pictures, stumbled and stopped.

"The Lure of the Car Wheel," he exclaimed. "Now, say, can you imagine a car wheel with a lure?"

"No, but the Reliance got one last week called 'Blue Pete's Escape.' Can you think of anything much worse than that?" replied Mr. B.

"In that 'Hand of Horror' Edison put out about as rotten a title for a good picture as anything I ever saw," commented Mr. A.

There might have been more titular criticism if an interruption hadn't happened just then. But in that much there is the straight stuff of honest, off-hand opinion, not biased by any editorial finickism. It will be a happy day for every one when there is just as much care applied to supplying a photoplay with a creditable title as to killing the villain dead in a hard struggle, without incapacitating him for future villainies.

Fort Dodge Exhibitors Stick Together.

James Martin, manager of the Magic Theatre Co., Ft. Dodge, Ia., made a pleasant call at the Chicago office Thursday, Aug. 20th. Mr. Martin has been with the Magic Theater for one year, and during that time has had great success. He informed me that the "Adventures of Kathlyn" was shown to very prosperous business throughout the entire series. Thus far he has shown up to the eighth of the series of "The Million Dollar Mystery," and is quite satisfied with the returns.

Ft. Dodge exhibitors have set an example that might well be followed by exhibitors of other states. Instead of engaging in ruinous competition, the managers got together and agreed upon the number of reels for a program and the price to be charged. They agreed that four reels constituted a liberal 10-cent program, and in cases of features of five and six reels, from 15 to 20 cents is charged.

Ft. Dodge has a population of 18,000 people and four moving picture theatres—the Magic Theatre, the Princess, Empire and the Majestic. The Magic seats 465 people on the ground floor and balcony; the Princess seats 800 on ground floor and balcony; the Empire, 840, ground floor, and the Majestic, 420, ground floor.

The good people of Ft. Dodge are thoroughly satisfied with the censorship of the National Censorship Board, and, of course, each manager looks out personally to see that there are no scenes that might offend any of his patrons.

Mr. Martin gets his service from the Omaha branch of the General Film Co., and also draws on outside features, as he deems necessary. He changes his program daily, with the exception of serial stories and big features, which he runs two consecutive days. This plan worked very well with the "Adventures of Kathlyn," and it is also working well with "The Million Dollar Mystery." The plan is also popular with his patrons for big features.

Mr. Martin from the outset, as manager, has always believed in programs consisting of moving pictures only. Before he took hold of the Magic it had been a vaudeville house, and later ran stock. He offered pictures only from the beginning, and the house has played to fine paying business ever since. The Princess shows pictures only throughout the year, except for several months in the winter season, when one or two legitimate acts are used with each program, the price of admission during these months being 25 cents and up. The Empire and Majestic show nothing but pictures.

Mr. Martin is highly optimistic over the outlook for fall business in Fort Dodge.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Frank W. Redfield, manager of the Atlanta branch of the General Film Company, spent two weeks in the city recently, during which time he visited numerous friends and attended to business connected with his office. Mr. Redfield was booking manager for ten years with the old Essanay exchange on North Clark Street. When that exchange closed as one of the Chicago branches of the General Film Company, Mr. Redfield was appointed manager of the Milwaukee branch. Mr. Redfield reported excellent business in Atlanta and tributary territory. He returned to Atlanta Monday, Aug. 24.

* * *

A. F. Stang, owner of the Ogden Theatre, 1114 W. 63rd St., this city, paid the Chicago office a visit last week and renewed his subscription for the World. He also bought a Motion Picture Handbook. The Ogden offers Mutual programs consisting of four reels for five cents, and Mr. Stang stated that he was well pleased with the business.

* * *

A. G. Spencer, secretary of the General Feature Film Co., 5 So. Wabash Ave., this city, left for New York City Tuesday, Aug. 25, where he will buy and contract for feature films. During his stay in the Metropolis, which will be about two weeks, Mr. Spencer will look over the market generally. He will stop at the Knickerbocker Hotel.

* * *

A. T. Chado, owner and manager of the Albany Theatre, 3317 Montrose Blvd., this city, favored us with a call last week, and renewed his subscription for the World and purchased a Motion Picture Handbook. Mr. Chado reported fair business. The Albany seats 300 people, and uses Universal service, five cents being charged for a program of four reels.

* * *

Out of 235 applicants for the position of moving picture censor who took up the civil service examination June 9 and 12, 25 succeeded in passing. Ten of this number will be selected to form the incoming Chicago censor board.

* * *

A mischievous boy came near creating a serious panic at the Grand Theatre, 1362 S. Halsted St., this city, one evening last week, by throwing a hat pin into an exhaust fan near the stage. The rapidly revolving fan struck the pin and sparks flew off, igniting the surrounding wood-work. Someone shouted, "Fire!" and the entire audience jumped from their seats in alarm. Joseph Feingold, manager, succeeded in calming the excited people, and ordered the fan stopped. The fire was extinguished easily and the program was continued, no damage being sustained by anyone present. Of course, the mischievous boy could not be found.

* * *

Alfred Hamburger has completed arrangements whereby "Cabiria" will open at the Ziegfeld Sunday, Aug. 30, at the conclusion of its run at the Illinois, where it has been since June 18.

* * *

On Thursday and Saturday nights last week, the "Safety First" campaign was continued at the Concert Court in Jackson Park, where two reels showing street traffic conditions in London, Paris and Berlin were run off. Captain C. C. Healey, of the Traffic Squad, and H. L. Brownell, safety inspector of the Chicago Surface Lines, delivered appropriate lectures.

* * *

There is a great demand just now in the smaller cities for Kathlyn Williams' own story of "In Tune with the Wild," in which she took the leading part, served as sole director, and for which she wrote the scenario.

* * *

The Style Show, displayed several evenings during the week of Monday, Aug. 17, at Medinah Temple, and caught by the cameraman of the Commercial Filmers, of Chicago, attracted much attention. The films were made for the use of merchants in other cities throughout the country, to show their townsfolk. The pageant, comprised of the pacing models on the platform, showing a display of the costumes worn, was taken by the cameraman, 6,000 feet of film being used. This length, however, will be pruned down fully one-half.

Miss Augusta Anderson

MISS AUGUSTA ANDERSON, the attractive leading woman with the Perriot Film Company, began her career as a photoplayer with the Famous Players Film Company, appearing in one of the early releases of that concern. Previous to taking up picture playing Miss Anderson had received considerable instruction in dramatic work and had gained much actual experience with David Belasco's company, with which she was connected for some time.

Miss Augusta Anderson.

From her early 'teens Miss Anderson has been ambitious along dramatic lines. She began as a student in the best dramatic school in Washington, D. C., her home town, and studied with Miss Kate Wilson, teacher of elocution in the Washington College of Music. Under this training her voice showed great promise and she became so efficient in both dramatic and vocal rendition that she was given such leading roles as Micharla in Carmen, Clotilde in Norma and Mimi in La Boheme when those operas were produced by the students of the Washington College.

Soon after a real opportunity came to Miss Anderson in the way of a position in one of Mr. Belasco's companies and it was under that master's personal direction that she gained actual knowledge of stage technique not otherwise obtained at any price. Her work in the pictures has since reflected that period of instruction.

Miss Anderson is of the blond type and has most expressive gray eyes; she is just as interesting as she is pretty, and a very hard and earnest worker. Her favorite pleasure is motoring, and when at home she is a familiar figure gliding along the Potomac speedway in an attractive high-powered car. Her work in the recent releases of the Perriot Film Company indicates that she will soon come into her proper place in picturedom.

Forthcoming Lasky Features

THE activities of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, Inc., throughout the coming winter season is shown in a pre-season announcement made by Samuel Goldfish, head of the Lasky Company. All Lasky features will be released through the Paramount Pictures Corporation, the first of which will be "The Virginian," in which Dustin Farnam is playing the title role. This production will be released Sept. 7th. Following "The Virginian" will come the second production in which Edward Abeles participates, George Randolph Chester's familiar fiction work, "The Making of Bobby Burnit," which as a play, enjoyed wide popularity, and in its book form reached the sale of several million.

Samuel Goldfish.

"What's His Name," based on George Barr McCutcheon's book, in which Max Figman and Lolita Robertson, recently seen in "The Man on the Box" are playing, will follow "Bobby Burnit," while "The Man From Home," the big Liebler success, will be issued by the Lasky Company in October. Charles Richman, recently remembered as the star of "Help Wanted," will play the role of Mr. Pike in "The Man From Home." Robert Edeson, who made his first appearance on the screen in the Lasky production of "The Call of the North," will be seen in a five reel feature, "Where the Trail Divides," during the early part of November, and following "Where the Trail Divides" will come "The Ring Master," with Theodore Roberts, based on McCutcheon's book, "The Rose in the Ring."

Other plays from the Lasky studios will be David Belasco's productions, including "The Warrens of Virginia," "The Rose of the Rancho," "Darling of the Gods," "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," "Girl of the Golden West," "Years of Discretion," and "The Return of Peter Grimm."

Other stars already engaged and announced by Mr. Goldfish as future Lasky players are Charles Cherry, the former Frohman star; Edna Goodrich, the international beauty, and Bessie Barriscale, until recently leading woman in the Belasco stock company.

SPECIAL FILM CO. SUED.

Panagiotes J. Demas, a Pittsburgh, Pa., exhibitor, has filed suit in the New York Supreme Court for the recovery of $5,000 from Julius Dreher, Robert Spiegel and Benjamin Cohen, conducting the Special Film Co., Ltd., at 5 West 14th street.

The complaint alleges that on November 3 last Demas became interested in the Special Film Co. and he claims that he was urged by the defendants to purchase capital stock in the company, they, he claims, representing to him that they were earning a large amount of money, that they had sixty feature films worth from $200 to $300 apiece and 200 single reel subjects and 75 machines and factory equipment at their plant in 14th street. It is also claimed that fifty exhibitors took films from them and paid $40 a week for the service.

Demas claims that the shares he purchased are worthless and that the representations made to him prior to the purchase of the stock were false. The Special Film Co. has twenty days in which to file an answer to the allegations in Demas' complaint.

LUBIN TO PRODUCE "THE SPORTING DUCHESS."

Rose Coghlan has signed a contract with the Lubin Manufacturing Company to play the leading role in "The Sporting Duchess," which the firm will produce as a moving picture. The direction of the melodrama has been assigned to Barry O'Neil, who will select a great cast from the pick of the Studio companies. Some years ago "The Sporting Duchess" was brought direct from the Drury Lane Theater, London, and had a phenomenal run in New York and other large cities, Miss Coghlan being the star. The production will be made without regard to expense and promises to surpass the original stage version.

"Detective Swift"

Three-Reel Eclectic Production Introduces Manager McGraw of New York Giants as Sleuth.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THAT the calm, enigmatic countenance of a great baseball manager is a proper one for portraying a detective role is well proven by John J. McGraw in this three-reel Eclectic offering. In this entertaining around-the-world chase after a famous crook, the Giants' inscrutable manager moves easily and convincingly in the part of Detective Swift. It is an offering that will please baseball fans everywhere, and for that matter picturegoers in general.

Frank McGlynn, who wrote the scenario, appears as the crook, Jacques Renault, alias Count Otronski. The observer is at once plunged into the plot. Otronski meets a wealthy Mrs. Henderson at a reception, spots her pearl necklace, and at 3 o'clock the next morning enters the house and steals same. Alice, the maid, is suspected and she and Mrs. Henderson testify excitedly at police headquarters.

Scene from "Detective Swift" (Eclectic).

After the preliminary investigation Detective Swift is called. He takes up the case in a cool, confident manner, obtains finger prints and a laundry mark by which he traces the alleged count to his former boarding house. But the bird has flown and a chase around the world begins.

Scene from "Detective Swift" (Eclectic).

Most of the scenes of particular interest were taken on the recent trip of the New York Giants to the Far East. All are well photographed. The story, as usually occurs in productions of this kind, strings out and becomes secondary to the scenic effects. Views of Cairo, Heliopolis and other Egyptian cities are shown, also the Lybian desert, the pyramids, and Mosque of Mohammed. One of the best scenes is where Otronski negotiates with the Bedouins to detain Detective Swift, so he can rejoin the widow on the boat with whom he is infatuated. The Bedouins capture the sleuth, but release him after seeing he wears a ring presented him in New York by Sheik Hassan.

Detective Swift succeeds in reaching the steamer and makes Otronski his prisoner. Later the widow, Mrs. Gerard, sends him a large check for keeping her name out of the affair. The detective turns this over to the maid, which gives a pretty close to the story.

The women in the cast are Estelle Coffyn, Mae Tunnison, Mrs. Hans Lobert and Lucy Leach.

There are no big dramatic moments in this production. Such few opportunities as there are for suspense were skimmed over rather hurriedly owing perhaps in some measure to the frequent changes of scene. But the personality of the chief performers, the fine desert settings and genuine Arabian steeds racing over the sands all serve to hold the attention closely. The acting is natural and pleasing throughout.

J. O. HOOLEY, THEATER FRANCAIS, MONTREAL.

A MONTREAL BOY who has made good is J. O. Hooley, now managing the Theater Francais, Montreal, one of the several Mark Brock houses in that city. Early in Mr. Hooley's life his family moved from the Canadian metropolis to Pullman, Ill. It was in that town that Jack Hooley at an early age started his career by making doughnuts in a bakery. One day Mr. Hooley sat down and did some hard thinking; he eventually came to the conclusion that there is dough and "dough." Of the former he had seen a good deal, but of the other there was an appalling scarcity. He therefore entered the show business, and at the age of sixteen young Hooley was property man in the Arcade Theater, Pullman. The sawdust ring appealed to Mr. Hooley, and he left the Arcade to tour Illinois with Small's cirus. Leaving the circus he started in the theatrical business again, and, step by step, he worked himself up till his employers observed his worth and placed in his charge the Valentine Theater, Toledo, Ohio. He conducted the affairs of that house very capably, and was the first manager to introduce girl ushers in that city. Mr. Hooley then managed houses in Dayton, Detroit, Kansas City, Cincinnati, and Indianapolis.

J. O. Hooley.

The Francais has been under Mr. Hooley's management for the last six years. When he took over the management of that theater he changed its policy from melodrama to high-class vaudeville and photoplays. Thanks to Mr. Hooley the Francais now holds an enviable position among Montreal theaters. Some ten months ago Mr. Hooley left the Francais to accept the position of general manager of Warner's Features for Canada. However, he is back with his old love again, making the Francais more and more popular because of its manager's geniality and good programs.

SAWYER IN CANADA.

Sawyer, Inc., this week opened Zone Five in Montreal. The office, which is handled by the B. C. Feature Co., is located in the New Birks Building, in Montreal and will handle the bookings for Eastern Canada. Mr. Buckland and Mr. Cobb, the owners of the B. C. Feature Co., are hustlers and have already established a fine following amongst the Canadian exhibitors. Mr. Buckland has been in New York the past week settling all arrangements for the establishment of Sawyer Zone Five. The B. C. Feature has also made a tentative arrangement to handle Zone 25 at Winnipeg, thus giving the entire Canadian territory for the Sawyer output.

WAR FILMS ARRIVE VIA CANADA.

The war scenes which are being released by the European Current Event Film Company, room 903 Candler Building, have just been brought over by their European representative, who reached New York via Canada.

"The Littlest Rebel"

The Initial Production of the Photoplay Company, in Six Parts, Is a Good Picture.

Reviewed by George Blaisdell.

IN "The Littlest Rebel" the Photoplay Productions Company begins business with a good picture. On Wednesday evening at Keith's Crescent Theater, Brooklyn, where the subject was shown during the week of August 24, a good-sized house followed the full six reels with a silence indicative of interested attention. It is a man-to-man picture, the adult feminine lead passing out in the first half, and of course by reason of that fact it is none the easier to sustain popular interest. If during the first two-thirds the picture is interesting without measurably stirring the emotions there is a marked acceleration of dramatic force in the final third.

Scene from "The Littlest Rebel" (Photoplay).

There are four characters that stand out. E. K. Lincoln in the leading role of Herbert Carey, a Southern planter who on the outbreak of the Civil War becomes Captain Carey, holds the sympathy by consistently good work. William J. Sorrelle as Lieutenant-Colonel Morrison, the Northerner who gets into trouble when he issues a pass to Captain Carey to go through the Union lines, has a fine part and strongly plays it. Little Mimi Yvonne, the Littlest Rebel, is not of course the whole show, but she monopolizes a lot of it—that is, together with the doll the raiment of which declines in appearance just as does that of its little owner's. Martin Reagan gives a good performance as Uncle Billy, the slave of Carey and the protector of Mrs. Carey when the head of the house is in the field.

The picture is clearly photographed and well finished; the effective tinting gives variety to the eye. There are scenes of soldiers in conflict; the goodly number of men employed are judiciously placed over a wide range of country and provide a series of pictures that have an especial timely interest—and, what is better, they are convincing.

"The Littlest Rebel" is a human story and a praiseworthy one. It is a story that will be popular in the South—where it was made, by the way—even more than in the North. In the final scenes, where appeal is made to General Grant to save the lives of the Union colonel and the Confederate Captain, there is a delicate blending of pathos and comedy and stern drama. When the strain is tense the Littlest Rebel turns up her nose at Grant. There's a chuckle comes through the gulp. The cast:

Lieut. Harris, the lawyer ..... Frederick Fleck
Lieut.-Col. Morrison ..... Wm. J. Sorrelle
Joe Dudley, the overseer ..... Paul Pilkington
Jim Dudley, his brother ..... Bert S. Frank
Uncle Billy, a faithful slave ..... Martin Reagan
Herbert Carey, a southern planter ..... E. K. Lincoln
Mrs. Carey, his wife ..... Estelle Coffin
Sally Ann, a slave ..... Elaine Ivans
Virgie, Carey's daughter ..... Mimi Yvonne

AINSWORTH WITH MAJESTIC THEATER.

C. R. Ainsworth, who was formerly connected with the Pittsburgh, Pa., branch of the George Kleine Attractions, has associated himself in a managerial capacity with the Majestic Theater, Streator, Ill., of which house C. A. Day is the proprietor. Mr. Ainsworth has had years of experience in the show business, a qualification which makes him a valuable acquisition to the Majestic Theater.

BEAUTY PRODUCTS IN DEMAND.

The "Beauty" productions being released by the American Film Mfg. Co. are meeting with general approval among the exhibitors throughout the country. The one and three sheet lithos issued allow more extensive advertising and insure the exhibitor a full house. Harry Pollard plays the lead with Margarita Fischer playing opposite, and the two make an exceptional pair. There are being prepared at the present time a number of subjects on the order of "Withering Roses," "The Other Train," etc., which have proven unusual successes.

NEW PICTURE OF FAMOUS PICTURE MAKERS.

The accompanying illustration is the very latest picture of the Miller Bros.' 101-Ranch company, taken under interesting circumstances. When this company isn't producing some of the greatest wild west pictures on earth to be released through Warner's Features, Inc., it is generally giving one of the best wild west shows on earth. The company happened to be in Dayton, Ohio, recently, at the same time A. M. Muller, manager of Warner's Features Cincinnati Exchange, was in that city. Mr. Muller's eagle eye saw an advertising opportunity. He conspired with Joe Miller. They had a big banner made, reading: "Miller Bros.' 101 Ranch—Cowboys and Indians—appearing in—Warner's Features," then the entire outfit paraded through the city and back to the show grounds, where Mr. Muller had a photographer on hand. Joe Miller, the star of the troupe, is at the left of the banner holding a pony on which is seated one of the little "big chiefs" frequently appearing in Warner's Features. Mr. Muller is the man wearing a straw hat beside Mr. Miller.

Scene at Miller Brothers' 101-Ranch Show.

Grand Opera Weds "The Movies"

Opening of Oscar Hammerstein's Lexington, New York City, An Event of Exceptional and Significant Interest.

THE "extreme ultimate" is at hand. Grand opera and "the movies" have been wedded. The formal ceremony was performed at the palatial home of the father of the bride, Hammerstein's Lexington, New York City, at eight on the evening of Friday, August 21, in the presence of more than 3,000 invited guests. The house was beautifully decorated with potted plants and cut flowers. Music for the occasion was provided by a symphony orchestra of fifty pieces under the direction of Max Hirschfeld and a grand pipe organ played by A. Bimboni. The bride, "Grand Opera," was given away by Oscar Hammerstein, doughty little impresario of international repute, in a neat little speech which may be fairly said to have been more impressive than have been any other combination of weighty words which have gone forth from behind the footlights in New York City in many a day. The newly wedded couple will publicly "honeymoon" at the Lexington for an indefinite period —depending entirely upon how long those who care to pay admission to witness the performance show the proper interest.

All of which is one manner of telling that on Tuesday evening, August 21, there came to pass in New York City something which as recently as three years ago would have been spoken of as impossible—namely, the presentation of the "despised" motion pictures and the "high brow" grand opera on the identical bill of entertainment.

Amusement people pretty generally know that Oscar Hammerstein, who is given to trying more things thought impossible than any other promoter in the entertainment field, began the construction of a new home for grand opera on Lexington Avenue between Fiftieth and Fifty-first streets more than a year ago. His plan was to popularize the works of the old masters by presenting them at prices within the reach of all. In the face of the opposition of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera House, who claimed that he was violating an agreement made with them at the time they purchased Mr. Hammerstein's interests in the Manhattan in New York, the work was pushed to completion. The building was made a perfect gem for the purpose intended, it was given a splendid equipment of scenery necessary to the production of grand opera, and distinguished artists were engaged for the productions after a careful survey of the field not only in this country but in Europe.

With everything in readiness for an opening with grand opera, the Metropolitan people were successful in preventing Mr. Hammerstein from beginning operations as he had planned.

He was left with a grand opera house on his hands, grand opera stars under contract, a tremendously expensive scenic equipment and, as the saying goes, with "no place to go."

In days not long agone, his natural turn would have been to a form of amusement closely related to the theatrical—a big spectacle, wild melodrama, musical comedy, or something of this nature. It is notable and significant, therefore, that in August of 1914 Mr. Hammerstein, who does nothing without careful thought and mature consideration, decided upon a union of his pet obsession, grand opera, and "the movies."

Only time can determine the wisdom of his choice. Certainly it would seem that the prospects of success were not the brightest because of the tremendous expense involved and the extreme liberality of the policy adopted. But just as certainly does it appear that if the Lexington's policy fails, another commendable move to give the public something well worth while will have died from a death blow delivered by that "unappreciative public" which is so often heard of in the amusement business.

The Lexington seats 3,100 people on its main floor, three balconies, and in its two sets of boxes, five high, one on either side of the immense stage. Built as a home for grand opera which attracts people of culture, refinement and exceptional taste, its interior has been beautifully decorated. Every modern device in theater construction to make the house comfortable and safe has been employed.

The following program offered on the opening night is self explanatory of the policy which Mr. Hammerstein has elected to follow:

Overture—Lexington Concert Orchestra under the direction of Max Hirschfeld.

Keystone Comedy, "Plain Country Folks."

Grand Organ Recital (Selections from Grand Opera and the Instrumental Classics), by A. Bimboni.

Scientia Film (Eclair Co.), "The Chrysanthemum," in natural colors, and "Niagara Falls."

Scene of Act IV of "Aida," introducing the following soloists: Mme. C. Sirish, soprano; G. Tricario, tenor; D. Solimon, baritone; S. P. Vernon, basso.

Eclectic Film Co. Feature, "The Last Volunteer," in five parts (exhibited for the first time in America).

Scene from Act III of "Faust," introducing the following soloists: Mme. C. Sirish, soprano; D. Solimon, baritone; G. Simondet, tenor; S. P. Vernon, basso.

Vitagraph Comedy, "The Honeymooners."

The pictures, which people in the trade will recognize as a first choice of all available material, were faultlessly projected.

The scenes from the operas, which were the unusual feature of the bill, were presented in precisely the same manner in which they would have been had they been a part of a performance at the Metropolitan Opera House at admission prices mounting to the skies. The soloists were in costume and appeared in full stage settings of the most elaborate nature.

The musical accompaniment for both the pictures and the grand opera tabloids was of a kind which, it is safe to state, has never before been provided in any theater in which moving pictures are shown. The orchestra which Mr. Hammerstein's wide knowledge of classical music has enabled him to assemble is a particularly fine one and the organ which has been installed in the house at a cost of $50,000 is said to be one of the finest instruments ever constructed.

The Lexington plans to offer a complete change of program each week, the bills being patterned after the one used to open the house and consisting of one feature photoplay extraordinary, an educational subject, two of the best available photoplay comedies, and two scenes from grand opera. There are to be two performances each week day and three each Sunday with admission prices fixed at ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents for the main body of the house and fifty cents for the boxes. As noted on the program, the house staff is as follows: Lyle D. Andrews, general manager and treasurer; Fred L. Brennage, "pictorial manager;" Max Hirschfeld, conductor of orchestra; A. Bimboni, organist, and Henry Steinman, chief electrician.

The opening invitation performance was attended by practically every person of consequence in the amusement world in New York City. Impresarios whose chief interest has been in grand opera were there to see just how an audience assembled with "the movies" as a bait would take to a performance given by grand opera stars. Managers and producers in the so-called legitimate branch of the profession were on hand to express amazement as to how Mr. Hammerstein hoped to "get by." Big photoplay producers had come to rejoice at this new proof that "the movies" were being more seriously considered than ever.

The scene from "Aida" was received with tumultuous applause. The artists responded to curtain calls galore—and they showed only too plainly that they were fully as much pleased with the plaudits of that Lexington audience as they would have been had their efforts inspired a more dignified and polite fluttering of white gloves on the finely groomed hands of an equal number of people assembled at the Metropolitan. The applause was only stilled by one of the artists dragging Oscar Hammerstein from the wings to make his impressive little speech.

The inspiration was there for something worth while. The audience was enthused and certainly the man whose efforts had made their enthusiasm possible must have been. Mr. Hammerstein said that he regretted very much that he had not found it possible to carry out his original plan of presenting grand opera on the great East Side of New York at prices within the reach of all, but felt that the reception which was being accorded the program at the Lexington indicated, to a degree at least, that the public was appreciative of what he was trying to do. Philosophising, he said that none of us could hope to succeed in life unless he paid some attention to providing happiness for others. "My business at present," continued the man who endeared himself to New Yorkers with his Manhattan Opera House enterprise and later squandered thousands of dollars in an uplift movement for Londoners who could see only Covent Gardens grand opera, "is to provide happiness for others; if the Lexington and its program provides happiness for the people of the Great East Side I, in turn, will be happy—and I will thank you for it."

Alco Another Big Combine

One Million and a Half in Capital to Provide Exhibitors with "Everything They Need"—Five Producing Companies Interested.

DEVELOPMENTS of the past few weeks which have been made quietly and were brought to a culmination Tuesday, August 25, have added to the lists in the motion picture industry another combination which promises to become an important factor in the development of the business during the season which is about to begin.

With Al Lichtman's Alco Film Co., Inc., as the nucleus, there has been formed the Alco Film Corporation, a combination of a number of important and established feature film producing companies and the Atsco Company, widely known as one of the biggest picture equipment supply houses in the country. The capitalization of the new concern is announced as $1,500,000.

In a general way, it may be said the plan of the new Alco corporation is to provide motion picture exhibitors throughout the country with everything they need in the conduct of their business, that is, not only features of merit to attract patronage but also everything necessary in the way of mechanical and electrical equipment. The features will come from the combined producing companies and the electrical and mechanical equipment from the Atsco Company. "All the exhibitor who starts with us will need," one of the interested parties puts it, "will be the bare four walls of his theater."

Walter Hoff Seeley, principal owner of the Atsco Company, is president of the new corporation; Al Lichtman, who has most recently been president and general manager of the Alco Film Co., Inc., is vice-president and general manager; William Sievers, secretary and treasurer of the New Grand Central Theatre Co. in St. Louis, is treasurer of the big combination, and William H. Wright, previously known in the amusement world as treasurer of the Excelsior Feature Film Co., is secretary of the Alco corporation. By virtue of their official connection with the company, the foregoing are also members of the Board of Directors, in addition to Edmond Koelm, Collector of the City of St. Louis, and James J. Reilly, owner of two prosperous theaters in Alton, Ill.; L. Lawrence Weber, the well-known New York theatrical producer; Samuel Newhouse, copper magnate, of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Robert Kane, general manager of the Atsco Company, New York City.

It is claimed for the Alco organization that it has been effected along lines distinctly novel in the film industry and there are evidences that the soundness of the plan of organization has been instrumental in lining up the important individual companies which are now announced as having joined the big combination. The problem of effective distribution is always the most important one which presents itself for solution and the Alco plan has been worked out as follows: Distributing centers in twenty ideally located cities in the country have been promoted. In each of these agencies or exchanges there will be interested a number of prominent exhibitors who will use the service provided by the parent company and whose influence in their respective communities is expected to go a great ways in convincing other exhibitors that the Alco service is of superior merit. The feature service will be cleared through these offices and, in addition, each office will be a branch sales room for the distribution of Alco equipment.

In dealing with the various feature producing companies the Alco corporation has contracted to take the entire output of each company for a period of five years. It is said that it has been agreed that none of the companies will make any releases through any other channels and that, as an important provision of the contract, no picture made by any of the companies which fails to come up to the required standard of merit will go any farther than the production stage. The Alco executives, it is said, are to pass upon all production plans before they are put into operation, that is, are to approve all scenarios, casts, etc.

Beginning October 5, the Alco concern will release one feature each week but it is announced that just as fast as additional contracts can be arranged with producing companies capable of producing the superior kind of pictures which will be insisted upon the output will be increased.

The producing companies that have become a part of the new combination are as follows: All Star Feature Corporation, California Motion Picture Corporation, Popular Plays and Players, Inc., Favorite Players' Film Co., and Excelsior Feature Film Co. The combination's initial announcement schedules the following releases: October 5, All Star Feature Corporation, Ethel Barrymore in "The Nightingale," by Augustus Thomas; October 12, California Motion Picture Corporation, Beatriz Michelena and House Peters in "Salomy Jane," by Paul Armstrong; October 19, Popular Plays and Players, Inc., Andrew Mack in "The Ragged Earl"; October 26, Favorite Players Film Co., Carlyle Blackwell in "The Key to Yesterday," by Charles Neville Buck; November 2, Excelsior Feature Film Co., Octavia Handworth in "Path Forbidden," by John B. Clymer; November 9, All Star Feature Corporation, Digby Bell in "The Education of Mr. Pipp," by Augustus Thomas; November 16, California Motion Picture Corporation, Beatriz Michelena and House Peters in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," by Alice Hegan Rice and Anne Crawford Flexner; November 23, Popular Plays and Players, Inc., Jacob P. Adler in "Michael Strogoff," by Jules Verne; November 30, Favorite Players Film Co., Carlyle Blackwell in "The Man Who Could Not Lose."

Al Lichtman, named as vice-president and general manager of the new corporation, seems to have been the principal promoter of the new corporation. The name "Alco," formed through the use of a part of his name for the purposes of his original Alco Film Co., Inc., has been retained in the organization of the new concern and when the corporation's new headquarters are established at No. 218 West Forty-second street in the near future, the building there will be renamed the Alco Building. Mr. Lichtman's earliest experience in the film game was with the Exhibitors' Advertising Co., of Chicago. Later he was associated with the Powers Motion Picture Co., still later as manager of the Monopol Film Co., which released some of the first features shown in the United States, and for a considerable period up until a few months ago with the Famous Players Film Co. in the capacity of sales manager.

Mr. Seeley is well known in the trade by reason of his association with the Atsco company. Treasurer Siever's theaters in St. Louis are among the best in the Mound City and one of them is spoken of as the finest photoplay house west of Chicago. William H. Wright, of the Excelsior Feature Film Co., secretary of the Alco corporation, is known in the commercial world as general manager of the W. S. Lloyd company, big importers and manufacturers of wall paper.

Harry Raver, President of the All Star Feature Corporation, has issued the following statement covering his company's affiliation with the Alco corporation:

"The All Star Feature Corporation has gone about the task of selecting its distributing agency for the coming year with great respect for those progressive exhibitors who have made heavy investments in large and important picture theaters throughout the American continent, and also for those representatives of programs, combinations and organizations who favored us by their offers for our product. But, we have always believed that the time would come when the manager of a theater representing an investment of from fifty to two hundred thousand dollars would realize that his investment would not be safe if he were not to keep his house open the year around, and to do this successfully he should be interested either directly or indirectly with the producer of the attraction itself.

"We are convinced that the plan of the Alco Film Company has to do with the situation just what we should like to see brought about, and we believe the large theater owners interested in the Alco possess the ability and experience to carry their splendid plan to a successful climax, at any rate the All Star Feature Corporation has definitely decided to distribute its productions through the Alco Film Company during the next five years, within Continental America and Canada."

RICHARD V. SPENCER IN EAST ON VACATION.

Richard V. Spencer, photoplay editor of the New York Motion Picture Company, arrived in town Tuesday, August 25, for a rest, claiming to be in ill health, although his appearance does not indicate that such is the real situation. He is accompanied by his father and mother. "Dick" has been free of the trammels of the editorial department since July 7, at which time on advice of his physician he left Los Angeles. He will not return to his desk until October 7. Mr. Spencer is wearing the same cap, or at least a first cousin to the same cap, that he brought here two years ago, at which time he attended at Coney Island the first photoplay dinner. He claims to have a regular hat in his luggage.

Epes Sargent says Mr. Spencer speaks carelessly of having written a thousand scripts in the last few years—Mr. Spencer says three a week is high enough, if we desire to be more exact. The script editor paid a most pleasant visit to the Moving Picture World office, in tow of E. W. S. The latter tried to induce Mr. Spencer to accompany him to Bellevue Hospital Clinic, but the westerner could not see it—as he said emphatically, "not in that company." Mr. Spencer intends to remain in New York until September 15.

Famous Players Anniversary

One Year Since the Inauguration of the Program That Created Feature History.

SEPTEMBER 1st marks the anniversary of the Famous Players Feature Program, the inauguration of the first regular program of feature films and the organization of the first systematic feature service, of which the present Paramount Pictures Corporation is the sequel.

Adolph Zukor.

The now celebrated "30 Famous Features," launched a year ago, created an entirely new branch of the motion picture art, and opened a novel field of endeavor for manufacturer, exchange and exhibitor that has been effective in elevating the motion picture and securing for it a greater degree of popularity than it could otherwise have attained.

This development of an original enterprise bears tribute to the vision and determination of one man—Adolph Zukor. The pioneer in the presentation of famous plays and celebrated stars in motion pictures, with a fervent confidence in the artistic and commercial possibilities of his plan, Adolph Zukor, has realized a success such as comes once in a generation.

The presentation of Sarah Bernhardt in "Queen Elizabeth," and James K. Hackett in his famous characterization, "The Prisoner of Zenda," is now tradition; and the extended policy of thirty releases a year that resulted from the demand created by these two subjects, and culminated in the plans of the Paramount organization, is the materialization of one man's determined purpose.

Mr. Zukor has always attributed the success of the Famous Players, not to his own initiative and energies, but to the organization; to the combined efforts of all, to the harmony that has characterized the entire progress of the company. With a liberality of mind thoroughly typical of the man, he contends that if it were not for the mechanical and artistic genius of Edwin S. Porter, the earnest efforts of Daniel Frohman, the dramatic mastery of Hugh Ford, and the various talents of all the other members of the organization, the Famous Players would never have attained the brilliant success it has achieved.

Mr. Zukor, moreover, extends the credit for the concern's record to the loyal and able efforts of Albert A. Kaufman, the energetic and popular studio manager; the scenario and advertising departments, in charge of B. P. Schulberg; Frank Meyer, laboratory superintendent; Richard Murphy, the noted scenic painter, whose masterly work has enriched many of the celebrated Famous Players' sets; William Reilly, whose knack of getting the right props in every set is a thing of wonder, and the many camera men, who, under the supervision of Mr. Porter, have created the high standard of photography for which the concern is noted.

During the past year the Famous Players have formed alliances with David Belasco, Henry W. Savage, Charles Frohman and Sir Henry Arthur Jones, all prominent in the theatrical world and whose creations and valuable theatrical properties have been placed at the disposal of the company. Through the advertisements in the trade papers the announcement of the increase from thirty to thirty-six releases a year is made and these productions will be directed by Edwin S. Porter, Hugh Ford, Allan Dwan, James Kirkwood and William T. Heffron.

GARWOOD PLAYING CHARACTERS.

William Garwood has two fine parts in which to give examples of his artistry and it is doubtful whether there is any actor on the screen today, who can express more by subdued action and the use of the eyes than Billy Garwood. In the "Cocoon and the Butterfly," he was the owner of a department store and in "Break, Break, Break," from the Tennyson poem, he appeared as an old man who saw incidents in his life unrolled. It is not often Garwood is seen in characters, yet he is a character actor of attainment.

LETTER TO MR. TRIGGER.

The following letter was addressed to Samuel H. Trigger, president of the New York Exhibitors' Association of the State and City of New York, by Secretary M. L. Fleischman of the New York State Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Up to the present writing Mr. Trigger has failed to reply to this communication and Secretary Fleischman authorizes its publication:

Samuel H. Trigger, President Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of New York State.

Dear Sir: At the convention of the International Motion Picture Association held in New York last June, it was upon your motion, which was unanimously carried, that a committee was elected to attend the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America at Dayton, Ohio, in July, for the purpose of using every honorable means to get all the exhibitors of the country united into one national organization.

Ever since the unfortunate split at the league convention in 1913, you had been consistently preaching "harmony" and "get together," writing numerous letters to exhibitors and trade papers throughout the country urging the consolidation of all exhibitors and organizations into one, so you were very properly chosen chairman of the committee to go to Dayton.

In response to your request, the Exhibitors' League at their convention appointed a committee to meet and act jointly with yours to devise a method by which we could all really get together.

Your committee made three demands as a condition to rejoining the league, viz.: first, that someone else than M. A. Neff be elected president; secondly, that the advocacy of state censorship be dropped and the national board of censorship be indorsed; and thirdly, that your association be given four members on the executive board to be named by your committee.

All your demands were finally granted and the following resolution adopted by the Exhibitors' League in convention assembled and accepted by your committee:

"That the suspension of any and all expelled members whether they be of the I. M. P. A. or otherwise, be lifted and that they be reinstated to the M. P. E. L. of America upon application to their respective state locals for initiation, the dues of such reinstated members to begin on their reinstatement, and that from the members of the I. M. P. A. so reinstated the incoming president is hereby instructed to appoint two (afterward increased to four) as members of the national board of the M. P. E. L. of America." (See page 547, Moving Picture World, July 25, 1914.)

I also desire to call your attention to the letter of Samuel Bullock, secretary of your committee, appearing on page 550, Moving Picture World, July 25, 1914, in which he says among other things addressed to the members of the I. M. P. A.: "Let every friend of the cause put his shoulder to the wheel. There is no longer any excuse or reason for remaining out of the parent body, or unattached. Let us again unite, co-operate and fight against the common enemy."

Now, Mr. Trigger, it is strictly up to you. Were you sincere or not? If yes, then there can be no other honorable course for you to pursue than to abide by the Dayton resolution made by your committee and accepted in good faith by the Exhibitors' League. Quit beating about the bush and apply for membership in the New York local and State branch of the Exhibitors' League and help to make the New York State branch the largest and most influential in the national organization.

The New York State branch and the New York local offers a hearty and sincere welcome to all exhibitors who were members of the I. M. P. A. or unattached.

It is our intention to call a meeting of New York local No. 1 next week and we hope to have you and all the members of your association present and ready to join us.

A convention of the New York State branch will be held in New York City during the early part of October, at which time all officers will be elected for the ensuing year. Respectfully,

M. L. FLEISCHMAN,
Secretary State Branch No. 11, M. P. E. L. of America.

Secretary Fleischman announces that a meeting of the New York Local No. 1 will be held at the Hotel McAlpin, New York, on Wednesday, September 9. All exhibitors desirous of affiliating with the League are requested to attend. The meeting will convene at 10.30 o'clock in the morning.

INSURANCE COMPANIES STOP "FLYING A" RACE.

The promised auto racing contest between George Field and Jack Richardson, whereby it was to be decided which is the better driver, has been altered. Both carry heavy accident policies and the local representatives of the accident insurance companies got wind of the race and threatened to cancel the policies if they persisted in racing. After due consideration, it was finally decided to hold the race, and the winner would be the one who could drive his machine the slowest to a given point. It was deemed safer and less expensive to kill the engines than the innocent spectators

Palmer War Sketches for Centaur

HARRY PALMER, the well-known cartoonist and war correspondent, sailed for Europe early last week in the interests of David Horsley and the Centaur Film Company of Bayonne, New Jersey. Mr. Palmer purposed to make directly for Liege, and he should, by this time, have reached his destination. It was his intention to get on the firing line with one of the regiments engaged and then to make a series of sketches of the actual combat. These sketches are to be arranged in consecutive order and will be photographed so as to make split reel and full reel subjects.

Harry Palmer.

Mr. Palmer, with two assistants, sailed under assumed names. A scheme has been devised whereby the sketches can be passed successfully by the war censors and rushed to this country. The first subject, if all plans carry, should reach the Centaur studios the latter part of September. The "Siege of Liege" will be the first of the series. Sketches of the scenes and mighty forts concerned in this frightful conflict were completed from photographs before Mr. Palmer left America, some of the actual battle grounds with their ruined battlements, abandoned machinery of war, heaps of dead, soldiers and horses, etc., exactly as they now appear.

Immediately after the Liege pictures have been completed, Mr. Palmer will force his way to the scene of whatever big military engagement may then be in progress and will—as long as he is fortunate enough to dodge promiscuous bullets—continue this line of action.

Mr. Palmer is known to newspaper readers everywhere as the author and artist of the Babbling Bess comics.

"BOY" (Eclair).

A most appealing and touching photoplay is that called "Boy," released by the Eclair Film Co., Inc., on Wednesday, September 9. This pretty drama of pathos and human frailties brings forth a clever juvenile artist in Master Charles Jackson, and Alec B. Francis contributes a wonderful piece of character acting. The story of a boy's love for a human derelict and the wonders which it works forms a most engrossing and interesting story of real life.

Scene from "Boy" (Eclair).

Varsity Theater

Excellent Picture House Opened by C. L. Mehrten in Berkeley, Cal., Has Seating Accommodations for 700.

THE city of Berkeley, one of San Francisco's most beautiful suburbs, possesses a number of moving picture houses of high merit, prominent among which is the Varsity theater, situated on San Pablo avenue, near University, in that part of the city known locally as West Berkeley. This was one of the first high grade houses of the kind to be opened in the College City, and through enterprising management has been kept well in the lead as a popular playhouse.

The building is a handsome one of brick, with a cement front, and was originally erected for the Turner & Dahnken Circuit. It has a full basement with dressing rooms under the stage, and is equipped with a modern heating system. One of the features of the house is the perfect ventilation, this being secured without the use of special apparatus. The structure is but a short distance from the bay shore, where there is always a breeze, and there has never been a time but that a satisfactory movement of air in the house could be secured by opening the ventilators.

Varsity Theater, Berkeley, Cal.

The Varsity theater is conducted by C. L. Mehrten, a pioneer in the moving picture business in California. That the programs are always apreciated may be judged from the fact that an addition is now being made to the rear of the building, which, when completed, will increase the seating capacity to over 700.

Fine projection and an excellent selection of pictures are two of the features that have made this house popular with amusement lovers. Mr. Mehrten is an expert operator and attends personally to this important work. The music is in charge of a splendid pianist and is one of the attractions of the place. The prices are 10 cents for adults and 5 cents for children, with occasionally a feature at 15 and 10 cents.

Mr. Mehrten enjoys the distinction of having been in the moving picture business in the State before there was a theater in either San Francisco or Los Angeles devoted exclusively to pictures. Conditions have rapidly changed during the past few years, but this exhibitor has kept pace with them and is one of the best informed men in the business. He has a wide acquaintance in the trade and his popularity is such that he has been called upon to fill the position of treasurer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of California, in the work of which organization he takes a keen interest.

F. O. NIELSEN VISITS NEW YORK.

F. O. Nielsen, of the Schiller Building, Chicago, was a most welcome visitor at the office of the Moving Picture World on Wednesday evening. Mr. Nielsen, who is booking "The Spoilers" in Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois, was in New York just for a couple of days. He had a bit of business to take care of, and a lot of friends to see. He reports "The Spoilers" going strong throughout his territory. He's pretty strong for the picture himself—having seen it run in its entirety sixteen times; and he still enjoys it. If enthusiasm and firm belief in the value of his goods count Mr. Nielsen is sure to clean up on his big feature.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

"ALL LOVE EXCELLING" (Eclectic).

Here is the story of a most noble love on the part of a woman, a love that causes her to make the greatest of sacrifices—that of her own happiness.

The action takes place both in the United States and Europe and some stirring scenes of the battle of Inkerman in the Crimea are introduced.

A fine cast, including Eleanor Woodruff, Crane Wilbur, Jack Standing and Edward Jose, the well known Pathe players, give an able interpretation to the story.

Lord Edward Litchfield is deeply in love with Beth, a beautiful American girl, but his father violently opposes his marriage to her. Going to the girl the old gentleman begs her to give up his son, saying that if she does not it will spoil the young man's career. Influenced by his pleading, she turns her back on her own happiness and tells Lord Edward that she no longer loves him. Wounded to the quick, the young man returns to his own country and later becomes engaged to a girl of whom his parents approve. Hearing of his approaching marriage, Beth writes him, asking for the return of her letters. Taking them to her in person, Lord Edward's old love for her returns and again he begs her to marry him. At the cost of much suffering she adheres to her resolve and again refuses him.

Scene from "All Love Excelling" (Eclectic).

Sometime later, meeting the Duc de St. Claire, a French nobleman, she inspires in him an ardent love which awakens no response in her, and she refuses him also. In his anger the Duke goes to the girl whom Lord Edward has married and slanders the friendship between Lord Edward and Beth. Overhearing the conversation, Beth reassures the girl, to the confusion of the Duke.

Years later Lord Edward's son, now a young man, while pursuing his studies in Paris, meets the niece of the Duc de St. Claire and falls in love with her. The Duke, remembering his old hostility to Lord Edward, writes his niece, ordering her to have nothing to do with young Litchfield.

The Crimean War breaks out and in his desperation the young man enlists and goes to the front, where the Duke is already stationed with his regiment. Beth, finding that her own sorrows are best forgotten by serving others, has joined the army as a Sister of Mercy. Young Litchfield is wounded and carried to the hospital. The Duke's letter is found upon him and thus Beth learns for the first time her patient's identity. Again sacrificing herself for others, she goes to the Duke and pleads for the young people's happiness. For her sake he gives his consent to their marriage and again begs Beth to listen to his own suit. But she holds fast to the life she has decided to follow and tells him that marriage is not for her and that she has no hope for happiness save in helping to alleviate the sufferings of humanity.

"BY WHOSE HAND" (Lubin).

In this two-reel picture George Terwilliger has excelled himself as a master of melodrama. The story, though modern and domestic, is worthy of the school of Bulwer romance. It depicts the hardships of a poverty-stricken aristocratic family. The cruel practice of the unscrupulous gambler and blackmailer and the wonderful faithfulness of the old family retainer who kills the persecutor of the family and gives up his own life in the cause. Mr. Terwilliger has also staged the drama with an excellent cast, including Arthur Matthews, Earl Metcalf, Herbert Fortier and Kempton Greene.

Scene from "By Whose Hand" (Lubin).

KLEINE RELEASES PHOTO DRAMA CO. FIRST PRODUCTION.

"The Lion of Venice," George Kleine's spectacular six-part story of Venice, is now ready for release through the various Kleine offices. This is the first production of the new Photo Drama Producing Company of Turin, Italy, in which Mr. Kleine is interested. "The Lion of Venice" was made at Venice, Italy, last winter under Mr. Kleine's personal direction, and among other splendid features, reproduces a naval battle between Venetian, Turkish and pirate fleets of the early 15th century. The story centers about a sea captain of Venice who returns home to find his sweetheart married in his absence to a powerful noble. To destroy him, the noble forges a letter purporting to be sent from the Grand Vizier of Turkey to the captain, giving him money for the Venetian war plans. How the captain is exiled from Venice with his sister; how his patriotism for his native land is stirred by the sight of the destruction of the Venetian galleys under his enemy's command, and how with his crew of pirates he throws his strength to the Venetian cause, makes a story of unusual strength. The quaint costumes and the pleasing views of Venice lend a pretty touch of color to the story.

HEARST-SELIG WAR NEWS PICTURES.

Exhibitors who show the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial are already pricking up their ears in anticipation of the great war pictures now on the way from Paris, Berlin, Belgium, Austria, etc. Richard Farralley, European manager of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial Service, is on the ground and has marshaled an army of picked camera men who are marching with every one of the European armies and some of whom are located on board battleships of the various warring nations. Mr. Farralley is one of the best-known newspaper men in the world, a graduate from the "New York World" back in 1895, and one of the leading Hearst journalistic generals. The cameramen have instructions to "get" the news, and they are doing it.

"AN ODYSSEY OF THE NORTH" (Bosworth).

"An Odyssey of the North," a six-reel feature production by Bosworth, Inc., taken from Jack London's story, is to be released September 3. This is one of a collection of stories written by Mr. London called "The Son of the Wolf," and it was the original intention of Mr. Bosworth to combine the stories of the collection into one long drama, but "An Odyssey of the North" proved so full of dramatic situations and so well adapted for screen production that there proved to be no question of its meriting a separate presentation, picturing as it does a rare combination of poetry, romance and thrill.

"Naass" and "Unga"—the last of the descendants of two white men, shipwrecked at an Eskimo village—on the day of their wedding are rudely separated. Unga is stolen by Axel Gunderson, a sea captain.

Remembering only the appeal in the eyes of his sweetheart, Naass starts out in search of her, follows the pair as best he can from city to city until a clue leads to the sealing grounds. Here he is captured by Russians in waters forbidden to sealers and sent to Siberia.

Scene from "An Odyssey of the North" (Bosworth).

Undaunted, he escapes from the salt mines of Siberia, traces his bride after innumerable hardships through Alaska to San Francisco. There he learns that Axel and Unga left the day before for the Klondike.

With a bait with which to trap Axel in the shape of a map leading to a wonderful mine in the unknown mountains of the interior of that country given him by a dying prospector, he starts out again.

At Dawson the long search is ended. He overtakes the pair, but they do not remember him and he easily persuades them to go with him in search of the mine. Then he destroys the caches for the return trip, kills the dogs, and watches with the exultation of the just avenger for Axle's death from starvation and frost. Then when death is very near himself and Unga he reveals his identity.

"An Odyssey of the North" is a story of extraordinary poetic feeling and sympathy and is a masterpiece, both in fiction and film form, such as is seldom offered to the public. Mr. Bosworth's interpretation of "Naass" brings to the screen an unusual figure, portrayed with all the gripping strength and emotional appeal of which this actor has so long been a master.

SIDNEY GOLDEN JOINS COSMOPOLITAN.

Sidney Golden, the well-known motion-picture director who has just completed "The Great Mistake," featuring Mme. K. Lipzen, is now director of the newly formed Cosmopolitan Feature Film Co., of which B. C. Emanuel is manager.

This company has opened large and spacious quarters in the Broadway Theater Building, with studios in New York City.

Morris Morrison, the German character actor, will be featured by Mr. Golden together with a cast made up of well-known motion picture players. The first production, which is now nearing completion, will be in five parts and from all accounts it should prove one of the season's best feature film offerings. One release a month is the intention of the company.

"HELPING MOTHER" (Rex).

"I want some romance in my love affair." That was what Beatrice Merril told her father when he suggested his secretary as a likely husband. And that is what she repeated to herself as justifying her elopement with her chauffeur, the husband of her maid. But her maid who had been virtually robbed of her husband—could she see any particular romance in the proceeding? To Beatrice Merril there were no limits to the demands romance might make; love must run its course no matter what the cost. Her maid, on the other hand, held that true romance did not make dishonorable demands—that it should concede to loyalty and virtue. Whose convictions do you think were the more sound?

Beatrice Merril was not essentially bad; her independence, her vivaciousness was admirable, even enchanting. And perhaps the attitude she maintained towards love and romance was not different to that held my many American girls today. There is no denying that most girls long for romance and that they believe it their right to have it. Yet this desire or longing, once unbridled, has led more girls into error and sorrow than any other one thing. In the case of Beatrice Merril and the chauffeur, fate was kind, death resulting from an auto explosion, cut short the days of discontent, remorse and shame that stretched out before them. And as for the maid, deserted and then left widow there seemed little to live for aside from her boy until—the coming of "the man" who looked upon romance the same as she did—as a thing desirable, but necessarily clean.

Scene from "Helping Mother" (Rex).

The name of the drama, "Helping Mother" is derived from the touching incident of the maid's little son attempting to help support her by renting his toy automobile. Around this bit of business is woven a sentiment that contrasts strikingly the sordid, unreal sentiment which had decorated the boy's home. The play in all is one that cannot but please, and that it propounds a pertinent problem only makes stronger the play's appeal and worth. As an added novelty to the play we have the subtitles arranged so that they appear as lines from a book. The pages are turned and fading out from the words which appear, are the scenes which aptly and vividly describe the tale.

In three parts, the play will be released as a Rex, September 10.

JOHN BARRYMORE IN "MAN FROM MEXICO."

John Barrymore, one of the most popular of the younger leading players of the day, has been re-engaged by the Famous Players Film Company for his second appearance in motion pictures produced by that concern, and will appear in Du Souchet's famous comedy success, "The Man from Mexico." Mr. Barrymore made his debut before the motion picture camera a few months ago in the Famous Players' film version of "An American Citizen," which has been recorded as one of the great feature comedies.

Produced with flattering success in every city throughout the country, "The Man from Mexico" has won a distinguished place in theatrical history as one of the best laugh-producers of the present dramatic epoch. The situations in the play are just the kind that adapt themselves to John Barrymore's original methods of expressing difficulties and annoyances in a ludicrous manner.

GERMAN NOBLEWOMAN ACTS FOR KEANOGRAPH

Baroness von Saxe, member of one of Germany's oldest and most distinguished families, whose castle at Dresden is one of the show places of that city, recently qualified as an impromptu actress, when, with her daughter Leonora, she appears in a scene in "Money" the seven-part production of the United Keanograph Film Company of Fairfax, Cal.

The two foreign women were induced by James Keane to face the camera in a scene taken in the Union Iron Works in San Francisco. Incidentally, the Baroness' sumptuous limousine, her footman and chauffeur were pressed into service, livery and all.

Baroness Von Saxe Entering Car, in Scene from Keanograph's "Money."

The interest in motion pictures which led the Baroness to take a trip to Fairfax to see a motion picture studio and the work of producing "Money" was actuated by the fact that her father, a general in the German army, now facing the Russian legions on the frontier, was the first nobleman in Germany to install a projecting machine in his castle. The Baroness says that some of her happiest home moments were those spent in the castle miniature theater in which she saw screen presentations of our American comedy and dramatic subjects from their earliest days. It was on the screen there that she saw her first Indian, complete with tomahawk, war paint and everything but the whoop.

EDYTH TOTTEN IN PICTURES.

Edyth Totten, the well-known dramatic writer and player, has entered the moving picture field. She has formed the Edyth Totten Motion Picture Co. and is now busily engaged in producing features. Miss Totten is known as one of the most prolific writers of successful popular appeal dramas in this country and she has also appeared in her own plays. She toured the United States and Canada for years and has made a fortune in the popular-price drama.

Her greatest successes include "The Factory Magdalen," "The Volunteer Organist" and "The Face on the Barroom Floor." These three will be the first releases of the Edyth Totten M. P. Co. "The Factory Magdalen" is being produced in Providence, R. I., in and around a big woolen mill. The scenes of the play were written with Providence as the centre of the action. Miss Totten closed a contract this week with Sawyer, Inc., to handle her entire output, which will average one each three weeks. These subjects appeal to the masses particularly and they should make excellent photoplays.

KLEINE'S WAR FILM GETS SPECIAL DISPENSATION.

George Kleine's four-reel war film entitled "European Armies in Action," which is having such a heavy run just now, received special commission from the 'Frisco Censorship Board for exhibition in the Golden Gate City last week. San Francisco has determined to vigorously bar out all film calculated to excite racial feeling at this time. Owing to the impartial presentation of the different armies in the Kleine film the censors saw their way clear to pass it. This particular film shows the military and naval forces of England, France, Germany, Switzerland, Belgium and Montenegro. The sub-titles have been carefully written so as to give no offense to the different nationalities.

HOBART HENLEY.

Few men can enter the film game, even though their experience has been ample upon the legitimate stage, and make the rapid advancement in dramatic lines which has attended Hobart Henley, Imp leading man and assistant director to Herbert Brenon. While Mr. Henley's training and natural physique fit him superbly to occupy the position of leading man, he has not been satisfied with that achievement alone. He went out to study the technical side of production and directing and, what with his experience as an actor, he soon found himself in line for promotion—an opportunity to exercise himself in putting on a picture, as Mr. Brenon's assistant.

It was something over six months that Mr. Henley, who had been a Belasco leading man in many successes, joined the Imp company to play principal parts. Since that time he has appeared with great credit to himself, in such film plays as "His Last Chance," "Miss Nobody from Nowhere," 'Temper vs. Temper," and "The Man Who Lost But Won." He has just finished in assisting in the production of "When the Heart Calls," besides enacting one of the lead roles.

"HEARTS UNITED" (Liberty).

"Hearts United" the initial multiple reel Liberty Motion Picture Company release, is full of action from beginning to finish.

The picture opens in the East and closes in the Northwest. Special care was taken by the author and producer, N. E. Milligan, to secure the proper locations. Some of the Northwestern exteriors were photographed on the vast "Liberty" estate at Harmonville, Pa., and the scenes in the east were filmed in Germantown, the historical suburb of Philadelphia.

Scene from "Hearts United" (Liberty).

The role of the professor of ethnology, one of the leading characters, is capably handled by Edward B. Tilton and his daughter Alma by Frances Cummings. Edward B. LaRenz is the chauffeur, Joseph Kelly is Longarm, Irene Kingsland is the Waterlily, Charles T. Danforth is the impostor, and Katherine Bjorling is Mrs. Craig.

The A. H. Sawyer Company, 1600 Broadway, New York, will release this beautifully photographed subject on August 29.

"LAND OF THE LOST."

The Sterling Camera and Film Company announces that it still has some territory open for its multiple-reel feature, "The Land of the Lost." This is a four-part subject based upon an American story and made by American players. A good line of advertising matter has been prepared, including lithographed one, three and nine-sheet posters, a set of fourteen 8x10 photographs, heralds, press sheets, cuts, slides and lobby display frames, all of the best class.

NEW SELIG WAR COMEDY.

Director Norval MacGregor is busy preparing a war comedy, written previously to the present conflict and treating solely of a South American outburst, one of those little happenings which take place with great frequency in the tropics. Six directors who looked over the humorous story declare it to carry an absolutely original plot, which is "going some" in these days of a million photoplays. The comedy will be released by the Selig Polyscope Company in the near future. It was written by William E. Wing.

HUNTER BENNETT ON PACIFIC COAST.

Hunter Bennett, Assistant General Manager of the World Film Corporation, has been on the last lap of his transcontinental trip covering the twenty-two offices of his company. In Seattle, F. O. Woody, formerly special salesman for the General and Mutual, was appointed to handle the Butte-Salt Lake territory for the World.

Harry Drum, District Manager of the Pacific Coast, has headquarters in San Francisco. Mr. Drum is booking the Shubert-Brady features up solid throughout his territory. The Turner-Dahnken Circuit have contracted for these features for their entire circuit, opening at the Tivoli, San Francisco. Ralph H. Clark is manager of the San Francisco office. Louis E. Loeb, formerly with the General, San Francisco, is manager of the Los Angeles office of the World.

While in Los Angeles Mr. Bennett was the guest of W. H. Clune, the Los Angeles picture magnate; and D. W. Griffith, the famous producer, who is now completing the Clansman. Mr. Bennett states that this is a stupendous production. He also renewed old acquaintances with Warren Kerrigan of the Victor-Universal. Mr. Bennett returns to New York City September 1 by way of Dallas, New Orleans and Atlanta.

Notes of the Trade

A BOOK, the photoplay version of which will be awaited with keen interest by Universal exhibitors and the public, is Thomas W. Lawson's "Friday the 13th." The Universal has engaged for its scenario department a large force of competent readers, selecting those books which lend themselves well to pictures. In the Bruno Lessing photoplays one will have human-interest stories; in George Bronson Howard's plays one will find the strong climax and vivid action; in Annie Fellows Johnstone one will have the tremendous heart-interest and the spectacular, such as in "Joel, a Boy of Galilee." In Manlove Rhodes stories one has the rapid fire action. George Gibbs' stories will be noted for their unique plot.

* * *

The atmosphere of "The War of Wars," the photo-play written by Paul M. Potter, produced by Ramo Films, Inc., and illustrated by films taken on the battlefields of today, is the atmosphere created by Guy de Maupassant, the French novelist, with his landscapes and characters, country roads bordered by appletrees, farm interiors, market places, taverns, weddings, christenings, funerals, and the whole population of sons of the soil, country squires, farmers, farmer's daughters, all this joy instantly changed to gloom by the coming of war.

* * *

"Four Days" is the name of the latest produced Frontier. It sounds like a comedy—starts out like one—but at the end there is a tragic touch. And then it ends with a laugh. Willis L. Robards produced it from the scenario of Karl R. Coolidge.

* * *

Edith Storey, the globe trotter of the Vitagraph's Stock Company, has accepted more thrilling assignments than any other motion picture actress connected with the Vitagraph Company. Her latest assignment will take her to Labrador, where she is to play the lead in a nautical drama. A schooner on which Miss Storey, as the heroine, is the only passenger, is wrecked. The crew take to the boats, leaving her to drown, as they suppose. Just before the schooner sinks, she shoots a life line to a party of natives on shore and crosses the turbulent waters on the slender rope.

* * *

In order that she might have jurisdiction in the Hollywood studios of the Universal plant, as well as within the confines of Universal City itself, Miss Laura Oakley, known as one of the cleverest portrayors of character in filmdom, recently was sworn in by the Los Angeles City Clerk, and is now known as "Officer 99," which, by some strange freak is the number of the far-famed "Officer 66" turned upside down.

* * *

"A Rose of Yesterday," a coming Frontier drama, can be termed unusual. Dolly Larkin, Fred Church, Walter Rodgers and Joseph J. Franz have the leads. The producer is Willis L. Robards and the author Karl R. Coolidge. The production is also unique in that it does not contain a single sub-title.

* * *

Jeff Dolan, the biggest little man in the sales end of the film industry, is back in town and very anxious to connect with one of the reliable feature film companies. He claims to be too healthy to lay off work for any length of time, so if there is a feature film company desiring the services of a nine-year experienced man, get in communication with Mr. Dolan, care of the Moving Picture World.

* * *

One of the well-known paintings woven into "The War of Wars" the photoplay of Ramo Films, Inc., the scenes of which are laid on the Franco-Belgian frontier, is "The Last Cartridge," of Alphonse de Neuville. This was exhibited in 1873 at the Paris Salon and won for the artist the Cross of the Legion of Honor. "De Neuville had the genius of action," wrote a critic in the "Revue des Deux Mondes" and that is why his work blends so remarkably with the actual scenes of conflict portrayed in "The War of Wars."

* * *

Imagine a charming little woman, dainty and unassuming, set down in the center of a lumber camp filled with rough and ready men with no idea of law and order, with a penchant for settling their difficulties with their fists. Now picture the trouble and opposition this tiny mite of feminity would encounter in attempting to enforce laws. "The Mistress of Deadwood Basin," written by Earl R. Hewitt and produced by the Rex (Universal) company under the direction of Robert Z. Leonard interestingly solves the enigma.

* * *

Otto Meyer, the sheriff of the Frontier company, has a badly broken arm as a result of his horse stepping in a gopher's hole. And Jack Blakely, who took his place as sheriff of the Frontier drama, is laid up as a result of a caress by a mule's hind foot. It seems to be a dangerous thing after all to be a movie sheriff.

* * *

Will Mr. Julius Singer, formerly with the World's Leader Film Company, of Kansas City, Mo., communicate with the Moving Picture World.

* * *

"In the Nick of Time" is the title of a thrilling two-reel railroad feature, adapted from the Railroad Man's Magazine, produced by Fred A. Kelsey, at the Reliance and Majestic Hollywood studios. In this production is shown how a train despatcher, who has been discharged for intoxication, reforms, and by timely forethought succeeds in averting a disastrous train wreck. Irene Hunt is being featured with Vester Pegg playing the lead. Richard Cummings also plays a prominent part.

* * *

One of the rarest treats turned out by any of the Universal companies is the recently completed four chapter serial, "The Adventures of Francois Villon," adapted from George Bronson-Howard's book by Dr. H. G. Stafford and produced by the Nestor (Universal) company, under the able direction of Charles Giblyn. In the final installment, "The Ninety Black Boxes," the scenic effects secured by the use of the historical old ruins at San Juan Capistrano, are of a sort never before achieved in this country.

* * *

The famous Converse mansion, on the Converse cattle ranch, near Santa Paula, California, will shortly be seen in a Frontier picture. The house is so arranged that interiors can be taken of nearly every room. Ed Converse, the millionaire cowboy, takes part in the production.

* * *

Cabled reports from Paris to the American newspapers on August 14 stated that Commander in Chief Joffre of the French army had conferred the first medal of the war upon Corporal of Dragoons Estoffier for "conspicuous gallantry in action." Pathe Freres have just received private advices that the hero thus signally honored is the well-known actor, Escoffier, a member of their stock company in Vincennes, and a man of fine talent. M. Escoffier has appeared in a number of big Pathe and Eclectic features, among them being "Germinal," "Leaves of Memory" and "Rocambole."

* * *

Otis Turner, director of the Turner Special Feature (Universal) Company, and known throughout moviedom as the "dean of directors," has left the Hollywood studios for his yearly vacation. Instead of spending his vacation in the vicinity of Los Angeles, it is Mr. Turner's intention to make an extended visit among the Universal's many plants in the Eastern states and to spend a week or so with his many friends in the company's New York offices. Frank Lloyd has taken charge of the company and during the absence of Mr. Turner will continue nothing but the customary two and three-reel features.

* * *

Walter Lundine, Frontier cameraman, is one of the youngest in the field. He is only twenty and has been in the harness for more than two years.

* * *

John Ince, the Lubin "Inceographer," holds Thomas Hardy, the great English novelist, in deep reverence, and has often dreamed of producing in the Ince manner some of Hardy's character studies of Wessex folk. He ventured to write to Hardy to get an expression of opinion and the other day received a reply. The letter was a big surprise. Instead of scoffing at motion pictures or showing eagerness to see his characters and scenes pictured, Thomas Hardy wrote an able discussion, in which he pointed out, with masterly grasp of the subject, why his works are entirely unsuited to picture demands by reason of the great part played by the purely mental conditions and conflicts of his people.

* * *

Sheriff Arthur Mackley is producing "The High Grader," a thrilling one-reel Western drama by William MacLeod Raine, at the Reliance and Majestic, Mutual studios.

* * *

Unanswerable proof of the Universal stars, this week, was received at the Hollywood studios in the form of personal invitations, urging them to attend the Hallowe'en ball and banquet, to be given in Washington, D. C., by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, who offer as special inducement to pay all traveling expenses, hotel bills, etc., that might be incurred en route.

* * *

In "Lola," a prima donna's reminiscences of her early life is dramatically presented in two parts. Winifred Greenwood takes the part of "Lola" and throws her whole soul into the work in an admirable manner. She is ably supported by Ed Coxen, Charlotte Burton and George Fields. The subject will be released Sept. 7, 1914.

* * *

The Noted Plays Film Exchange will move to the Leavitt building, 130 West 46th Street, New York City, on account of increased business. "The Greyhound" is enjoying successful runs in large theaters. Other features of quality will be handled. Julius Klein, New York City manager, and Jerome Lewis, New York State manager, are conducting the business. Exhibitors are invited to call and get acquainted.

* * *

Blanche Sweet is being featured in "The Second Mrs. Roebuck," adapted from the Smart Set Magazine, being produced by Jack O'Brien at the Majestic Mutual studios. The plot of this picture hinges on an old family photograph. Wallace Reid, Mary Alden and R. A. Walsh also appear in "The Second Mrs. Roebuck," which will be released by the Majestic as part of the Mutual program.

* * *

Mr. Harry G. Sagal, sales manager of the World Film Corporation, has started a selling campaign of his own. He toured the entire state of New Jersey recently, interviewing exhibitors and getting their opinions as to the proper length of pictures; what class of pictures were in demand, etc. Incidentally, he succeeded in obtaining a number of contracts for the output of Shubert Pictures, as well as those of the World Film Corporation. He expects to go through Connecticut some time next week.

* * *

"The Motherless Kids" is a sentimental offering with a delicate strain of comedy. Margarita Fischer plays the lead and shows an excellent perception of natural sentiment, which enables her to inject powerful realism. Release set for Sept. 8.

* * *

Claire Whitney, a leading woman of the Solax-Blache Features, has resigned from the Fort Lee company. Miss Whitney was obliged to refuse an offer of the Eclair company to join their organization at Tucson, Arizona, because of the illness of her mother, with whom she lives in New York City.

* * *

Irene Hunt, the attractive Reliance star, had her hands severely blistered while playing the role of the "sob sister" in the newspaper story, "For the Last Edition," being produced by Fred A. Kelsey, at the Reliance, Hollywood studios. Miss Hunt was forced to slide down a fire hose, from a second story window, where she had been made prisoner, in order to reach her newspaper office with a big story.

* * *

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," produced by the World Producing Corporation and released through the World Film Corparation, is proving one of the most popular pictures ever. The World people have contracted with such men as William Morris, William Fox, Poli's, etc., for the exhibition of this picture over their circuits. William Morris' New York theater is showing the picture this entire week.

* * *

On last Sunday night a special midnight performance was given at Santa Barbara of Harry Pollard's remarkable "Beauty" picture, "The Other Train," in which Margarita Fischer gave a performance which won her a host of added friends. The time was set so that all those working in the other theaters could see this photoplay. A big attendance was present and the affair was a big hit.

* * *

Baroness von Saxe, member of one of Germany's oldest and most distinguished families, whose castle at Dresden is one of the show places of that city, recently qualified as an impromptu actress, when, with her daughter Leonora, she appeared in a scene in "Money," the seven-part production of the United Keanograph Film Company of Fairfax, California. The two foreign women were induced by James Keane to face the camera in a scene taken in the Union Iron Works in San Francisco. Incidentally, the Baroness' sumptuous limousine, her footman and chauffeur were pressed into service, livery and all.

* * *

Donald Crisp is directing and playing the lead in "The Warning," a heart interest drama written by Russell E. Smith. The experience of an innocent country girl when she leaves her country home to go to the city in search of excitement is graphically told in this production. Dorothy Gish is featured in the production, with Miss Washington taking a prominent part.

* * *

The World Film Corporation announces "Jess, of the Mountain Country" as their next release on September 1. The picture is in four acts, and enacted throughout entirely by children, none of whom is more than twelve years old. "Jess" will be followed by several others, which will be released in September.

* * *

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and with branches throughout the country, has through its agents, the El Paso (Texas) Piano Company, recently installed their Motion Picture Orchestras in the following moving picture houses, some being the best in the West: The Regal theater, 210 East Washington street, Phoenix, Arizona; Alhambra theater, El Paso, Texas; The Arizona, Phoenix, Arizona—a new and magnificent house; the Tucson (Arizona) Opera House, Bisbee (Arizona) theater, Royal, Alcazar, El Paso street, El Paso, Texas.

* * *

Maurice Wilcox Steuart, Sr., of "The Five Steuarts," will be seen in the Walter Miller Futurity Winner film to be released shortly.

* * *

"Broken Nose Bailey" is the title of a novel two-reel detective drama produed at the Reliance and Majestic Mutual studios. In this production a notorious crook, who is easily recognized by a broken nose, uses extreme methods in destroying this mark of identification. Francelia Billington, Eugene Pallette and Sam de Grasse appear in the cast. Jack Adolfi is directing the production.

* * *

Mr. Hunter Bennett, assistant general manager of the World Film Corporation, who is making a tour of all the offices under their control, has reached its Atlanta office, where he will spend three or four days. Mr. Bennett expects to return to New York about September 1, when L. J. Solznick, vice president and general manager, will visit the concern's twenty-three offices.

* * *

Alfred Hamburger's continued efforts to make the Ziegfeld Picture Playhouse the leading moving picture theater in the heart of Chicago has resulted in his securing the world's greatest photodrama, "Cabiria," for an indefinite engagement at the elite playhouse on Michigan avenue after its present season ends at the Illinois theater.

Tammany Young is again being featured as "Bill," the wide awake office boy, in the sixth of the famous Bill series from the pen of Paul West, at the Reliance and Majestic Mutual studios. Eddie Dillon is directing the production.

* * *

Mr. E. C. Bullwinkle, who was with the Shubert Feature Film Corporation before their consolidation with the World Film Corporation, has been placed in charge of the New York Exchange of the World Film Corporation, succeeding Mr. E. Seldon, who is now looking after the Cleveland branch of that organization.

* * *

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, through its branch store in Galevston, Texas, just recently instituted its instruments in the Orpheum theater, Texas City, Texas; Gem theater, Houston, Texas, and the Star theater, Galveston, Texas.

* * *

A moving picture tragedy came within an ace of being turned into a real one yesterday in the lake of the vast Liberty estate at Harmonville, Pa., and but for the prompt action of one of the actors of the Liberty Motion Picture Company, a man who figured in the picture as a "super" would undoubtedly have been drowned. He was pushed off the raft and sank out of sight, coming up underneath the raft, striking his head. One of the leading men of the company dived under and brought him out.

* * *

The Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., have this week opened an exchange office in Toronto, at 39 Adelaide street west, under the management of Arthur A. Lee, former manager of the Feature Film Department of the General Film Company, who has had a long experience in the Canadian field. He reports good bookings and states that the war has not interfered with the demand among the exhibitors for first class features, as they are playing to their usual good houses.

* * *

The war cry which is abroad in the land seems to have aroused everybody with the desire to see a little of it themselves, to smell the powder and smoke of battle. The Vitagraph release of Tuesday, August 4, "Warfare in the Skies," has been so much in demand there are not sufficient prints to satisfy exhibitors who wish to show it to their patrons.

* * *

Mr. McLane, manager of the Photo-play Theaters Company at 30 East 42d street, New York City, who controls five big houses in New York and Brooklyn, has booked all of The Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., plays for his theaters.

Picture Theaters Projected

PHOENIX, ARIZ.—Eugene B. O'Neill is having plans prepared for a commodious moving picture theater to cost about $10,000.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—Carl Vitzhum, 53 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., is preparing plans for a one-story and balcony theater building, 50 by 143 feet, with seating capacity for about 1,000 persons.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—J. R. Carter, who owns and conducts the Crystal theater, has awarded the contract for a new moving picture theater at the corner of Eighth and Main streets. The new structure will have a seating capacity of 1,000 and will cost approximately $80,000.

MODESTO, CAL.—W. R. Mensinger is having plans prepared for a new modern moving picture theater. Work on its construction will start in the early fall.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Morris Older, 44 Mahl avenue, is planning to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 56 by 130 feet, with a seating capacity of 1,000.

FT. WAYNE, IND.—W. H. Barnett is having plans prepared for a moving picture theater to cost $150,000.

GRUNDY CENTER, IA.—Enterprise Construction Company, Gladbrook, Ia., has obtained the contract for the erection of a two-story theater and K. of P. hall, 41 by 100 feet. The house will be known as the Gem theater.

MAQUOKETA, IA. —Maquoketa Amusement Company will shortly erect an airdome here.

LEWISTON, ME.—Jones & Barrabee will erect a one and two-story theater building, 73 by 107 feet, with L 73 by 40 feet. The theater will have seating capacity for about 2,000 persons.

DORCHESTER, MASS.—Albert E. Darlow, 22 Westview street, is having plans prepared for a two-story hall and store building, 45 by 80 feet.

CONSTANTINE, MICH.—R. D. Lemmon, who owns and conducts the Opera House here, is having the building remodeled. The stage will be enlarged and several dressing rooms added. An up-to-date projection outfit has already been installed.

MONTGOMERY, MINN.—Harvey Jewson is planning to erect a modern moving picture theater here in the near future.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—S. J. Groves & Sons are having plans prepared for a moving picture house to be known as the Palace theater.

ROCHESTER, MINN.—J. E. Reid is planning to build a new moving picture theater, with seating capacity of 900.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Andries & Lidgren will shortly erect a one-story moving picture theater, 38 by 90 feet, with a seating capacity of 400.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—John Moline, 677 Sherburne avenue, has obtained the contract for the erection of a $15,000 moving picture theater for L. J. Borer and J. Gilosky.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Imperial Theater Building Company, 9th and Pine streets, are planning extensive alterations to their theater building.

PHILLIPSBURG, MONT.—L. O. Degenhart will shortly erect a moving picture theater here. W. A. Martin has been engaged as manager for the new house.

BEATRICE, NEB.—W. B. Gilbert and B. Harke, jointly will erect a two-story moving picture theater, 51 by 140 feet, to cost between $25,000 and $35,000.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—The owners of the Majestic theater will enlarge the building and add new improvements.

HENRIETTA, OKLA.—L. V. Beebe is building a large airdome in this town.

SCRANTON, PA.—Stender Brothers, 976 Union street, have obtained the contract for the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 32 by 103 feet, to cost $6,200, for Mrs. James Winfield.

NEWCASTLE, PA.—Douglass & Wray are having plans prepared for a new moving picture theater to be erected here.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The moving picture theater located at 415-417 Moore street, has been disposed of by Barrist & Company for Peter C. Fritz and Amandus F. Riedel to George F. Atkinson, for a consideration not disclosed, subject to mortgages of $16,000. The property is assessed at $16,000.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—George Hogg has been awarded the contract for the erection of a one-story brick moving picture theater, 30 by 194 feet, to cost $40,000, for William J. Greenfield. The new house will be located at 17th and Atlantic streets.

ALTOONA, PA.—Sholler & Hersh have completed plans and will shortly invite bids on the construction of a three-story brick fireproof theater and office building, 55 by 120 feet, for A. Notopolis.

HUMBOLDT, S. D.—F. J. Weise is planning the erection of a $30,000 moving picture theater.

OLDHAM, S. D.—George Johnson will shortly erect a modern moving picture theater in this town.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Majestic Amusement Company has awarded the contract to the James Alexander Construction Company for the erection of a three-story theater building, 40 by 150 feet.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA.—Miss Bond of Philadelphia and Miss Shaw of Los Angeles will shortly erect a moving picture theater, 42 by 126 feet, to cost $10,000. The new structure will be known as the Bijou or Star theater. Lessees are Barrett & Butcher, 422 Market street, this city.

WHEELING, W. VA.—W. T. Otto is having plans prepared for a new moving picture theater. Work on the new building will probably start in the early fall.

LA CROSSE, WIS.—Pintley & Havsler, 1611 Pioneer building, St. Paul, Minn., are preparing plans and specifications for a large modern theater building to be erected in this city in the late fall.

LA CROSSE, WIS.—Orpheum Theater Company is planning the erection of a three-story moving picture theater, 60 by 150 feet, to cost $50,000. There will be two stores on the ground floor. Six offices will occupy the upper floor space. The theater will have a seating capacity of 1,200.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Berlin Arcade Building Company, 3d street and North avenue, will convert several store properties into a modern one-story moving picture theater, 46 by 96 feet.

PLYMOUTH, WIS.—John Juster is preparing plans for a one and two-story moving picture theater, 28 by 131 feet, to cost $8,000.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—United States Government is having plans prepared for an $800,000 amphitheater to be erected in Arlington Cemetery.

MANHATTAN, ILL.—Grant McCowen, 516 Elmwood avenue, Joliet, Ill., has obtained the contract to erect a two-story moving picture theater and store building, 78 by 106 feet, for August Hoermann.

CLINTON, IND.—Stock company has been formed here for the purpose of erecting a one-story moving picture theater to cost $10,000.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Edward Rosenstein, Equitable building, is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater, to cost $10,000.

HAGERSTOWN, MD.—Thomas W. Lamb, 644 Eighth avenue, New York City, is preparing plans for a handsome four-story theater and apartment building to be erected in this city.

BROCKTON, MASS.—George L. Falk, 63 Main street, is preparing plans for a two-story theater, 60 by 155 feet, to cost $50,000.

DETROIT, MICH.—C. S. Howley, 977 Brush street, has been awarded the contract for the erection of a one-story theater building, 98 by 37 feet, for the Bigelow Estate.

KEARNEY, N. J.—Daniel Rentschler, 171 Johnson avenue, is having plans prepared for a one and two-story moving picture theater and store building, 42 by 99 feet, to cost $25,000.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Stomates & Chrystomas will expend about $3,500 for alterations to their moving picture theater.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—James H. Ward, 157 Remsen street, is having plans prepared for a one and two-story moving picture theater, 88 by 100 feet, to cost $18,000.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—S. B. & M. Enterprise, 204 East 54th street, will expend about $15,000 for alterations to their moving picture theater.

UTICA, N. Y.—American Moving Picture Co., Buffalo, are having plans prepared for a three-story moving picture theater, 83 by 157 feet, to cost $100,000.

ASHTABULA, OHIO.—Daniel Larkens is having plans prepared for a two-story moving picture theater, 30 by 100 feet, to cost $15,000.

BIGPRAIRIE, OHIO.—L. O. Lake is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture theater and assembly hall, 30 by 100 feet, to cost $10,000.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—Anton Farinacci, Mayfield and Random roads, is planning the erection of a one-story moving picture theater, 30 by 145 feet.

TOLEDO, OHIO.—Orient Feature Co. are having plans prepared for one-story moving picture theater, 43 by 123 feet, to cost $15,000.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Nos. 735-737 East Chelten avenue have been conveyed by Henry B. Ayres to the Walton Amusement Company for a nominal consideration, subject to mortgages amounting to $27,000. This property, which is to be the site of a moving picture theater, has a lot 54 by 156.6 feet, and is assessed at $10,000 in the names of Morris Shore and Barnet Rubin.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—As a site for another moving picture theater, the property at the northwest corner of Seventeenth and Annin streets has been conveyed by Max Katzman to Francis E. Hennessey for a nominal consideration, subject to a mortgage of $9,000. The property has a lot 85 by 58.2 feet, and is assessed at $7,500.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—J. A. Bader & Co. are preparing estimates on plans for a one-story and balcony theater and store building, 150 by 77 feet, that will be erected for the Alpha Realty Company on Market street, west of Fifty-second street.

REPUBLIC, PA.—Capuzzi Brothers are having plans prepared for another theater. This one will comprise a theater, store and apartment building, two-story, 60 by 90 feet, to cost $20,000.

COAL CREEK, TENN.—T. H. Leinart, Clinton, Tenn., has secured the contract at $6,550 for the erection of a two-story brick opera house and lodge hall, 40 by 90 feet, for the Weldon Lodge, No. 181, I. O. O. F.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—James Alexander Construction Co., 388 North Front street, have been awarded the contract for the erection of a four-story moving picture theater, to cost $63,000, for J. B. Snowden, at 118 Madison avenue. The old building on the site is being razed.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—E. J. Pearson, Tennessee Trust Building, has obtained the contract to erect a one-story moving picture theater, to cost $6,500, for Jeff D. Nathan, 1297 East Minna place.

WATERLOO, IOWA.—M. B. Cleveland, 308 First National Bank building, is preparing plans and specifications for a syndicate which intend to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 60 by 125 feet.

MITCHELLVILLE, IOWA.—G. T. Gibson is having plans prepared for a two-story moving picture theater, 22 by 125 feet. There will be two stores on the ground floor.

MANCHESTER, N. H.—H. Macropol has obtained the contract to erect a one-story moving picture theater, 77 by 98 feet, for Victor Charas, 344 Belmont street.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—W. A. Buckly, 31 Cameron street, will shortly build a commodious moving picture theater, 45 by 130 feet, to cost $13,000.

BLACK ROCK, N. Y.—W. A. Kidd, Chamber of Commerce building, is preparing plans and specifications for a $20,000 moving picture theater which will be erected in this city.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—Associated Investors' Company, 720 Cary-Ashoga building, will erect a theater building, 90 by 170 feet. Lessee is Harry Bernstine, 3720 Woodland avenue.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—Jacob and S. H. Stecker, 1406 Williamson building, are planning to erect a one-story moving picture theater and store building, 125 by 142 feet, to cost $20,000.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The property Nos. 1706-1712 Frankford avenue, has been sold by the Manor Real Estate and Trust Company, a subsidiary concern of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, to John M. Kennedy, Jr., who will erect a theater building on the site. The sale includes a 3½-story brick and rough-cast store and dwelling, five two-story brick houses at Nos. 1719 to 1727 Blair street in the rear, all on a lot 76 by 160 feet, assessed at $17,000. The new theater will be a brick and terra cotta structure costing about $30,000.

WILDWOOD, N. J.—The Lyric theater on the boardwalk, occupying a lot 38 feet 6 inches in front, was purchased by E. H. Peterson of Philadelphia for $15,400.

HARRISBURG, Pa.—P. Magaro, 410 Market street, will erect a one-story moving picture theater, to cost about $16,000.

FARRELL, PA.—W. J. Burte is planning to erect a two-story moving picture theater, 40 by 125 feet, to cost $8,000. There will be several offices on the second floor.

TUSCUMBIA, ALA.—The Pastime Theatre has undergone extensive alterations and improvements. The seating capacity has also been increased. The house will hereafter be devoted to the exhibition of high-grade moving pictures.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Manager Demaree of the Victoria Theatre has let the contract to the Higgris Electric Company to increase the cooling system of this popular theatre.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—William Moore, 423 Ninth street, N. W., contemplates the erection of a four-story theatre building, to cost $50,000.

WOODBURN, IND.—Louis Fuelling is having plans prepared for a one-story moving picture and vaudeville theatre, 30 by 70 feet.

WICHITA, KAN.—C. C. McCollister is planning to remodel his moving picture theatre and build an addition, to cost $6,000.

DON'T BE FOOLISH

And pay big prices for slides. This advertisement and 15c. will bring you sample of Announcement Player and Feature Announcement Slides. We furnish dandy slides at $2.00 per dozen.

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY, LOCKPORT, N. Y.

FURNITURE, FURNISHINGS and WORKS of ART

RENTED

For Motion Picture Productions

Broadway Art Galleries

1362 Broadway (37th St.)

Exhibitors News

Interesting Information Concerning Moving Picture Men Gathered By Moving Picture World Correspondents Everywhere.

MISSOURI.

THE activity noted and reported in the offices of film companies and exchanges in Kansas City indicates that there is good business this summer over this section of the West. The moving picture theaters are advertising very extensively, not only in Kansas City, but in all the small towns. They use display space for announcing their features, and they are assigned quite as much space for the reading notices as are the theaters during the winter. This condition is perhaps more marked in the small towns, where "everybody goes to the picture show," and where the characters and the features are the dominant subjects of conversation. The cities, since the larger use of advertising and especially since the practice of running stories of current feature films has grown, are falling into line, and a very pronounced atmosphere of moving pictureism is being developed.

Both Columbia and Sedalia, Mo., are interested in the recent marriage in New York of Sidney Drew and Miss Lucille McVey, both movie actors. Miss McVey is a native of Sedalia, and is well remembered there as an attractive, petite blonde. More recently her home was in Columbia, the university city, where her mother now resides on College avenue.

Part of the photo-drama of Creation was given in the New Sedalia theater, in Sedalia, on Sunday, and was noticed in the column of church announcements.

G. W. Helmrich of St. Louis, manager of the New Era Film Manufacturing Company there, was a visitor in Hannibal, Mo., where he is well known, last week. Mr. Helmrich made himself solid with the Hannibalites through his pictures of that town's fall festival last year, and through his pictures of the good roads movement and work in that vicinity.

The large part that moving pictures promise to play in state educative work was instanced at Lee's Summit last week, when pictures of the 1914 commencement pageant at the state normal school at Warrensburg were shown at the Crystal theater. The film displayed all the exercises, the students, the campus and buildings. Many of the young people of Lee's Summit were seen and recognized in the pictures. There was wide comment in the town and county over the usefulness of the pictures of this state institution, and a great deal of subsequent talk of the good that the school there and of other schools which the subject suggested, is doing.

G. E. Anderson of St. Louis, who is said to have financial backing for a proposition to erect a new theater in Columbia, was in the latter city last week looking over the ground. He said to several local people that if a theater is erected it will "have lots of class" and will be a credit to the town.

Seven electricians at work on the remodeling of the Willis Wood theater in Kansas City into a picture show house, were arrested last week on a formal charge of having no permits. They were released on personal bond and were not taken to the station. This house has recently been leased by Henry B. Lappe, owner of the Tenth street and the Twelfth street motion picture theaters, and will soon be opened in its new character.

Daniel McCoy, who has managed the Empress theater in Kansas City almost since its opening, was given a farewell dinner at the Edwards hotel last week by the employes of the theater, on the occasion of his leaving for Detroit. He will make his headquarters in that city while managing several of the Marcus Loew vaudeville houses nearby. Cyrus Jacobs, previously manager of the Globe theater, succeeds Mr. McCoy in the management of the Empress.

The New Royal Theater in Kansas City is advertising extensively for August 7 and 8 the five-reel production, "Hearts of Oak."

The Kansas City Feature Film Company has just released in this territory "The Sea Wolf," by Jack London; "Hearts of Oak," and "The House of Temperey," all well known productions. They are being heavily booked by exhibitors in this territory.

The Maze theater at 12th and Baltimore has changed hands recently. Mr. Demhurst, the original owner, has sold to Mr. Alexander, the present proprietor. Mr. Alexander states that "War Is Hell" and Mary Pickford in "Romany Romance" were some of his best features. He is now showing "The Trey o' Hearts." This will appear serially in the Kansas City Journal, which is also running "The Million Dollar Mystery."

John P. Lane is to build a $12,000 theater at 39th and Main streets, Kansas City. Architect Boller drew the plans for this structure.

T. N. Rigney is now constructing a $20,000 theater at Albany, Mo. This is a combination vaudeville and moving picture house. Boller, Kansas City, is the architect.

The Kansas City Feature Film Company will handle, commencing September 1, in Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri the Paramount Program. Their Famous Players and Lasky Features seem to be meeting with great favor in this section.

The Twelfth Street theater, one of the finest moving picture houses in the city, went on the five-cent basis Monday, August 10; the admission will be a nickel except Saturdays and Sundays. The house runs four reels every day, on Wednesdays the "Million Dollar Mystery," on Tuesdays and Fridays the Hearst-Selig Weekly. A. W. Durrin, formerly with the advertising department of a daily paper, is now associated in the management of the theater with J. H. Gilday.

The Mutual Film Corporation, now in the Empress theater building, moved August 15 to more commodious quarters in the Ozark building, 928 Main street. This building is absolutely fireproof, and the firm will have a fireproof steel vault where films can be stored.

"Marty" Williams, manager of the Mutual Film Corporation at Kansas City, is the proud father of a baby boy, born August 6. Weight, 9½ pounds.

The Willis Wood theater, Kansas City, which is being transformed into a moving picture house, is to contain the unique feature of an elevator. The theater has galleries, and the elevator is to compensate the patrons who have become accustomed in other picture show houses to the one-floor plan. The permit for the improvements mentions $25,000 as the cost according to the plans filed.

The Shubert theater, Kansas City, which has been closed for the summer, reopened August 15 with Paul J. Rainey's African Hunt pictures, series of 1914.

The Grand Opera House, Kansas City, reopened Sunday, August 16, with Lyman H. Howe's pictures of the Panama canal.

One of the noted visitors in Kansas City during the convention of Eagles was Thomas P. Gleason, film censor of the moving picture shows of Minneapolis, Minn. He declared often—for everybody who met him was interested in the subject—that the duty of the censor is not to require that films be of a reformatory nature, but to see that the stories and acting do not give false pictures of life on sensational subjects. His notion that the picture show is an amusement and entertainment institution is strong, although he is inclined to condemn white slave dramas, and too sensational Wild West films.

A new ordinance has been introduced in the city council of Kansas City, for the licensing of picture shows and film companies. It calls for $25 a year from all picture shows, whether they are in the suburbs and give shows only at night, or are downtown and run practically all day and into the night. The companies that supply films under this proposed ordinance would pay $100 a year. The measure is being discussed by committees, and moving picture men are arranging to respond to invitations to appear before those bodies.

The Gayety theater at Kansas City will reopen for the season, August 23, under the new management of Matthew Smith, long associated with Shubert enterprises.

The Century theater at Kansas City will resume that name, after being called the Lyric for a season during which it was devoted to motion pictures. It will this year play with burlesque attractions. Mr. Thomas Taafe will have the management.

J. W. Morgan, president of the Morgan Film Co., the veteran film dealer of Kansas City, has been enjoying several weeks of fishing and hunting in Alexandria, Minn. C. A. Trantham is managing the business during his absence. Mr. Trantham says the European war is likely to cause a considerable shortage on the soft carbon imported from Germany, although the prices at Kansas City had not yet been affected. He also anticipates that the release dates on foreign films and features will be seriously delayed, impairing the programs in this section, and making necessary rather strenuous efforts on the part of the exchanges to fill up the deficiencies.

The Blake theater auditorium at Webb City is vacant, and subject to lease by E. S. Brigham, manager of the Gillis theater, Kansas City, Mo.

Reserved seats were sold several days in advance for the presentation of "The Kangaroo" at the Majestic.

The Kalem railroad drama "The Rival Railroad's Plot," struck a popular chord in Hannibal, Mo. This is a railroad town, and the title itself of the picture excited interest, while the story, which was freely quoted in the newspapers, aroused further anticipations.

The Gem theater at Sedalia, closed for the summer, will probably reopen August 17 for the Fall and Winter season.

J. C. Lains, owner of the new theater at Thirty-ninth and Main streets, probably will be ready for business September 1. C. Boller, architect, reports that the construction work is well along, and the finishing touches are being put on. The total cost, completed, will be $12,000.

A. Chapman, formerly manager of the Kansas City office of Blache Features, will hereafter look after the interests of Warner's Features, with headquarters at Omaha.

The Trio theater at Galt has been completed, and will be opened to the public about September 1. This is a combination house, with light vaudeville and moving pictures. The house has a seating capacity of 350. G. W. Rusk is the owner. A five-piece orchestra will be used.

The moving picture show houses of Kansas City have been asked to co-operate with the merchants for the success of the United Fashion Shows which will be held September 21 to 23. One means of helping will be the display on the screens for several days before the fashion show of the official poster which is being reproduced on slides and will be furnished the moving picture houses. The merchants have also asked that specially attractive programs be put on during the week of the show, as a compliment and as special inducement to visitors to the city to remain after they have viewed the offerings of the merchants.

Joseph R. Donegan, the pioneer burlesque theater manager of Kansas City, is again at the helm at the Century, which August 23 resumes the presentation of burlesque, after a year as a moving picture house.

The Kansas City Camera Club, which is collecting historic views of Kansas City and Missouri, is planning to use the moving picture machine in the recording of events and scenes having permanent interest. The club holds frequent exhibitions, and the films and pictures are carefully preserved for the benefit of posterity.

The Christian Church of Chillicothe is using the Airdome for the Sunday night services—and an orchestra assists a large chorus in making music. It seems interesting to note that the people like music and orchestras and the free-and-easy atmosphere of their accustomed Airdome even on Sunday night church service, and the church certainly did a graceful and popular thing in holding the services there.

The Hippodrome at Bowling Green gave over the night of August 6 to a benefit performance for the W. C. T. U. of that thriving city. The organization provided local talent in addition to the pictures put on by the management.

The Rev. A. M. Levack addressed a union service of Methodists and Christians at the Airdome in Brookfield, on a recent Sunday, the talk being preceded by the film of the life of "Samson."

The new show house of the Electric theater in Liberty will be ready for occupancy September 1. It is on the east side of the public square. Until the home is opened, the film programs of the Electric management will be given in the Airdome, and only on the few nights a week that the Airdome is available. The Airdome will be closed when the new Electric is opened.

Lakeside Park, a new amusement resort near Webb City, is advertising its free picture show as strongly as any other feature—for picture shows are quite as standard an item in the entertainment and amusement of the public as are band concerts or refreshments.

The Iris theater in Sedalia resounded with laughter and shouts Thursday evening, August 6, when four pickaninnies engaged in a watermelon eating contest on the stage. Each boy was given the half of a large melon—it took two tremendously big melons for the contest—and the littlest boy of the four won. He certainly could store away the watery red sweetness!

BROWN.

Bound Volume No. 20

APRIL TO JUNE, 1914

Now ready for delivery. Price $1.50

Expressage or postage extra

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

17 Madison Avenue, New York City

MICHIGAN.

BENTON HARBOR'S purity crusade begins with the moving picture poster. Incidentally a censorship for films is imminent, but the lurid lithograph is the thing which will be abolished. Club women of the city tired of the sensational exploitation of pictures, informed Mayor Ryno that this highly colored form of advertising was inflaming the minds of the youth of Benton Harbor. The mayor called the exhibitors into his office and in the course of the conference gave out an edict that the blood and thunder type of poster would not be tolerated in the lobby displays nor on the billboards. When the matter of the quality of films was discussed and the probability of a censorship announced, the managers of the shows asserted they would do everything they could to co-operate with the city authorities.

Michigan manufacturers and companies whose industries are filmed for exploitation at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, will pay $2.50 a foot. Of this amount one-half will go to the Michigan state commission to defray the expense of the state building which will include the motion picture theater. The contract for taking the pictures was awarded to the Industrial Motion Picture Company of Chicago, which will soon begin work.

The Uno theater at Crystal Falls has been sold by Stolberg Brothers to W. H. Needham, formerly a member of the firm of McLaurin & Needham of Gladstone operating the Gem theater and the Gladstone Opera House. Needham also will operate an electrical supply house in Crystal Falls.

Harry S. Waterman, of Muskegon, former lessee of the Bijou theater in Benton Harbor, and Harvey Arlington, former manager of the Bijou, have been at Benton Harbor, negotiating with a view to erecting a $50,000 vaudeville house in that city.

Brown is the color scheme of the newly decorated Royal theater at Calumet. A new indirect lighting system and new Simplex projecting apparatus have been installed.

A new moving picture show will be opened in the building in the east end of Grand Rapids owned by Mrs. Joseph Coburn and now occupied by the Kuperus livery and garage.

The Michigan State Supreme Court has decided that the law passed in 1913, providing for the inspection of moving picture theaters, is valid. The plea that the measure conflicted with the ordinances of Detroit and prevented local government was not upheld by the court. The case was carried to the Supreme Court by two Detroit exhibitors who sought to have an injunction issued restraining employes of the state fire marshal's department from entering their houses and making inspections. The court also ruled that the state fee for inspection was not excessive.

Industrial pictures of Northern and Western Michigan, including Grand Rapids and other cities, have been made and will be shown for the first time at the International Shippers' Convention in Boston, Mass., this month.

The International Harvester Company of Chicago has introduced what it calls the industrialog. This is composed of its films and lectures "The Dawn of Plenty," "The Dawn of Power" and "The Dawn of Commerce." They are to be delivered serially before Chambers of Commerce in Michigan this winter.

"Manager Seeley appears to be the kind of man who will keep the little theater attractive and prosperous," says the Alegan Gazette in speaking of the U R E theater on Hubard street in that city. "He has done much to make it so since he took charge of the place."

The Gaastra theater at Iron River gave a benefit for St. Mary's Church. An effort was made to book "From the Manager to the Cross" for the occasion; but it could not be secured. A return engagement of the Dietz picture, "The Battle of Cameron Dam," was played to big business at the Gaastra.

A. LeRoy Brown, of Lansing, who sold his two houses, the Garden and Orpheum, in that city, will travel through the west with a series of feature films. E. Clement Jarvis, the new owner of the two theaters, has assumed charge. Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays will be regular days for Warners Features at the Garden.

A more thorough examination for moving picture operators in Grand Rapids is proposed and the city attorney was instructed to prepare an ordinance which will define the subjects upon which candidates for a license shall be questioned.

Motion pictures of Detroit, Kalamazoo, Lansing and the West Michigan Pike were shown at the meeting of the Michigan Association of Commercial Secretaries held in Muskegon.

Two reels of moving pictures, one of comedy and one of drama, are proving the best free attractions ever offered the public by the management of Riverside Park at Saginaw.

"Samson" and the Ringling Circus pictures are two features that brought big business to the O. K. theater at South Haven. The juvenile patronage for the show films was unusually heavy.

After the Lyric theater at Ludington had installed its 1915 model Simplex machine, the management explained to the public its good points and the advantage of motor-driven machine over strong-arm power. This is a good stunt if it can be told so that the average man can understand it, and this the Lyric suceeded in doing.

Daniel McCoy, who has been manager for the Empress theater in Kansas City, will be the manager of the new Empress theater in Grand Rapids.

Most theater-goers are now familiar with the appearance of projecting apparatus, but few of them have seen a "talking machine." When the Capital Commercial Film Company of Lansing had a cameraman at Charlotte filming the town, Manager Davis of the Arcade theater had the camera on display in his lobby. The films were made for exhibition at the Arcade.

The Ramona theater at Grand Rapids showed pictures of the Grand Rapids furniture men in conference with Henry Ford at Detroit.

New moving picture equipment, including a machine and booth, will be installed in the Stone theater in Flint which has passed into the hands of the Knights of the Loyal Guard. Rearrangement of the seats, under the direction of a deputy state fire marshal, will increase the capacity to 1,100. A crew of painters has been at work on the new decorative plan. There wil be no Sunday shows and white slave attractions will not be permitted. G. A. Petterson will be manager and Arthur M. McCall assistant manager and treasurer. The formal opening will take place about September 3.

Manistee reports one of the most stringent moving picture censorship ordinances ever drafted. The mayor, at whose request the measure was prepared, wants to forbid the exhibition of any film showing any criminal act of any kind, pocket-picking, counterfeiting, train robbery or any offense for which the participants would deserve arrest.

The ordinance committee of the city council at Grand Rapids, which has been busy with the censorship problem, was informed by E. M. Smith, of the Gilligham & Smith Theatres, that he favored the proposed plan to have a more stringent examination for operators. The necessity of having somebody on the licensing board who would represent the moving picture house was urged upon the city officials.

Joseph Coburn, of Grand Rapids, will erect on Cherry Street, near Diamond Street, in that city, a two-story steel, tile and brick moving picture theatre 96x43 feet, to be used by Mr. Beecher, who has other photoplay houses in that city.

Manager Sullivan, of the Grand and Royal Theatres, at Escanaba, has announced that in the future all his feature pictures will be shown at the Royal Theatre at an admission of 10 cents.

Portraits of political candidates cannot be legally thrown upon the screens in moving picture houses, according to an opinion given by the Attorney-General of Michigan. A section of the primary act decrees under what circumstances the picture of a candidate may be displayed and the use of slides is believed to conflict with the spirit of the law.

F. M. Dickinson has reopened the remodeled Iris Theatre (formerly the Queen) at Hancock. The seating capacity of the house has been doubled by the improvements.

Roy M. Clark, of the Zenith Motion Picture Company, of Chicago, was at Hancock making arrangements to turn his comeramen loose on a series of pictures to be shown at the Orpheum Theatre.

The contract has been let by Andrew Symon, of Munising, for the construction of his new $15,000 theatre on Superior Street, the house to be completed before November 1. It will seat 1,000. It will be booked in connection with theatres in Escanaba, Marquette and other Michigan cities.

The Wenonah theater at Bay City has inaugurated a voting contest with a Maxwell touring car and a Ford roadster as the capital prizes.

A. L. Sovereign, the promoter and principal owner of the new moving picture theater to be erected on Adams street, near Center, in Bay City, has decided to call the house "The Alladdin." The building now on the site will be remodeled into a modern home of photoplays seating 1,000 and the upper floor will be used as the offices of the theater. A novelty is planned in the shape of a flashing electric sign of Alladdin and his wonderful lamp. It is reported L. H. Newcomb, for several years manager of Wenonah Beach, will be the manager of the new theater.

F. Johnson has opened a moving picture show at Merrill.

L. D. Bump has leased Wade's Hall at Otisville and has opened a moving picture theater.

The Lyric Theater & Amusement Company of Laurium has opened a moving picture show in the St. George Hall at Mohawk.

F. J. Ouelette is remodeling the moving picture theater which he recently purchased at Newaygo.

B. E. Newman made a number of interesting films in Negaunee, which were shown at the Star theater in that city.

The erection of a new opera house in Bronson is contemplated.

Two reels of pictures, including a scene aboard the Yantic, the U. S. Naval reserve boat, were made for the Commercial Club of Marquette by B. E. Newman. The pictures were booked for exhibition at the Marquette Opera House the first four days in September.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

CINCINNATI.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD that a deal is under way whereby the Cincinnati Buckeye Film Company, one of the leading local exchanges, will change hands, but the details have not yet been perfected to a state where the transaction can be made public. Fred Lux, manager of the exchange, is also interested in it financially, and is taking an active part in the adjustment of the deal.

"The Valley of the Moon," a Bosworth production, was the attraction at the Lubin recently, and it met with unusual success on account of the interest in the story, which ran serially in one of the leading magazines only a short time ago. This production, under the new Lubin policy of showing two big features a week, was followed by "The Little Gray Lady," a Famous Players release featuring Jane Grey. The film drama was highly effective.

Mild weather in Cincinnati during the past week or two has been very much appreciated by exhibitors and film fans alike, resulting in appreciably larger houses than have been the rule during the greater part of the summer. With the withdrawal from the motion picture game of several of the large theaters which were otherwise idle during the summer, the other downtown exhibitors have had little to complain of in the way of business during the past few weeks. The interest felt in the European situation has also been responsible for increased attendance everywhere, as theater-goers are eager to see films bearing in any degree on the conditions existing at the seat of the war.

The Kleine-Cines production of "Antony and Cleopatra" was shown at the Jefferson, of Hamilton, Ohio, last week, with much success, the play meeting the expectations of audiences, based on the high standards set by previous features of the Kleine-Cines combination.

The Dayton News, one of the newspapers of Dayton, Ohio, held the crowd which turned out on the night of the recent Ohio primary election to get the returns not only by showing the figures as rapidly as they were available but by projecting motion pictures between times. The innovation was successful in every way, serving to give the crowd something to look at at times when the returns were slow in coming in, and the paper plans to make the idea a permanent fixture in its election day service.

"The Wrath of the Gods," a New York Motion Picture Company feature, in six reels, duplicated successes elsewhere when it was shown at the Orpheum, in Dayton, during the whole of last week, at advanced prices. Evening prices were raised by Manager Rayburg to 20 cents, but had not the slightest effect on the attendance, as the crowds which came to see the production seemed not to be lessened in any degree by the increased admission charge.

The Grand Opera House, of Canton, Ohio, was re-opened last week, after a closed period of several months, during which the house was thoroughly overhauled in every respect. W. T. Grover, manager of the Feiber and Shea motion picture houses in Akron, Ohio, is in temporary charge of the house. The opening attraction at the Grand was "Cabiria," a seven-reel historical drama. It has not yet been decided, according to Manager Grover, whether the house will be devoted to motion pictures during the entire season, it being probable, however, that at least occasional offerings of first class drama will be made.

The Sun Amusement Company of Springfield, Ohio, operating the Alhambra and the Columbia motion picture houses in that city, is using two columns weekly in one of the papers, devoting the space to a complete showing of the programs for the two houses for the following week, setting forth the productions to be shown, with the players who will be seen in them, day by day. The company has found this plan to be much appreciated by patrons of the two houses, who are in this way enabled to make their arrangements well in advance to see favorite players in promising productions.

Motion picture advertising occupies no inconsiderable portion of the space in Chillicothe, Ohio, papers, the management of the Skydome, the Queen, the Star and the Royal, as well as others, indicating a strong belief in the power of publicity for the purpose of letting people know what is going on at their houses.

CASEY.

ILLINOIS.

IT IS the exhibitors in the smaller Illinois towns who are coming forward to champion the serials and, contrary to what might be expected, the houses in some of the larger cities which, it is declared, are not finding them profitable. The owner of a theater in an Illinois town of 1,500 says he finds that his patrons, including the people from the country roundabout, will get interested in the continued story and attend more consistently than when the regular mixed program is shown. The near-metropolitan exhibitor says the trouble is that in the cities of from 25,000 up there are too many serials running in the various theaters and because of other attractions the photoplaygoers cannot see every episode. Rather than take the story incomplete they seek out the houses which run regular programs, it is declared. It is common gossip among downstate moving picture men that one city of 30,000 blames past bad business to the serial.

Bloomington is to have a modern motion picture house costing from $30,000 to $40,000 if the necessary local capital can be enlisted. A tentative site has been secured and it is planned to erect a first floor house seating between 1,000 and 1,500 persons. The names of the promoters have been withheld but interested persons are put in touch with them through the Bloomington Pantagraph.

The opera house at Mount Olive, which has been owned by the C. J. Kesler estate, has been sold to J. J. Frey, an electric lighting and public utility man of Hillsboro.

The Variety theater at Staunton has been sold by Meyer Brothers to A. Katz, proprietor of the men's furnishing department of the Sherman Stores in that city. The building will be remodeled and will continue to be used as a theater.

The Orpheum theater at Ottawa had William Medcalf, cameraman of Evansville, Ind., busy on the streets of Ottawa to make a local feature.

Manager S. O. Tibbs of the Pythian theater at Marshall has booked in a strong line of feature pictures for that small city to be shown in the next few months. In addition to a number of the Famous Players Features there are such attractions as "Neptune's Daughter," "The Christian," "Rainey's African Pictures," "John Barleycorn," and "The Spitfire." On the dates not filled by these and by road shows regular licensed programs will be used.

Children under twelve are admitted free Friday nights at the Neal Opera House in Rantoul.

Simultaneously with the run of the serial, "The Trey o' Hearts," Manager Ruhman of the Bijou theater at Waukegan will conduct a voting contest in which he will give a sewing machine to the most popular woman.

A warrant was sworn out by the city electrician on Rock Island charging William Green, manager of the Family theater at Nineteenth street and Second avenue in that city, with violating the local ordinance which provides that a certain number of properly signal-lighted exits must be maintained. A fine of $10 and costs was imposed.

The head offices of the Modern Woodmen of America are located in Rock Island, so it was a stroke of good business when the Empire theater in Rock Island booked the five reels recording the events at the meeting of the head camp in Toledo, Ohio. The interest was greater, too, because the prize-winning Rock Island drill team was featured in the films.

"The moving picture habit is growing on Galesburg," says the Mail of that city. "It is growing at the rate of about three new theaters per year. Where will it stop?"

Business men of Sadorus have been negotiating with Richard Brown of Ivesdale to furnish them with a free picture show on their streets one night each week.

Frank Fuhrmann, the Waukegan man who purchased from Roy C. Jones the Bijou theater on Sheridan road in that city, announced that after Labor Day the exclusive picture policy would be superseded by a program made up of three acts of vaudeville and five reels of pictures. A ten-cent admission will be charged.

It is probable that William Wright, an experienced show man, will be the manager of the new opera house in Havana to be erected by Dr. L. G. Pullen, a dentist of that city. A policy of moving pictures has been outlined, the photoplays giving way occasionally to some theatrical attraction. The plans have been drawn and call for a house seating 900. The picture-play has grown in popularity in Havana. A correspondent of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD owned one of the pioneer houses there when the moving picture was young. People thought a five-cent show was so cheap that it could not be worth the time to view it. At the suggestion of a local banker the admission was raised to ten cents for a single reel and the many-fold crowds were satisfied!

Carl Noren, owner of the Royal theater, which has been under construction at 322 Seventh street in Rockford, was in Chicago making arrangements for film service, preparatory to the opening about September 15. The seating contract was awarded to the American Seating Company of Chicago. The new house represents an outlay of about $11,000.

N. M. and W. A. McLaughlin of Rio have taken their moving picture experience to Kewanee, where they will have secured control of the Bijou theater on North Main street and will conduct it.

All the employes of the Princess theater at De Kalb took a week's vacation while the house was closed. Manager Glen Reynolds and Mrs. Reynolds spent an enjoyable time at Rome on the Illinois River.

Edward Churchill, general manager of the Saxe Amusement Enterprises, was in Peoria and made a deal whereby that company took over the Hippodrome theater for a term of ten years. The Hippodrome was erected by Vernon C. Seaver, the Peoria moving picture magnate, and has always had a sprinkling of pictures in its bills and in the summer was given over entirely to the photoplay. Churchill formerly was manager of the Main Street theater in Peoria.

The mortgage sale of the Gem theater at Lincoln was called off. The judgment was satisfied by Charles Terry, a baker of Virden, and P. M. Silloway, the owner, formerly of Virden, re-opened the house. Arrangements were made to redecorate and remodel the house.

Manager J. W. Edwards of the Aledo Opera House at Aledo has made arrangements to give his patrons a Famous Player feature subject each week.

Alleging that a contract involving a lease on the Family theater at Rock Island was broken, Harry S. Waterman filed suit for $498 damages against W. J. Bryson. Waterman declared that he paid Bryson $298 to apply on the rental and believing that he was to have control of the house he expended $200 more. Then, he alleges, the contract was broken and he asked the court that he be reimbursed for his outlay.

With "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" as a feature, the Auditorium at Galesburg recently gave a special children's Saturday matinee.

F. A. Barr has awarded the contract to a Chicago company for supplying the seats for his new moving picture theater in the Knights of Pythias building in Lacon.

L. A. Castle and W. J. Forster, who purchased the Lyceum theater at Wyoming from Lawrence Higbee, will operate the house every night except Sunday. Among the improvements contemplated by the newcomers are the rearrangement of the house to increase the capacity from 317 to 400. James McDonald will continue his connection with the house.

Manager Ray Schroder of the new Colonial theater at Galesburg has fixed his opening day at about November 1, if construction plans do not go wrong.

The first of the home film society dramas by the Elite Production Company, "The Romance of Waukegan," was presented at the Elite theater in that city.

An operating room has been built and equipment installed at the Illinois Soldiers' Orphans' Home at Normal so that the children may have regular moving picture programs.

Manager Lowenstein has re-opened the Vitagraph theater at White Hall which was closed because of hot weather.

The "Creation" pictures have been running at the Elks' theater in Taylorville.

The pay day stunt of advertising has been given a trial by the "K" theater at Mattoon.

The Broadway Airdome at Centralia was closed the week of the Moose Carnival.

Moving picture shows can participate in the Dollar Day fetes put on by merchants of a city if they follow the plan of the Aurora theater at Aurora. On the same day that all the stores were offering bargains at a dollar the theater sold twenty-five tickets for a dollar. These tickets were not good on Sundays nor for special attractions unless used as children's tickets.

Some of the moving picture shows at the Princess theater in Beardstown will now give way to other attractions. Arrangements have been made for patrons to see their favorite serials at the Gem theater before the curtains go up at the Gem theater.

Manager Miller of the Palace theater at Woodstock has been enjoying a vacation in Wisconsin. E. F. Baccus was in charge of the house.

The new moving picture theater at Third and Market streets in Alton will be known as The Habit, the name being selected in a prize contest. "Get the Habit" is the slogan which will be used in all advertising of the house.

The Variety theater at Westfield has been redecorated inside and out. This house has been giving away numerous prizes to its patrons.

The Hutton Moving Picture Company has been showing under canvas at Lake Fork, Latham and other towns in the neighborhood of Lincoln.

Manager Floyd P. Lee of the Colonial theater in Quincy recently gave a four-reel benefit performance for a local camp of the Woodmen of the World.

Photoplays are out at the Orpheum theater McHenry will have a modern ground-floor in Rockford and vaudeville is in again.

picture house, J. W. Smith, manager of the Central Opera House and the Riverside Airdome, having secured a site in that part of the community known as Centerville. The buildings now occupying the site will be razed and an up-to-date theater erected.

Prospects are good for an addition to the moving picture theater colony in Normal, the twin city of Bloomington. Three or four men and one woman have been there looking over what is reported as a good field for another house.

When the Star theater at South Wilmington was asked to give an appropriate program for the benefit of the Methodist church, "The Cricket on the Hearth," in three reels, and two reels of comedy were shown.

John Tucker of Walnut Grove has purchased the Reinke Opera House at Spring Valley and will manage the theater. The consideration was $22,000.

Manager E. C. Lind of the Lyric theater at Anna admitted free to the first show of "The Perils of Pauline" anyone by the name of Pauline.

The Majestic theater at Paxton has added a stage for vaudeville.

A moving picture show has been opened at Gays, giving performances every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday night.

Manager W. A. Clark of the Ouatogo theater at Upper Alton has had the house remodeled and redecorated.

John Egan, for two years manager of the Cuba Cubs baseball team at Cuba has resigned to engage in the moving picture business.

A regular baseball program was offered by the Majestic theater at Belvidere. In conjunction with the take-over reel of the game between the Chicago Movies and the Belvidere teams, the two-reeler, "Home Run Baker's Double," was featured.

Carl Malone has re-opened the Grand Opera House at Robinson and will operate with a picture policy. A "Country Store" and similar advertising stunts have been announced.

The International Vaudeville and Motion Picture theater directory of Chicago has been incorporated with capital stock of $2,500 to do a general publishing business. The incorporators are N. A. Lacy, M. V. Kelly and L. Ranous.

Manager Loren Bennett of the Gem theater at Atlanta arranged with a dozen or more of the leading merchants of the town for a booster advertising campaign in the way of free shows to be held at the Gem theater Saturday afternoons for a period of ten weeks. In order to not kill the regular business a new program was offered every Saturday night.

The Picture Palace Corporation of Chicago has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000 to own, hold, conduct and operate theaters in the state of Illinois or in the United States. The incorporators are Grinnel F. Oliver, Julian A. Wray and S. B. McConnico.

An unusually strong program of photoplays was a big feature offered the patrons of the Chautauqua assembly at Paxton. The people were shown such educational and entertaining productions as "Quo Vadis," "The Battle of Gettysburg," "Joseph in Egypt" and "The Spy."

The Airdome at Roodhouse gave a benefit picture show for the local band.

Witt now has only one moving picture house. The Colonial, the oldest photoplay theater, has been closed, the fixtures stored and the building will be remodeled for business purposes. Thomas O'Dowd, who was manager of the Colonial and C. J. Law have taken a lease on Anton Avena's Opera House and will operate it as a picture theater, O'Dowd acting as manager. The pictures will be booked in connection with the New Palace in Nokomis, New Palace and Grand Opera House in Pana and the Mattoon house in which Law is interested.

Avonia Hall, a new moving picture theater, has been opened at Avon. A four-reel show will be given each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday night.

Where the Pastor Russell pictures ("The Photo-Drama of Creation") is being shown in theaters there is little opposition upon the part of churchmen who resent the use of such a broad title, as the International Bible Students' Association is promulgating the beliefs of a group of people. At Decatur the films were shown in the auditorium of the high school and the ministers were up in arms. The high school also was used at Granite City but with little objection.

Edward Elankenburg sold the Orpheum theater at Cuba to the Cuba Photo Play Company and has returned to the theatrical field. The Photo Play Company in turn sold the Orpheum, the Bell and the Airdome to A. E. Wilson, who four years ago was proprietor of the Bell. The new manager admitted women and children free at the re-opening of the Orpheum.

Max Nathan, for the last five years manager of the Virginian theater at Hoopeston, sold it to Worley A. Ross, who will operate it in connection with his other houses in Hoopston. Extensive improvements for the Virginian have been planned and it is probable that the name of the house will be changed. Ten cents for adults and five cents for children will be charged at both the Virginian and the Princess. The former house will give vaudeville and pictures and the Princess exclusively photoplays.

Manager W. F. Tilford of the Star theater at Murphysboro had an 800-foot reel made of the Logan Day exercises when the late Gen. John A. Logan was honored by his fellow-townsmen. The pictures were shown at the Star and Tilford made arrangements to book them throughout Southern Illinois, which has native pride in the memories of the great civil war general. The Yale theater at Carbondale was one of the first houses to show the films. The picture will be a part of the records to erect a handsome monument at Murphysboro to Gen. Logan and the volunteer soldiers.

Business is improving among Springfield exhibitors. This is due to more tolerable weather conditions as well as to a dearth of other attractions in the city. Also some of the increase is attributed to the newspaper advertising done. Practically all Springfield houses use the papers regularly. Large space is seldom used but the insertion of the daily program has brought results. One manager was heard the other day advising an exhibitor in a suburb twelve miles out of Springfield to advertise in the Springfield papers.

The Illinois State Journal in Springfield has sprung a new stunt in advertising the stories of the picture plays which it runs. The first day of each month the back page of the paper is made up as a handsome two-color wall-sheet calendar for the month. Under a new plan these sheets, which are so attractive and so conspicuous that they are hung in most of the subscribers' homes, will now and then be graced by the pictures of the photoplay stars who are featured in The Journal's stories. The first of the series was a large half-tone of Miss Kathlyn Williams of the Selig Company. The only other time the moving picture has been recognized on this calendar was when the appearance of "From the Manger to the Cross" was underlined on the date it was to appear at a local house. Both The Journal and The Register are running the "Trey o' Hearts," which is appearing at the Vogue and the Royal theaters.

The Princess theater, Fifth street and Capitol avenue, Springfield is taking care of the slight intermission between shows by featuring Ray Wilson, a member of the house orchestra, who is a xylophone soloist above the average. This, the newest Springfield house, is doing a deservedly good business. Upon a recent visit a correspondent of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD found the projection good the program apparently pleasing to the crowd, the orchestra fair, although it did not play the pictures, and the courteous treatment by the employes to all patrons should be an asset to the house. This house has natural ventilation on two sides and is a delightful place. The only jarring note in the ensemble was the eccentric performance of an electric piano during the supper hour.

T. C. German, house manager for the Vaudette theater, South Fifth street, Springfield, is still talking about the business that house did with Essanay's "One Wonderful Night." It played as a Sunday attraction and the crowds which backed into the streets were continuous. The Lyric just across the street was successful in getting it for a return date which did another record business.

A strong bid for the patronage of organized labor in Springfield was made by the Amuse-U on North Sixth street, which turned over its house two days for a benefit for the local Federation of Labor.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

SAN FRANCISCO.

THE NAT A. MAGNER COMPANY has been incorporated here to do a general moving picture business, the capital stock being placed at $75,000. The directors of the concern are Nat A. Magner, C. V. Kavanagh and R. P. Ashe. The first two mentioned are already in business as the Independent Film Producers' Agency Company, with offices in the Pacific building.

The Empress theater has inaugurated the policy of running continuous performances from 1:30 to 11 o'clock. The afternoon prices are 10 and 20 cents, while the evening prices range from 10 to 30 cents. Loew's vaudeville and photoplays are now shown at this playhouse.

The fire chiefs of the coast will meet here prior to the annual convention of the Association of Western Fire Chiefs at Victoria, B. C., and moving pictures will be taken of the exhibition drills to be held on the Panama-Pacific 2international Exposition grounds. The pictures will be shown here and will then be taken to the coast convention and later to the national convention at New Orleans in October.

The Cort theater has gone over to moving pictures for a few weeks, its offering for this week being "Atlantis." Next week George Kleine's great production, "Spartacus," will be shown. The prices at these attractions are 15 and 25 cents.

The Turner & Dahnken Circuit has offered a valuable silver trophy to be awarded as a prize at the California Apple Show to be held in San Francisco early in October. This concern is erecting a splendid photoplay house at Watsonville, the leading apple growing district of the West, and is taking great interest in the success of the show.

The Savoy theater has been reopened under the management of D. J. Grauman of Grauman's Imperial the initial offering being Jack London's "Martin Eden." Much interest is being taken in this picture, many of the scenes having been enacted on San Francisco Bay.

The Kolb & Dill Company has been incorporated here with a capital of $25,000 to lease and own theaters, produce plays and moving pictures and organize companies of players. The directors are Charlotte Kolb and A. T. O'Connell of San Francisco and George D. Perry of Oakland.

Sidney C. Martenstein has been granted a permit to conduct a moving picture show at 271 Divisadero street. A new theater is being erected at this location.

The New York and Pacific Coast Amusement Company has been incorporated at San Francisco by C. Marks, G. N. Klemyer and G. Videau. The capital stock is placed at $10,000.

Charles Newman, 34 Ellis street, has been granted a permit by the Board of Police Commissioners to conduct moving picture exhibitions.

C. H. Mason, formerly one of the leading exhibitors of this city, and who recently disposed of his theater here, has left for the East with his wife, who is in ill health.

Frank De Cesare is preparing to conduct moving picture exhibitions at 538 Columbus avenue.

The Supreme Features Corporation has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000 by Charles Stillwell, C. Mowe, A. S. Newburgh, L. R. Friedman and H. Rosenstell, with a capital stock of $50,000. Mr. Stillwell is manager of the Silver Palace theater on Market street.

Joseph Yost has been granted a permit to conduct a moving picture house at 4734 Mission street.

One of the immediate effects of the European war has been to cause exhibitors to attempt to secure large stocks of carbons and other supplies that are imported, but most of the exchanges and supply houses are refusing to fill orders in full, allowing but limited quantities to each exhibitor until they are certain that stocks can be had.

The Globe Film Exchange has moved to the third floor of the Pantages Building at 935 Market street, its former quarters on the fourth floor having been taken over by the Apex Feature Service and the De Luxe Attractions.

Ray Duhem, the camera man who accompanied Aviator Robert G. Fowler on his memorable trip across the Isthmus of Panama, is making a trip to the Yellowstone National Park to take some pictures that will be shown here in 1915.

M. B. Dudley, general manager of the Panama-Aero Film Company, has been spending considerable time of late at Los Angeles, where the Panama Canal pictures have been shown. Aviator Robert G. Fowler has also been there lecturing on the films at each show. The pictures will be shown at San Francisco at an early date.

A boycott was declared recently on the Panama theater on the Mission road. This house was sold some time ago by Robert McNeill to H. Warnock and later Mr. McNeill took back a half interest in the house. When he started to operate the Operators' Union objected and the theater was boycotted. The boycott has since been suspended, pending a settlement of the difficulty.

H. W. Baerresen, architect for the Colorado Commission of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, is in San Francisco arranging for the erection of a State Pavilion on the Exposition grounds. A large lecture hall where scenic attractions will be displayed through the medium of moving pictures will be a feature of the structure.

The Southern California Moving Picture Men's Association has made an application to join the California State Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

The moving picture exhibitors of San Francisco were startled this week by an order issued by Chief of Police White which specified that no motion pictures might be shown which included war scenes of any description. M. E. Cory, vice-president of the National League, and Ralph L. Marks, secretary of the San Francisco local, visited the chief and secured a modification of the order which permitted exhibitors to show war scenes not featuring the armies of any of the countries now engaged in war. Believing that the fears of the Chief of Police that riots would occur should war pictures be shown were not founded on fact and that he had overstepped his authority, Charles Stillwell, manager of the Silver Palace theater, 729 Market street, proceeded with an exhibition of a feature film he had booked in advance, "Faithful Unto Death." He was arrested but later secured a temporary injunction against Chief White to prevent him from interfering with the exhibition of any war film. This production was shown for four days at the Silver Palace without the least sign of a disturbance on the part of patrons. Mr. Stillwell in speaking of the matter, says: "Doubtless there are some sections of the city where a display of war films might cause a disturbance. No exhibitor wishes to show anything that might result in trouble but he is the best judge of what should be exhibited in his house and may be relied upon to make a better selection of film than a member of the police force. Chief White overstepped his authority when he made such a sweeping order as this and is even acting without the Board of Censorship. He would stop exhibitions of the film weeklies and productions in which there is now great public interest and at the same time allow newspapers to print photographs and sensational war news and to allow crowds to collect around the bulletin boards to feed on sensational reports." A number of Market street houses were showing war pictures but Mr. Stillwell was the only theater manager arrested, it evidently being the purpose to make this a test case.

The work of remodeling the Theater Fresno is now well under way and as soon as this is completed the house will be opened with "The Christian" or "The Spoilers."

"The Christian" is booked for an early appearance at the Oakland Photoplay conducted by Turner & Dahnken. It will be shown for four days and will be brought back later for a three day run.

I. Fenton is erecting a handsome new theater at Elmhurst, Cal., this being a handsome fireproof structure to seat about 300 persons.

E. S. Crawley, of the Pastime theater, Bakersfield, Cal., is spending a vacation at San Francisco to escape the heat of the valley.

Willis Thompson is already making preparations for the summer season of 1915 at Visalia, Cal., and is planning the construction of an airdome of unusually large size and handsome appointments.

The Franklin theater, one of the latest additions to the list of moving picture houses at Oakland, Cal., has installed two Power's Cameragraphs No. 6A.

E. H. Louser, formerly a well-known exhibitor of Oakland, Cal., has taken over the Colonial theater at Merced, Cal.

City Commissioner Carragher of Sacramento, Cal., who is also the official censor, has issued an order prohibiting the display of moving pictures of war. An order has also been issued against the playing of national airs in theaters.

The Equator Film Company has been incorporated at San Diego, Cal., by N. K. Parkhurst, A. B. Bowman, L. C. Wright, C. T. Davenport and M. H. McClure. The capital stock is placed at $25,000.

Articles of incorporation of the Twentieth Century Players Film Company have been filed at Los Angeles, Cal., by A. C. Hartman, R. H. Palmer, A. E. Weiss Jr., R. Costello and E. G. Grubb, the capital stock being placed at $250,000.

A. Kaiser, official photographer of the Dinuba Chamber of Commerce, recently took some interesting moving pictures near there showing the peach drying industry in detail. The films will be exhibited at the San Francisco Exposition in 1915.

The fire which completely destroyed the big five-story Fulton hotel at Fresno, Cal., on the night of Saturday, August 8, around nine o'clock, was faithfully recorded by the Fresno Film Company, Fresno, Cal. Shortly after the fire began the Fresno company received word of the big conflagration and immediately dispatched Mr. Laval, a cameraman, who managed to obtain a photographically good film of the entire occurrence. The quick action of the film company did not come to an end when the picture was taken, but continued until the film was ready for the projection machine. The film was projected for the first time during the afternoon show at the Pastime theater in Fresno, and attracted great interest. CHURCH.

MONTREAL.

IT is war, war, war and more war in Montreal, at the present time. The weather is exceptionally fine, and all in all, Gen. Sherman's idea of what war is, is all wrong, so far as local exhibitors are concerned. All the theaters are putting on special war subjects, and nearly all have special wires connected with some newspaper office, so that their patrons know the news before the extras are on the str[illegible].

Price West, manager of the Family Theater, has just returned from a trip to Buffalo, Rochester and other points. He says that business seems to be going good in those cities. "The Million Dollar Mystery," and "The Trey o' Hearts" are going strong at his house. Mr. West has a special wire from a newspaper office and gives his patrons all the latest war news. (Continued on page 1400.)

Calendar of Licensed Releases

Current Releases

MONDAY, AUGUST 31, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Counterfeiter's Daughter (Drama).....
EDISON—The Buxom Country Lass (Ninth of the Wood B. Wedd Series) (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—Love and Soda (Comedy).....
KALEM—The Brand (Special—Two Parts—Drama).....
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 55 (News).....
—(Title not reported).....
SELIG—Who Killed George Graves (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 53 (News).....
VITAGRAPH—The Wrong Flat (Comedy).....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1914.

CINES—The Voice of Innocence (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
EDISON—The New York Police Department Carnival (Descriptive) .....
ESSANAY—No. 28 Diplomat (Drama).....
KALEM—The Hand of Fate (Drama).....
LUBIN—Never Too Old (Comedy).....
—The Green Alarm (Comedy).....
MELIES—Flee, You Are Discovered (Comedy).....
PATHE—(Title not reported).....
SELIG—Life's Crucible (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—The Hidden Letters (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1914.

EDISON—A Village Scandal (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—Fable of the Regular Beanery and the Peachy Newcomer (Comedy) .....
KALEM—The Oil Well Conspiracy (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
LUBIN—By Whose Hand (Special—Two Parts—Drama)..
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 56 (News).....
SELIG—To Be Called For (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—The Lost Cord (Comedy).....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—The Chief's Love Affair (Comedy).....
—Love and Hash (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—When Macbeth Came to Snakeville (Comedy).
LUBIN—The Face in the Crowd (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
MELIES—A Case of Imagination (Comedy).....
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 54 (News).....
VITAGRAPH—The Upper Hand (Drama).....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1914.

EDISON—The Viking Queen (Special—Two Parts—Drama).
ESSANAY—Under Royal Patronage (Special—Two Parts—Drama) .....
KALEM—The Winking Zulu (Comedy).....
LUBIN—The Shell of Life (Drama).....
SELIG—The House That Went Crazy (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—The Barrel Organ (Comedy).....

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—For the Cause (Drama).....
EDISON—Hearts of the Forest (Drama).....
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy, the Vagabond (Drama).....
KALEM—The Gambler's Reformation (Drama).....
LUBIN—A Fool There Was (Comedy).....
SELIG—Pawn Ticket "913" (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—Too Much Uncle (Special—Two Parts—Comedy) .....

Advance Releases

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—(Title Not Reported).....
EDISON—An Absent-Minded Cupid (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—When Knights Were Bold (Comedy).....
KALEM—The Devil's Dansant (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 57 (News).....
SELIG—When the West Was Young (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
SELIG-HEARST—Selig News Pictorial No. 55 (News)....
VITAGRAPH—The Unwritten Play (Drama).....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1914.

CINES—(Title Not Reported).....
EDISON—The Blind Fiddler (Drama).....
ESSANAY—Bill's Boy (Drama) .....
KALEM—A Mother's Atonement (Drama).....
LUBIN—As We Forgive Those (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
MELIES—Hen Fruit (Comedy).....
PATHE—(Title Not Reported).....
SELIG—A Typographical Error (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—Brandon's Last Ride (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1914.

EDISON—Getting Andy's Goat (Tenth of the Andy Series) (Comedy) .....
ESSANAY—The Fable of "The Honeymoon That Tried to Come Back" (Comedy) .....
KALEM—The Fuse of Death (Special—Two parts—Drama)
LUBIN—As We Forgive Those (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
PATHE—Pathe's Daily News No. 58 (News).....
SELIG—The Man in Black (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—The Band Leader (Comedy).....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—(Title Not Reported).....
ESSANAY—Snakeville's Most Popular Lady (Comedy)....
LUBIN—On Lonesome Mountain (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
MELIES—Uninvited (Comedy).....
SELIG—Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 56 (News).....
VITAGRAPH—Bella's Elopement (Drama).....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1914.

EDISON—Face Value (Special—Two parts—Drama).....
ESSANAY—The Devil's Signature (Special—Two parts—Drama) .....
KALEM—Ham, the Lineman (Comedy).....
LUBIN—Squaring the Triangle (Drama).....
SELIG—Oh! Look Who's Here! (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—A Study in Feet (Comedy).....

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1914.

BIOGRAPH—(Title Not Reported).....
EDISON—Dick Potter's Wife (Drama).....
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy, a Friend in Need (Drama)....
KALEM—The Path to Ruin (Drama).....
LUBIN—He Nearly Won Out (Comedy).....
LUBIN—Too Many Aunts (Comedy).....
SELIG—The Missing Page (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—He Danced Himself to Death (Special—Two parts—Comedy) .....

SEND FOR SAMPLE ORDER of announcement slides beautifully colored and properly illustrated. Any of the following at 25c. each; send stamps or money order with all orders: "Intermission." "Next Time You Come Bring Your Whole Family." "We Select the Best Photoplays Obtainable for Our Program." "All Children Occupying Seats Must Have Tickets." "Special Western Feature." "A Slight Interruption." "Next Picture in a Moment." "A Special Program Tomorrow. Don't Miss It." "Welcome."

AMERICAN SLIDE & POSTER CO., First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Calendar of Quality Releases

A description of Biograph Quality Releases and a weekly glimpse of the activities of Biograph Studios will be found in our booklet, The Biograph, issued each week.

Mailed Free to all Motion Picture Exhibitors by BIOGRAPH COMPANY
807 East 175th Street
New York

Calendar of Independent Releases

Mutual Film Corporation

SUNDAY, AUGUST 30, 1914.

KOMIC—Bill No. 5—Bill Organizes a Union (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—Frenchy (Two parts—Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Arty the Artist (Comedy).....

MONDAY, AUGUST 31, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Aftermath (Two parts—Drama).....
KEYSTONE—(Title not reported).....
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl No. 33 (Topical).....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1914.

BEAUTY—A Modern Othello (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—The Milk-Fed Boy (Comedy-Drama).....
THANHOUSER—A Mother's Choice (Two parts—Drama).

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1914.

AMERICAN—The Wrong Birds (Comedy).....
BRONCHO—When America Was Young (Two parts—Drama) .....
RELIANCE—The Miner's Baby (Drama).....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1914.

DOMINO—The Silver Bell (Two parts—Drama).....
KEYSTONE—(Title not reported).....
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 88 (News).....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1914.

KAY BEE—Stacked Cards (Two parts—Drama).....
PRINCESS—His Winning Way (Comedy).....
RELIANCE—Turned Back (Drama).....

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title not reported).....
RELIANCE—In the Nick of Time (Two parts—Drama)...
ROYAL—Flanagan's Luck (Comedy).....

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1914.

KOMIC—The Mascot (Comedy).....
MAJESTIC—For Those Unborn (Two parts—Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Little Mischief (Comedy).....

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1914.

AMERICAN—Lola (Two parts—Drama).....
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Reported).....
RELIANCE—Our Mutual Girl, No. 34 (Topical).....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1914.

BEAUTY—The Motherless Kids (Comedy—Drama).....
MAJESTIC—Sierra Jim's Reformation (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Jean of the Wilderness (Two parts—Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1914.

AMERICAN—Break! Break! Break! (Drama). .....
BRONCHO—The Cruise of the Molly Anne (Two parts—Drama) .....
RELIANCE—The Sheriff's Choice (Drama).....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1914.

DOMINO—Mildred's Doll (Two parts—Drama).....
KEYSTONE—(Title Not Reported).....
MUTUAL—Mutual Weekly No. 89 (News).....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1914.

KAY-BEE—The Silver Candlestick (Two parts—Drama)...
PRINCESS—Sis (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—In Danger's Hour (Drama).....

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1914.

KEYSTONE—(Title Not Reported).....
RELIANCE—Broken Nose Bailey (Two parts—Drama)...
ROYAL—The Prodigal Husband (Comedy).....

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 30, 1914.

ECLAIR—Mosquito Pete's Fortune (Drama).....
FRONTIER—The Janitor's Son (Drama).....
REX—Out of the Depths (Drama).....

MONDAY, AUGUST 31, 1914.

IMP—Mr. Burglar, M. D. (Drama—Mary Pickford Reissue).
STERLING—The Man From Nowhere (Two parts—Drama)
VICTOR—The Tale of a Hat.....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1914.

CRYSTAL—Curing a Lazy Wife (Comedy).....
GOLD SEAL—The Trey O' Hearts No. 5—The Sunset Tide (Drama) .....
UNIVERSAL IKE—Universal Ike, Jr., Almost Gets Married (Comedy) .....
—The Daring Cyclist (Sports).....

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1914.

ECLAIR—The Jackpot Club (Two parts—Drama).....
JOKER—Father's Bride (Comedy).....
NESTOR—The Foreman's Treachery (Drama).....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1914.

UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly No. 130 (News).....
IMP—Tempest and Sunshine (Two parts—Drama).....
REX—Daisies (Drama) .....
STERLING—A Bogus Baron (Comedy).....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1914.

NESTOR—A Baby Did It (Comedy).....
POWERS—The Storm Bird (Drama).....
—Beautiful Corsica (Scenic).....
VICTOR—The Derelict and the Man (Two parts—Drama).

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1914.

BISON—The Return of the Twin's Double (Three parts—Drama) .....
JOKER—Oh! What's the Use (Comedy).....

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1914.

ECLAIR—No Show for the Chauffeur (Comedy).....
FRONTIER—Under Arizona Skies (Drama).....
REX—The Boob's Nemesis (Comedy).....

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1914.

IMP—The Silent Valley (Two parts—Drama).....
STERLING—The Broken Doll (Comedy).....
VICTOR—Little Meg and I (Drama).....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1914.

CRYSTAL—The Bachelor's Housekeeper (Comedy).....
—Was He a Hero (Comedy).....

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1914.

ECLAIR—Boy (Two parts—Drama).....
JOKER—The Monkey's Cabaret (Comedy).....
—Beau and Hobo (Comedy).....
NESTOR—A Daughter of the Plains (Drama).....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1914.

UNIVERSAL—Animated Weekly No. 131 (News).....
IMP—The Universal Boy in the Juvenile Reformer (Drama)
REX—Helping Mother (Three Parts—Drama).....
STERLING—(No Release This Day).....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1914.

NESTOR—Feeding the Kitty (Comedy).....
POWERS—Angel of the Camp (Drama).....
VICTOR—A Mysterious Mystery (Two parts—Drama)....

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1914.

BISON—Our Enemy's Spy (Three parts—Drama).....
JOKER—Jam and Jealousy (Comedy).....
—The San Clements Island (Scenic).....

War! War!

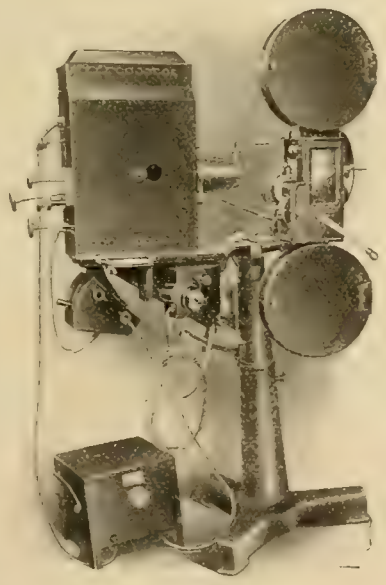
Germany and Austria are practically fighting the whole European Continent.

The Simplex is neutral in the commercial battle.

Three years ago the Simplex started to fight for recognition, and also to elevate the standard of projection.

We have won the battle and today have many thousands of machines in use.

Although the initial cost is slightly in excess of ordinary projectors the upkeep is lower and the quality of projection is superior



Ninety per cent. of the Photo-play Manufacturers and everyone who wants the last word in machine construction, always specify the

Simplex
TRADE MARK PAT'D

Catalogue A will give you full details of operation

MADE AND GUARANTEED BY

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO. INC.

317 East 34th: St··· New York

(Continued from page 1395.)

The Montreal Daily Star has had a screen placed on one of the local office buildings and projects pictures of timely interest on it every evening.

Every move made by the Canadian soldiers, from the moment of mobilization miles away from the scene of war will be perpetuated for future generations in moving picture films, the sanction of the Canadian Government accompanying the request of a former Canadian soldier who will sign on as a soldier of the King. The man who will do this is J. O'Neil Farrell, who has just arrived in the city from the Panama Canal, where he passed the major part of a year for the B. & C. Film Company, of London, England, and is now ready to follow the Canadian troops for the Dominion General Film Corporation, Ltd. Every detail of the great work of mobilizing will be secured by the famous moving picture man, who has had some stirring times, while engaged in the work. He passed through the great miners' strike in Wales a few years ago, and the mimic battles of Napoleon and Waterloo were secured by him with the assistance of 1,800 actors and an audience of 30,000 men, who made up the background for the wonderful production. From the mimic warfare to the real noise and roar of battle is a far cry, but Mr. Farrell is a soldier who is used to military affairs, having been attached to the Prince of Wales Fusilliers when the Duke of York visited this country some years ago. He will take his place in line when the Canadian troops go to the front and cast his fortune with the soldiers to fight for the King.

"America," a faithful film production of last year's New York Hippodrome's attraction, which was to have been shown at the Princess theater for one week commencing August 10, was cancelled, and "Our Navy" was put on instead. It was owing to the large demands of Montrealers who wanted something pertaining to the present war in Europe. The management of this Shuberts' house announce that they have booked "Cabiria" for two weeks commencing August 24. It will be shown exactly as it was presented at the Knickerbocker Theater, New York. A symphony orchestra will furnish the music, together with a large chorus.

As there is a by-law in Montreal prohibiting the showing of boxing films, the pictures of the recent Welsh-Ritchie contest were shown in Maisonneuve, a suburb for two weeks beginning August 15.

It is worth while to call attention to the fact that Rev. Father Reir, preceptor of St. Patrick's Orphan Asylum, of this city, took 125 of the boys of that institution to see the Rainey African Hunt films at the Princess a short time ago. Father Reid in an interview said that his aim was not so much to give the boys a novel form of innocent amusement as to afford the unique lessons in natural history. "The Rainey pictures," he said, "give the spectators a vivid realization of life in the jungle, which could not be gleaned from reading the subject in a book. Education suffers today because teachers have forgotten the primacy of sight in perception. What one sees at first hand with the eye is best appreciated and most impressed on the memory."

J. O. Hooley opened the Francais theater for the season 1914-15 on Monday, August 10. The theater was closed for several weeks during which time some alterations were made. On week days there are two shows, matinee and evening, consisting of seven acts of excellent vaudeville, and some fine photoplays. On Sundays there is a special concert. The stage setting for this concert has been greatly enlarged and improved, and a gold fibre screen has been installed.

Mr. Cross, manager of the Colonial, is having the lobby of his theater repaired and altered. However, business is going on as usual with a fine line of features.

The Imperial is continuing to do its best in the way of giving its patrons photoplays of quality. Some recent features were "Mrs. Bingle's Melodrama," "Othello," and "Captain Alvarez." Mr. Conover, the manager, has special attractions relating to the struggle now going on in Europe.

"The Spartan Girl" was a recent feature at the Tivoli. "The Million Dollar Mystery" is going strong at this house. Mr. English, the manager, has made arrangements with a local paper for the latest war news.

Mr. Herring, manager of the Mount Royal, now has a little intermission between pictures. He took this course because of complaints from his patrons that people would leave at the end of reels and so disturb not only those in the same row but those behind whose view of the screen would be hindered. "The Battle of Waterloo" was given a revival at this house, and on that occasion Mr. Herring offered a five-dollar gold piece to the boy or girl who would best recite Tennyson's "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

The Dominion General Film Corporation, Limited, Montreal, has been granted its charter from the Dominion of Canada. The incorporators are Leslie Carter, Harris and Rudolph L. Bergman of New York, and John William Peachy and Maurice Marcelot of Montreal. Its charter allows it "to manufacture, produce, acquire, own, report, lease, hire, convey, sell, dispose of and deal in films and photographic plates, photographs, animated and other views and pictures, photographic supplies and machinery, tools and apparatus of every sort in connection therewith." The charter allows "to own, lease, construct, operate, manage, maintain and carry on theaters, opera houses, music and concert halls, moving and other picture halls, amusement parks and other places designed for the recreation and amusement of the public and restaurants and refreshment booths and establishments in connection therewith; to deal in and serve all kinds of refreshments, drinks (temperate and otherwise) and smoking materials; to construct, own, lease, and operate boats and launches, scenic and other railways; to acquire, purchase, lease, manage, maintain and operate and to provide for the engagement of theatrical companies for the production of stage plays, vaudeville, animated and other views and pictures; to acquire the business and undertaking as a going concern of 'Canadian Cinematograph, Limited,'" The operations of the company are to be carried on throughout the Dominion of Canada and elsewhere by the name of "Dominion General Film Corporation, Limited." with a capital stock of three hundred thousand dollars, divided into 30,000 shares of ten dollars each, and the chief place of business of the said company to be at the City of Montreal in the Province of Quebec.

The adaptation of that famous emotional story "East Lynne," was recently shown at the Midway theater here. Mr. McBrien, the manager, was pleased with results. GALLAGHER.

KENTUCKY.

M. SWITOW, president of the Switow Amusement Company, of Louisville, left early last week for a trip to Martinsville and Indianapolis, Ind. W. R. Sanford, who was formerly in charge of the house at Vincennes, Ind., which was recently sold, has been transferred to the house at Salem, Ind., and Simon Switow, who has been in charge at Salem, is now in Louisville, where he will supervise the company's interests in the houses located in the three falls cities. Business at all of the houses is improving, according to Simon Switow.

Film exchanges located in Louisville are as a rule improving the aspect of their quarters greatly. Up to a short time ago it appeared to be the idea that any old dark quarters would do for an exchange, but of late better locations have been taken and the rooms renovated and put in first class condition. This change has had some tendency toward putting the motion picture business on a higher plane.

The Empire theater, located on Market street near Shelby, Louisville, is having a thirty-seven foot addition built to the rear of the theater. The addition will give the theater a good many more seats, and will allow for a larger and better stage. The shows are going on just the same and will operate until the addition is ready to join on to the main building, when the theater will be closed for about two days.

Phillip Simons, manager of the Hippodrome theater, Louisville, has returned from a two weeks' vacation trip spent at Marion, Ind. Business at the local theater has improved considerably uring the past month.

The Fourth Avenue Amusement Company's new house in the Wilkes block, Louisville, will not be open by October 1 as was expected when the work commenced. The opening date has now been set for November 1, and with good weather conditions no more setbacks are expected.

A rumor is out concerning a movement of negroes to form a stock company, which will have as its object the establishing of a colored motion picture house at Floyd and Jefferson, Louisville, which is in the center of a thickly populated colored district.

Herbert Bandy, of the Mutual Film Company, was in Louisville again last week, and is said to have made arrangements to open an office in the Camp Restaurant building, that city.

The Hill Top Amusement Company has obtained a permit to erect a motion picture house at Frankfort and Pope streets, Louisville. The new structure will cost approximately $12,000. Work on the foundations has started. A permit for remodeling the Empire theater building at Shelby and Market streets was also taken out. The improvements will cost about $1,500.

The new Colonial picture show was opened at Harrodsburg on the evening of August 11 in the new and attractive room at the assembly building.

The finishing touches were put on the new Princess motion picture theater building at Adairville, and the equipment moved and installed on Friday and Saturday. The first performance was held on Saturday evening, August 8.

The Pastime theater, of Maysville, recently had an added attraction in the way of singing moving pictures. The theater-going public liked the novelty very much and asked that it be returned again in the future. The management will try to secure the moving picture songs for an early date.

The Dixie theater, of Mayfield, which is under the management of Harry Evans, is undergoing repairs and being remodeled in many ways. The floor, which at present is a wooden one, is being replaced by a concrete one. The chairs are being repaired and 100 new opera chairs will be added in order to make room for the large audiences which attend this popular house.

Exhibitors of Owensboro, Henderson and towns near Evansville, Ind., are interested in the outcome of a popularity contest which is being handled by the management of the Savoy and Criterion theaters. Seven hundred dollars will be given away by the management on September 7. The money will be divided into four prizes, which will be distributed to the winners in the popularity contest. The first three prizes will be to individuals receiving the largest number of votes, the grand prize being $400. The fourth is open to any church or club in the city. Ballot boxes have been placed in the theaters and ten votes will be given with each paid admission.

The motion picture houses of Frankfort were recently put out of business for two hours during the evening by a break at the plant of the Kentucky Public Service Company. The injectors on the large battery of boilers became clogged and when discovered the water in the boilers was so low that the fires had to be drawn.. All lights in the city were out from 9:25 until 11.25 o'clock.

Agents of the Maxwell Motors Company, of Detroit, were recently in attendance from all parts of Kentucky for a luncheon held in the red room of the Seelbach hotel. A five-reel motion picture was exhibited, entitled, "From Molten Steel to Automobile," and covered all departments of the large plant. A part of the film showed the Maxwell in action at the Indianapolis speedway, in one of the 500 mile grinds.

C. W. Joehrendt, proprietor of the Arena theater, of Campbellsville, has completed a new electric light plant to furnish power for his motion picture house. The plant is composed of a 3½ kilowatt generator, switchboard and six horsepower gasoline engine. Besides the motion picture and electric lights a number of oscillating fans are driven by the power plant.

The citizens of Hazard have registered a strong protest against the recent order of the police judge of Hazard, in which the latter ordered all motion picture houses, soda fountains and other stores to close on Sunday.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

PHILADELPHIA.

THE failure to secure a license for 1914 may throw out of court the injunction suit of the proprietors of the Cariola Theater against the Department of Public Safety to restrain the department from enforcing an order issued on May 19 prohibiting the use of the building as a theater until certain changes are made. The injunction suit came up before Judge Audenreid and the question was raised as to the legality of the suit because of the failure to secure a license. The case is held under consideration.

Bids are being received for the erection of the new moving picture theater to be erected at 1529-31 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, for Alexander Boyd. The building will be one story and of brick and terra cotta.

Business this summer has exceeded the highest expectations of the promoters of the Family Theater at Thirteenth and Market streets. With June and July receipts reaching a high water mark and August running close behind, everybody connected with the house is wearing a happy smile.

William Black of 152 North Twenty-first street, Philadelphia, has asked the Trenton police to make a search for a moving picture camera which was stolen from the Thomas Brown Hotel, about two miles from Norristown, Pa. The camera weighed 40 pounds and was sent to Norristown to photograph pictures of a horse race there.

The new Liberty Motion Picture Company has begun operations and have already started several photoplays under the direction of Max Milligan. The studio, in which there is adequate space for sixteen sets, will contain four electric light stages and will be supervised by Charles Greener, who has had considerable experience in the film business. The officers of the new company are John A. Axford, president; Howard G. Bobb, vice-president, and general manager; A. E. Hindel, treasurer.

Extensive alterations have just been completed to the Iris Theater, Kensington and Allegheny avenues, Philadelphia. The balcony has been removed and also several objectionable posts, and the interior has been handsomely redecorated.

CONGDON.

CONNECTICUT

ROBERT M. SPERRY, of Bridgeport, has had new prints made of his photoplay "Winning a Bride," or "The Fickleness of Arline," and is booking the films in picture theaters in Bridgeport and vicinity. There are eight reels in the production and at least 10,000 persons appear. Scenes were made at the Bridgeport-Springfield baseball game, the Memorial Day parade, the automobile races at Seaside park and in front of half dozen theaters. The films were shown for two weeks at the Lyric theater and is the only attraction enjoyed a two weeks' run here. Mr. Sperry, for seventeen years, has each year written a play and produced it with a cast of city amateurs augmented by such professionals as Archie Boyd and others. Concluding that the drama has gone and this is the day of the picture play, Mr. Sperry this year devoted his effort to a photo-drama. All who appear in the films are amateurs. Mr. Sperry for thirteen years has been the publisher of the program at the Park theater. He is now devoting his time to a motion picture program for a chain of theaters in Bridgeport and surrounding towns.

Some picture fan evidently enamoured of Mabel Normand, the popular star of the Keystone films, has stolen two valuable pictures of her from the lobby of the Plaza theater in Bridgeport. The first was a picture of Miss Normand in a one-piece bathing suit and was one of a set which Manager Jeff Callan had but recently placed in the lobby. The glass covering was pried off and the picture removed. Manager Callan then secured a 22x28 hand-painted portrait of Miss Normand, together with a portrait of Norma Phillips, "the Mutual Movie girl." He hung the pictures side by side in the lobby. The picture of Miss Normand had been hanging in the lobby but a day when it, too, disappeared. With the picture went Manager Callan's patience. He now has the theater policeman on duty in plain clothes in the lobby, watching for a love-sick man whom he hopes will attempt to steal another picture of Miss Normand in a different costume and pose which has replaced the one that was stolen.

The Crown theater, designed to be one of the most up-to-date moving picture houses in the country, is rapidly nearing completion in State street, New London. The theater has a most commanding location directly in the business heart of the town and bordering on the public square known as "The Parade," through which every visitor to the Whalingtown, no matter how he enters, must pass. The theater is of brick, marble and steel construction, with handsome exterior and lobby. A Sturtevant ventilating system similar to that used in the Little Theater, the Century, The Astor and other theaters in New York and the Poli houses is to be installed. It is expected the handsome little playhouse will open on September 1.

Plans are complete for the building in Stamford in the rear of the Burlington Arcade, a moving picture theater with a seating accommodation of 500. The Tyler Amusement Co. is to build and conduct the theater. Articles of incorporation were recently secured. The capital stock is $1,200, divided as follows: President, George A. Tyler, 20 shares; secretary and treasurer, William W. Hanna, 20 shares; N. C. Mead, 20 shares. These gentlemen are also the board of directors.

On August 18, the Lyceum theater, New London, departed from its former policy of feature pictures and vaudeville and returned to the legitimate, opening with the Henry W. Savage's production of "Sari." The Walter T. Murphy Amusement Co., which has just been incorporated, will conduct the theater. Walter T. Murphy has been manager for more then eight years. The capital stock of the company is $5,000, divided into 50 shares of $100 each. Walter T. Murphy, Charles J. Ducy and and Frank I. Cronin are incorporators.

The Maplewood theater in Maplewood avenue, Bridgeport, opened recently to good business. The theater has been completely remodeled and renovated by the owner and manager, John Donovan. It now has a seating capacity of 450. Manager Donovan is giving a six-reel program for a five-cent admission with a ten-cent admission on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

The Pearlene Studios in Bridgeport made five reels of film of the big state wide Republican gathering here on August 15. The state central committee held a meeting first of which one part of the film was made with Chairman J. Henry Roraback opening the session. Then followed a parade, in which more than 3,000 men with 20 bands and drum corps took part. A sheep roast and picnic in the big Aerodome, in Stratford avenue, was also filmed. In the pictures are leading and lesser Republicans from all parts of the state and the intention of the makers is to book the film all over Connecticut.

BOOTH.

When Writing to Advertisers
Kindly Mention
MOVING PICTURE WORLD

IN THE MIDDLE WEST.

WEBB DOWLER has secured control of what is known as the Commercial Club room in Danbury, Neb., and will operate a moving picture show.

The Grand Theater at Zanesville, O., gave a benefit performance for Bethesda Hospital.

The Crystal moving picture and vaudeville theater at Alliance, Neb., has been closed, the building having been leased for other purposes.

The Princess Theater at Ashtabula, Ohio, recently held a housewarming at which a feature picture and musical program was given.

R. W. Shields, Fred Goll and S. P. Duncan have purchased the Elite theater at Blue Hill, Neb., from J. B. Farnum and have assumed charge.

The Colonial Weekly, giving a weekly record of events in Columbus, Ohio, is proving very popular at the Colonial theater in that city. The editor has a real nose for the unusual and the human interest scenes. One issue recently showed the test of a local inventor's pocket fire escape and the work being done to make the babies of the city healthier.

Both the Rex and the Empress theaters at Nebraska City, Neb., which were closed for alterations, have been re-opened.

P. H. L. Onergan of North Platte, Neb., has opened a moving picture show at Hershey, Neb.

The booking of the Mary Pickford Imp reissues by the management of the Majestic and Princess theaters at Springfield, Ohio, started something. One result was the issuance of the following announcement: "Our friend competitor who is a little inclined to knock our Mary Pickford pictures should have realized by now that every knock is a boost and that if he hasn't come down to this realization he should clip this for reference so that he may have something to refer to in the future when he is figuring on trying to win the esteem of the patrons by telling them the other fellow's business. We have it in our minds that he must have got so excited when he learned that we put one across him by securing exclusive first run Mary Pickford Imp Photoplays that he went up like a balloon. And you know that it takes hot air or gas to send up anything whether it is a balloon or a head. We have known people to die of gastritis. But we wish to state that we are not jealous of any individual or concern. We believe in fair competition and do not care to belittle the dignity of our theaters by monkeying with some spineless ones who don't think that any one else should have success. We are always on the alert to obtain something that will please our patrons, something that is a little bit better than what we have. And for this reason some others have been fired into jealousy at our success in obtaining what we go after."

The Empress theater at Toledo, Ohio, has installed a new front, outlined the front with electric lights and placed a handsome huge golden butterfly as a part of its illumination scheme.

Ogle & Bechthold have leased the Dreamland theater at Loup City, Neb., to Jack Amick and Clayton Conger of that place who have assumed charge.

Henry B. Hoffman, owner and manager of a moving picture theater at Lima, Ohio, recently filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court at Toledo. He scheduled liabilities of $15,237.15 and assets of $775, claiming exemption on $275 worth of furniture.

Tango racers, novelty vehicles, which appeal to athletically inclined youngsters, were given away by the Lyric theater at Piqua, O., as an advertising proposition.

A. P. Canepa, formerly of Richmond, Va., will be the manager of the new moving picture theater which is being erected on Straton Street in Logan, O., by Leslie Kaiser of Yuma, O. The new house which will be 110x30 feet and will seat 400 was expected to open about the first of September.

J. H. Cast has sold his half interest in the Airdome at Cambridge, Neb., to J. A. Scott.

The new theater which Louis Meyers has erected at Germantown, Neb., will be known as The Folly and Rolland Meyers will be manager. It is a handsome structure, 30x80, of dark red pressed brick, with a bungalow roof and is especially well equipped for moving picture shows which will outnumber the traveling theatrical attractions. The owner of the theater controls the land on each side and will leave the building free of other structures in order to secure perfect ventilation.

Names of residents of Xenia, O., are selected at random and printed in the advertisements of the Bijou theater. The person who finds his name is entitled to the free tickets upon calling at the box office.

The opening of the new Imperial theater at Zanesville, Ohio, extended over eight days when special programs of Famous Players' Features were given. Souvenir programs were given during this time by Manager Al White. An orchestra is one of the attractive features of the house.

MIDWEST SPECIAL SERVICE.

PENNSYLVANIA.

MOTION picture exhibitors all over Western Pennsylvania are protesting against film manufacturers not producing enough single reel features to satisfy the exhibitor demand. Fred Herrington, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Pittsburgh, says that Western Pennsylvania calls for variety and quality, being cognizant of the fact that the pinnacle of success in the motion picture business was when the industry was in a position to give the public a variety of subjects or when the single reel was recognized as the leader of the five or ten cent show. At the present time the cry from every place is no business or not anything to compare with the reports of one year ago, and while there are many things which would cause a deficit in our cash boxes this year, we feel there is not one thing that has worked a greater injury to our business than the so-called big features, as the people who come in during the second or third reel of these so-called features have to set twice as long to witness a show as would be necessary with the single reel. It is very much like starting to read a story by commencing in the middle, reading towards the end; and in order to know the complete story one has to commence at the beginning, but in so doing all interest in the plot is lost. The fact must be remembered that the majority of the motion picture exhibitors cannot afford to be continually showing big features as their houses do not have the seating capacity to afford the expense of paying forty or fifty dollars for these big feature films which they are compelled to show night after night as there are not enough single reel features to supply all the houses.

J. Burke of Pittsburgh recently let the contract to A. W. Philips for the construction of a motion picture theater on Broadway, Sharon, Pennsylvania. This theater will cost $10,000 and will be one of the finest in the city. It will have a frontage of forty feet and a depth of 110 feet, and will be located on the ground next to the Peat building. Mr. Burke intends to run a high class house, running nothing but the best feature films obtainable, and the house inside will be fitted with the latest style of furniture, picture screen, decorating, etc.

Remodeling of the lobby at the Nixon theater, Pittsburgh, has been completed, and the improvement adds much to the appearance of the theater entrance; it also is more convenient for the patrons as it will do away with the jam at the door as the people pass in and out. The ticket office is now near the entrance and almost the entire lobby is open. The ice cream counter is also changed to the far end of the lobby. Manager Reed has been running special pictures all summer and has had a full house during every show. He announces that the season for road attractions will be open in September.

The State Board of Censorship has passed on the plans of the new motion picture theater that will be erected on East Pike street, Canonsburg, Pa. The new theater will be known as the Star, and will be managed by A. M. Forsythe, who is also the owner. It will be 43 by 70 feet, and will be modern in every particular. The building will be of brick, with the entrance on Pike street. It will be fireproof throughout and the operating room will be located on the roof, thus being outside the auditorium. The fire exits will be numerous, and the aisles will be wide so that the house can be emptied within a few minutes. The auditorium will seat more than 500, and the furnishings will be of the latest and most improved pattern. It is also arranged so that a large gallery may be added later without interfering in any way with the remainder of the building.

The Acropolis theater at 4823 Second avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., has again changed hands. Mr. Steinburg is now the owner.

The Keystone theater, which shut down June 1 for repairs, is again reopened. When John Hafner, manager, closed the theater, he said then that it would be second to none in equipment, accommodations or style when completed. The floor plan has been completely changed, there now being a much greater slope to insure everyone an uninterrupted view. The seating arrangements are similar to the former ones with the exception that more room is left in the aisles. Two projecting machines of the most modern style and design are installed in the asbestos, fireproof operating room on the balcony of the second floor, and both of these will be in constant use, thus enabling the operator to allow of no intermission in projecting a multiple reel. The front is built of rough tapestry brick, after the style of so many of the large modern buildings recently constructed in Pittsburgh. The trimmings are of white stone, the arches each being centered with a white keystone bearing out the name of the theater. The floor of the entrance is of white tile bordered with blue. The name Keystone and two large Keystones are also worked into the tile floor, making a pretty and appropriate design.

C. O. Baird, manager of the Pastime theater at Portage, Pa., recently installed a mirrored screen in his theater.

MANLEY.

THE KAISER'S CHALLENGE

The record breaking feature of today. Shows maneuvers of the armies and actual close range moving pictures of the Kaiser directing his troops.

Battles Between Germany and Russia
Battles Between Germany and France
Aeroplane Maneuvers

STATE RIGHTS BUYERS

TERRITORY OPEN

Michigan

Indiana and Kentucky

Minnesota, North and South Dakota

Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma

Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa

Colorado, Idaho and Montana

Utah, Wyoming and Arizona

New Mexico

NOTE.—Prints are Now Ready. Here is a chance for quick money. Lose no time and wire.

EXHIBITORS

List of Exchanges Where Exhibitors Can Book This Feature

NEW ENGLAND STATES
American Feature Film Co.....Boston, Mass.
Bought 5 Prints

EA. PENN., SO. N. J., MD., DEL., VA. AND D. OF C.
Electric Theatre Supply Co....Philadelphia and Washington
Bought 5 Prints

ILLINOIS AND WISCONSIN
General Feature Film Co.....Chicago, Ill.
Bought 3 Prints.

CALIFORNIA, OREGON, WASHINGTON
Apex Feature Service.....San Francisco and Los Angeles
Bought 4 Prints

NEW YORK STATE and NORTHERN NEW JERSEY
Feature Service Co.....Room 704, 110 W. 40th St., New York
Bought 4 Prints

OHIO
Exclusive Features.....Cleveland, Ohio
Bought 2 Prints

SOUTHERN STATES
Apex Feature Film Co.....Atlanta and Dallas
Bought 3 Prints

EASTERN CANADA
Picture Playhouse Co.....Montreal

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA and WEST VIRGINIA
Liberty Film Renting Co.....Pittsburgh

THE KAISER FILM CO.

WORLD'S TOWER BUILDING

110 WEST 40TH ST., NEW YORK

LICENSED FILM STORIES

BIOGRAPH.

THE COUNTERFEITER'S DAUGHTER (Aug. 31).—Daddy abandons his unlawful occupation when his daughter comes home and his partner vows to make him return to work. The partner finds an opportunity to make good his vow by threatening the happiness of daddy's girl. However, a kindly fate intervenes to adjust matters in a thrilling and satisfactory manner.

FOR THE CAUSE (Sept. 5).—The foreign secret agents were determined to secure the young American's high-power explosive discovery by fair means or foul. How the chief agent's young niece secured a grip upon the coveted prize only to have love loosen her grip, is one of the many interesting incidents in this revelation of the workings of a modern nation's spy system.

KALEM.

THE HAND OF FATE (Sept. 1).—To save her parents from the poorhouse, Florence promises to wed Henderson, her elderly employer, although she loves Roy Harris. This results in a violent quarrel between the two men. Roy is overheard threatening his rival.

Florence later pleads with Henderson to be released from her promise, but the man refuses. Shortly afterwards, Barry, Henderson's eight-year-old son, accidentally fires a shot from his rifle through the window, striking Henderson in the breast.

Roy hears the shot, and later finds the rifle which Barry has thrown away in fright. The man is arrested by a policeman and dragged before Henderson. Her sweetheart's predicament causes Florence to throw her arms about him.

At this moment, Barry enters and confesses he had fired the shot. Henderson is brought to the realization of Florence's great love for his younger rival. Joining the lover's hands, he nobly releases Florence from her promise.

THE OIL WELL CONSPIRACY (Special—Two Parts—Sept. 2).—Learning that Thompson is in financial difficulties, Bolton, of the Universal Oil Company, urges the man to sell out to him. Walker, Bolton's right-hand man, fascinates Millie, Thompson's daughter, and induces the girl to use her influence over her father in furtherance of the Universal's scheme.

Langley, Thompson's boyhood chum, upsets their plans. Millie conceives a dislike for Langley, who in turn, falls in love with her. Bolton discovers that Thompson's lease expires at noon on June 30th., unless he should strike oil by that time. Due to the man's machinations, Thompson is unable to secure men to work for him.

Thompson and Langley tackle the job themselves. Even Millie dons overalls and turns to. The night before the expiration of the lease, Bolton's men succeed in blocking the well shaft. Langley discovers what has happened the following morning. Millie is sent to get nitroglycerine with which to blow out the obstruction.

Walker discovers her errand and in his attempt to prevent her from returning to the well, the girl ascertains his true character. Bolton and Walker arrive shortly before noon and order the lessee to leave. Thompson and Langley take one more chance. Just as the clock begins to strike, they drop the nitroglycerine into the well. An instant later, the oil shoots high in air.

THE WINKING ZULU (Sept. 4).—Mrs. Lubbs, Daub's landlady, is terror-stricken to find the painter's picture of a Zulu warrior winking at her. The artist later tells his friends of the joke he has played upon the woman. They make merry over the flowing bowl. Returning home, Daub tumbles into bed.

The Zulu comes to life and carries Daub away to Africa. There, Bobo, the fattest female in the tribe, falls in love with the artist. To save his life, Daub consents to marry her.

Bobo's other suitors intervene, announcing that Daub must fight them before he can wed her. The painter chances to find a mouth organ in his pocket. Seized with an inspiration, he plays a ragtime tune. All commence dancing. Bobo becomes furiously jealous when she sees other maidens of the tribe falling in love with her fiance. The woman approaches Daub with blood in her eye.

In desperation, Daub seizes a war club and strikes right and left. At this moment, Mrs. Lubbs and several policemen, attracted by the noise, enter the room. Dreaming he is being attacked by Zulus, the painter fights furiously. A hard fall awakens him. Perceiving the damage he has done, he raises his right hand and solemnly vows, "Never again!"

THE GAMBLER'S REFORMATION (Sept. 5).—Weedon, a gambler, falls in love with Fawn, the half-breed daughter of Enright, a miner. Brown Bear, an Indian, wins Enright's favor and secures the man's consent to marry Fawn. Weedon, hearing a scream, hastens to the scene and finds his sweetheart in the Indian's arms. He fells the redskin.

Due to his partner's carelessness, Enright is killed in a mine explosion a few days later. Brown Bear hastens to inform the dead man's Indian wife of the occurrence, and at the same time claims Fawn as his bride.

The redskin compels Fawn to accompany him towards the village of his people. Weedon, however, overtakes the man and a vicious fight ensues. Brown Bear is again defeated. Hastening to his people, he urges them to pursue Weedon and slay him.

The Indians are about to take up the chase when the tribal chief returns. Angered at Brown Bear's assumption of authority, he banishes the man from the tribe. At the same time, in his love for Fawn, Weedon gives up his old profession. He and his bride strike out for the West where a new life awaits them.

THE DEVIL'S DANSANT (Special—Two Parts—Sept. 7).—"The Devil's Dansant," is the nickname given to a dansant of which Dominique, a Frenchman, is the proprietor. District Attorney Farrar, while searching for evidence on which to raid the place, is astounded to find that his wife Valerie, is a frequent visitor at Dominique's.

The wilful woman disobey's her husband's orders and continues to visit Dominique's. Rogers, the Frenchman's silent partner, sees Farrar enter the place several days later. To avoid a scene, he helps Valerie escape by a secret door which leads to a gambling den above the dansant.

Despite Roger's warnings, Dominique ensnares Valerie in his net, causing the woman to lose heavily at the gambling tables. The partners quarrel, with the result that Rogers gives Farrar a tip, causing the district attorney to raid the place.

Farrar is thunderstruck to find Valerie among the prisoners bagged in the raid. By declaring she has been securing evidence for him, the husband saves Valerie from disgrace. Dominique is convicted and ruined. Realizing, at last, the extent of her folly, Valerie begs her husband for forgiveness.

A MOTHER'S ATONEMENT (Sept. 8).—Having married contrary to her mother's wishes, Stella is disinherited. Widowed and poverty stricken, she later applies to her mother for aid. Mrs. Chambers, steeling her heart, orders the unfortunate woman from the door.

Twenty years pass. With the death of Stella, Louise, her daughter, becomes a hairdresser. Fate causes the girl to be sent to do some work for Mrs. Chambers. The society woman is instinctively drawn to the girl, never suspecting her to be her granddaughter.

Horace attempts to make love to Louise, but the girl repels his advances. The man entraps Louise in his room, shortly afterwards. Frantic with fear, the girl picks up a pistol which Horace had been cleaning. In Horace's attempt to disarm her, the pistol is fired, accidently wounding Louise.

Mrs. Chambers has Louise carried to the room once occupied by Stella. As she bends over the unconscious girl, Mrs. Chambers discovers the remarkable resemblance which Louise bears to Stella. When the girl revives, the woman learns the truth. Remorse-stricken, she clasps her granddaughter to her breast.

THE FUSE OF DEATH (Special—Two Parts—Sept. 9).—Learning that gold has been discovered upon land owned by the Hopi Indians, Challen, a trader, endeavors to secure a grant from Awatobi, the chief. The latter refuses, Challen's offer. The trader determines to use Tanoa, the chief's daughter, to further his plans.

Challen induces Tanoa to elope with him and imprisons her in the cellar of his cabin. Awatobi, who pursues, is also trapped by the trader, who threatens him with death unless he signs away his land. Joan, a settler's daughter, comes to the rescue just as Awatobi is about to die of strangulation.

The girl cleverly outwits the trader and releases father and daughter. In her desire for revenge, Tanoa lights a fuse leading to a barrel of powder. The three then make their escape, leaving Challen behind in a drunken stupor. A terrific explosion destroys the cabin, and Challen meets a fearful fate.

HAM, THE LINEMAN (Sept. 11).—Ham, a telephone lineman, is inclined to be flirtatious. This habit gets him into trouble when Detective Johnson finds him trying to flirt with Mrs. Johnson. He scares Ham so greatly that the lineman actually outdistances the bullets shot after him by the irate husband.

Shortly afterward, Ham is sent to the Johnson home to repair the telephone. At the same time, two gangsters, who had been sent to jail by the detective, appear at the house on vengeance bent. Johnson finds Ham at the same time that the gangsters find the detective.

Believing the lineman has been making love to his wife, Johnson chases him all over the house with a revolver. The gangsters in turn chase the detective. Ham and the detective finally take refuge in the bedroom, the former hiding under the bed, while the latter dives into a closet.

Police arrive at this moment and the gangsters are arrested. Johnson is about to tackle Ham again when the situation is explained. The detective offers to shake hands, but Ham takes no chances—he dives out through the door.

THE PATH TO RUIN (Sept. 12).—Loved by Gage, a broker, and Vance, a rising young physician, Vera, who craves the luxuries of wealth, marries the former. Vance thereupon leaves for a distant city, where he rapidly wins fame.

Fate deals harshly with Gage, whose fortune is wiped out. The man sinks lower down Life's ladder, finally accepting a job in a factory located in the same city in which Vance resides.

An explosion seriously injures Gage. The man is rushed to the hospital. Vera hastens to her husband's side—and discovers that the surgeon who is to operate upon Gage, is Vance. Knowing the suspicion which must arise in Vera's mind should his nerve fail, the surgeon prays that the operation prove successful.

As the result of Vance's skill, Gage is placed upon the road to recovery. Filled with gratitude, Vera endeavors to see the surgeon. Realizing his love is stronger than ever, Vance deliberately avoids her lest it overcome him. Returning home, the man prays for strength to overcome the longing in his heart.

VITAGRAPH.

THE UNWRITTEN PLAY (Sept. 7).—A new theatrical star is born when Ivy Liversedge, daughter of Silas, an unsuccessful playright, scores a big success in Paul Hesseltine's new play, "The Fatal Silence." Paul falls in love with Ivy, but her father exhibits an intense dislike for him at their very first meeting. He is puzzled, but comes to the conclusion that the old man is envious of his success as a playwright. Paul volunteers to help Silas with his plays, thinking to overcome his prejudice. With a sinister expression on his face, the old man says. "I have a great play in mind. Let us work it out together." Paul is all attention and Old Silas tells what the young man soon realizes is the story of his own life; ruined by a villain who ran away with his wife. Silas agitatedly tells Paul that Fate reserved the cruelest blow of all until the last, for he has discovered that Ivy, his adopted daughter, has fallen in love with the son, the living image of the scoundrel, Carruthers. The old man winds up by saying, "And you are the son! I know of but one fitting climax to the play and that is——" Pulling out a revolver, Silas, in a frenzy, is about to shoot Paul when Ivy enters the room. Silas sinks into a chair and Paul quickly explains her father was acting out one of his plays. He then tells Silas, "The right climax would be to let the son of the man who wronged you, marry your adopted daughter." The old man silently nods his head in agreement, and as Paul draws Ivy to him in a close embrace, gives the young people his blessing.

BRANDON'S LAST RIDE" (Special—Two Parts—Sept 8).—Two steadfast friends, Tom Brandon and Jim Wade, are both in love with the same girl, Alice Thomson. She refuses Jim when he proposes and he realizes it is partly because of his fondness for drink. Tom asks her to marry him the same day and is accepted. Jim leaves for the West, determined to cure himself and makes good. So on afterwards, he learns that Tom's firm has failed, and he is ruined. For Alice's sake, Jim sends for Tom, offering him a partnership in his ranch. Tom comes West, leaving Alice in her father's care. He meets with an accident while out riding the range and is cared for by Morning Star, daughter of Crazy Bull, a Cheyenne Chief. She grows to love Brandon and he never tells her of his fiancee. Alice's father dies, leaving her penniless, and Tom sends for her, then, despite Jim's warning, tells the Indian girl he is to be married and they must part. Her love is turned to hate, but she quietly suggests they take one last ride together. He agrees and they ride to the mouth of a cave, which she laughingly dares him to enter. He goes in and she rolls a huge boulder over the entrance, effectually closing it. Brandon is horrified to find himself trapped in a snake-pit, facing a death he cannot escape. Her vengeance now complete, the Indian girl returns to her father and tells him all. In the morning, Jim and a couple of the boys learn the whole story from the old Indian chief and Alice is told Tom died to save a friend. She mourns him constantly. Five years later, she discovers the child which Crazy Bull brings to the Mission School, where she is teaching, is the child of Tom Brandon and the now dead Morning Star. Her faith is broken and Alice finds happiness as the wife of faithful Jim Wade.

THE BAND LEADER (Sept. 9).—No sooner has Lillian seen Wally, the great band leader, than she falls head over heels in love with him. He notices her in the audience and is also smitten with the love germ. The two meet later and confess their love. Her father, however, has other plans for his daughter's future. He wishes her to marry the owner of a large pie factory. Lillian is so disgusted when father's choice presents her with what he considers the highest token of regard—an immense pie—she throws it out the window and it alights upon the upturned face of papa. The result is, the band leader is blamed and boycotted. Then the band leader and Lillian decide to elope. During an attack on the band by some of the pie factory employees, Wally and the girl escape, are seen and pursued by the piemen. While the terrific chase is on, Wally and the girl enter a barn and discover a large bomb. He takes it with him, and the two reach the justice of the Peace ahead of their pursuers. The ceremony starts at once, and Wally, remembering the bomb under his arm, throws it away just in time. The explosion sets the place afire, the police, their pursuers and the firemen arrive and amidst the wild excitement, streams of water and flying missiles, the band leader and his sweetheart stand calmly side by side until they are pronounced man and wife. Then the ambulance arives and carries off the injured and the half-drowned Justice, while the groom expresses his joy by kissing the fair Lillian.

BELLA'S ELOPEMENT (Sept. 10).—Shortly after his marriage, Wilton receives a letter which apparently causes him great anxiety. He vouchsafes no information to Bella, his wife, and she becomes suspicious and jealous. Wilton brings his friend, Morgan, home to dinner, who flatters Bella by his evident admiration. At the opera, Wilton receives a note, abruptly excuses himself and takes his departure. Later, Bella, finds the note which reads; "Dearest, the time has come. I must trust you now to take care of me and the child. Lovingly, Miriam." In dumb horror, Bella sinks on the sofa overcome with emotion. She tells Morgan of her suspicions and he proves a sympathetic confidant. Wilton tells Bella he will be out of town several days, but Morgan happens to see him under compromising circumstances. He tells Bella, who is furious. Taking advantage of her mood, Morgan succeeds in getting her to elope with him. While Morgan and Bella are at supper in a restaurant, she opens a forgotten letter and learns that her husband is bringing home on the 7.10 train, his sister Miriam and her baby. In a flash she realizes her terrible mistake. Morgan tries to detain her, but she jumps into his auto and by a death-defying ride, reaches home before the arrival of the 7:10 train. There Bella greets her husband, he tells her Miriam's story and she bravely confesses her narrow escape from a terrible fate. With a smile of compassion, he seals his forgiveness with a kiss.

A STUDY IN FEET (Sept. 11).—This story is told entirely by means of the feet and hands of the characters in the picture. Jones, a young clerk, is so elated over betting on a winning horse, he can scarcely keep his feet on the ground. In the street car he gets up and gives his seat to Miss Trimfeet. He immediately starts a flirtation, to which she coyly responds, he invites her to a tango contest that evening and as indicated by the nervous expectancy of his pedal extremities, is much worried for fear she will refuse. Eventually, she signifies her wilingness to go and he is delighted. After arranging for their meeting, he gets off at his home and is scolded by his wife for being late for supper. He manages to skip out after supper in time to keep his "date," with Miss Trimfeet. She gives him a mild scolding for being late, but all is forgotten as soon as they reach the dancehall. There all kinds of tangoing is in progress, some of the feet indicating extreme awkwardness, others being very graceful. Jones and Miss Trimfeet glide out on the floor. After dancing several numbers, the happy pair go out in the conservatory, where they sit close together and hold hands. Meantime, Jones' wife, who has discovered her husband's whereabouts, arrives at the hall, in a terrific rage, as can plainly be seen by her stamping feet. Locating Jones in the conservatory, she marches in on the couple, prepared to meter out just punishment. Trimfeet sees her coming and scoots out a side door, but Mrs. Jones captures hubby after a short chase. She vigorously administers a few swift kicks where it will do the most good, and then leads him ignominiously home by the ear.

HE DANCED HIMSELF TO DEATH (Special—Two Parts—Sept. 12).—Becoming inflicted with a craving for the latest dances, Herman Underdunk, light-footed and light-headed, sends for a correspondence course in Modern Dancing. He practices the "Wishbone Walk" on top of a lofty skyscraper, falls through the roof of a nearby building into the midst of a wake and onto the corpse. The late lamented refuses to stand for that, comes to life and starts a "rough-house". After his recovery, Herman notices a sign reading; "Waiter Wanted. No Brains Required." He says, "That's Me!" and applies for the job. The proprietor gives one look at Herman and hires him on the spot. He tangos among the diners holding aloft a tray of dishes and spills everything over one of the patrons. After the riot has subsided, Herman is fired. He tries driving a taxi, but meets with even more embarrassing mishaps. He "borrows the clothes of a sleeping policeman, and catches a burglar, who discovers his captor's weakness and whirls Herman around until he is dizzy, then escapes. Next he joins the army and recruits for Mexico, where he certainly "distinguishes" himself. On the battleship he dances in front of his own cannon, is shot in the back and falls dead. He saves his army from defeat, and at his funeral receives all military honors due a hero. When the band starts up, the coffin seems strangely affected. rocking from side to side in time with the music, upsetting the pallbearers and bounding over the ground, it finally jumps into the open grave where Herman's earthly terpsichorean activities are at an end, but his restless spirit goes tangoing merrily on.

EDISON.

AN ABSENT-MINDED CUPID (Sept. 7).—Mr. Bookley was so much interested in books that there was little room in his thoughts for anything else. Whether he was shaving, or dressing, or eating, or merely walking on the street, was all the same. He never had his mind on what he was doing. Thus it was that he would attempt to mix lather in his silk hat or would put the soapy brush in his mouth, or eat soup with a fork. If it had not often been for the fact that he had a remarkably capable valet, there would be no doubt that Mr. Bookley would have one day succeeded in one of his numerous attempts to leave the house clad in his pajamas or whatever article of apparel he might chance to be wearing when the thought struck him.

Gwendolyn was a clerk in the bookstore which Mr. Bookley most frequently visited. Between Ernest and George, two other clerks, a jealous rivalry was maintained with Gwen-

(Continued on page 1412.)

I HAVE CARBONS TO BURN

But due to the German war which has created a famine, my supply is rather limited, and the price is several times higher than it used to be. If the war keeps up, the prices will go still higher—I have bought carbons at all prices, and am still buying at almost any price so that I will have enough on hand to supply my customers.

If you want carbons you had better wire in now, and get my prices.

When you communicate, state make of machine, what method of current control is used for the arc and the Amp. maintained, also give the voltage and cycles, I will then quote you on whatever I may have at the time of your inquiry. This is the real test. Now you can find out who carries the biggest stock, irrespective of all claims as to being the largest supply house, etc.

The "HOUSE OF HALLBERG" is the "HOUSE OF QUALITY AND DEPENDENCE." Bank on me and you will never go wrong nor will you get left in the cold when the real pinch comes, like it has now when your theatre may shut down for the want of carbons.

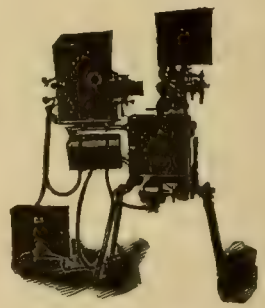
Distributor of the Celebrated Mirror Glass Screen and "Mirrorsilde" Curtain

SIMPLEX

Distributor Simplex Machines

HALLBERG A. C. to D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR ONE OR TWO LAMPS

Distributor Power's 6-A Machines



POWER'S 6A

Factory Selling Headquarters for POWER'S, SIMPLEX, MOTIOGRAPH and EDISON MACHINES, "HALLBERG" STANDARD A. C. ECONOMIZERS, "HALLBERG" D. C. ECONOMIZERS, MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS, MOVING PICTURE MACHINE and FLAME ARC CARBONS

I EQUIP THEATRES COMPLETELY

Free Circulars on all makes of M. P. Machines, but Hallberg's Big Catalogue, 100 pages, costs you 25c. by mail.

J. H. HALLBERG "THE HOUSE OF QUALITY" 36 East 23rd Street, New York

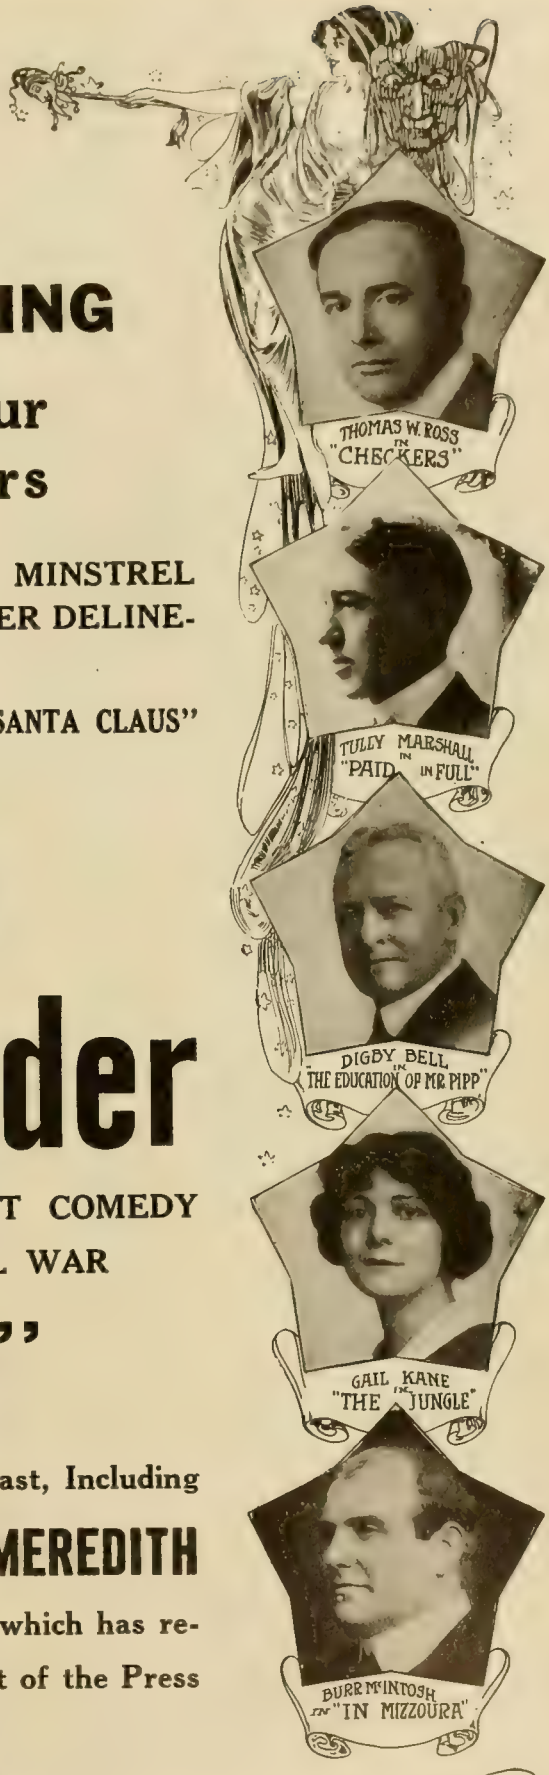
DUSTIN FARNUM IN "SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE"
LEW DOCKSTADER IN "DAN"
GEORGE NASH IN "THE JUNGLE"
ETHEL BARRYMORE IN A NEW PLAY
EDGAR SELWYN IN "PIERRE OF THE PLAINS"



THOMAS W. ROSS IN "CHECKERS"
TULLY MARSHALL IN "PAID IN FULL"
DIGBY BELL IN THE EDUCATION OF MR PIPP
GAIL KANE IN "THE JUNGLE"
BURR McINTOSH IN "IN MIZZOURA"

NOW BOOKING

Through Our Distributors

THE WORLD'S FOREMOST MINSTREL AND BLACKFACE CHARACTER DELINEATOR.

A NAME AS WELL KNOWN AS "SANTA CLAUS"

Lew Dockstader

IN A STIRRING FIVE-PART COMEDY DRAMA OF THE CIVIL WAR

"DAN"

By HAL REID

With an All-Star Supporting Cast, Including

GAIL KANE and LOIS MEREDITH

A particularly different picture which has received the unbiased endorsement of the Press

ALL-STAR-FEATURE-CORPORATION

HARRY R. RAVER, PRESIDENT

EXECUTIVE OFFICES 220 W. 42nd ST., NEW YORK

AUGUSTUS THOMAS, DIRECTOR GENERAL OF PRODUCTIONS

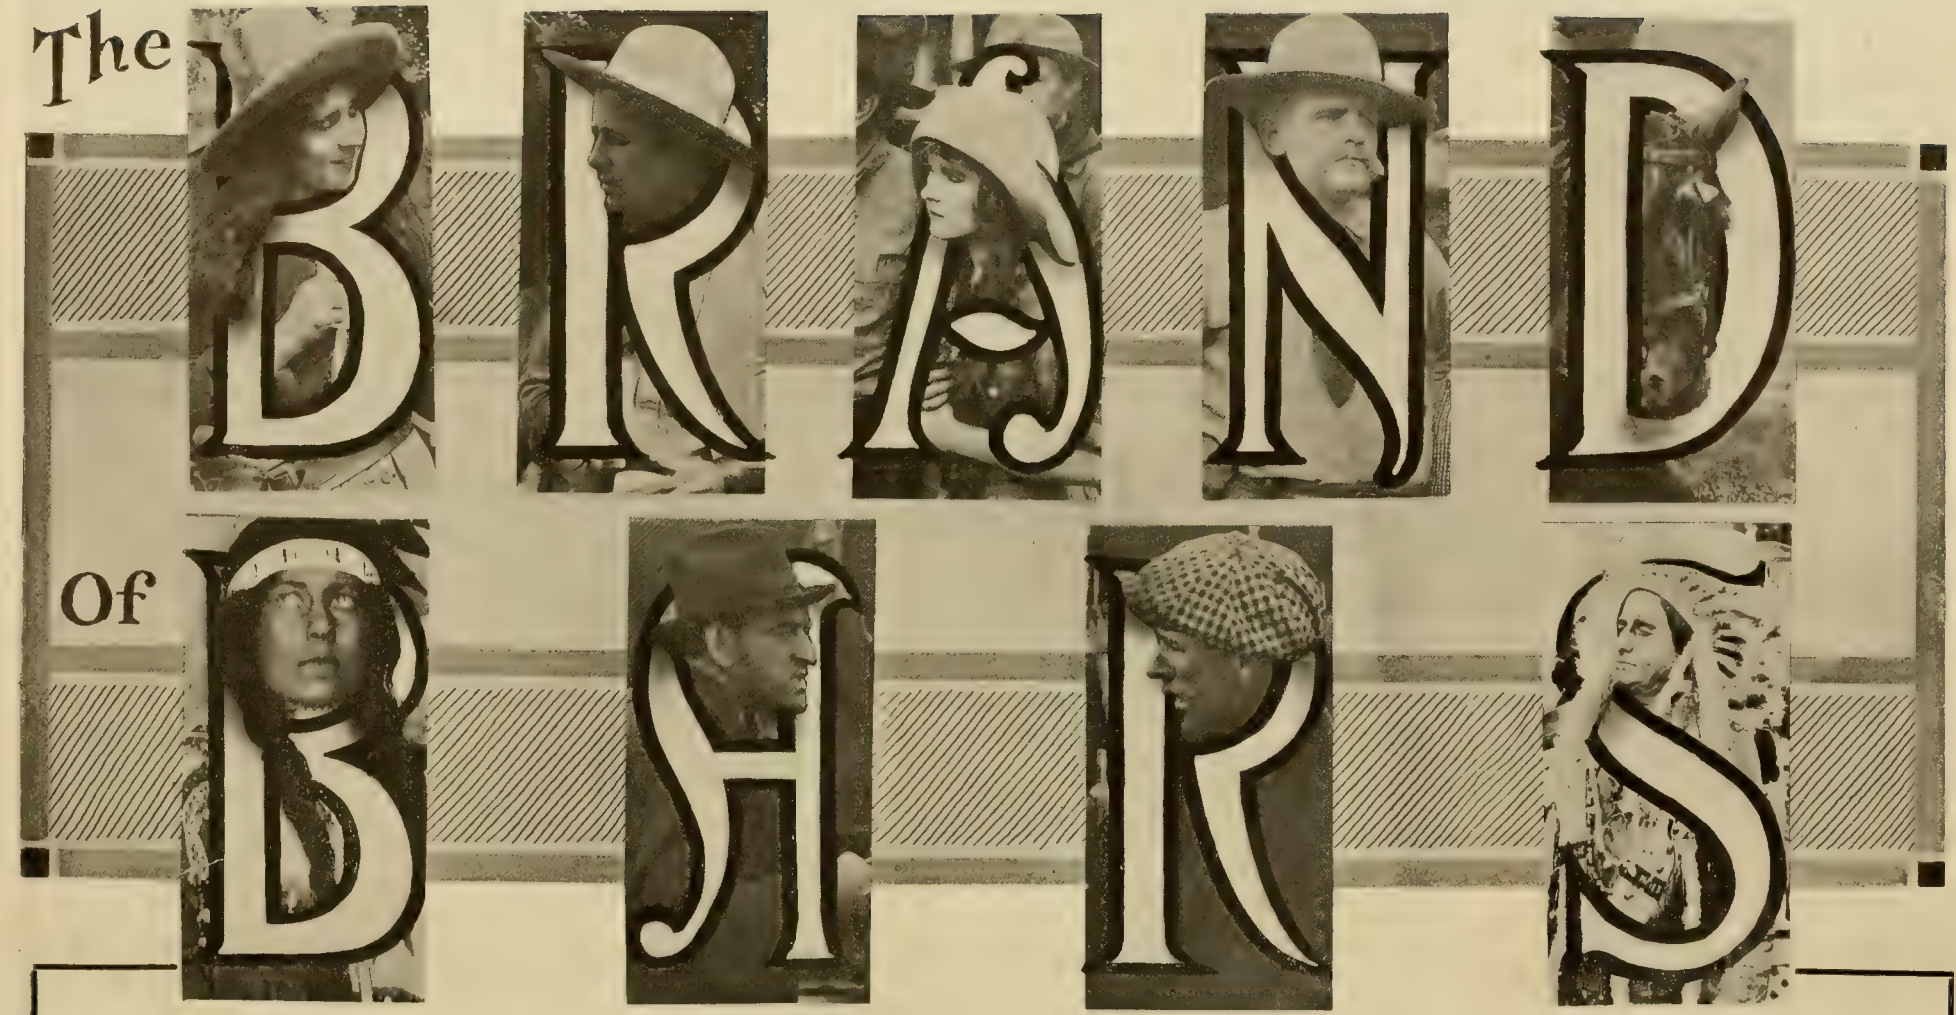
EXCLUSIVE AGENTS IN PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

ALONE

A STUPENDOUS production that will stir the emotions and grip the heart-strings. This spectacular 5-part picture was adapted from the famous play of the same name, with the celebrated character artist, MR. STANDING, in the leading role. It is the sensational success of the season. Exclusive booking rights are controlled by WARNER'S FEATURES, INC. (Special Department.)

GET IN TOUCH WITH THEIR NEAREST EXCHANGE.

The BRAND Of SHARS



A western masterpiece, portraying the dare-devil adventures and the delightful romance of an ex-convict. He redeemed the past by performing brave deeds in the face of overwhelming odds—and he won the love of a "true-blue" girl who proved her faith when things looked darkest. An unusual 3-part drama with a powerful pull. Write your nearest Warner's Exchange.

SHORT COMEDIES THAT HIT

THE WATER WAGON—Strenuous method of reforming a village toper. One reel—but a thousand real laughs.

THE TALE OF A SKIRT—A stout lady takes flesh-reducing exercises and makes her neighbors peevish. A reel that's crowded with mirth.

A LIVELY AFFAIR—Suffragetts hold a strenuous meeting and a mere man tries to mix in. Result—uproarious fun. One reel.

WARNER'S FEATURES, Inc., 130 West 46th St., New York City

RAMO Trade Mark

NOW PLAYING

TWO WEEK ENGAGEMENTS

THE WAR OF WARS

OR

The Franco-German Invasion of 1914

FORREST THEATRE - PHILADELPHIA, PA.
NIXON THEATRE - - PITTSBURG, PA.

STATE RIGHTS FOR SALE

Prints Ready for Delivery

SIX REELS. 400 SCENES

Sale in United States Limited to 25 Prints

Remember: It's the "KICKIEST" Two-Hour Show Ever Presented in Motion Pictures

An Eternal Masterpiece of Tremendous Magnitude

FOR BOOKING OR TERRITORY—WIRE

RAMO FILMS, Inc.
C. LANG COBB, JR., Mgr. Sales and Publicity
Columbia Theatre Bldg., New York

EXTRA

APEX
APEX
APEX

WESTERN UNION CABLEGRAM

Form 2606

GEORGE W. E. ATKINS, VICE-PRESIDENT NEWCOMB CARLTON, PRESIDENT BELVIDERE BROOKS, VICE-PRESIDENT

Received at 821 SIXTH AVE NEWYORK CITY AUGUST 20TH-1914

2NY R 66- LONDON AUGUST 20TH-1914

LCO APEX FILM COMPANY,
145 WEST 45TH STREET, NEWYORK.

JUST BOUGHT THREE REEL PRODUCTION ENTITLED CALLED TO THE FRONT OR EUROPE AT WAR POSITIVELY MOST WONDERFUL CINEMATOGRAPH PICTURE EVER SEEN ACTUAL SCENES ADVERTISE IMMEDIATELY SAMPLE ON ADRIATIC SEVENTEEN COPIES FOLLOW NEXT BOAT DONT SELL CANADA ALREADY SOLD SMITH REPRESENTING FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM SERVICE OF CANADA ENTIRE CANADIAN RIGHTS THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS RELEASE UNDER APEX BRAND.

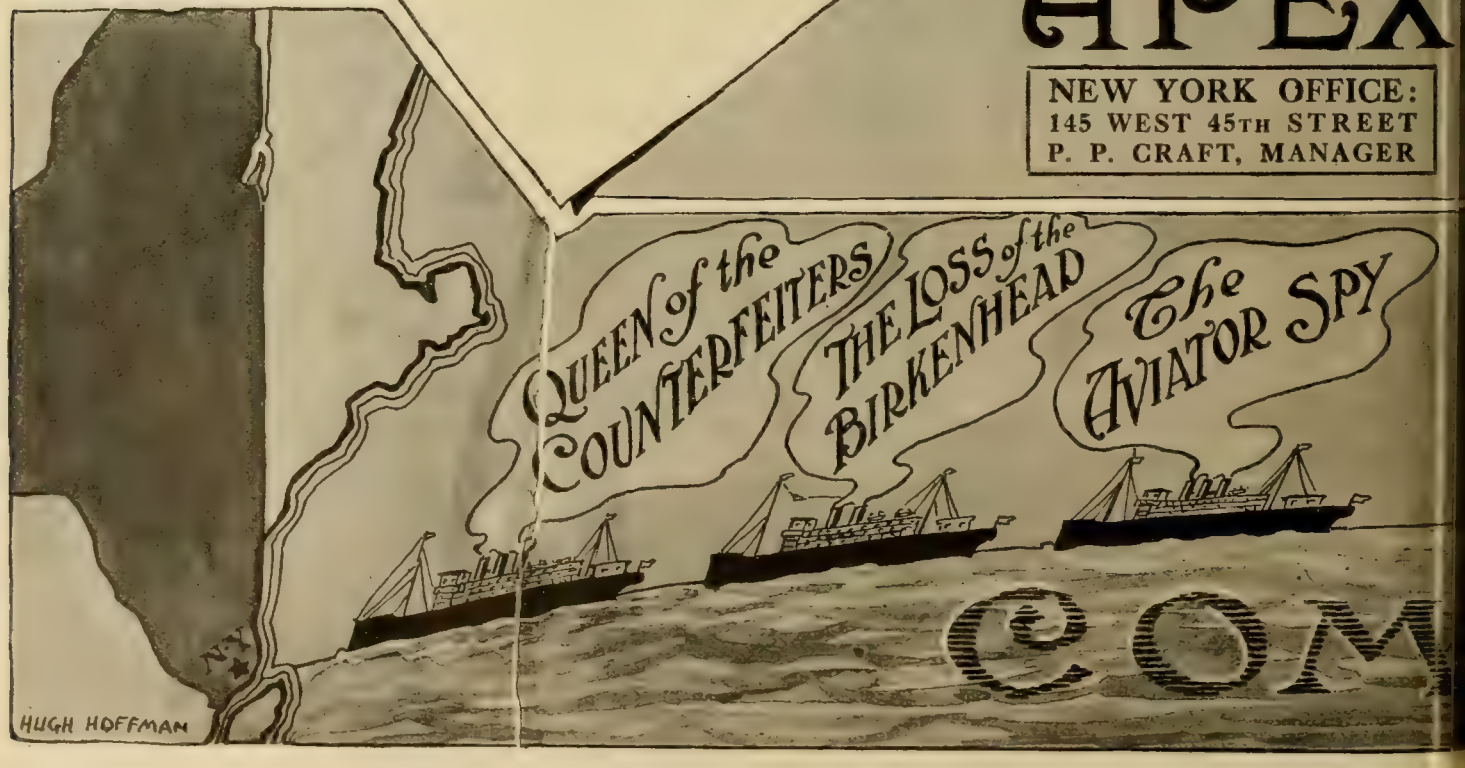
HYMAN WINIK. 344 AM.

BE SURE TO READ THIS WIRE

NOW FOR THE REAL STUFF

APEX

NEW YORK OFFICE:
145 WEST 45TH STREET
P. P. CRAFT, MANAGER



APEX SPECIAL APEX

CALLED to the FRONT OR EUROPE AT WAR

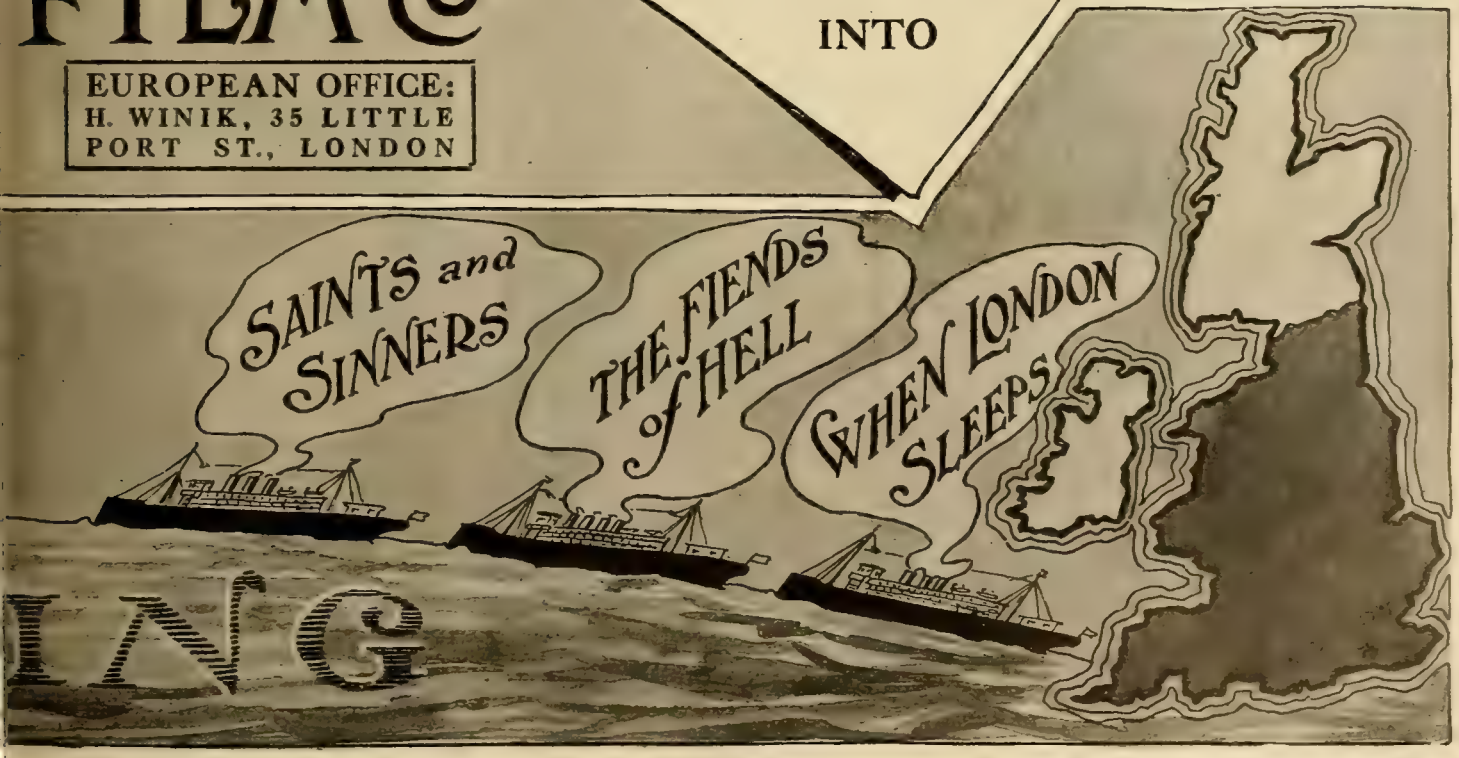
ACCORDING TO THE AUTHENTIC CABLE MESSAGE REPRODUCED ON THE OPPOSITE PAGE, THE HONORS FOR INTRODUCING THE FIRST BIG EUROPEAN WAR FEATURE GO TO THE APEX FILM CO. MR. WINIK IS NOT A MAN WHO INDULGES IN IDLE TALK, AND WHEN HE DICTATES A MESSAGE LIKE THIS ONE IT IS A TIP WORTH LOOKING INTO

3 Parts

3 Parts

APEX FILM Co

EUROPEAN OFFICE:
H. WINIK, 35 LITTLE PORT ST., LONDON



CALIFORNIA
802 SO. OLIVE STREET
LOS ANGELES
APEX
FEATURE SERVICE
PANTAGES THEATRE BLDG
SAN FRANCISCO

(Continued from page 1404.)

dolyn as the object. Ernest, who feared his rival's good looks and polished manner, was filled with delight when Gwendolyn accepted

Just before taking her to dinner, Ernest discovered a hole in his trousers' pocket, and transferred his money to the pocket of his overcoat. Mr. Bookley happened to be dining at the little restaurant when Ernest and Gwendolyn arrived. Leaving, a little while later, he gave a striking demonstration of mental abstraction by taking Ernest's coat with him. When Ernest came to pay the bill, he therefore discovered that his overcoat and money were alike absent. To put the crowning touch on his embarrassment, George appeared, paid Gwendolyn's bill, and took her away with him.

When Mr. Bookley discovered his mistake, he was overcome with regret. When he learned into what depths of misery his absent-mindedness had plunged poor Ernest, he immediately resolved to mend matters, so he took Ernest to a jeweler's shop, and insisted on the young man accepting the magnificent engagement ring which he bought. The next day he went to the bookstore, and with much show of anger, threatened to have Ernest discharged. Gwendolyn came to the young man's assistance, and Mr. Bookley after he had seen the young man place the ring on the girl's finger, chuckled and left them together.

THE BLIND FIDDLER (Sept. 8).—There was none in all Ireland could make music like Old Pat. When the old folks heard him the tears ran down their cheeks with thinking of the good times that would no more come to them, and when the young ones heard him, there was never a one but smiled and thought of wine and love and rare times to come. But most of all, Pat loved to play for the children, for when they heard his music, they laughed and danced for no reason and no thought save that they were happy and the world was good. Sometimes Old Pat would steal off into the forest and play into the night. And while he played the fairies would come creeping out of the trees and flowers where they were hiding and dance.

One night, it happened that the queen of the fairies herself came and danced to Pat's music, and so pleased was she that she offered to give Pat any wish his heart desired. Now Pat was blind, and when he heard her words the first thought struck him was that he'd like to be having his sight again, and so he wished, and before the words had left his mouth, there he stood with his eyes open, seeing as well as any other man in the world.

So Pat went home with his heart like to jump from his mouth with joy. But before he got there, some of the happiness had gone out of his head entirely. For, if he saw the trees rustling in the wind, and the grass waving under the sky, he saw also ugly things—a hawk killing a sparrow, and a young lad beating a dog. But when he reached home was worst of all for he saw that his wife whom his foolish heart had painted as lovely as a queen of old time, was wrinkled and old and ugly. And when Pat tried to play his fiddle, never a tune would come from it, for sure it is a man can do no good thing unless there is happiness and love in his heart. So Pat sought out the fairy again, and begged her to give back the comfortable darkness to him again. And when she did, that very instant the music sprang from Pat's fiddle and the little children came and laughed and sang about him. And sure now, doesn't that all go to prove that its contentment is the best thing in life?

GETTING ANDY'S GOAT (Tenth of the Andy series—Sept. 9).—Andy was very fond of keeping pets. The unfortunate fact that his mother seriously objected to acting as a dispensary of food and shelter to a small army of decrepit dogs and cats interfered to a large extent with the permanence of any of Andy's dependents. When Andy became the proud possessor of a real goat through the fortunate purchase of a lottery ticket, his worst fears were realized so far as his mother was concerned. Her stern refusal to allow the animal to live in the house was intensified into a spasmodic burst of incoherent rage when the goat, apparently in revenge, began to mix things up. When they finally left, the house looked as if it had served as the nesting place of a young and ambitious Kansas cyclone.

Andy took the goat to the messenger office in which he worked, and that curious animal signalized his visit by immediately eating a batch of important papers on the superintendent's desk. Just as the superintendent discovered what happened, a man came in with a small box which he wished to send to a certain address. The box fell to the floor during the discussion and Andy, without noticing it, swept it out with the rubbish.

Naturally enough, when the superintendent discovered that the package was missing, he coupled the loss with the destruction of his own papers and accused the goat. Andy stoutly maintained that his pet was innocent, but his protestations were lost in the vehemence of the stranger's denunciation. The man claimed that the little package was worth a thousand dollars and clamored for the instant death of the goat.

Andy fled with his much maligned pet, and deciding that the die was cast and that organized society declared him an outlaw, took refuge on a rubbish heap. Here, just when capture seemed inevitable, the goat solved matters by picking up the package from the spot where it had been thrown by the ashman.

FACE VALUE (Special—Two Parts—Sept. 11).—When Kelly saved Pete Scarlett from the consequences of his dishonesty at a poker game in a little Western mining camp, he did not dream of the astonishing disclosure that grateful and unfortunate young man was about to make. When they reached Kelly's cabin, Scarlett informed his rescuer that his real name was Peter Wilding, and showed him papers proving him to be the heir of the late Silas Wilding of Eastwich, L. I. Scarlett further informed Kelly that he had not long to live, and suggested that he, Kelly, assume the name of Wilding and go East to claim Silas Wilding's legacy. Shortly afterwards, Scarlett died of heart disease.

Kelly immediately came East, registered at the hotel as Peter H. Wilding, and convinced the lawyers that he was Silas Wilding's nephew. His troubles, however, soon commenced. A gang of counterfeiters with whom the other Wilding had been mixed up, attempted to extort blackmail from him, and Kelly utterly in the dark as to their identity was at his wits' end. A chance encounter with Polly Winthrop made such a deep impression on Kelly that he asked her to marry him "on face value"—the agreement being that they should take each other for what they were, and should not allow any memories from the past to come between them.

Immediately after their marriage, Kelly discovered on apparently positive testimony that his wife had been one of the most notorious members of the gang which was attempting to blackmail him. Meanwhile his wife had discovered that he was assuming another man's name. Matters went on until both man and woman were thoroughly unhappy. Then matters were settled by the death of the gang leader. He confessed that the woman Kelly married was not the one who had been connected with his gang, but her twin sister. Then Kelly in turn confessed to his wife that his name really was Peter H. Wilding. By an extraordinary coincidence, the man whose life he had saved was his first cousin, who had gone to the dogs at an early age. "Kelly" himself was the rightful heir to Silas Wilding's estate.

DICK POTTER'S WIFE (Sept. 12).—Dick Potter's wife makes him unhappy with her continual worries. Without knowing it, she nags the poor man almost to distraction over petty trifles. When he tries to smoke, she makes him uncomfortable by opening the window. If he puts his feet on a chair, she makes him still more uncomfortable by putting a piece of paper under them. Finally Potter, aroused to a state of indignation, tells her that her worrying is making lines on her face. Immediately afterwards he leaves home and spends his next few evenings at the club.

Mrs. Potter, at first deeply hurt by her husband's charge, finally grows alarmed. Fearing that she is growing old, and that she will lose Potter's love, she goes to an old gypsy and buys a philter guaranteed to make her young. She brings the philter home, but drinks too much of it, and instead of becoming five or six years younger, becomes a little girl.

Potter returns and finds the little girl. He naturally laughs at her repeated declarations that she is his wife, and hires a governess to look after her. Finding his wife's wedding ring on the floor where it had dropped during the strange transformation, he jumps at the conclusion that she has deserted him. As the days go by the metamorphosed Mrs. Potter suffers terribly in her impossible situation. Affairs reach a climax when she discovers that the designing governess is attempting to win her husband's love.

Escaping from the house, she seeks out the gypsy again, and tells her the terrible result which attended the drinking of the potion. The gypsy gives the child another philter which restores her to her former condition, and the rehabilitated Mrs. Potter triumphantly returns to meet her enemy, the governess, on her own terms, and to drive her, in utter defeat, from the affections of Dick Potter. And now Dick Potter can smoke whenever and wherever he wants to.

LUBIN.

THE BELLE OF BREWERYVILLE (Sept. 8).—The noble mayor reviews his trusty police force in the usual manner, then sets out to conquer and beholds Count Loveboozesky, a handsome anarchist, attempting to bite the roses from the village belle's cheeks. This act causes the honorable mayor's blood to boil and Breweryville's hero slides in between the captor and the captive and saves the charming

TEXAS EXHIBITORS
APEX
FEATURE SERVICE
DALLAS
TEX. OKLA. ARK. LA.

FLA. GA. ALA. MISS. LA.
APEX
FEATURE SERVICE
315 RHODES BUILDING
ATLANTA, GA.
TENN. N. C. S. C. VA.

NORTHERN LIGHTS

A HIGH TENSION, WESTERN PSYCHOLOGICAL DRAMA, VISUALIZING STRIFE, LOVE, HATE AND INTRIGUE, INTERWOVEN WITH A DELIGHTFUL VEIN OF HUMOR

A Class A feature, adapted from the stage success.

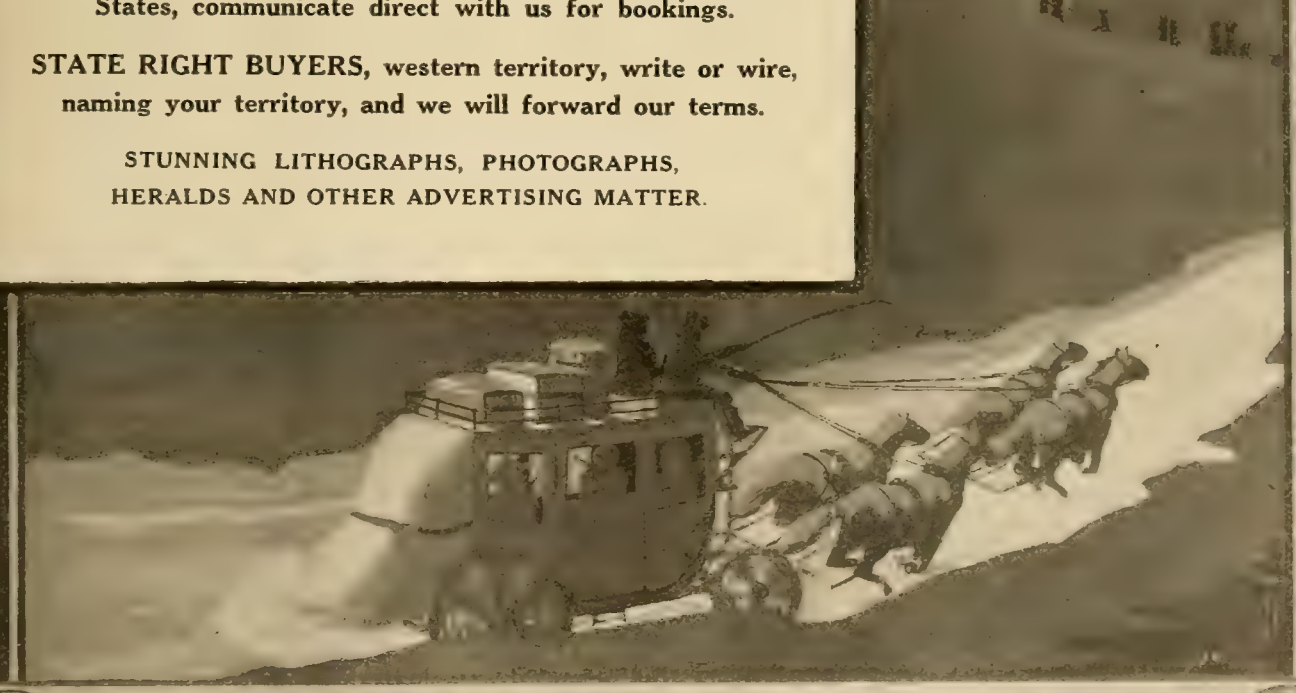
IN FIVE PARTS

PERFECT ACTING BY AN ALL-STAR CAST AND INCOMPARABLE PHOTOGRAPHY.

EXHIBITORS—New York, New Jersey and New England States, communicate direct with us for bookings.

STATE RIGHT BUYERS, western territory, write or wire, naming your territory, and we will forward our terms.

STUNNING LITHOGRAPHS, PHOTOGRAPHS, HERALDS AND OTHER ADVERTISING MATTER.



LIFE PHOTO FILM CORP.

Executive Office, 220 W. 42 St. N.Y.C.

STUDIO and LABORATORY - GRANTWOOD, N.J.

fair one. In return for his heroism he is nearly ruined by his terrible knobs, but gathering himself together, piece by piece, he evaporates, only to become solidified again, when Bosko and Fattskoff, henchmen of Loveboozesky, capture him and take him to the arch villains' den. The mayor escapes after many bloody battles and Bosco, the fire eater, is sent after him with a lighted bomb. Miss Wolf, of the Wolf family, shaves the mayor interfering with his escape, thereby causing the bum with the bomb to gain upon his mayorship; but Miss Wolf of the Wolf family comes face to face with Loveboozesky. She died as she lived—a heroine, and gathering herself together, she flees into the depths of the forest, with lilacs smelling all around. Loveboozesky, also Lovewolfsky, follows her accordingly, until he meets his just deserts in Breweryville's bubbling brook. The mayor showing true heroism has run far and near, in deep and shallow, chased by Bosco. Many a terrible fight they have until the devil comes into his own, and they sink beneath the waters of the placid lake from whence Breweryville secured its liquid for its namesake.

"AS WE FORGIVE THOSE (Special—Two Parts—Sept. 9.)—Mary, wife of John Graham, a machinist, is constantly complaining of John's failure to support her properly, and John seeks refuge from her tirades in the companionship of the corner saloon. Joe Blake, fellow worker, feels the attraction of Mary's beauty, but in his friendship for John does everything in his power to prevent a break. Dallas, a foreman of the shops, falls in love with Mary and when he receives an offer of a position in another city, he persuades Mary to go with him. Joe learns of the plan and, taking John to his own rooms, he leaves him sleeping and hurries back to prevent the elopement. He is too late, but on the floor he finds a telegram giving the name of the city to which Dallas is going. Hoping to induce Mary to return he follows. Mary and Dallas have taken Laura, John's little daughter, with them. When John wakes from his sleep, he misses Joe and returns to his own house. There he finds evidence of a hurried departure and discovers a pipe which Joe has left. He immediately jumps at the conclusion that Joe has gone away with Mary, and in his half-drunken condition, he starts out to find them. Having no clue, he takes the wrong direction.

Joe overtakes Dallas and Mary, just as they are starting to drive to the new plant from a country station. He tries to persuade Mary to return. He takes the little girl from the carriage and that instant Dallas applies the whip to the horse. The animal dashes away, Dallas loses control and both Dallas and Mary are killed. Joe returns home with Laura, and finding John gone, he leaves the little girl at a neighbor's house.

Ten years later, Joe is foreman of the Forrest works, in another city. John is a wanderer over the earth, still harboring a desire for revenge against Joe. Laura, now sixteen years old, is living with Joe. At the Forrest Works, Joe is worried over lack of efficiency among the hands. Laura, noting the prevalence of drunkenness in the men, suggests that if Joe can influence them against drinking, he will have better success. Joe institutes a series of meetings at which he talks to his men. John, the wanderer, always seeking Joe, comes to the Forrest Works. Worn out, he takes a room in a lodging house next to the hall. From the window across an alley, he recognizes Joe. This is his chance for revenge! In the hall Joe raises his hand in prayer: "Our Father, who art in heaven." John draws a revolver. He aims it across the narow space. "As we forgive those who trespass against us!" John hears. The words strike home. John slips slowly to the floor. The revolver falls from the sill. Joe hears the report as the hammer strikes the floor. He and Laura hurry to the room of the lodger. There the girl looks into the slowly closing eyes of her dying father.

ON THE LONESOME MOUNTAIN (Special—Two Parts—Sept. 10).—Frank Russel is leading a wild life. His father severely reprimands him and refuses to give him any money. James Hill, a dishonest butler, overhears the quarrel and conceives the idea of robbing the safe. He does so and plants evidence that incriminates Frank. Old Russel refuses to listen to his son's protestations and casts him off as a thief. Frank is engaged to Grace Preston, but the two fathers break the engagement. One person alone stands by the unfortunate boy—it is Frank's mother, who has just been informed that she has inherited a big tract of timber land in the Kentucky mountains. The mother keeps this a secret and sends her boy out to take charge of the land.

In the mountains Frank finds that the land is pretty well occupied by moonshiners, who rebel at his intrusion, as they have erected their stills on the property and been unmolested for many years. Flora Wheeler, daughter of the chief clansman, meets with an accident and Frank assists her; an attachment ripens which the Wheelers oppose, but not before the girl has lost her heart.

It is then resolved to put Frank out of the way. Flo hears of the plot and rushes to warn him, but is dragged by a suspicious brother and locked in the attic. She, however, escapes and arrives at Frank's shack just in time for them to escape. They hide in a thicket and the girl, fearful of her family, places herself under the protection of the man she loves. On an impulse of gratitude he takes her to a magistrate and there gives her his name and protection. He is saved from further attack by the arrival of the woodcutters that he had sent for to work the forest.

Back at the old home the mother had never tired of endeavoring to clear her boy's name and by the aid of a detective the thieving butler is exposed and Albert Russel, accompanied by Grace Preston, hastens to the Kentucky mountains to find Frank and plead for a reconciliation. Arriving at the shack in the hills they all embrace. Frank forgets all but his love for Grace and takes her to his arms when the door opens and Flo stands gazing speechless. Frank falteringly introduces his native wife and defends his marriage by explanation. Albert Russel spurns the inferior union, and urges a compromise. Flo takes off her wedding ring, drops it at Grace's feet and darts away home to her kin, where she faces the stern men. She has come to stay—"that is all." Frank finds her, but she refuses to return with him. Next day Russel, accompanied by a revenue officer, goes to the Wheeler still. The moonshiners, startled at the intrusion, pull guns and fire. Flo, recognizing Russel, endeavors to shield him and the bullet intended for the old man enters the breast of his son's despised wife. In the confusion the revenue spy escapes and flees to Frank's shack. Hearing the shots the woodmen hasten to the still and drive the moonshiners off and Frank enters just in time to see Flo breath her last.

SQUARING THE TRIANGLE (Sept. 11).—Walter Adams, aged twenty, living in an Eastern city, finds himself an orphan through the death of his father. After the funeral Walter learns that the estate consists of "The Triangle" ranch in the West which has never been a paying proposition. Walter decides to go and find out whether the ranch can be made to pay. He appears at the ranch in rough garb and applies to the manager for a job. The latter, an ill-humored, surly individual with a widespread reputation for brutality, offers him a job as stable boy at $10 a month. Walter accepts and writes an assumed name in the payroll book. Jarvis has an attractive daughter, Edna, and she and Walter soon show an interest in each other. Bad Bill, one of the ranch cowboys, attempts to haze Walter, but has the tables turned on him. This angers him and he plans to get even.

A week passes. While sweeping out the office Walter discovers that the payroll book is padded, his own salary being recorded as $40. He barely has time to conceal the payroll book in his shirt when Jarvis enters. Finished with his sweeping Walter goes to the barn. Here he is drawn into a fake fight game, Bad Bill and his partner, Jake, being the principals. They pretend to quarrel and finally draw their guns and fire at each other. Jake falls apparently dead and Bill, turning to Walter, tells him impressively that as he is the only witness he is going to kill him, too. Instead of becoming frightened and taking to his heels Walter grapples with Bill and throws him. Jake sits up and joins the fight. The other cowboys who have been watching from a distance rush in and overpower Walter. Under the direction of the now thoroughly enraged Bill they take him to the nearest tree and string him up with a lariat noosed under the arms. Then Bill shoots at his feet and orders him to dance. Edna hears the commotion and goes for the sheriff.

Meanwhile Jarvis discovers the loss of the payroll book and while he is searching for it hears the noise outside. Attracted to the place he finds Walter tied up and sees the payroll book protruding from his shirt. He attempts to take it, but Walter clings to it. During the struggle the sheriff arrives. Walter is cut down and the sheriff arrests Bad Bill. Walter then hands Jarvis his card bearing his own name and Jarvis realizes that he has been caught. Walter orders him off the ranch, telling him he may go free for his daughter's sake. Edna starts to leave with her father, but Walter draws her back, and tells her that he has discovered that he needs her.

HE NEARLY WON OUT (Sept 12).—Bill Byron is henpecked and decides to drown himself, but the water is too cold so he runs away, leaving his coat and vest behind. His wife, Nancy, is prostrate when his sad death is discovered, but by the time she gets home her grief has moderated to the point where she is willing to exchange the clothes for a stew pan with a peddler.

Meantime Bill has been telling his troubles to Jake, a tramp whom he meets on the road. Jake reads an item telling of Bill's death and adding the interesting information that Nancy has fallen heir to $30,000. He writes her that he is coming home and warns her that he is greatly changed. Bill also sees the paragraph and starts home. The tramp shows up first and Nancy for a joke puts him to work and makes his life miserable. When bill comes he is told that Jake, the tramp, is her husband. The two men clinch and Bill wins the fight. He feels a new sense of power and he lords it over Nancy as well; so his suicide was of some use after all.

War of the Powers

Actual Scenes of Mobilization

AND

Maneuvering Battles

DEPICTING THE

GIGANTIC WAR

now

RAGING IN EUROPE

BEST

MONEY MAKER

at the

PRESENT TIME

Length about 1,500 feet

Price, $160.00

Including Two Different Styles of Posters

READY FOR DELIVERY

WIRE NOW

International Film Traders

5 West 14th Street

NEW YORK

POPULAR
PROGRAM
A NEW HIGH CLASS SERVICE

28 Reels Weekly 1-2-3 Reels All Features Comedy, Drama, Etc.

FOURTEEN BRANDS

JESTER COMEDY		CEE-O-BEE PHOTO PLAYS
OWL	"	WILLAT	"
GAIETY	"	LONGACRE	"
LUNA	"	NIAGARA	"
FROLIC	"	PALISADE	"
"O. K."	"	CANYON	"
PASTIME	"	CONTINENTAL	"

SPECIAL "POPULAR" FEATURES—High-Class Plays, now running as Broadway Successes with original all-star casts, will be released in conjunction with "Popular" Program—also recent plays of well-known authors.

Authors Receive $100 to $1,000 Weekly—

In selecting Authors, only men of known ability are engaged—those who have established a reputation as creators of "quality" productions for the speaking stage and silent drama.

Directors Receive $200 to $1,000 Weekly—

In making our selection of Directors for the various brands, it has been our aim to procure only high-class men whose efficiency has been established by past success.

Actors Receive $100 to $1,000 Weekly—

The Casts will be made up of men and women who are widely known in the theatrical field and whose ability in portraying "types" has stamped them as leaders in their profession. Actors are engaged on yearly basis—52 weeks solid, no lay-off.

POPULAR PHOTO PLAYS CORPORATION

CHAS. O. BAUMANN, President

Studios and Factory: Fort Lee, N. J. Executive Offices: 911 Longacre Bldg., N. Y.

TOO MANY AUNTS (Sept. 12).—Fred Miller receives a letter stating that his aunt is coming to pay him a visit and he forthwith invites his sweetheart, Bess, to come over and meet her. Then auntie wires that she will be unable to come. Fred hurriedly gets word to Jack McDonald to come quick and impersonate the dear old auntie, which he willingly does. Bess sees the letter and resolves that she will also play auntie, and her father also comes to the same conclusion. Finally there are four aunties and Fred sees that it is a job. He gets mad and laying it on to Jack kicks him out. The others think Fred has gone insane and call a policeman, who enters just in time to see Fred pulling Bess' hair out, thinking it is a wig. Finally everybody confesses to the joke and enjoy a good laugh on Fred.

MELIES.

FLEE, YOU'RE DISCOVERED (Sept. 1).—Deacon Jones has a bad habit of borrowing his neighbor's lawn mower. Lawyer Brown, a practical joker, sends him a telegram which causes the Deacon to skip town. Brown, realizing that matters have gone far enough, goes in search of the Deacon to explain. After several complications, they meet in the Police station. There, everything is straightened out and the Deacon goes home, happy in the thought that he is not a fugitive from justice.

A CASE OF IMAGINATION (Sept. 3).—Tom Bradley, a cowpuncher, is a judge of good whiskey. He buys a case of the best but in order to preserve his secret, he decides to bury the box. Elsie, the daughter of the rancher, testing a pair of field glasses, sees him in the act. Connecting his actions with a recent bank robbery, she notifies the ranch. The cowboys arrive and arrest Tom, but on opening the case, see their mistake and give Elsie the laugh.

HEN FRUIT (Sept. 8).—Joe decides to whitewash the chicken coop as a surprise to Marion. So one day while she is out, he sneaks into the coop, but is caught in a steel trap set for some thieves. Marion returns home and believing that Joe has gone fishing, starts out for him. Not finding him and thinking that he has drowned, she becomes frantic with grief. Joe, after several attempts, finally succeeds in acquainting her of his whereabouts and is rescued.

UNINVITED (Sept. 10).—Bob and Jack, two lieutenants, are introduced by their colonel to a popular young girl, Miss Bamberg. Bob makes a hit. The Bambergs give a ball to which Bob is invited but Jack is not. At the ball, Bob proposes and is accepted. Jack, although not invited, attends the ball. The treatment he receives, however, is not of the best and he is forced to leave, finally realizing that he is out of the running.

SELIG.

LIFE'S CRUCIBLE (Sept. 1).—Marc Warren, a neurotic young man in ill health, organizes a fake investment company to catch the dollars of the poor people. He persuaded Paul Benton, a struggling young author, to join his company as secretary. Helen is Marc's sister, and he loves her dearly. He supports her in school by his illicit earnings. She does not know of his questionable business methods.

The dollars pour into the treasury of the fake company until the authorities investigate, and then Marc leaves the country. Paul is arrested as a swindler, although innocent of any intent. Later Paul is released. Helen and Paul fall in love. Marc returns penitent and confesses, exonerating Paul completely. Then he dies. The young lovers are married, and everybody is happy.

TO BE CALLED FOR (Sept. 2).—Silas Brown, a close-fisted country hotel-keeper in Hicksville, has a pretty daughter, Betty, who has a devoted suitor in Otis Perkins, a typical country town boy. The curiosity of Betty is excited by a package marked for Francis King, "to be called for." For three weeks the package remains without a claimant. It accidentally falls to the floor and breaks open, showing a magnifient ball gown.

Betty has been crying her pretty eyes out because her stingy father has refused her a party dress to wear at the church fair. She wears the unclaimed ball gown and makes a hit at the fair. Francis King, who is a traveling salesman, arrives the night of the fair, and admires Betty in her handsome gown, which he recognizes as one of his samples, of a job lot. He sells the job lot to stingy old Silas at a low price because they are last year's samples. Betty confesses in tears, but King presents her with the sample dress, for which he has no further use. The jealousy of Otis is appeased while the salesman goes on to his next town.

THE HOUSE THAT WENT CRAZY (Sept. 4).—Inventor Nutt builds a house where everything is mechanical and runs by electricity. The apparatus shaves him, gives him a bath, cooks his breakfast, sets the table, etc. While he is inventing new things a hungry young man attempts to steal a policeman's surreptitious lunch, is pursued, and in trying to climb through a window in the mechanical house, crosses the wires and sets the whole apparatus crazy.

A laughable series of incidents in which the intruder gets the full benefit of the disarranged apparatus, serves to make one of the funniest pictures ever produced. It is full of genuine comedy, among which the mishaps of a platoon of comedy policeman are not the least. Inventor Nutt finds everything topsy-turvy, but everybody escapes without injury. This is a comedy well worth seeing, as it will make you laugh.

PAWN TICKET "913" (Sept. 5).—Marjorie Mendon is charitable, but her father, old John Mendon, refuses to give her money to continue her work among the poor. She confides to Ralph Demarest her intention to pawn a valuable necklace. Ralph protests, but she persuades him to take the necklace to a pawnbroker. He obtains the money with pawn ticket "913."

Burton, a rival, sees Ralph entering the pawn shop. He investigates, and learns of the transaction, also getting the number of the pawn ticket. That night at the club, Ralph, temporarily embarrassed, pledges the pawn ticket in a wager. Burton, entering at the time, obtains the pawn ticket from the winner. Burton insults Ralph. A fight ensues and Burton is taken to the hospital unconscious. The pawn ticket is found, a detective works on the case and the mystery is unraveled. Marjorie and Ralph explain things to old John Mendon, who consents to a wedding. Burton, in the hospital, gets a bouquet of flowers from the wedding feast.

WHEN THE WEST WAS YOUNG (Special—Two Parts—Sept. 7).—Ned Halton and his young bride, Nellie, depart from the East in a prairie schooner to seek a home in the Western wilds. They traverse the plains until they arrive at a spot which seems to them suitable for the making of a permanent home. Ned builds a comfortable cabin, and in due time a baby enlivens the monotony of their existence. A neighboring tribe of Indians are most friendly to the young settler and his wife, and bring a host of barbaric gifts which to them represent the height of amity. Then one day comes the shock. The doctor is called from the nearest village many miles away, but he is too late. The gentle little spirit fades away until the spark of life goes out. Ned comforts his young wife as best he can, but the sorrow of a bereaved mother is not something to lightly pass away. Ned receives a summons to go to the settlement and complete the formalities in connection with his title to their home.

In the absence of Ned, Nellie becomes disconsolate. She sits by the empty cradle and dreams of the little one gone beyond. In her spirit of desolation, she again visits the tiny grave where she has a vision of the Saviour holding her little babe in his arms and comforting her with the assurance which rests in the kindly words: "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Her faith in the spiritual life is reassured and her spirit of depression is dispelled in the belief that her baby is at rest and that she will see him in the next world.

On his return from the settlement, Ned Halton becomes a participant in a frightful tragedy. An itinerant bootlegger has supplied a band of Indians with whiskey, which they drink with the usual consequence. A young immigrant and his wife and tiny baby are attacked by the Indians. Despite the heroic defense on the part of both the man and woman, they are killed, while the little baby lies quietly sleeping and unhurt beneath the overturned wagon. Ned Halton arrives in time to see the conclusion of the tragedy and to drive away the drunken redskins. He discovers the orphaned baby and carries it home.

On the way, his horse, which has been wounded in the fight with the Indians, falls, and when Ned reaches his cabin door, he falls exhausted on the threshold. Nellie has been sitting by the empty cradle dreaming of the little one snatched from her arms by death. When she hears the stumbling footsteps of her husband, she springs to the door and finds him lying there almost unconscious from fatigue. She hastens to revive him, all eagerness and love and thoughtfulness for his comfort, and it is not until he has become refreshed that her attention is attracted to the tiny bundle, which he clasps tenderly in his arms. In all the struggles which he had undergone in his dazed condition, he had unconsciously kept the tiny baby from injury and harm. The joy of Nellie when she discovers what the bundle contains is unbounded, and she clasps the little one in her arms, and clutches it tenderly to her breast. To the two who stand there caressing the tiny baby, appears once more that vision of the gentle Saviour, together with the spirit of the murdered mother.

A TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR (Sept. 8).—Joel Montrose, a young blacksmith, loves Irene Hughson, the village belle. Irene scorns his poverty, and he marries Kate Stanfield, a sincere and lovable young girl, who loves her stalwart husband devotedly. The Alaskan gold excitement lures Joel to the bleak Northwest where he disappears for years. Just as he strikes luck and finds himself a millionaire, he What's the Use?

4 Kilowatt Direct-Connected Outfit

What's the use, Mr. Traveling Showman, in carting around several tons of antique engine and electrical apparatus for making electric current, when you can buy a

Brush Electric Lighting Set

Just sit down and write for our Catalogue. It tells the whole story, and what it tells is SO.

The Chas. A. Strelinger Co.

Box MP-2

Detroit, Michigan, U. S. A.

BARR & BRUNSWIG That Classy Duo
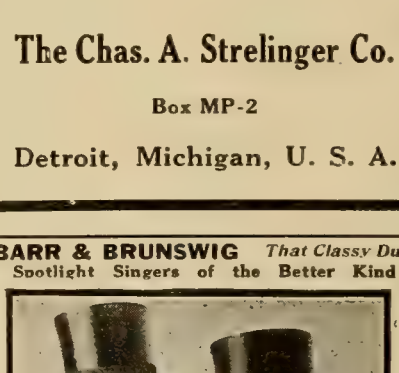
Spotlight Singers of the Better Kind



Singing Popular, Semi-Classic, Yodle and Novelty Songs in Harmony.
Using English Walking Suits with high silk hats and canes, for street wear. Full dress suits for stage.
Engagements wanted throughout the South.
Address 139 W. 49th St., New York City

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE FILM Co INC

THE MYSTERY OF THE POISON POOL

WHO STOLE THE KIMBERLY DIAMOND?

Powerful five reel American Production
WITH ALL STAR CAST

BETTY HARTE, JAMES GORDON, FRANK SIDWELL, ERNEST TURNER

Escape from African Cannibal Tribe only to face death in the grip of a 20-foot Python

Southern and Western Territory for Sale. Lobby Displays—Slides 1, 3, and 6 Sheet Posters.

SOME TERRITORY LEFT ON

MEXICAN MINE FRAUD	in 5 parts
CHIMNEY-SWEEPS	in 5 parts
THE SILENT BELL	in 3 parts
LUPIN	in 3 parts
NEXT IN COMMAND	in 4 parts
OATH OF A VIKING	in 3 parts
THE FILM DETECTIVE	in 4 parts

Heralds, Stills and Paper on application

BOOKING OFFICES:
1126 Vine St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.
5 So. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.
214 E. Fayette St., SYRACUSE, N. Y.
39 Adelaide St. W., TORONTO, CANADA
204 St. Catherine St. W., MONTREAL, CAN.

110 West 40th St., NEW YORK CITY

We can't book all your features but we can book your best features.

PLAY PICTURE PLAYHOUSE PHOTO PLAYS

If this is ARTHUR who is LESLIE?

ARTHUR and LESLIE
1505 B'way
"6078 Bryant"

If this is LESLIE who is ARTHUR?

reads in the home paper a statement that his "divorced" young wife has just met with an accident. This was a typographical error, and should have read "devoted" wife. In a frenzy of anger at what he thinks to be Kate's treachery, he writes to Irene and excites her cupidity by telling her of his good fortune. Irene answers his letter in person, by meeting him when the boat arrives at Seattle.

In the meantime Kate, alarmed at Joel's continued silence, determines to find him and starts for Alaska. In Seattle, while searching for traces of Joel, she learns of his presence in the city, and finds him. The plans of Irene are frustrated, and Joel realizes the great love of Kate.

THE MAN IN BLACK (Sept. 9).—Elsie Winters, a girl of good family, is a kleptomaniac. She reads in the newspapers of robberies in the fashionable district, which the police attribute to "the man in black," a clever "gentleman burglar." While shopping in a department store that afternoon Elsie stealthily abstracts small articles from the counter and is undetected except by the keen eye of a well-dressed young fellow, who is lounging near the doorway. He follows Elsie to her home and discloses himself to her as "the man in black." He wants her to become a partner in big robberies.

They begin operations on a large scale, disguised as English tourists. At a house party, Elsie steals a case of jewels, but the family butler strikes her on the head in the dim light with a poker, and renders her unconscious. The blow cures Elsie of her kleptomania. She is forgiven, while her clever confederate is handcuffed and taken to jail.

OH! LOOK WHO'S HERE (Sept. 11).—Hawkins, a tired business man, listens to the call of the soil, and arranges to go on a farm. Mrs. Hawkins, a militant suffragette, gets a job as a policewoman, and proceeds to act the part. Hawkins has adventures with a ferocious cow, while trying to rob her of her milk, and in the meantime, Policewoman Hawkins manages to help a burglar to escape, while she locks up innocent victims. Policewoman Hawkins is a most efficient officer with her vanity bag and powder puff, while Hawkins creates a furore with his misadventures among the pigs and chickens. Policewoman Hawkins is "roughhoused" while attending to her duties on the force and Hawkins is nearly smothered under a load of hay. Each one gives up the job and they arrive home simultaneously. There are no recriminations. Each comforts the other and they decide that home life is the best and happiest after all.

THE MISSING PAGE (Sept. 12).—George Godfrey, a clever physician, is deeply interested in his work, while his wife, Flora, believes she has a talent for the stage. She wants to become a professional actress.

The leading woman of a traveling theatrical company meets with an accident and the manager offers Flora the engagement which she accepts. Godfrey becomes pessimistic, sells his practice and moves to a smaller town, while Flora disappears into the vortex of theatrical life. He discovers a serum for the cure of meningitis, and is appointed chief physician in the hospital. He is attracted to Hilda, a nurse, who loves him. A friend has written him a letter on three sheets of paper, but the middle page is mislaid, leaving Godfrey to believe that his wife has died. He arranges to marry Hilda, but Flora, who now loves him madly, locates him just in time.

GEORGE KLEINE.

THE STRONGER TIE (Cines—Special—Two Parts).—Blinded by the glamour of his title, Virginia, an heiress, falls deeply in love with Lord Belford, and, after a short engagement, their marriage takes place. Once she is Lady Belford, however, the young woman finds herself face to face with the fact that her husband has been in love, not with her, but her money.

An error in the delivery of a bracelet which Lord Belford has bought for "the other woman," and which is sent to the home of his wife by mistake, awakens her to the true state of affairs and she becomes convinced that his lordship is unfaithful as well as neglectful.

After a visit to her rival and a direct appeal to the better nature of the adventuress, she refuses her husband's overtures of divorce and sets herself to win his lasting love. When she proves her willingness to give even her life for his happiness, he is awakened and his regeneration follows. In the final scene we see husband and wife starting life anew.

WHEN THE BEACON FAILED (Cines—Two Parts—August 18).—Jim is assistant to his father, the aged keeper of the Brighton Lighthouse, and in love with Mary, the inn keeper's daughter. His rival is Bill, a fisherman, who plans revenge when Mary tells him she is going to marry Jim. Jim's father is suddenly taken ill and Jim is thus left solely responsible for the safety of the shipping sailing along the coast at night. Bill takes advantage of this fact to waylay Jim and attack him, foreseeing that if any accidents occur as the result of his failure to be on duty, he will in all probability receive a term in prison. He leaves his victim unconscious beside the road and when a vessel is wrecked as the result of the failure of the light, organized a posse to seek Jim and punish him for his neglect of duty. Through the efforts of Mary, however, the truth comes to light and Bill pays the penalty of his crime. The film is highly dramatic from start to finish and is characterized throughout by its unusually rapid action. The shipwreck scenes are marvelously well handled, and the terrible disaster, the activities of the life-savers and the rescue of the unfortunate crew of the ill-fated vessel are depicted with startling realism.

"NEWMAN"
Brass Frames and Rails

NOW IS THE TIME to fix up your lobby. Throw out those unsightly old wood frames and invest in neat, attractive BRASS FRAMES. You will be surprised how quickly your investment will return to you.
Be sure the name "NEWMAN" appears on all frames—the guarantee of satisfaction.
Write for new 1914 catalog.
THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
NEW YORK 101 Fourth Ave. CINCINNATI 717 Sycamore St. CHICAGO 108 W. Lake St.
Established 1882.

WE BUY, SELL and RENT
Moving Picture Machines, Films and Chairs
THEATRE BROKERAGE EXCHANGE
440 S. Dearborn Chicago, Ill.

FILM MAKING OUTFITS
for Professional Film Work, for the Manufacturer, Traveler, Explorer, Scientist and Private. The well-known fool-proof Junior Camera, 200 feet capacity; Tripods, Tilts, Printers, Developing Outfits, Projectors, Lenses, Polishers, Measurers, Menders, Winders. Special Film Work. Quick, reliable repair.
Establ. 20 years. Largest Inst. in U. S.
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
219 Second Ave. New York

NEW THEATERS.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Architect Pierre Lindhout has prepared plans for a vaudette to be built on Cherry street near Diamond avenue for Mr. Beecher, who has a string of these "movies" in this city. It will be 43x96 feet, two-story, fireproof, constructed of steel, tile and brick. Joseph Coburn is the owner and the contract has been awarded to Joseph Nordella.

Cullman, Ala.—One of the handsomest picture show houses in the state has opened in the Hanlin block under the name of the Lyric theater. It will be run by Mr. T. D. McMinn. The opening bill will be one of Lubin's masterpieces, entitled "Through Fire to Fortune, or the Sunken Village," in five reels.

Centreville, Ill.—J. W. Smith, manager of the Central opera house and owner of the Riverside Airdome, in McHenry, has just completed a deal whereby he comes into possession of property in Centerville. It is Mr. Smith's intentions to raze the old buildings and in their stead will erect a modern ground-floor moving picture playhouse.

New York, N. Y.—Substitute plans have been filed in Manhattan for a two-story moving picture theater on the north side of 110th street east of Eighth avenue. The original application estimated the cost at $10,000, and in this application the cost has been estimated at $19,000. It will be known as the M. P. Theater. The S. & R. Amusement Company, Horace Simon president, is the owner. Sol. S. Sugar is the architect.

Utica, N. Y.—Frank Centolella and Frank Pepe are to build at the northeast corner of Sunset avenue, Varick and Spring streets, West Utica, a moving picture theater. This will cost between $8,000 and $9,000, and will seat 750 persons.

Minonk, Ill.—The Rose moving picture theater opened its doors in the Ryan building to a packed house. The show gave great satisfaction and many exclamations of pleasure were heard concerning the general coziness of the room.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The Little theater has been transformed into a motion-picture playhouse, according to an announcement made today by Frank C. Egan, manager of the theater.

Dallas, Tex.—Interstate Amusement Company, Karl Hoblitzel, president, Chicago, is reported to remodel exterior of building on Elm street, install store fronts, etc.

If this is ARTHUR who is LESLIE?

ARTHUR and LESLIE
1505 B'way
"6078 Bryant"

If this is LESLIE who is ARTHUR?

RENFAX MUSICAL MOTION PICTURES

Four New Subjects Every Week. The Latest Broadway Hits

SONGS ✦ CHORUSES ✦ COMEDY ✦ DANCES ✦ OPERA

THE SIMPLICITY of the successful operation of these wonderful pictures is such that your operator can successfully screen and produce RENFAX MUSICAL MOTION PICTURES after a few minutes' practice. No additional help required; NO SINGER IS NECESSARY WITH RENFAX PICTURES.

SCENARIO CONTESTS offering BIG CASH PRIZES are open exclusively to patrons of theatres using RENFAX service. A sure money-getter for you.

COUNT YOUR EMPTY SEATS You know why the combination houses, running motion pictures and vaudeville, are getting business. It is the breaking up of a straight motion picture program, which, however good and varied, becomes a little monotonous and makes your audience wish for a change.

YOUR AUDIENCE HAS EARS RENFAX MUSICAL MOTION PICTURES bring the element of music into your program—an appeal to the ear as well as the eye of your audience, giving you a pleasing change without the expense of a vaudeville bill.

WEEKLY RENTALS LESS THAN COST OF SINGLE SINGER

Service Details on Request

We are now opening territory in the Middle West and will shortly have branch offices in Buffalo, Chicago and Cleveland

RENFAX FILM CO., Inc., 110 W. 40th St., New York City

RENFAX SERVICE EXCLUSIVE FOR YOUR DISTRICT

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES

UNIVERSAL

ECLAIR.

BOY (Two Parts—Sept. 9).—Moran, blind to ambition, has been a long standing friend of Widow Casey. In his way Moran likes the widow, but his strongest affection is for her little boy. The boy, in turn, cherishes the man's friendship and the knife which the man has given him. Time comes when the widow and Moran quarrel. To rid herself of him she leaves with the boy, hoping to find a living some other place.

But instead of kindness and work the widow finds rebuffs and hunger. One night she faints from weakness in the roadway; the boy hails a strange man to their aid. The mother is carried into a tenement. "Boy," shortly after, remembers his knife which he had left in the old home; he asks to return and find it. He is roughly rebuffed by his mother and her new found friend.

Meanwhile Moran drinks steadily in an attempt to drown his loneliness. He returns to the tenement which had been deserted by the widow, one night to commit suicide. As the deed is about to be done his eye falls on the knife which he gave to "boy;" he remembers and the thought drives suicide from his mind. He goes back to the saloon to again drink.

Watching his chance, the boy escapes one day and while on his way to the old home, passes a saloon. Inside he observes Moran. Moran comes out and starts for the river, again determined on suicide. "Boy" follows him and Moran plunges into the water; the little fellow runs up and jumps too. Moran's efforts are turned toward saving the boy from the fate he had intended for himself. The boy leads his old friend to a hut where Moran faints from lack of food and too much drink. A passing priest is called and Moran is revived. Together the three go to the old tenement. The latent good in Moran—through the loyalty of "boy"— has been aroused and as time passes he reforms. Firm in his struggle he becomes a lay brother of the priesthood. The boy becomes a singer in the choir.

Meanwhile, the widow, still leading her old life, passes the monastery. She hears the voice of her son singing. The boy recognizes her and accompanies her to her home. She finds another woman in her place. At the point of a pistol the widow drives her out. The "man," furious, leaves her. But the mother finds comfort in her son and when he consents to remain with her, she determines to lead a better life.

The priests from the monastery have searched in vain for the boy. Nothing is heard of him until the mother calls a priest to attend him; the boy is sick. Moran accompanies the good father. Recognizing him, the widow hides. Moran, when told that the little fellow is dying, is heartbroken, and as the little fellow passes away we find the two who loved him best—the idler Moran and the widow—weeping over him with joined hands. The widow urges Moran to take her with him. He tells her of his entering the priesthood. Moran, however, finds a way out by having the sisters care for her. In time to come the widow becomes a sister herself. Side by side the monastery and nunnery stand and from the latticed windows Moran and the widow look upon each other, at peace with the world and themselves.

FOR HIS FATHER'S LIFE (Sept. 13).—For one and all, Mr. Ripley tells Jim he must shift for himself. Riding across country, the young fellow comes upon a motion picture company taking a scene; mistaking the acting for a real fight, he breaks up the picture and pommels the leading man. Attracted by his earnestness, the director engages him and finds he is an expert Western rider and cow puncher. Later he falls in love with Miss Bright, the leading lady.

Meanwhile the father starts on a trip to town In an attempt to regain his hat he falls in a deserted mine shaft. Riding home, Miss Bright and Jim come upon the unattended horse. Taking his lasso he makes a rope ladder, and after a perilous descent brings up the wounded man. At home the doctor tells him the old man cannot live six hours without the proper medicine. It is a twenty-five mile ride to the nearest drugstore. Jim starts out and after a neck and neck race with an express train rushes by. Arriving in town and securing the medicine, he misses the outgoing train and at the point of a revolver forces a gang of Italians to drive him on a hand car to where his horse is waiting. Mounting the animal he races at breakneck speed and after many narrow escapes arrives in the nick of time. There is a happy reunion in which the old man recognizes that his son has proved his real worth.

NESTOR.

A DAUGHTER OF THE PLAINS (Sept. 9).—John Simpson, a Western pioneer, and his daughter Marie are hunting bear. Simpson's eagerness to secure the game causes him to forego caution; he fires into the thicket in which the bears have concealed themselves. The bullet kills an Indian who had also seen the bears. Simpson discovers that the Indian is the son of the chief of a neighboring tribe. He fails to convince the Indian's companion that the shot is accidental. When Simpson's back is turned the Indian kills him.

His daughter, Marie, fearing an uprising, rides to the village to give warning. This done, she hastens to the nearest post but encounters the Indians. They shoot. She falls from her horse and is left for dead. However, Marie is only slightly wounded. She recovers and crawls to the river bank just in time to witness the onslaught of the redskins. She creeps into an old boat tied at the river bank and floats down the stream. Next morning she is rescued by Clifford, a young prospector. Clifford and his partner, Bainbridge, carry her into their cabin.

Marie finds in time that she has lost her heart to her rescuer. Bainbridge arranges a secret meeting with Marie. Clifford, thinking that Marie loves Bainbridge, decides to abandon the camp. Shortly after an Indian kills Bainbridge and carries Marie away captive. Clifford, from ambush, shoots the Indian and again rescues Marie, who informs him of Bainbridge's death and her happiness at his return.

FEEDING THE "KITTY" (Sept. 11).—Wife does not see the note until some time later, which arrives for Eddie from the boys, telling him to come over to the club and "Feed the kitty." Eddie tells his wife that a friend has been hurt and finally gets away along to join in the poker game. Meantime the cook and the policeman have been making love in the kitchen. Deciding to go for a walk, the cook lends the cop Eddie's old coat and hat. Following Eddie's wife becomes suspicious when she reads the strange "kitty" note; she imagines that it refers to the cook. When she finds the cook out her suspicions are confirmed.

Eddie returns from the game in none too steady condition. Entering the house through the back way, he encounters the cook. The cop has hidden. Without his wife knowing it Eddie seeks his room. Wife enters the kithcen with a gun, determined to settle the matter: she fires at her supposed husband, the cop. A wild scramble follows. The cop is pursued from the house. Hearing of trouble, the sergeant joins in and the cop is confronted with being found off his beat. The cook finds a chance to make love to the sergeant; this she does to save her lover. But the cop-lover rebels; he telephones for the reserves. Complications result with the sergeant in an embarrassing position, and husband master of the situation. It all ends with Eddie convincing his wife of his presence in the house the whole evening and forgiving his wife of her unjust suspicions.

POWERS.

THE ANGEL OF THE CAMP (Sept. 11).—Roy Clark is a whole-souled Western character, but a bad man when drunk. He has been in trouble several times through his desire for shooting up the town. Sister Mary, of the Salvation Army, is in Goldfield with her fellow salvationists. Roy is strongly attracted toward her, but she repulses him on account of his unsavory reputation. Besides she believes she has her mission to fulfill.

A plague strikes the camp and Mary thereupon earns her title of the "angel," nursing the sick throughout the epidemic. Among her patients is Roy, who recovers under her care, proposes marriage and is again repulsed. One day while taking a collection in the Legal Tender saloon, Mary is insulted by Jose, a camp tough. Roy resents and shoots the Mexican. The "angel" also nurses him and finally marries Roy, although she continues her work in the Salvation Army.

CRYSTAL.

BACHELOR'S HOUSEKEEPER (Sept. 8).—The bachelors, when they complain of the food, get a rolling pin over their heads, manipulated by the colored housekeeper. Colored housekeeper is fired and said bachelors advertise for a new one. In answer to this a beautiful girl visits the house; she is hired. It is not long before all three of the bachelors, Burk, Don and Charlie are infatuated with the new girl. They shower her with presents, help her in her work and finally fight over her. Later, each presents her with a diamond ring. But the surprise of their lives is when the pretty cook introduces them to her husband and leaves.

WAS HE A HERO (Sept. 8).—While Ned holds the affections of Alice, her parents favor Percy. To gain their consent Ned induces a fumigating concern to smoke up the house while Percy and the parents are present. Percy, observing the awful smoke, flees, leaving Alice to her fate. Ned, waiting outside, rushes in at the proper moment and saves her. Alice's father, grateful to Ned for saving his daughter, now favors his suit and when Percy calls again he is thrown out.

REX.

HER BOUNTY (Sept. 13).—Ruth Braddon, the daughter of a wealthy factory owner, who is interested in improving social conditions, receives a letter, advising her to look at the state of affairs at her father's own factory. She visits her father and he refers her to his junior partner, Fred Howard, to whom Ruth is engaged. Accompanied by her fiance, Ruth goes on a tour of inspection through the factory. In the hallway, she sees a crowd of workers gathered around a girl who has fainted in the poorly ventilated workroom. As they approach the group, David Hale, a factory hand, asks Howard for better conditions. Howard orders David back. Ruth, admiring David's personality, interferes and tells him she will talk with her father.

The next day David visits Bessie and tells her he is expecting a raise of wages soon and they will marry. Bessie's happiness over David's love is interrupted by a visit from Ruth. David takes her through the tenements, showing her poverty in its worst form. She asks him to assist her in lightening the burden of the poor. He consents. The close contact into which David and Ruth are thrown in their work, draws them together. Ruth awakens to the knowledge that she is in love with David. She breaks her engagement with Howard. He goes to her father. The father shows a letter he received from David in which he asked for an increase of wages so that he may marry Bessie Clay.

Ruth comes to her father's office for money and her father places the check close to David's letter so Ruth will see it. She learns for the first time of David's engagement. She is overcome and on leaving her father's office meets David. She breaks down and weeps.

VICTOR.

LITTLE MEG AND I (Sept. 7).—An old captain on a summer's night sits down to tell his mates a story—a story of his own life and wrecked romance. It was the story of his youth, and as the poem by G. C. T. Murphy goes, from which the script was written, he had grown up with and loved little Meg Anderson, the daughter of a rich shipowner. He had realized the gulf that lay between them and the little girl had promised to wait for him when he went out on his long cruise. The words of the poem, which make the subtitles for the projected picture, continues:

"Well, mates, we cruised for four long years,
till at last one summer's day
Our good ship, the Minerva, cast anchor in the bay.
Oh, how my heart beat high with hope, as I saw her home once more.
And on the pier stood hundreds to welcome us ashore;
But my heart sank down within me as I gazed with anxious eye—
No little Meg stood on the dock as on the deck
stood I.
Why, mates, it nearly broke my heart when
I went ashore that day,
For they told me little Meg had wed, while I was far away.
They told me, too, they forced her to't—and wrecked her fair young life—
Just think, messmates, a child in years, to be an old man's wife."

As the story follows, it would seem that the girl's father had forced her into the unwholesome match. Time passes. The old man finishes with:

"One blustering night Jack Glim and I were rowing to the shore.
When right ahead we saw a sight that made us hold our breath—
There floating in the pale moonlight was a woman cold in death.
I raised her up; Oh, God, messmates, that I had passed her by!
There in the bay lay little Meg and over her stood I."

A MYSTERIOUS MYSTERY (Two Parts—Sept. 11).—At the opening of the piece we see Miss Lawrence setting out to attend a moving picture theater, accompanied by a woman friend and her two children. At the theater is being shown "Mysterious Mystery," the present play. With the two kiddies sitting on each side of

UNITED KEANOGRAPH

JAMES KEANE, PRESIDENT AND GEN. MGR. : STUDIOS FAIRFAX CAL.

OFFERS

MONEY

SEVEN WONDEROUS PARTS:

6000 POWERFUL INTENSE FEET

A PERFECTLY SELECTED CAST

INCLUDING THE NOTED FRENCH ITALIAN BEAUTY

CARLOTTA DE FELICE

An Ensemble of over 2000

LIVINGSTON RESCUED FROM THE MOB

THE MILLIONAIRE ENTERTAINS

WHERE THE ABDUCTION WAS PLANNED

RELEASED - IN - SEPTEMBER

WAR

ALL RED FEATURE COMPANY LIMITED, OF WINDSOR, ONT.

Will release each week 1000 feet of Canadian News during the present war, commencing September 3rd. State Rights. Wire for prices on your territory.

her, Miss Lawrence, with no one recognizing her, watches the play as it develops to this point. However, as she entered the theater she was observed by a strange man who has displayed an officer's badge. He has phoned for help, as is shown in the cut-backs. As the film play progresses inside, a machine with another man and a chauffeur arrives and stops down the street a short distance from the theater. Then the stranger approaches Miss Lawrence and asks her to come out as there are friends who wish to speak to her. As she approaches the machine a rug is thrown over her head and she is pushed into the auto.

When the rug is removed Miss Lawrence finds herself in a private asylum though she does not recognize the place. She is disrobed and a peculiar dress and hat are given her; she is left a captive in a padded cell, the walls of which are covered with posters of her own self. To the room there is only a single barred casement window; there appears no means of escape. Frantic, Miss Lawrence throws herself on the bed and cries.

On the exterior of the building we observe a lunatic dressed as a ham actor with the proverbial long hair and frock coat. He slips up to the barred window, climbs along the stone ledge and loosens two bars; he enters with one of the bars as a weapon. He attempts to kill Miss Lawrence. There is a fight, Miss Lawrence successfully defending herself. She does this by making the crazy actor believe he is the hero in the play and not the villain. Using this argument she induces him to assist her to escape. A rope is made from the bed clothes. Before she climbs down she gives the crazy actor the iron, saying that it is the gun, and compels him to stand guard. However, before she reaches the ground she is nearly shaken from the rope and barely escapes.

Once on the open road, Miss Lawrence seeks aid from a farm house. Yet, to her dismay, she is rebuffed. She tries at the station. The stationmaster locks her in a room and telephones the asylum for the guards. Miss Lawrence has been mistaken for a crazy girl, closely resembling her and one who imagines that she is Miss Lawrence.

On the road back to the asylum Miss Lawrence, with the guards, meets the crazy girl in question. She is leading dogs and with them is only too anxious to return to captivity. She recognizes Miss Lawrence after a careful examination. And it is the first sign of sanity that the girl has shown in months.

Miss Lawrence is given her clothes and offered profuse apologies. The superintendent assures her that if she will make a few visits to the asylum the crazy girl can be cured. As she departs Miss Lawrence consents. With all haste Miss Lawrence returns to the theater—the last scene of "A Mysterious Mystery" is being projected on the screen; this is Miss Lawrence leaving the theater with the friend and children.

THERE IS A DESTINY (August 24).—Jack Baldwin, M.D., just graduated, is spending the summer at a seaside hotel with several of his fraternity friends. Jeanne De eJan and her grandfather live on an island a short distance from the coast. While the old man has a pension, they add to this by selling fish at the hotel across the channel.

One morning Jeanne is seen by Jack and his friends. They admire her beauty. "Sport" Hamlin, one of the party, tries to flirt with the girl. He is cut coldly. On returning to his friends he offers to wager a hundred dollars none of them can do any better than he did. Jack, already interested in the girl, takes up the bet.

Jack, to carry out his plans, secures a job as a boatman; he believes that his chance with the girl would be better if she thought him in her own station of life. Following this it is only a matter of a few days before Jack makes the girl's acquaintance through the grandfather.

Titles, Slides and Renovating

Developing and Finishing to the Trade
Industrial and Advertising Films made to order

We take Motion Pictures of anything

Send in your proposition

COMMERCIAL FILMERS
1101 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.
Phone Monroe 5823.

No. 8

Brass Frames and Railings

For material, workmanship and design we offer the best.

Get our catalogue and quotation before placing your order.

THE THEATRE SPECIALTY MFG. COMPANY
1232 East 3d St., Cleveland, Ohio

ALUMINOTYPES SAVE YOU MONEY

MADE FROM COARSE SCREEN NEWSPAPER HALFTONES JUST THE SAME AS ELECTROTYPES.

THE STANDARD ENGRAVING CO. INC. PHOTO-ENGRAVERS DESIGNERS ELECTROTYPERS
WM HUFFMAN, Pres
143-145 WEST 40th STREET NEW YORK

"Moving Picture Bryson"

Why Not Use SYSTEM In Your Business?

Hundreds of the best theatres in the country today are using THE THEATRE RECORD LEDGER SYSTEM and are getting results. Why not you? My proposition and promise to hustle right back your money if you don't find THE THEATRE RECORD LEDGER SYSTEM the greatest time saver besides absolutely accurate in every respect as to recording every possible receipt and disbursement—ought to be enough for your order. Don't you delay; start your fall business off right. Send me $2.50 (plus 20c. for postage) and get a Business System in your business. J. V. BRYSON, The THEATRE RECORD LEDGER, 252 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis.

Observing Jack's success, "Sport" Hamlin grows envious. After he is knocked down for making an insulting remark to Jack, he goes to the old man and informs him of Jack's deception. Fearing for his grandchild, the fisherman refuses to allow them together again.

A week goes by. Jack finds that he loves the girl. The old fisherman is stricken with heart trouble. There is a storm. The girl telephones to the mainland. Jack, with his medicine chest strapped to him, swims the channel and revives the old man. Explanations follow; Jack and Jeanne's destinies are fulfilled.

IMP.

"UNIVERSAL BOY" SOLVES THE CHINESE MYSTERY NO. 4 (August 27).—Our "Universal Boy" has made the acquaintance of a youngster living in the same apartment with him, who is experimenting with wireless telegraphy. The boys amuse themselves by tapping messages. One which they secure is a mysterious affair, which the boys believe is written in cipher code. It is addressed to one Sing Yang Foo.

Matty, with his characteristic curiosity, seeks out the Marconi wireless station at Coney Island, makes the acquaintance of the chief operator and requests a reading of the peculiar message. The operator tells him it is written in Chinese. Determined to have a reading of it, our "Universal Boy" visits and is introduced to the Hon. Yang Yu Ying, Chinese Consul-General for the United States, who reads the message for him. It says:

"Have girl aboard. All safe—sailing to-morrow. Send money as promised."
Wing Woy.

In trying to puzzle it out Matty, later, remembers a newspaper account of the strange disappearance of a young woman Chinese missionary. Convinced that there is some connection between the message and the girl's disappearance, our "Universal Boy" visits Chinatown. On the roof of a building he finds a receiving pole of a private wireless outfit. Investigating further, he learns that the owner of the outfit is Sing Yang Foo.

Disguised as a Chinese boy, our "Universal Boy" uncovers many clues, and is finally led aboard a Chinese boat in the harbor. In the hold of the ship he discovers the missing girl, communicates with the police and finally, after many exciting adventures, he brings the "white slavers" to justice and liberates the girl.

THE UNIVERSAL BOY IN JUVENILE REFORMER (Series No. 4—Sept. 10).—The Universal Boy decides to adopt a dog and goes to the Bide-a-wee Home for lost and strayed animals and there procures a handsome collie. Knowing his aunt's aversion to a dog, he keeps him in his bedroom and trains him to do all kinds of tricks. Some time later his aunt discovers the dog and orders it put out of the house. The dog intervenes in his own behalf by standing on its hind legs and pleading—one of the tricks Matty had taught him. Finally auntie decides to let Matty keep the dog. On the following day, while the dog is outside of its house, he is stolen by a tramp who sells the animal to an East Side saloon keeper in exchange for a drink of whisky. The theft is witnessed by a little neighbor of Matty's who afterwards informs him of the loss of his dog.

Heartbroken over the loss of his four-footed friend, Matty seeks the aid of the newly organized Juvenile Police Force. Arriving at the station house of said organization he tells the captain of his loss and gets a promise from him that everything possible will be done to bring back the dog. Matty admires the snappy appearance of the police force. He asks to join and the captain gives his consent, at the same time explaining the duties and functions of the juvenile police, viz.: to keep an eye on saloon keepers selling intoxicants to children, cigar stores selling cigarettes to boys, and cause their arrest, also to arrest all boys caught playing crap, gambling or smoking cigarettes.

FEATURES OF QUALITY

Our Percentage Basis Plan Requires only a Small Cash Investment by State Rights and Exchange Men, but it Means Big Earnings to Them.

AMERICAN & EUROPEAN FILM CO., 43 CEDAR STREET, NEW YORK CITY

FEATURES PURCHASED - SOLD - LEASED - RENTED - IMPORTED

Cosmofotofilm Co

PRESENTS

"England's Menace"

By BANNISTER MERWIN — Produced by HAROLD SHAW

London Film Co. (Trade Mark)

Filmed by

The London Film Co., Ltd.

London Film Co. (Trade Mark)

Booked immediately upon receipt of the first sample by the

Million Dollar Strand Theatre

where it has been shown to enthusiastic audiences all of this week.

Prepared with the cooperation of the British Army and Navy Authorities as a warning to their country, "ENGLAND'S MENACE" is bound to stir the imagination of the most unpatriotic individual and will teach a powerful lesson of the necessity for preparedness on the part of the United States.

"One of the most dramatic and timely pictures that I have ever shown. . . . . A BIG SUCCESS."
S. L. ROTHAPFEL, Mgr. "STRAND" Theatre, New York.

"The feature is only part of the big section of the Strand show. 'ENGLAND'S MENACE'—a War Story—is FAR MORE MEMORABLE. It is a tale of a Foreign Power planning to surprise England with the descent of a fleet of Dreadnoughts. Two fine English children, who have an amateur wireless station, catch one of the enemy's despatches and after a wonderful motorcycle run, get it to the Prime Minister. He awakens England and turns back the foe. The battleship pictures are impressively suggestive of present events and the romantic side of the picture is handled with equal skill. Obtaining such a 'worth-while' film from a market already over-supplied with trashy, alleged 'War Features,' was a triumph for the 'STRAND.' "—New York Sun.

For exclusive territorial rights address

Cosmofotofilm Co

World Tower Building

110-112 West 40th Street, New York

Keep Your Pockets Open!—"MONEY'S" Coming Your Way—6,500 Feet
Don't Be Among the Missing When it Comes Your Way!
Keanograph Coined It—Solid Gold Merit.

Later, Matty goes on his beat and discovers a boy of about sixteen smoking cigarettes. True to his duty, he arrests him and brings him before the captain of the police force for punishment. The usual penalty meted out to juvenile cigarette smokers according to the rules and regulations of the juvenile police force is to compel the offender to smoke an old pipe until it makes him sick. Accordingly, therefore, they subject the prisoner to this ordeal much to the amusement of the onlooker.

Sometime later, while on duty on one of the side street of the lower East Side, Matty detects a little girl entering the side of a saloon with a beer can under her shawl. Matty follows and witnesses the illicit sale. He causes the arrest of the saloon keeper with the aid of a member of the regular police force. As Matty is leaving the saloon after the arrest he hears a familiar bark coming from behind the bar. He investigates and discovers his lost dog. There is a happy reunion.

Matty takes his dog to the Juvenile police station and makes his report of the arrest of the saloon keeper and then asks permission to have his dog made a police dog and his request is granted. While patrolling his beat one day, Matty peeks into a cellar window and sights a crowd of young boys playing crap, cards and smoking cigarettes. Not being able to cope with this tough crowd single handed, he writes out a note for the captain of the juvenile force, explaining the situation and asking for aid. This he puts in the dog's mouth and orders him to bring it post haste to the station-house. As a result a detachment of police boys are sent out to help Matty and after a terrible conflict, the culprits are finally brought to the juvenile police court where they are about to be sentenced very heavily by the judge when Matty pleads for them. "Please let them go free, Your Honor, on the condition that they join the Juvenile Police Force." Impressed by the boy's magnanimity of heart, he exercises his clemency along the course outlined by Matty and our story concludes with Matty drilling the squad of reformed crap shooters.

UNIVERSAL.

ANIMATED WEEKLY, NO. 129 (August 26).—Patriotic Demonstration.—Cadets from London's military academy publicly uphold England's war policy.

Off to the Rescue.—Millionaire's yacht leaves New York to bring back Americans stranded in war zone, and is accompanied by Animated Weekly cameraman. Sub-title: Passing U. S. S. Minnesota.

Ambrose Lightship.—Placed at entrance of Ambrose Channel, this lightship marks limit of Uncle Sam's neutral waters. Sub-title: Derelict Destroyer Seneca Patrolling New York Harbor.

Glass Blowers' Convention.—Drill held by representatives from all parts of the country—Rochester, N. Y.

Historical Pageant in Newark.—Public school children portray history of their city's growth since Hendrick Hudson's arrival in Newark Bay, New Jersey.

French Troops Honored.—President Poincare presents war colors to regiment in recognition of their efficiency.

Battle of the Hose.—Rival fire companies hold novel tournament in which contestants and enthusiastic onlookers are drenched—Connellsville, Pa.

Accident to England's Engineer Corps.—While moving supplies across pontoon bridge planking gives way under heavy load—Canche River, France.

Germany's Crack Regiment.—The last review by Kaiser Wilhelm of troops now proving their worth on the field of battle—Berlin, Germany.

State Seal in Flowers.—The Massachusetts seal is duplicated in flowers at annual gathering of expert horticulturists—Boston.

Baseball Fans Take Notice.—Christy Mathewson, world's greatest pitcher, signs contract to play in series of Universal features.

Pope Pius X. at Rest.—St. Peter's Cathedral and the Vatican, dwelling of the Popes—Rome, Italy.

Cartoons by the world-famous caricaturist, Hy Mayer, of Puck.

BEST OF CAMERA MEN
Furnished for all Occasions
CHICAGO FEATURE FILM CO.
4108-22 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill.

We Buy and Sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
37 So. Wabash Avenue - Chicago, Ill.

BE UP TO DATE
Install
CORCORAN TANKS
Get No. 6 Price List
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc., 11½ JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

PRINTING and DEVELOPING FILM TITLES
Give us a trial. All work guaranteed. Prompt service. Prices right.
If there is any event that you want photographed, we can furnish expert camera men.
STANDARD MOTION PICTURE CO.
Phone, Central 2853, 5 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

J-M ASBESTOS BOOTHS AND CURTAINS

Made in styles to meet all requirements. They meet the approval of fire underwriters of every city. Write for Booklet. H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO., New York and Every Large City.

"FOTOPLAYER"
the instrument that supplies
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES
The American Photo Player Co.
Berkeley, California.

Gas Users — Attention!

The "Gull Pastil" doubles your light. Each (large size), $1.25; 6 for $6.75. "Fulco" adapter makes Pastil fit any calcium burner, $1.00 each.
We carry most complete line in stock of picture machines and supplies in America. E. E. FULTON, 152 W. Lake St., Chicago, Sole American distributors for "Gull Pastil."

MUTUAL FILM CORP.

BEAUTY.

A MODERN OTHELLO (Sept. 1).—Mr. Mason is extremely jealous of his wife, and even carries his jealousy to the extent of begrudging the baby and the dog his wife's passing attentions. However, he swallows his rage until one afternoon he takes his wife for a row on the lake and while they are enjoying themselves, a friend, Miss James, goes for a horseback ride. Her horse becomes frightened at a hunter's shot and runs away. She finds herself forced to walk home in her riding costume, consisting of a jacket and trousers. Her humiliation is great when she finds herself laughted at by the men she passes, and upon seeing her friend, Mrs. Mason, she pleads for assistance, and is invited to accompany her across the lake to her home, where she can secure a dress. Mr. Mason, awakening from a nap, sees what he thinks to be a handsome young man in the boat with his wife, and he chases along the shore after them in a jealous rage.

Mrs. Mason and her friend reach the temporary safety of her boudoir, where Mrs. Mason is going to lend her friend a dress. Her husband followed them, however, and frantic, demands admission to the room. Miss James hides in a closet and the husband enters. He demands to know the hiding place of the chap he thought he saw disguising himself when he peeped through the keyhole before going into the room. Securing a revolver he demands that the man step out of the closet, and to his surprise and astonishment he finds himself face to face with a pretty young miss.

THANHOUSER.

CONSCIENCE (Two Parts—August 25).—Jack Gleason is at his wit's ends because the doctor has given his consumptive wife just one more chance, provided she can go to Arizona—and he has no money for the trip. In a reckless moment he stakes his life's savings on the gaming table—and loses every cent. Going home, the most despondent man in the world, he comes upon a sleeping beggar into whose hat some benevolent soul has dropped a ten dollar gold piece. Remembering that ten is his lucky number, the young man steals the coin and rushes back to the gambling parlor. Sure enough, his luck turns. He wins a suitcase full of money. But the weary face of the old beggar haunts him. At last he goes in search of him, brings him home with him, tells him the whole story, and thrusting upon him the suitcase of bills sends the dazed old man away. But the tramp has recognized in Gleason's wife one who gave him food when everybody else had turned him from the door. A few days later all but $20 of the money comes back, with a note, reading:

"Please take the rest to cure the lady, who had pity on an old hobo."

AMERICAN.

LOLA (Sept. 7).—Lola, a prima donna appearing for the first time in her "home town," visits a cafe with her manager after the performance. While there her memory recalls her girlhood and she tells her manager how as a girl her voice secured for her a choir position, to the delight of her father and sister; but when later her voice brought her a stage offer her father and sister were bitter in their objections; so that same night she ran away and later became a great prima donna.

It is Easy for the Man with "MONEY" to Make Money
Keanograph Has Done All the Hard Work
Reap the Profits by Booking It

The

Box Office Attraction Co.

William Fox, President

It is the market for American made features based on American subjects and interpreted by American casts.

Spot Cash Will Be Paid

For negatives of from 3000 to 4000 feet produced by American manufacturers. Special exhibition rooms provided with perfect screens and the best projecting machines are at the disposal of those who have acceptable film for sale. The Box Office Attraction Company is opening exchanges in all the principal cities of the United States for the benefit of the thousands of exhibitors who have demanded William Fox Features for their patrons. Hundreds of thousands of feet of film are required immediately and we are ready to pay SPOT CASH for high grade photo-plays that will draw money into the theatres of progressive exhibitors.

The Box Office Attraction Co.

William Fox, President

130 West Forty-Sixth Street - - NEW YORK

Lola desires to look up her people. With the manager's assistance, she sets out the next morning to find them and get their forgiveness. She finds her sister, May, and learns the pathetic story of how the morning eight years before when May found Lola's note their father flew into a rage and at the same moment a ring at the door bell brought news of an accident to Larry, a mutual friend of May and Lola.

Later, Larry in his delirium cries for Lola. May, in pity, goes to comfort him and pretends she is Lola to soothe him. Larry never regains his sight and, believing May to be Lola, declares his love. The next week the father dies. May's pity grows to love and she marries Larry, never telling him of her deception.

May pleads with Lola to keep her secret. As she does so, her little child rushes in and Lola, seeing the happiness where ignorance is bliss, says to May, "He shall never know," kisses the child, says farewell and is soon whirled away in a taxi to catch her train for a performance in the next town.

BREAK, BREAK, BREAK (Sept. 9).—Tom Day, an old hermit of eighty, is seated on a rock looking over the ocean. The words in the poem of Tennyson come to him:

"Break, Break, Break,
At the foot of thy crags, oh sea,
But the tender grace of a day that is dead
Will never come back to me."

As he watches the restless ocean his mind goes back to his young days. He sees himself a strong, stalwart youth, bidding good-bye to his mother, shouldering his pitchfork and going out to the fields. He sees his sweetheart, June, meet her father, Judge Moore, the wealthy landowner. His heart is given to this girl so far above him in wordly goods, but because of this difference in their station in life, does not declare his love. He knows that Dan Moore, a distant relative of June, loves her also, and knows that Dan is not worthy of her love. He sees his old grandfather laboring in the fields of Squire Moore, overcome with the heat and how little sympathy is shown by either Dan or the Squire. He bears the form of the old man to his home. June alone is thoughtful and calls to offer her help and comfort. June is shy that day and he, feeling himself unworthy, does not speak the words of love that rise to his lips. Later he sees the wedding of Dan and June. He sees them take the vessel that will carry them to foreign countries on their honeymoon. He stands and watches the vessel slowly disappear. That night the ship is blown out of her course and sinks with all on board. A few days later Tom is walking along the beach and among the wreckage washed up by the sea he finds the body of the girl he loves. The memory of those days long past recalls him back to youth and his unhappy love. He glances out over the sea and watches the vessels pass before him.

The old hermit, unable to stifle the emotions that arise within his soul, slowly leaves the rock and goes back to his little hut.

KOMIC.

BILL NO. 5—BILL ORGANIZES A UNION (August 30).—Bill, being careless about his duties, the boss arranges a set of rules for his observances. Bill and his pals, therefore, decide to right their wrongs and organize a union. They chip in a nickel apiece and buy themselves badges with the money.

The vice-president of the union loses his job the next day, and calls on Bill to call a strike on account of his being discharged. They demand Izzy's job back and threaten to strike if he is not taken back. They parade through the building and Bill's boss has the fire department turn the hose on them. They are disrupted and dragged back to work in disgrace.

JOKER.

BEAU AND HOBO (Sept. 9).—Ernie is in love with a girl, but the girl's father objects thinking Ernie worthless. Ernie is slightly effeminate in action and appearance. He is ordered from the house for the second time; kicked out violently by the irate father. He gets up and calls, and the girl comes to the window. He tells her he'll put on old clothes like a tramp and come to the back door. He goes home to get his wardrobe. In the meantime, a tramp comes along, sees the back door, and approaches for a hand-out. Ernie comes on the scene and gets jealous. Father observes his daughter and the tramp and starts to order the tramp from the place. The tramp refuses to go. Ernie comes on and beats the tramp up. Explanations and father's blessing follows.

JAM AND JEALOUSY (Sept. 12).—Brakeman Bill unwittingly causes his sweetheart, Mandy, to become jealous. She leaves him in a huff, determined to get even. Bill gives vent to his feelings when he discovers Phil and Clarence, two box tourists, stealing a ride. This worthy pair find themselves now stranded. And worse, their stomachs are empty. They spot a delicious cake, set out by Mandy's cook to cool. Phil is chosen to make the raid.

Phil secures the coveted cake and refuses to divide with his pal, Clarence. The latter returns the cake dish to its owner. The cook is out with her friend, the cop, looking for the miscreants. Clarence meets Mandy, who, seeing a chance to get even with Brakeman Bill, fetes Clarence with all the goodies in her pantry. Mandy's scheme works, for Bill can hardly control himself. Phil, who is gleefully devouring his purloined cake, also becomes a witness of Clarence's good luck. His glee changes to chagrin. He is then spotted by the cook and cop and after a desperate chase is captured.

Then Clarence forgets himself and starts to make love to Mandy. Bill comes to her rescue. As Phil and Clarence are led away to their just deserts Mandy vows to Bill she will ever believe implicitly in him.

KAYBEE.

STACKED CARDS (Two Parts—Sept. 4).—Edna Johnson, a girl of the underworld, is employed by crooked politicians to carry out a frame-up on Richard Wade, who is running on the reform ticket for Mayor. They place Edna in an uptown apartment hotel, where she poses as a girl of good standing and a settlement worker. Here she meets Wade. A friendship springs up between them. Feigning sickness, she sends for Wade. While he is in her bedroom she throws her arms around him. The crooks in hiding behind the portieres take a flashlight of the scene and later tell Wade that they will publish the scandal. Wade leaves for the gold fields and strikes it rich.

Two years later he meets Edna, who is now really in love with Travers, a clean cut young miner. Wade, to save Travers from an unhappy marriage, and to get revenge, tells him the story of Edna's life, and Travers breaks his engagement with Edna.

BRONCHO.

THE CRUISE OF THE MOLLY ANNE (Two Parts—Sept. 9).—John Farrell, shipowner, negotiates for the limit of insurance on his boat, the Molly Anne. Later, he makes arrangements with the mate, Bill Jones, to set the boat on fire, enabling him to collect the insurance. In return he promises Bill his daughter, Nell, in marriage. Nell elopes with Captain Tom and is out to sea before her father learns of her marriage. He is grief stricken to think that he will be the means of his daughter's death, but has no way of reaching the boat. Bill sets the Molly Anne afire, locks Captain Tom in a closet, takes Nell in the lifeboat with him and they are later rescued and brought home to Nell's father. Believing that Captain Tom is dead, Bill now tries to keep John Farrell to his bargain to marry Nell. Nell protests and Farrell tells Bill to go ahead and expose their secret, but he will not let Nell sacrifice herself, as she has suffered enough. Just at this moment Captain Tom comes in and shows the note that John Farrell has written Bill, disclosing their infamy. He tells Bill that he will keep the secret for his wife's sake, but for him to leave town at once before he is tempted to kill him. An old sailor, who has been with Captain Tom, overhears the conversation, kills Jones, and throws him over the cliff into the ocean.

MUTUAL WEEKLY.

